"Having no faith or favor for church ceremonies, prayers, incantations, or other mummeries, I do hereby, as my last will and most earnest last request to my children, heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, especially enjoin, require, and desire that immediately after my death the president and secretary of the Washington Secular Union be notified thereof.

"And I hereby request and direct that my friend the said Charles B. Reynolds shall hav sole charge and officiate at my funeral services; and in case of his death or unavoidable absence, that then the officers of the said Washington Secular Union shall appoint an agent to hav sole and exclusiv charge of my obsequies.

"And that no ritual, rite, or ceremony shall be permitted in connection with my funeral, other than that sanctioned, requested, approved, or administered by the said Charles B. Reynolds, or the agent appointed for that purpose by the said Washington Secular Union.

"And I do design and intend this instrument to be a full and complete authority for the said Charles B. Reynolds, or the agent of the said Washington Secular Union, to take whole, sole, and exclusiv charge of my obsequies.

"And this shall be the warrant and authority of the said Charles B. Reynolds—or in his absence the authorized agent of said Washington Secular Union—to dismiss and expel from the presence of my dead body any priest, minister, or church official who by request of any of my children, or any relativ, or any person else, may attempt to preside or take part, or in any way officiate or interfere with my funeral services."

After his signing his will and its being attested by the five persons he requested so to do, Mr. Robert Howden favored the audience with a ballad, and in response to vociferous encore sang a comic song with inimitable zest and humor, and then instead of, as is his wont, modestly retiring to his seat amid the din of applause, he stood his ground and commenced to open a square package of formidable proportions, and gaining the recognition of the chair (that noble old veteran of Liberalism, ever stanch and true to the cause, in weal or woe, Eben Pierce), in very flattering terms expressed his sense of the services as lecturer and exponent of Liberalism of Charles B. Reynolds, and presented the Jersey blasphemer with a beautiful and unique etching on glass, very handsomely framed. In the center was an admirable profile of Charles B. Reynolds, and under it the words, "Reynolds. Liberalism. June 14, 1892." On each side of the profile was a very artistic fac-simile of the Wettstein Freethinker's badgepin. Each corner was decorated with rays of light, and in the left upper corner, "Voltaire—Investigation;" in the right upper corner, "Bennett—Freethought;" in the lower left corner, "Paine—Reason;" in the lower right corner, "Ingersoll—Eloquence." The novelty of the design, as well as its truly admirable and artistic execution, called forth glowing encomiums.

The secretary of the Washington Secular Union is not apt to lack for words or distinct and emphatic utterance, but this unexpected token of appreciation and kindly feeling caused him some kind of swelling in the throat, and although his eyes sparkled with pleasure as he received the beautiful and appropriate gift, yet they glistened with tears in spite of him.

June 19th, Professor W. Bell lectured in my stead at the Germania Hall, affording me indulgence in a four days' holiday, the first I hav had in three years. I seized the opportunity of Professor Bell coming and put in the time at the hospitable ranch of that prince of good fellows and earnest Liberal, William E. Langdon, near Everett, the future metropolis of the Pacific.

C. B. Reynolds,
Sec. Wash. Secular Union.

Fremont, Wash., Lock Box 155.

Letters to Workingmen.

POLITICS.

I hav said we should wash our hands of politics. I believe the workers can never improve their condition by the ballot. It is a cunningly contrived snare, wherein we lose not only our freedom, but our hard-earned wages. I contend that in so far as we are concerned it is absolutely of no consequence which party is elected to power. The classes controling the successful candidates are always the same. And these classes while differing in their preferences, actually concern themselvs very little as to who is elected. They are very sure that attorneys representing their interests will be elected, hence their indifference. Jay Gould testified that in Democratic districts he was a Democrat; in Republican districts, a Republican; in doubtful districts a doubtful, but always and everywhere an Erie man. When asked if he gave money to influence elections, he said, in effect, he had not; he had found it easier and less expensiv to buy the legislators. You will always find that those who are the least benefited by the politician are the most enthusiastic in their endeavor to elevate him to power. It is we, the laboring poor, who hav nothing to win and everything to lose, to whom he looks for assistance, and alas! not in vain. The politician works for himself; he is after the loaves and fishes. As a rule, he is entirely ignorant of any plan, or idea of a plan, for the betterment of society. "Political economy" is all Greek to him. Yet I would not insinuate that a knowledge of this would make the better politician. If he aspires to any exalted position, it is essential that he should be a lawyer, because the railroad and bank president, the monopolist and stock-gambler, desire to be his clients. As a lawyer he may know how the laws favoring his client are made and enforced, or those unfavorable defeated or ignored. But if the labor element should succeed in electing those not lawyers, what then? Friends, it is the labor element that elects them all, and judging the future by the past we hav no data for affirming that any lasting good can be obtained through politics. The laborer has been in politics some time and what has he accomplished? Is his condition one whit better for any political success? Do you not know that the man who has leisure to apply his wit and money to employ the best counsel will always succeed in having legislation either made or interpreted or quietly ignored? The fact is, the voter has very little representation in the legislature. As I hav said, the politician represents nobody but himself. True, he may find it to his advantage to regard the wishes of his constituents. Still his actions are all prompted by his selfishness. The moment a man goes into politics the tendency is to make it pay. He must invest considerable cash to get a position. He feels that society has imposed an unlawful tax upon him and justifies himself in ways that are dark and tricks that are not altogether vain to get even with society. In fact, society has read him a lesson and he says to himself, "It shall go hard but I will better the instruction." As Emerson said, "Politics signifies cunning, intimating the state is a trick." Politicians justify the means by the ends and then shape the ends to their own advantage. Given the power, man's selfishness will manifest itself every time without regard to others' welfare. Who doubts that the country would be involved in civil war if supreme power were placed in the hands of the manufacturers of arms and ammunition, and it would be brought about in such a way that "the powers that be" could with all the appearance of sincerity appeal to the patriotism of the people to sustain them? It is idle to talk of reform in politics.

The editor of the Popular Science Monthly has truly said, "The most popular forms of government engender the worst forms of politics and foster states of mind that exclude all considerations of a scientific nature. Nothing is more notorious than that under the working of our popular political institutions the best men go to the wall and the worst men come to the front. By the very conditions of the case it is the crafty operators, the long-headed managers, caucus manipulators, party intriguers, and brazen indefatigable demagogs who secure the offices." Friends, I want you to think of this. The principle of politics is degrading. When we derive a right system from a wrong principle we may expect to gather grapes from thorns and figs from thistles. The trouble is, we are by nature conservativ. By nature we become the slaves of custom. What always has been, we imagin must be. That which should be abolished we are ever seeking to reform. Like the "wise man" who "jumped into a bramblebush and scratched out both his eyes," we imagin we hav only to "jump into another and scratch them in again." And then the absurdity of cultivating brambles in hopes that by proper selection we may get a bush containing less thorns when we know the very nature of the plant is to obstruct, entangle, and irritate! But this absurdity is eclipsed by the greater one shown in our anger at the man who would suggest the removal of the bramble altogether. Friends, it is our support that keeps this bramble upon the highway. But for our fostering care the onward march of civilization would destroy it, root and branch. But for our support political institutions would soon be superseded by business institutions. When the laboring poor realize the degrading influence and the utter uselessness of politics in the acquisition of knowledge and happiness, and withdraw themselvs from all participation in its iniquitous proceedings, politicians will be obliged to turn their attention to some honest calling. The business and commerce of the people depend in no sense upon politics or politicians. You will find the true business man giving politics a wide berth. He fears it, for he knows its robbing, intermeddling properties; and what is true of the business man is equally true of the moral man. The immorality of politics is admitted by all.

Our schools, says the educational reformer, must be taken out of politics. Its contaminating influence makes incompetent teachers and backward scholars. Our courts, say the advocates of pure jurisprudence, should be taken out of politics. It corrupts the bench and makes a travesty of justice. And so with every institution, "the trail of the serpent is over it all." They cannot be taken out of politics so long as politics dominates the nation. It must corrupt all its institutions. Man must take himself out of politics. No longer the slave of party or politicians, he will look upon the ballot as a card in the hands of a gambler. Think of it, friends, politics is simply a game wherein one party strives to beat the other; and so long as cunning and trickery are more successful in winning the game than modesty and honesty, so long will intrigue be the politician's stock in trade. It is often said of political parties that it is a choice of evils, and we are advised to choose the least. But, friends, this advice is good only when we are compelled to choose, otherwise we should make no choice. I am aware that certain politicians, reading their fate in the withdrawal of the poor from politics, are already advocating compulsion; and I expect to see them putting a law upon the statutes making it a misdemeanor or a crime for anyone eligible to neglect recording his choice. Well, let them do it. It will result in their being "hoisted with their own petard," as it will demonstrate the fact that the voter is a slave, and the politician's talk of "sovereign people" will be a theme for laughter. Any law seeking to enforce the idea that political methods are necessary will awaken the minds of the people, and its merits will be investigated. It will be weighed by the common folks, and if found wanting, quietly ignored. Laws are powerless when the great majority rebel. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." But the subtle invasion of liberty is sometimes necessary to strengthen and enforce vigilance. Meantime, I wish to impress this truth upon you, the evils of politics can never be overcome so long as we participate in its exercise. So long as we endeavor to force other people into our ways of thought we must expect to be forced from our own. Our liberty can only be preserved by refraining from all invasion of others'. The ballot as a card in the hands of a player would be harmless but for the power of government to enforce the will of the winner. If we play we "must abide the hazard of the die." We hav in honor no protest. If we set out to shear and return shorn, we may blame our stars and curse our luck, but we should bow to the will of the winner. I ask you, friends, to consider this little game of politics. Devote your first hours of leisure to a careful study of the ins and outs; see the players play in all the exuberance of enthusiasm; listen to their shouts of victory and wails of defeat.

So enamored are they with the game,
  So intent upon winning the lead,
No thought of an object or aim,
  No gain but the glory of speed.
Like the jockeys who ride in a race,
  Endangering their lives to outrun,
No thought but to gain in the chase,
  No glory but victory won.
Like a child we wish to employ
  On an errand of personal gain,
We divert his mind with a toy
  And a race with a rival to gain.
For back of the players there stand
  The robbers who greatly enjoy
The folly that givs to their hand
  The boodle the players deploy.

Buffalo, N. Y. A. L. Ballou.

The Death-Bed.*

As a nomad and a wanderer through this country from the cold, bleak regions of frosty Canada to the sunny and verdant lands of Mexico, I hav made man my principal theme of speculation, and as Sir Wm. Hamilton wrote on the walls of his room in the college, London, "I find there is nothing great in the world but man, nothing great in man but mind."

When man wandered over the face of the earth clothed only in the skins of animals, having only the sky as his house-top, the grass of the prairie for his bed, with the warm zephyrs of the orient as a protection from the cold, his mind was the only thing that elevated him above the beasts with which he came in contact; but he little knew what was shut up in that bony casket through which he recognized sound, light, etc., and differentiated between their varied metamorphoses; he little knew the feelings of ambition, the promptings of evil, those passions in man which make him lower than the lowest animals. He little knew that in that tangled network of protoplasmic cells there was so much deceit and treachery; he could not conceive that in that cranial cavity lurked so much latent duplicity. He knew not of love, of friendship, of hate, except what instinct taught him.

As your respected and eloquent orator, Mr. Reynolds, taught us, the rumble of the thunder, the flash of the lightning, the roar of the cataract, the whistling wind, etc., struck him with awe and imbued him with the idea of the supernatural. From this beginning his superstition and fear developed into a religion, every form of which is the expression of the same principle of mind, and is limited by man's power of varying the expression of this principle. Born in China, Turkey, Christendom, or elsewhere, his religion and moral codes would be such as were taught him; their degree of purity or elevating influences would depend upon the purity, elevation, and cultivation of the mind or minds from which they emanated and to which they became associated.

From the earliest ages the death-bed has been surrounded with a halo of veneration, and a record of the sayings and doings of dying men of all times has been kept. The dying statesman, warrior, heroin, or hero of different ages has been the theme of song by the poet, of speculation by the philosopher, of example by the ecclesiastic, and scorn by the cynic. Great stress has been laid on the death-bed of the Christian, who stretches out his arms toward heaven as if he was sure of a passage there, and the death-bed of the Infidel with its agony and terrible torture. But, my friends, while this all seems very pretty, the experience of every professional man who has stood by and seen the monster Death envelop within its slimy coils a human being, denies this, and bears me out in the assertion that these death-bed scenes are the product of man's imagination, and are contradicted by the simplest laws of physiology. I hav stood by the bedside as the old man tottered over the boundary line of life and death; hav seen the little infant pass away with a smile like the last rays of the setting sun as they were absorbed by the twilight; hav seen the lividity, the cyanesis, the imperceptible heart sounds, the absence of radial pulse, and the hoarse sepulchral whisper complete the desperate picture of that dread disease, cholera.

But here as elsewhere I hav seen the dying soul pass over the river Styx in a boat whose muffled paddles gave back no echo.

Occasionally I hav seen a man's death preceded by wild delirium, and his words would seem to revert to the scenes of his childhood, and the brain by excessiv molecular irritation would cause the tongue to utter in the wildest fancy sentences, part of which were incoherent, but which, like the Bible, could be translated by a skilful tactician to mean anything. The claim of the Christian teacher that the brain of man dies last, as proved by a microscopical examination of the circulation of the sclerotic coat of the eye after the pulse has ceased to beat at the wrist, is true, but a deeper study of physiology teaches us what he either does not know or seeks to conceal, that that circulation is a venous one, and that the blood seems to flow through the little radicles by simply a mechanical principle of all fluids, that when pressure is taken away they seek their level, and a further examination reveals the fact that from this blood has already been extracted all the oxygen, in the absence of which thought cannot exist. We also find out that when too much blood, heavily charged with oxygen, rushes to the brain, setting in motion by violent irritation all the nerve centers, the corporal man loses control over the mental man and freaks of thought obtain. At this juncture, if the heart refuses to act, death ensues, and the last words of the dying throat are cherished, although they conflict with the whole past life of the individual; but should the heart stand the strain and recovery take place, what he said was "simple delirium."

The great Freethought orator has said that "Life is a strange and shadowy road along which we all must pass, a few short steps from the cradle with its lullaby of love to that great wayside inn where we all must pause and where the only salutation is good-night."

It seems to me that we need no religion to tell us that good influence and habits, and constitutional inclination to virtue, are surer guarantees against immorality and vice than the most pious resolves and nicest power of moral casuistry. Life is merely a principle resulting from the properties of matter and the action of elements in bodies, in which they create spontaneous movements. But it is a trust we owe to society, that we spend not idly as a gala day or holiday season, bedecked with the gewgaws of fancy, but to be well administered, and when it is ended to be laid down with satisfaction, when its sun sinks beneath the green earth and its weary journey is over. Dr. R. Brodnax.

* An essay read by Dr. Brodnax at the late conference of the Washington Secular Union.

English Notes.

Dear Truth Seekers: Amongst the most pleasurable incidents of the last few days is the receipt of a letter from California, written by a hitherto unknown friend who claims acquaintance by means of these English Notes. Such favors call for no apology. I am only too glad to know that Americans and Englishmen are in touch with each other, and that your compatriots watch with interest the doings of Freethinkers in the old country. What I am longing to realize is a more general interchange of opinions between the dwellers of the two lands. We are too much divided yet. We hav scarcely learned efficiently that grand lesson of Thomas Paine that "the world is my country and mankind my brethren." Some day Ingersoll to Englishmen and Foote to Americans may not be "strangers yet;" and when that day shall come to pass I may be able, too, to shake hands with those whose homes are beyond the herring pond. In addition to this letter, I hav to acknowledge thankfully the receipt of the Moralist, the Open Court, and other interesting journals which are always most welcome gifts in a country where they do not grow.

Manchester, June 20, 1892. Sam Standring.

A Party for Liberty Wanted.

The time has come that I hav feared for some years. The Democratic party has committed suicide and there is an opportunity for a new one. To many a Liberal it will seem impossible to start a party called the Liberal party with any hope of success. But there often come times when the smallest party holds the balance of power. The two parties now unite in offering the people silver in the platforms, but none in the mints. It is simply a ruse to make money scarce so that money rings can the more easily control it; to make farmers pay two bushels where they ought to pay only one. A party ought to be started that would secure liberty of thought, speech, of the press, liberty of action to the individual, and extend the powers of government so as to wipe out the tyrannical corporations that now ride over us roughshod and play the role in our age that the dukes and counts did in feudal times. Geo. Wilson.

Press Censorship.

At a meeting of the Ethical Club of Topeka, Kan., held on the 28th inst., the following resolutions were passed:

Whereas, Moses Harman, the president of this club, has again been committed to prison, charged with the violation of the postal laws, attempting to regulate the nature of mailable matter, and

Whereas, The principle involved is one that assaults the right of a free press and assails, not only the liberty of thought and speech, but endangers the business interests of the press everywhere; therefore,

Resolved, That this club makes the reasonable request that newspaper publishers furnishing advance copies of their publications to the post-office officials or agents, shall be exempt from responsibility when such publications are subsequently received and mailed. The responsibility of determining what is and what is not mailable matter must be assumed by the department instead of, as now, being left as a trap to catch innocent and well-meaning publishers who may hav their own views as to what is wholesome literature. The common right of protection recognized in all free countries requires, if censorship of the press must be, that publishers may be able to save themselvs from the danger of prosecution and imprisonment by demanding that the acceptance of postage by the department, when advance copies of such mailable matter hav been furnished, shall act as a bar against any charge of violation of the postal law.

Resolved, That this club has the highest regard for the moral worth of Moses Harman, its president; that it believes no word of reproach has ever been uttered against his personal character, and that he commands the respect and esteem of all who know him well, and that even those who antagonize ideas that he may entertain, many of which this club will not attempt to fully indorse, still hav the utmost confidence in his integrity of purpose.

Resolved, That this, the Topeka Ethical Ciub, believing in and tolerating the utmost freedom of discussion as the only means of reaching ultimate truth, does hereby extend to Mr. Harman its warmest sympathies, assuring him that he has our respect as a citizen, our love as a friend, and our admiration for his unselfish devotion to his own ideal of right.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to our friend and presiding officer, Moses Harman, in his confinement, and that they be furnished to his paper, the Lucifer, and to the city press for publication.

G. F. Kimball,
J. W. Adams,
J. A. Adams, } Committee.
Mr. Bullard, Vice-president.

Attest: G. F. Kimball, Secretary.

Praise of a Book.

From the Galveston News.

"The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion Contrasted with Ancient Myths and Miracles as Factors in Human Evolution, and Other Essays on Reform," by Thomas Ellwood Longshore, member of the Society of Friends, author of "George Fox Interpreted" and other works. Published by the Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

Written in a scholarly manner, without ostentation of learning, but with substantial evidence of its possession, this volume of five hundred pages, in popular form, is one of the most engaging books of its class. With reference to subjects of deepest anxiety, where mankind seeks hope and consolation, the author speaks with dignity and simplicity for cheerful resignation to the decrees of nature and impresses the reader with the unconstrained candor of his remarks, the strength of his reason, and serenity of a balanced intellect, freely employed to build up the best things in character upon a natural and human basis.

Heaven No Longer Popular.

The other Sunday a visiting clergyman addressed the Sunday-school of a Detroit church. After a serious talk he said to the children:

"All of you who desire to liv in a better world than this please rise to your feet."

All the children rose except one small boy in the corner.

The good man looked at him in pained surprise.

"My child," he said, very gently and kindly, "why don't you rise with the others?"

"Detroit's good enough for me, that's why," sung out the youngster, and the solemnity of the occasion was knocked to pieces.

The Rogers Debate.

I desire space for a few words concerning the debate recently held at Rogers, A k., between Rev. J. N. Hall, editor of the Baptist Gleaner and myself. A report of the debate, written by Mr. Hall and published in his paper, prompts me to write. His report is gross y inaccurate, and calculated, if not intended, to deceive his readers. It is made up largely of such statements as the following:

"At the close of the debate Mr. Remsburg advised all Christians to stick to their Christianity, as he had nothing better to offer them. This advice concedes the whole ground to us, and it greatly pleased the Christians.

"Old Brother Jetton told me that on the third day of the debate Mr. Remsburg packed his valise and started to the train, to go home and quit the field, but some of his people prevailed on him to remain and tough it out."

I will not hav an opportunity to present a refutation of these, and the many other silly falsehoods with which his article abounds, to the readers of the Baptist Gleaner. So far as the readers of our Freethought papers are concerned, none is needed; for whatever opinion they may entertain of my work, they will giv me credit, I am sure, of being neither a fool nor a coward. If the above statements are true I am both.

Why Mr. Hall should indulge in this personal tirade against me I am at a loss to understand. That I gave him no just provocation for it during our discussion, he admits. Referring to me, he says: "Everybody agreed in the sentiment that he was a gentlemanly and cultivated man." And again: "He is high-toned and gentlemanly in debate; does not condescend to little and contemptible tricks like some so-called Christians I hav met . . . and our debate was throughout pleasant and without offense."

Can it be that chagrin caused by the consciousness of his having failed to satisfactorily answer the objections that Freethought offers to Christianity inspired his untruthful and ungenerous report? Had he really gained the victory that he would hav his readers believe he gained, had he refuted all the arguments I advanced, I certainly should harbor no revengeful feelings toward him. The more errors he had dispelled from my mind, the more truths he had given me, the more grateful should I be. My object in discussion is not to score a polemical triumph, but to discover and establish the truth.

Conceding to him the privilege of bestowing fulsome praise upon his own efforts, thanking him for the few complimentary words he has seen fit to bestow upon me, and passing over as unworthy of notice his extended and persistent attempts to misrepresent and belittle his opponent, I will proceed at once to a brief account of the debate as it appeared to the other disputant.

The debate commenced May 24th and continued five days—two sessions a day of two hours each—twenty hours in all. The Opera House each night was crowded almost to suffocation, and would probably hav been filled had its capacity been twice as great. Visitors were there from nearly every part of Arkansas; also from Missouri, Kansas, and Kentucky. In addition to Mr. Hall and the resident pastor of the Baptist church, it is stated that twenty-one Baptist clergymen were in attendance. Probably as many more clergymen belonging to various other denominations were present.

The following propositions were discussed:

1. "The Bible is a revelation from God." Hall affirmed. Remsburg denied.

2. "The Christ of the New Testament is a myth, and the four gospels which purport to giv a record of his life and teachings are unworthy of credit." Remsburg affirmed. Hall denied.

In the discussion of his own proposition Mr. Hall displayed unusual ability as a debater. He had evidently given his subject careful attention. In his report he says: "For two months I hav given diligent study and ceaseless labor to the preparation for my debate with Mr. J. E. Remsburg, the great Infidel debater and lecturer." He had thoroughly familiarized himself with the stereotyped arguments in support of the inspiration of the scriptures and presented them in a very entertaining and forcible manner. He failed to prove his affirmation, but he made about as good a defense of a bad case as it is possible to make.

In attempting to controvert the second proposition he was all at sea. He had not been able to anticipate my line of argument; he was ignorant of the many damaging facts to be adduced against the credibility of the gospels and the historical character of Christ, and was utterly unprepared to meet them. His arguments were so lame and his sophistries so transparent as to excite the pity of his more intelligent auditors. He was at a loss how to occupy his time. He was obliged to speak five hours on the question, while one would hav sufficed for all he had to say that was really relevant to it. He indulged in personal ridicule and rehearsed old sermons and exhortations. He vociferated loudly and gesticulated frantically. His efforts reminded me of an anecdote related of Dr. Lyman Beecher. Mr. Beecher, while returning home from church one Sunday with his family, observed that he had never preached a poorer sermon than the one he had preached that day. "Why, father," said Henry, "I never heard you preach louder." "That's it," said the father; "when I hav nothing to say I always holler."

Toward the close of the debate, he tried to draw me away from the question under consideration and introduced other questions with which he was more familiar. I had previously met a Campbellite minister who had once served as moderator in a debate in which he was a disputant. He told me that I would find Mr. Hall a ready talker, but that I would hav great difficulty in confining him to the proposition. Such proved to be the case.

Mr. Hall enjoys the reputation of being the ablest debater south of Mason and Dixon's line; but he is evidently more at home in defending the tenets of his particular creed from the attacks of the adherents of other Christian denominations than he is in defending Christianity in general from the assaults of disbelievers. He is, doubtless, a very able champion of the Baptist church, but he is not an especially able champion of the Christian church—not as able as some others with whom I hav debated. He is neither as able nor as fair a debater as President Dungan of Cottner University, with whom I held my last debate preceding that at Rogers. Off the platform he is a genial and companionable man. When he knows or thinks he knows what he is talking about he is a fluent and forcible speaker. He is quite popular in the South, and especially with the Baptists.

Aside from "Old Brother Jetton's" awful lie, and the expressed hope of another pious brother that God would kill me, my treatment by the Christians of Rogers and by the clergy in attendance was in the main kind and courteous. I heartily enjoyed the debate, and so far from my having packed my valise to get away from it, I would gladly pack my valise to go and participate in another.

J. E. Remsburg.

Items of Foreign News Interesting to Freethinkers.

Nine months' imprisonment is the penalty for blasphemy in Guben, Prussia. A workingman is the sinner.

The Universal Congress of Freethinkers will be held at Madrid, Spain, on October 12th. The delegates are to present their credentials at the office of the secretary, Horno del la Mata, num. 5, primero.

Owing to the excellent status and proficiency of Holy John's post-office administration a large package of foreign and impious second-class matter due to us April last arrived only June 30th, hence the ancient air of some of our news.

The number of secular marriages and funerals is constantly increasing in France. Freethinkers in this country should show a little more courage and thus convince the Christians that not even on such occasions is clerical assistance wanted.

H. Ignatius en H. Neeholaus, from Tolentinen, saintly defender against influenza, is coining money in Belgium, and the Jesuit general, Father Anderledy, is nearly dying from the consequences of the same disease. No comments are needed.

La France Anti-Clericale is the title of a new illustrated French political Freethought journal. We hav not seen a copy yet, but in the opinion of our foreign contemporaries the editor, Joanne Magdelaine, will not be beloved by any sky-pilot.

The eminent French Freethinker, Emile Odin, is dead at an age of only thirty-four years. Nearly two thousand people escorted the remains to the crematory and speeches were made by the foremost of his Parisian colaborers in the field of intellectual and social reform.

On March 13th the Freethinkers of Barcelona, Spain, held a demonstration attended by two thousand people. Anticlerical resolutions, speeches, singing, and music constituted the program. A resolution of the society to join the Universal Freethought Federation was adopted.

In 1889 117 deputies of the French chamber voted in favor of total separation of church and state. The French Freethought Federation began organizing in earnest, and in 1891 179 votes were cast in favor of the proposition. Six delegates who had promised to vote in its favor neglected to do so, and they hav not been reëlected. Strength lies in organization. Where is the American Secular Union, and what are the executivs doing?

Superstition is rife among the Christians in Prussia. A miner suffered from an attack of influenza. The wise old woman of the village told him he was bewitched and that he could be cured only by hammering the first old woman he met the next morning. He did so and knocked his own mother senseless. She, however, on returning to consciousness had her son and the "doctor" arrested. This happened in the Christian Prussia of the year 1892.

The Belgian Freethinkers are activ as ever. New societies are continually forming and the organization of the Federation becomes daily more and more complete. Great credit for this is due to our energetic friend, Mr. Leon Furnemont, president of the Freethought Society of Brussels and editor of La Raison. The general prosperity and evolution of Freethought organization in Belgium, Spain, and France is due, we think, not alone to the activity of the officials, but to the fact that the individual members recognize the importance of coöperation and the consequent necessity of letting alone petty personal opinions on speculativ subjects. In those countries the adherents of the theories of Theosophy, Spiritualism, and Materialism do not fill page upon page in our journals with abuse or ridicule of each other's pet theories, not one of which can be demonstrated. One world's business is enough for them.

Hands Off!

John G. Whittier, Dear Friend: I write to you as being a friend of man and woman, regardless of the color of their skin, and as being a powerful advocate of their inalienable rights. Yourself being of Quaker stock and personally a genuin Quaker, I need not remind you how prone human beings of all races and nations hav always been, and still are, to rob each other of those rights, among which liberty of conscience, pertaining to religion and theology, is the most sacred. It is the "pearl of great price," and when gained and possessed, is only retained by sleepless watchfulness and eternal vigilance. "No religious legislation" is the palladium of liberty of conscience and the motto of the United States Constitution. "This is not a Christian nation or government," was the fundamental corner-stone declaration of Washington, the father of our country.

Therefore, liberty of conscience is not a toleration by a gracious church-and-state government, such as Russia extended to the Mennonites for many years, and then suddenly banished them en masse; and is now doing the same by three millions of Jews, both of them being the cream of her population.

The especial object of Jefferson, Franklin, Paine and company, the Infidel framers of the Declaration of Independence and founders of the government, was an entire separation of church and state and perfect liberty of conscience to the religious and non-religious of all races and nations in the world. This is the only government upon earth of which I hav knowledge that is entirely secular. Under it, the Atheist and the most superstitious, religious enthusiast or orthodox bigot hav equal freedom of thought and speech unmolested.

Amid the thousand religions of earth no one has any more right than another to practice coercion, all being equal in the eye of reason and before properly understood and interpreted American law.

Therefore, it is arrogant, impudent assumption for any one of them to dictate to and attempt to coerce all the rest. And when the one of them all that is the most ungodly, unscientific, unreasonable, and cruel makes the attempt to thus coerce, it disgraces itself and the nation by its ignorant, egotistic arrogance!

Each day of the seven is the Sabbath of some one of the thousand religions which will be assembled at the World's Fair; and each one has the right to observe or not observe any one of the seven days as a Sabbath, and to compel by "religious legislation" all the others to observe it, or none of them has any such right.

Hands off! Let the Constantine heathen religionists that Christianized war, appointing chaplains to pray for it and go with their army and navy, blessing their battle-flags, perish and pass away. Let these Antichristian priests go to their steeple-houses and into their gorgeous pulpits, and perform their senseless mummeries and superstitious rites and ceremonies, unmolested, one day in seven, at the World's Fair; and, instead of closing the doors to the rest of the world, let them repent of their religious wars and remember the fifty millions of their fellow-creatures slain in Christian battles, or by their Holy Inquisition, using the most horrible and devilish modes of torture that hell could devise. Then let them go and open the prison doors of the Tennessee victims of religious persecution, who are incarcerated for their conscientious refusal to be dictated to by Christian bigots. Let them remit their fines and pay them for lost time, then their suffering families will appreciate, as now they curse, the Constantine Sabbath.

These Antichristians want a sign, a poem by the nation's favorit laureate.

Let no sign be given, no poem be written, until those Tennessee martyrs are returned to their homes, all religious legislation is repealed, and the World's Fair be a World's Fair, and not a sectarian Holy Inquisition, trampling upon and violating the most sacred of the inalienable rights of man—liberty of conscience of man and woman, which right is so carefully guarded and guaranteed by the United States Constitution. F. W. EVANS.

Mt. Lebanon, N. Y., July 10, 1892.

Protection and Salvation.

Indulging in a heretical remark to some Catholics in a small city, brought the warning, "You had better be careful; the priest has the power, if he chooses to use it, to paralyze your tongue that you cannot speak." Meeting the priest soon after, I questioned him if that was true; and he made answer in a whispering, confiding manner, "I hav the power to make them think so."

Men hav ever followed both religious and political leaders so universally that it seems they but fulfill a natural law of evolution, and thus disprove the growing notion that all men are born equal.

It is contended by many that in this particular spot of earth, the people or voters are sufficiently equal and intelligent to do their own praying and marketing; but the vast majority of them still want salvation in some other world and protection in this. The word salvation is a charm to the timid one who fears the anger of some God; and the alluring word protection carries virtue in the sound thereof to the toiler, and givs him courage in the struggle for existence.

Ecclesiastical salvation is supposed to save the soul from an eternity of suffering in a hell; but some folks deny the existence of a hell, and do not need that sort of salvation. A protectiv tariff is supposed to prevent suffering in this world from cheap food and raiment; but some folks deny danger of suffering from such a cause, and do not need that sort of protection.

As in the case of a supernatural dogma, so is it with a political humbug. The believer relies on the supposed inspiration of the priest in the one case, and on the uncommon wisdom of his party leader in the other. For who ever knew of a common mortal attempting through his own understanding to grasp the Christian idea of an unchangeable God separable into three equal persons, or to explain how in hiring a man to watch and tax him when he picks berries on the other side of the creek he is benefited? When a Vermont farmer buys a horse in Canada, and pays $20 duty, he is really fined that amount, and when the Canadian buys a plow in Vermont, he also is fined. Curiously, in the mist of political bigotry, each party in these transactions fancies he gets the better of the other—in some such mysterious way as that of the old lady's boys who, when confined, could make fifty cents each by swapping jackets. The collectors of these mutual-benefit taxes may enjoy the emoluments of office, and patriotically preside over protection clubs; but it is not given the common mortal to apprehend the hight and depth of the unsearchable riches contained therein. It is wholly a matter of faith.

The priest, who seldom does with less than three good meals a day, and generally wears an eighteen-inch collar, is interested only in our eternal condition, and succeeds in making many folks believe that escape from his God's everlasting wrath can be made only through his gospel. And the protected monopolist, who controls legislation and livs in the grandest house, succeeds in making the dear workingman believe that safety from starvation in this world can be secured only through his political creed.

If the theory of protection is good policy as against other nations, why not as against other states? New York should line her borders with a costly customs service, and lay duty on coal high enough to insure the finding and working of mines in her own dominions. Having paid so many millions of dollars for Pennsylvania coal, it should be a wonder that New York is not dead broke. New England now buys Western flour; she cannot compete. Were she to become a separate nation the protectionist, to be consistent, must line the border with custom-houses and man them at much cost to collect duties on flour. Now, will he obligingly show who in such case will pay this great cost, and who, besides the officers employed, will be benefited? Instead of practicing self-government we hav the priest to prevent us from being caught by the devil, and the protectionist to guard us from ruin through free exchange.

The farmer is told that without protection he would hav no market for his produce. Now, it has happened that while protectiv duties hav been doubled during the last thirty years, the average value of New England farms during that time has fallen one-half. Can the protectionist explain? The average farmer livs economically, works with his hired man, when he has any, and never escapes paying taxes. But, unlike the infant manufacturer, he does not buy up one-half the township and own a bank that is generous enough to place the other half under mortgage. He seldom goes to Congress, either as a member or to be examined by a committee in regard to his interest in the price of salt, blankets, or tinware; he does not often spend a season abroad, and is not a familiar figure at our own watering-places. The priest and the protected monopolist will do all the junketing and legislating for him. The priest claims that to his religion is due all our progress in civilization; and the protectionist claims that to his policy is due all our gain in wealth. Both are leaders who fatten on their fellows.

A tariff on imports is the most costly of all methods to raise revenue. It calls for custom-houses, revenue cutters, extra courts, officers, lawyers, etc., to hunt for and try smugglers. But the protectionist tells his followers that this kind of revenue is paid by the foreigner, and they think he knows; and the priest tells his followers that Jesus will pay all their sinful debts when they go to some phantom myth-land, and they think he knows all about that theory.

He who binds himself to buy and sell only in a certain market unwittingly votes away his liberty, and pays taxes for the support of officers to watch himself.

Protection inflates values. But the advance in prices benefits those only who already possess property thus affected.

Protection givs the manufacturer a monopoly of the home market, with higher prices, and the higher prices close foreign outlet. It shuts out cheap foreign wares, but attracts the poor laborer from the ends of the earth. It thus increases our population beyond precedent; but such exotic hot-house growth may not preserve a hardy patriotism. It is making the young republic prematurely old.

Protection builds factories and destroys ships and commerce. The intoxicating stimulant of protection for particular industries often results in delirium tremens of overproduction, followed by reduction of wages and strikes.

The protection policy increases greatly the cost of government; it is partial and paternal in character; it is opposed to liberty, and is incompatible with the theory of self-government.

When men hav gained courage enough to reject all diabolism and supernaturalism, and hav become intelligent enough to know that the protection given to A taxes the rest of the alphabet; that a duty on salt benefits only the owner of the salt-lick; that a duty on lumber adds to the cost of the farmer's barn; that a specific duty is an unequal tax; and then to vote for freedom of thought and freedom of trade, the right kind of millennium will be at hand. L. G. REED.

The Admiration of Murder.

On Commemoration day I stood for two hours at one spot in Fifth avenue, New York, while a military procession passed by. Lads and old men, recent recruits and aged veterans, strong, stalwart soldiers and the crippled victims of war, filed along to inspiring strains of drum and fife or stirring melodies of martial bands. Bright, fresh banners waved in the breeze along with tattered ensigns that storm, shot, and shell had riddled into ribbons. Swords, muskets, cannons, and machine-guns were brandished or paraded with pride. All the men engaged in this display were arrayed in gorgeous trappings. Fantastic colors mingled in the dress; feathers and plumes decorated the headgear, and the whole costume indicated an attempt at attractiv display, such as is deemed characteristic of children or savages. All the city turned out to witness the parade. Multitudes came from the country, and great chieftains gathered to see the march pass at a central point.

What was the ostensible object of this show? It was to commemorate the northern soldiers who died in the late civil war. But to the great majority of those who took part in the parade or who witnessed it, probably the only thought was a drill and a spectacle.

The men whose memory it was sought to honor were many of them so inspired by the idea of patriotism that they volunteered to go forth to kill fellow-countrymen who desired to change their form of government; others enlisted for hire to kill whomever they were ordered to, without any conception of the reason why; while others were forced by the strong hands of the law unwillingly to go forth to slaughter and be slaughtered. Their surviving comrades who were in any way injured by the service hav been paid annual pensions by the votes of their grateful country—men who held the majority in the government, the aggregate sum now amounting to an immense sum and increasing annually by over a hundred millions.

Tears filled our eyes as this thought came to me: All this display, all this admiration, rests upon murder. The men whose deaths are commemorated went forth to kill, but were killed instead by other men who had come forth to kill, many on both sides equally inspired by love of God and of country; and all the vast procession, marching to music with gorgeous display amid the enthusiastic cheers and plaudits of the enormous crowds of spectators, are men who are trained in the art of killing. This is the end of the nineteenth century "after Christ," in a land professing to follow the teachings of one of whom in fabled story the angels sang, "On earth peace, good will toward men." And yet the religion he is said to hav founded leaves the most highly civilized nation in the world taking its chief delight in military display and organizing the greatest show of the year in parading the trappings and instruments of war in honor of dead soldiers. Would a procession illustrating trade and commerce, the arts of peace and the humanities of the age, with commemoration of the inventors, producers, organizers, and philanthropists of the past, hav excited like enthusiasm? Is it not a fact to be regretted that the admiration of lovely and loving women should go out in the highest measure to a soldier, and that men of war should be the heroes of the gentle sex?

This admiration of murder is instilled into the child from his earliest years. The box of tin soldiers is among his first toys, and as soon as he can toddle about the fond parent makes a soldier's cap out of a newspaper, hangs a drum around his neck, ties a tin sword to his waist, and he struts about with glee, killing his mimic enemies. When he gets to school his chief physical training is in military drill. He becomes familiar with the most approved methods of marching upon the enemy and of handling destructiv weapons with the most deadly effect. Leaving school, he joins the volunteers and his recreation consists in training for murder. Familiarization with the means of warfare lessens his natural repugnance toward killing others. The applause his company receives in the march past inspires the desire for the plaudits of victory. Thus, when in later life he becomes a legislator, at the first sign of foreign complications his voice is for war. It has no terrors for him and he sees advancement and glory in the practice of the murderous business for which he has been trained. In the diplomatic quarrel with Chili it was the army and navy that chiefly fomented the demand for war. They had too long been idle, and were tired of sham fights and target practice. They wanted to show their drill, use their splendid weapons in earnest, and secure advancement by the death of their seniors.

If we would hasten the era of peace, the establishment of arbitration, and the triumph of humanity, let the emblems and the methods of war cease to be toys and training for the young, and only be regarded with awe by the old as still necessary preparations, in a very limited degree, for self-protection and against foreign invasion. The political clubs are beginning to wear uniforms and execute marching drill, and the wand and Indian-club calisthenics and Delsarte movements are furnishing the young with all needed means of physical development without affecting the mind with murderous thoughts. Away with the gun and all soldiering for pastime or exercise, and let us regard the warrior as we do the hangman—as a terrible but happily waning relic of the barbarous ages.

Montreal, July 5, 1892. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

Letters of Friends.

Assertion vs. Proof.

ORANGE CITY, June 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5 for your Literature Fund. I do not see that I can help the cause along in any better way.

That Mr. Buesing takes the cake. If forcible and authoritativ statements amount to anything he certainly is a genius.

And there is another Bismarckian expounder of the truth, à la Podsnap. He brushes away Mr. Ballou's letters with a wave of his hand and an angry snarl. No use for any argument, but "I say so."

Some gentlemen seem to forget that their statements are taken for what they are worth, and that a statement without argumentativ proof, in this age of reason, is valued at nihil. DE LESPINASSE.

The Minds Whom You Liberate Will Bless You, Sir.

BALTIMORE, MD., June 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: At last, after a long fight with adverse circumstances, I am glad to be able to inclose you a post-office money-order for $28—$3 for one year's subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and $25 that I promised long ago to assist you a little in your heroic battle against ignorance, superstition, and hypocrisy. This little donation is for no especial fund or purpose, as no one knows so well as you how and where to apply it to do most good. The only explanation I can giv for not sending it sooner is, I hav done the best I could.

If I were a believer in the Christian superstition, my vanity would be very highly flattered by the love of my heavenly father as shown by the chastenings he has given me; but as I hav not been struck by lightning, even when worshiping him in his holy temple, nor hav any of my loved ones been taken to the celestial realms by diphtheria, scarlet fever, flood, or pestilence, while large numbers of his children hav been favored with these marks and evidences of his affection and tender, watchful care, it must be my heart is yet a little hard, and I hav no occasion to be bursting with pride on account of his particular attention to me.

That you may prosper as you deserve is the best I can wish you.

This city, with all its boasted universities, colleges, and facilities for education, is terribly priest-ridden. There is about fifty million dollars' worth of church property here in Baltimore city untaxed, and about six thousand people devoting all or nearly all their time to the propagation of religion, and not one Freethought society that I hav been able to find—although I believe there are a number of intelligent Freethinkers here if they could be brought together. JOSIAH FRIEND.

Pointed Remarks on Labor and Government.

KISSIMMEE, FLA., June 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: When the poor see what is their rights there will be no bonds of any kind to retard justice and equal rights. Labor pays everything; if labor would stop ten years the people would all starve to death. If interest would stop ten years the people would all hav something. If all officers duly elected would enter on the duty of their respectiv offices by taking the oath of their office without bonds and let their bodies be responsible for the faithful performance of their duties, this would make a more honest administration of our laws. Let all elections be once a year and no man to hold the same office but once in his lifetime; that would giv young men a chance to show what they were. All schools to be paid by public money; hav no favorits; that would giv each and all the same chance according to their wishes. The above would burst up the Ku Klux Klan, also the Republicans' high tariff, the Democratic money lying up in the government vaults, the rings, the secret orders compact, capitalists' money-bags, railroad free passes, the two hands under the coat-tail for boodle, and the buttonhole game. The change would be so often that the money would giv out, like my cattle—when they gave out the beef-stealers had to move where there was more cattle. If we could raise any crops in this country I would show what it would do for us. We are in such a country of poverty that if the darned Yankees stop fooling away their money here we will hav to move. Hoping this will be of some good to honest men, I will be ready at any time to tell the truth to any that may apply to me for facts as far as my limited knowledge will permit. E. W. SIGSBEE.

P.S.—In THE TRUTH SEEKER of April 23, 1892, I see "Domestic Information to Be Exchanged," Ann Arbor, Mich. I wish a sample of berries by mail and how to put them up. Oblige a Freethinker,

E. W. S.

Let's Out From the Coils of the Serpent Superstition.

PENACOOK, N. H., July 3, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I send you a poem that I thought I should like to see in your paper—that is, if you see fit to use it. I hav had it quite a long time. It was composed by a man both by name and by nature. He is a true Liberal; but not, I believe, a subscriber to any of our papers. I mean to send him your paper till he likes it so well he will subscribe.

I see you are short on your Literature Fund, so here is a dollar for that. I hope everyone that possibly can will help this along. Please send me also "The Strike of a Sex." I hope soon to be a regular subscriber to all the good books as they come along.

I see some of the friends think we should leave politics out of our work. I feel sure if all Liberals will keep an eye on the leaders of both the old parties this fall they will soon see that politics and religion are now, as they ever hav been, very near bedfellows.

Let us all agree to disagree if necessary, and pull together to down this monster serpent, Superstition, that is ever drawing us into its slimy coils.

Yours for a long pull, and a strong pull, and a pull all together, ETTA MARDEN.

ORTHODOX HELL.

Orthodoxy's getting shaky;
Hell is losing half its charm;
Beecher stole the devil's brimstone;
Churches all are in alarm.

Hell was once a lake infernal,
Past description, past all names,
Where the damned must roast eternal
In those lurid brimstone flames.

Hell of late, though's, getting smaller,
Cooling off, too—beats the deuce;
Likewise brimstone, once so plenty,
Now is nearly out of use.

Not long since hell swarmed with infants,
Doomed to burn by God's decree,
Just because old Eve stole apples
Off the devil's knowledge tree.

Later still, divines went searching
Hell all through with anxious care,
Gave the hunt up quite discouraged,
Not the first damned baby there.

Fact is, hell's a grand old humbug;
Poor old Satan's most played out;
Orthodoxy's out of brimstone;
Hell is fast going up the spout.

A Letter Full of Free Prairie Air and Free Prairie Thought.

LAKE CREEK, WASH., July 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: It does seem to me that all persons ought some time in their lives to take a trip to the great West. I left southern Kentucky on the 8th of June; passed through Cincinnati, O., and Indianapolis, Ind., and on the 9th, at 6 o'clock A.M., picked myself up at Chicago, Ill., staid all day in Chicago, and on the 10th found myself at St. Paul. The 10th, 11th, and 12th took me through some of the grandest scenery I ever saw. No one can do justice in describing the broad prairies, the deep canyons, the awful masses of dark and frowning rocks above you, the deep chasms below. Then darting out from this gloom you find yourself in a grand, flower-covered prairie, with great herds of cattle, bands of horses, and flocks of sheep grazing in every direction, while around at a great distance you see huge mountains whose tops are always covered with snow. I say they cannot be adequately described. They hav to be seen to be properly appreciated. The 12th (which was my fourth day from home) found me on the eastern side of the great Missoula washout. There were twelve coaches in the train, containing about six hundred passengers. We staid at a station called Garrison four long, long days. We asked the conductor ten thousand times when we would get away from there. I won't say for certain, but I believe that the conductor went crazy. Well, six hundred passengers imprisoned for four days would be bound to hav a monkey-and-parrot sort of a time. We ran footraces, tried who could jump the farthest and kick the highest, played all kinds of games, and had two dances. I was the champion checker-player. But the best thing was a regular debate on the tariff question. We were pretty evenly divided on the question. We would stamp and applaud our man as if we were in the halls of Congress. A Mr. Stiff, a lawyer from Missoula, carried off the honors. He convinced the whole six hundred that the tariff is a tax and that the consumer pays the tax. Well, the Northern Pacific sent those six hundred passengers back to Butte, and then by the Union Pacific over four hundred miles due south to Pocatello in Idaho; thence to Spokane, Wash., in order to get around the great Missoula washout. On the 20th, which was my twelfth day from home, I found myself at Davenport, which was the end of my journey.

I found my son well, and doing well. Oh, what a great free country this Pacific slope is, and still bound to be greater in the future! Oh, why cannot the whole world be free? Why do not such preachers as Talmage, Hall, and others teach people to believe all they can? Why not take the rusty fetters from the mind that we hav to believe certain things which, according to human reason and experience, are impossible, or be sent to an everlasting hell after death? J. N. BROWN.

A Pleasant and Sensible Letter.

ST. LOUIS, MO., July 4, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: For the inclosed $1 please send to my address one copy of the Bible Picture Book.

Now, Mr. Macdonald, I like THE TRUTH SEEKER immensely, and cannot possibly be without it. I hav no suggestion to make for improvement other than that of a recent correspondent who suggests that some space be given up to scientific miscellany, news, and discussion, "both terrestrial and celestial." In my opinion the idea is good and should be considered.

Continue the pictures by all means, as they are considered indispensable to the beauty and grandeur of the grand old TRUTH SEEKER.

I want to ask you, Mr. Editor, if it is a fact, as I hav read in THE TRUTH SEEKER recently, that the bigots hav secured an assurance of the closing of the government's exhibit at the World's Fair on the alleged Sabbath. If this is true, it is high time for more strenuous exertion on the part of Liberals everywhere to defeat their prime and most damnable move of closing the entire exhibition on their heathen day. Liberals, arouse! "Why stand ye here idle?" Are we to stand supinely by while these religious fanatics accomplish their hellish designs? If we do, we might as well giv up our cause forever and let them rule in fact as they do at present in theory. But no! This cannot be. We will not yield without a struggle, and then, Mr. Editor, if they do succeed, I would recommend that the Liberals of these United States unite for the purpose of giving the Christians a dose of their own medicin. Let us close everything on Sunday—the post-office, the drug-store, the barber-shop, the butcher, the baker, the tobacconist, the grocery, the saloon, the church, etc. Let us stop all Sunday pleasure excursions. Compel everyone to stay withindoors on that day. Make it a criminal offense for anyone to go out driving—in fact, revive the old Blue laws as far as possible. That's the way to giv it to 'em! Giv them some hell on earth, as they try to giv us for the future, and then see how they like it.

In my last communication to your paper, I wrote the quotation, "Put none but Americans on guard," which you amended by the suggestion, "At least, put none but Liberals on guard." A good idea. But how is that to be accomplished? Are we strong enough, think you? Is it possible to elect R. G. Ingersoll president of the United States? If not, what's the use of talking? Talk is cheap. Liberals generally are too weak-kneed. They too much fear the Christian boycott to be outspoken. They "crook the pregnant hinges of the knee, that thrift may follow fawning." Faugh! it is disgusting. Why can't we be brave enough to stand up and defend ourselvs like men? Until such time as we do, we cannot hope to "put none but Liberals on guard." Right here in the city of St. Louis, one of the strongholds of Catholicism, what can we show for ourselvs? There is not a single Freethought association in this city outside of the Bohemian Freethinkers' Society (which I understand is in a flourishing condition) that I am aware of. If there is, I never heard of it. If this should meet the eyes of some of the Freethinkers of this city, I would suggest that they find means of getting together for the purpose of organization. I would be one to subscribe liberally. Think it over, brother Liberals. We may accomplish something yet by concerted action.

Well, as this letter is already getting too long, I think I had better close. My compliments to the great and only Heston and respects to THE TRUTH SEEKER management.

I send the inclosed clippings with the idea that they may be of possible interest.

Wishing you continued success,

I remain, very truly, J. F. CLANCY.

What Infidelity Really Is.

FLAT CREEK, LA., May 29, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The literal sense of the word "infidelity" is unbelief, a lack of faith; and the word "infidel" means unbeliever. But there is no one who does not believe some things, and there is no one who is not infidel in some things. I find that the infidelity is always in the head of the one who uses the word. No one ever calls what he knows or what he believes infidelity. It is always knowledge which one has not attained, or something which he does not believe, that he calls infidelity. The word infidel is always thrown in envy at our backs by those whom we hav left behind on the race-course of knowledge, and when it is thrown at me I take it as a malicious compliment. Roman Catholicism is a complete suppression of individual thought The church—i. e., the clergy—has assumed a monopoly of knowledge, and the exclusiv right to think and teach. For an individual to think for himself is the highest crime in the ecclesiastical statutes. The different sects of Protestantism cover all the ground lying between Catholicity and absolute freedom of thought. The Catholics call all Protestants infidels, and each Protestant sect calls those in advance of it infidels. Jesus was an infidel in his day, and his disciples were denounced as infidels and Atheists by the orthodox pagans. Those who break loose from the shackles of an old creed and religo—i. e., embrace new doctrins and adopt a new creed—are denounced as heretics and infidels by those whom they leave behind. A religionist is disposed to call all scientific knowledge which he has not reached infidelity. I never hav known a preacher to tell the truth about infidelity, and the reason for this is very plain. He is always talking about something which he does not understand. It is his own ignorance which makes it infidelity to him. If he understood it it would not be infidelity. The infidelity (unbelief) is in his own head, and is the child of ignorance. A man cannot be expected to tell the truth about a subject which he does not understand. When such men as Drs. Talmage and Conrad are bombarding infidelity they are shooting at what appears to them a dense and ominous cloud, but in reality is only the limitation of their mental vision. The darkness appears to overlie that part of the field of knowledge which they hav not explored, but in reality the darkness which they call infidelity is in their own heads. It is ignorance calling knowledge infidelity. The words infidel and infidelity are always thrown forward on the race-course of knowledge, never backward. And the words are thrown by those who are either too lazy or too timid to advance. The explorers and pioneers in the fields of science, ethics, and sociology are always branded as infidels while living and are usually lionized after they are dead.

P. F. SHUMAKER.

An Infidel Church and Sunday-School.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., June 30, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In proportion to its population, San Francisco is the most cosmopolitan city in the United States. With its thirty thousand Chinamen, many thousands of Japanese, colonies of Italians, French, Spaniards, Germans, Mexicans, Austrians, Greeks, Russians, Turks, negroes, Irish, and Jews, every form of what is called civilization is manifest, and every faith—Christian, pagan, and Buddhist, is practiced. We hav about one hundred and fifty churches and Joss-houses, besides Mormons, Spiritualists, Theosophists, and the Salvation Army rampant. Heavenly tramps and celestial dead-beats make a good living in this promiscuous crowd. No creed so stupid as to lack believers, or so extravagant but finds financial support.

In the midst of all this hubbub and balderdash it is pleasant to know that we hav a great Infidel church and Sunday-school, prosperous and successful.

Except on rare occasions, all the churches are very slimly attended. A recent Christian authority stated that less than five thousand was an ample estimate for a Sunday evening attendance. There are no Sunday laws enforced in San Francisco as in Eastern cities. Our climate is so temperate in summer and winter that outdoor life is agreeable all the year round. All places of amusement are open as during week-days; baseball, picnics, and water excursions plentiful; hundreds of stores and all the saloons are open; people who hav business needing attention work, while those who desire to attend church go there, so that every man is "fully persuaded in his own mind."

On every Sunday a fine band of forty first-class musicians giv a grand concert in Golden Gate park. This is our Infidel church. Seats are provided for ten thousand people, which are all occupied, with another ten thousand promenading or seated on the grassy banks amid shrubs and flowers. It is in fact a "temple not made with hands;" its roof is the beautiful sunlight by day, and at night "fretted with golden stars." The sermons are the still small voices of nature which come to all at seasons of rest and peace. The virtues of charity and good will become realities by the interchange of politeness and good manners everywhere among the crowd. The thoughtful man finds food for reflection here, while the thoughtless hav glimpses of a better life. The hoodlum and the rough become, for the time being, decent citizens. but as the majority of the last two are Christians, they are not numerous attendants.

There is no priest or parson to shout of hell and damnation, and no authority higher than Nature's revelations. This great church is attended by hundreds of activ Infidel students and propagandists who seek every opportunity to speak a word in season for the facts of science, and the universality of nature's laws, and many a man may date the day of his liberation from the shackles of superstition to a word or two uttered in his hearing while quietly sitting in Golden Gate park Infidel church.

The Sunday-school for the children of this church is a splendid object-lesson, quite as important as the church itself.

It covers over twenty acres of ground, and is replete with swings, bicycle-tracks, baseball-grounds, houses for play and for games. Many thousands of children are brought here by their parents for good amusements every Sunday. They know nothing of fire and brimstone; they hear no solemn prayers and hymns, but rejoicing in their young lives, they feel the beauty of the sunlight, and if they get some idea of God and heaven, thay translate it into a larger and more beautiful park with still more fun and happiness.

The tens of thousands of men, women, and children who attend this Infidel church and Sunday-school become humanized; creeds drop away out of sight; race prejudices get deadened, and priestcraft finds its occupation gone.

In coming years, when San Francisco calls for men and women to lead her mixed population to a higher and better civilization, those who hav been trained and educated in this Infidel church will lead the van in healthy human progress.

THOMAS CURTIS.

P.S.—What is there to prevent the Liberal people in other large cities from making their park audiences the center of Liberal propagandism? T. C.

An Organization to Conduct Freethinkers' Burial Services.

RIDGEWAY, N. Y., June 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In response to Mrs. Thomas Ramsay, of Rockville, Ida., in THE TRUTH SEEKER of May 7th last, I would say that for myself I hav made an arrangement with a brother Liberal that the survivor will conduct the funeral service of the other. The service is already prepared for use, including hymns to be sung at proper intervals. I hav made my wishes known to my family, and my wife promises that if she survives me she will see that my wishes are carried out. I would, however, be better pleased to hav an organization, to be kept up with new members—as the older ones inevitably drop out from time to time—and for mutual sympathy in times of bereavement, and for the strength and power to advance the principles of Truth and Freethought that comes of organization.

For that purpose I submit the following plan for organization, and invite correspondence of any who are in sympathy, who reside within fifty miles from here. Whenever five or more shall signify to me by mail or otherwise their desire to become members of such an association, I will name a time and place to meet and complete an organization, with such changes in by-laws as the united wisdom of us all may suggest.

WHEREAS: The inevitable and resistless evolution of facts and truth, by the honest exercise of the reasoning faculties of the human mind, makes it necessary from time to time to make new departures, and inaugurate new customs and usages, leaving the old that are not in accord with the spirit of the age to pass away. Believing as we do in the harmful tendencies and influences of religious superstition, whether embodied in the forms of paganism, Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Christianity, or any other of the many religious speculations beyond the realms of positiv knowledge into the boundless realms of the unknowable, we think the time has arrived for the Freethinkers of western New York, for the primary object of sympathizing with and aiding each other in burying our dead when any of us fall asleep on the bosom of mother earth, and also to avail ourselvs of the strength to be gained by united organized effort, to advance the principles of Freethought, liberty, and the free exercise of our reasoning powers, in examining the facts and circumstances of our surroundings. We therefore deem it proper and expedient to organize ourselvs into an association under the name of the Freethought Secular Association of western New York.

BY-LAWS.

Article 1. The officers shall consist of a president, vice-president, and secretary (who shall also act as treasurer), and each shall perform the several duties usually performed by such officer.

Art. 2. Said officers shall, by virtue of their office, be an executiv committee, who shall hav power to call special meetings of the association when they may deem it necessary; make arrangements for conducting Secular funeral services for the burial of any members of the association when requested to do so by their surviving relativs or friends, and such other duties as they may find necessary from time to time to do for the interest of the association.

Art. 3. The term of office for each of said officers shall be for one year, and until their successors are elected and duly qualified.

Art. 4. The annual meeting of the association for the election of officers and any other purposes deemed necessary shall be held on the second Wednesday of January of each year, at such place and hour of the day as the executiv committee shall determin, due and timely notice of which shall be communicated by mail to each member by the secretary.

Art. 5. It shall be the duty of the secretary to giv due and timely notice to each member by mail of any special meetings called by the executiv committee, and of the time and place of any secular funeral they may be called on to conduct, and it shall be the duty of each member so notified to attend the same so far as it may be convenient and practicable.

Art. 6. Members who are heads of families shall be entitled to hav any funeral services they may need in their families conducted under the direction of the executiv committee on payment of the actual necessary expenses incident to the same.

Art. 7. Any person not under eighteen years of age is eligible to become a member of this association on payment of a membership fee of $5 and annual dues of $1 each year afterward.

Art. 8. By the act of becoming members of this association, we publish the fact to the world, and our surviving relativs and friends, that it is our wish that when we are buried some member of the association shall conduct the funeral services, and that no priest or clergyman be allowed to take any part in the same.

Art. 9. The executiv committee shall be exempt from payment of annual dues, in lieu of any compensation for their services.

Art. 10. The executiv committee will arrange to conduct Secular funeral services for any who may desire, who are not members of the association, for actual expenses, and a reasonable compensation for time actually and necessarily spent in conducting the same.

Art. 11. The office of the association shall be deemed to be at the residence of the secretary, to whom all communications should be addressed. Arrangements for Secular funeral services will be made by any member of the executiv committee.

Art. 12. These by-laws may be amended at any annual meeting, or any special meeting (provided the secretary giv notice of the same), by a two-thirds majority of the members present.

For those interested to know, I would state, there is a ritual for Secular marriage and funeral services and collection of Secular hymns published by A. R. Ayres, of Hannibal, Mo., a pamphlet of fifty pages, which I recommend as suitable and sufficient for all purposes, at a cost of only twenty-five cents.

Hoping I may hav many responses from those who may sympathize with my views, in THE TRUTH SEEKER or directly to me by mail, I am, Fraternally, etc.,

GEO. L. PRATT.

Church News—A Revival.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 12, 1892

MR. EDITOR: Los Angeles has lately been swept with a wave of piety and hypocrisy such as never before was known. Thirty-four churches united in securing the services of B. Fay Mills, the evangelist, and for eighteen days he preached to audiences that ranged from three thousand to forty-five hundred people. He was the best-advertised man that ever tried to save souls in this city, and the generous attention and prolix reports which the daily papers gave him and his preaching is the best of evidence that the same was well paid for, as rumor strongly affirms. Never was such fulsome laudation bestowed on a character of this kind, and Jesus himself was thrown in the shade while this mighty man of words was hypnotizing weak-minded men and passiv women here in this city. The press was full of nauseating drivel, and not a word of comment or criticism could find entrance to the columns of any of the dailies; and for nearly three weeks we were surfeited with the vaporings of religious nonsense and emotional insanity. The "midweek Sabbath," which is a hobby of Mr. Mills, was introduced, and half the business places in town were closed on a Wednesday, more from fear of boycott than for any other reason. Much effort was brought to bear on the council to proclaim the day a kind of holy holiday, and it did proclaim something of that sort, but the mayor made a grand kick and put himself on record as opposed to meddling with religious matters.

Great boasts were made during the revival of what power the churches would hav in shaping civil laws and enforcing the same, if they remained united; and it really looked as though we were about to enter a period of law-enforced Christian morality. But things hav cooled off considerably since and Satan is activly at work again without serious opposition.

B. Fay Mills, the evangelist, is not so well known as Moody, Sam Jones, and Sam Small, but he is coming to the front as the latest production in the well-worked revival field. He is a young man about thirty-five and has the gift of gab in considerable quantity. He is the product of religious parents, his father having been a preacher and his mother a missionary in Africa; and it is evident he drank deep of his mother's milk. The laws of heredity got in their work successfully, and he is what he is from necessity—a victim of religious delusions and unrestrained emotions.

That he is sincere I do not question, but sincerity on the wrong road will lead a man astray as readily as willful ignorance. His methods of saving souls are the same as all other revivalists', by emotional appeals, and he declared while in this city that he was not here to argue the question.

How many souls he did save while here is unknown, but only two hav been generally heard of and much talked about. One of them is a well-known politician and all-around tough, who failed to win an office at the last election, and knowing the power of church votes is preparing to run again, as it now looks. He was referred to by name after his conversion in an independent paper here and denounced as one of the biggest liars in the world, but that is in his favor according to St. Luke xiv, 7.

The other convert was an ex-Methodist minister who lost his pulpit through a ministerial assault on his servant-girl one night in his wife's absence, and who perjured himself in court when on trial to escape the "pen." He made a candid confession before four thousand people and was received with open arms by the revivalists, who gave thanks to God for his repentance and salvation. But thus far no pulpit has been offered him, and his ministerial career is not likely to be reopened in this section where he is known. Still, the credit to Mr. Mills is great for having plucked these two brands from the burning, and it shows how efficient the tales of Paine's and Voltaire's death-beds still remain, for he worked off these old, old stories which hav done activ service so long and brought so many souls to Jesus.

But there was one soul almost saved and yet lost to Satan through the influence of "one of our people." A young fellow with limited experience, so thoroughly hypnotized as to be "almost persuaded," sought advice from an old man who had been "saved" in his early days. Said he: "My boy, I want to save you from being made a damned fool of by those folks. Keep away from them, for there is nothing in it. I was converted once, and for five years went around praying behind every outhouse, barn, and log-pile in the country, and I never got a smell of Jesus. Finally, I came to the conclusion the fellow did who was owing a debt. He was walking the floor nights and could not sleep because of his worriment. One day a friend said to him, 'You go to bed and go to sleep and let the other fellow do the walking.' And that was just the conclusion I came to about Jesus more than forty years ago. If Jesus wants me he knows where to find me; I am done looking for Jesus." On such slight things does human destiny turn, and the boy has not yet "j'ined" the church. While good results are generally predicted from these ephemeral excitements, revivals always end about as they started, and the wicked world goes on as before. It is yet to be learned that this revival has led any Christian shylock to reduce his rate of usury, or release his grip on the mortgage that covers the poor man's home; and not a solitary case has been heard of where any rich man has "unloaded" for the purpose of getting into the kingdom of God, as seems necessary from the words of Jesus in St. Matthew xix, 24.

In conclusion, I will say that one of our sky-pilots is grieving over the fact that out of a population in this city of sixty thousand over forty thousand never attend any church. It would seem from this that Mr. Mills left a large unfinished work, and several more revivals will be necessary to bring all within the fold.

Yours without Christ,

C. SEVERANCE.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

"Our Church."

Our earliest recollection of attending church was about seventy years ago. We hav been told we made a noise in church some time before, but that was in cutting-teeth time. The tediousness of a sermon in a hot July day in drawling, monotonous tones, must hav added to the struggle of our teeth to show themselvs. We doubtless in our infantil reasoning looked upon the "old elder" mounted in the pulpit as the author of our pain and wished to bite him; and expressed ourselvs accordingly, much to the annoyance of the old farmer back of us, who, after his hard week's work, wished to enjoy his "meeting-house" nap.

The pews of our "meeting-house" were arranged like soldiers on parade, with much uniformity. The head pew was occupied by the richest man in the place, who kept the village store containing a general assortment of goods, including New England rum. By means of this last article he had obtained a mortgage on nearly every farm in the town. The congregation were graded according to their supposed wealth until the last and back pew, which was occupied by an aged negro, who had formerly been a slave in Massachusetts, and was supposed to be over one hundred years old. We supposed in our simplicity they were seated in heaven in like manner, and wondered if Old Nigger Murray would be as deaf in heaven as he was on earth.

The "meeting-house" was on the top of a knoll, surrounded by a beautiful woods consisting of every kind of tree; the singing of the birds, the aroma of the spicy birch bark, the sassafras root, the sweet flag on the borders of the brook, the speckled trout darting under his cover, and last, but not least, the cooling nectar of the spring water at the foot of a great oak, which we drank from a cup we would make from a basswood leaf, and then watch the grains of white sands as they bubbled up with the water, wondering where they came from—thoughts like these would come over us in spite of the old elder's dry and monotone talk about what seemed to us nothing, as indeed we hav found out since it was.

The only word of the sermon that seemed to hav any sense in it was the amen—it was his last one. The old farmer would rouse himself from his slumber, and we would jump for our little caps. Joyful word! Bless him who invented it, and put no embargo upon it!

The elder would giv such descriptions of God and his partner in futurity that we were puzzled as to which of the two to love. As he portrayed them to our boyish view we could but despise them both, one for his cruelty, the other for his meanness, and the country they ran, for their everlasting monotony, with no amen.

The elder would describe the road to heaven as very rugged, narrow, circuitous, and difficult to travel; while the road to hell was broad and smooth, with plenty of guide-posts to direct you on the way; then we did not wonder so many were lost on the road to heaven, but we did wonder that God could not afford as good a highway as the devil. The choir would back this statement with singing "Jordan's a hard road to travel." Our church traveled the road to heaven on the Baptist plan, and to our infant mind there seemed no other turnpike "given in heaven or among men" accessible. Our nativ town had three churches—Baptist, orthodox, and Methodist. Sectarianism ran very high at this period in New England. Each church would hav its own doctor; a Baptist man would rather die than be cured by the orthodox doctor, and the sight of a Baptist doctor would make the orthodox brother jump out of bed and go to work. As for the Methodists, they were too poor to employ any doctor, and usually got well. If the Baptist and orthodox boys met on their way to church there was sure to be a fight, and many were the wounds we received that God might be glorified. Since that time we hav spelled God's name with a double o.

Amen, my little friends.

OLD MAN PAXTON.

Plenty.

"The teeming clouds descend in plenty o'er the world."

To hav plenty is to hav enough and some to spare. To feel we hav a plenty of the comforts of life is very satisfactory. A child likes plenty of playthings, picture-books, candies, nuts, and all things good to eat. As it grows older it likes plenty of play, and good playmates and companions.

Each year adds to our wants and we crave plenty of more and more things—plenty of love, honor, and the world's good words; a plenty of all that is admirable, beautiful, and true.

If we desire a plenty in old age we must work for it in youth. We must sow the seed soon and the harvest will be growing.

Liv wisely, truly, and rightly and every day will add something to the treasure-house of plentifulness.

"Peace and plenty" is a common expression for contented happiness. All who hav these two blessings are well off indeed. We fancy them in a happy haven where rest, quiet, and ease abound.

May peacefulness and plenitude be found more and more abundant everywhere as years roll by. AUNT ELMINA.

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

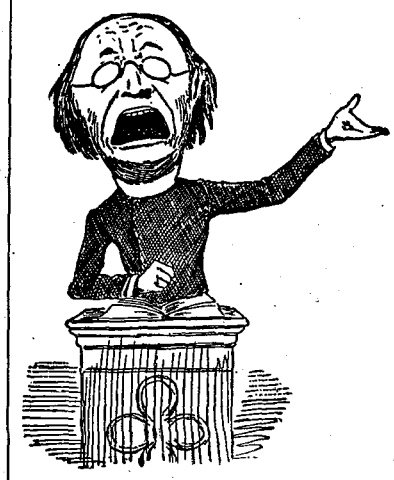
IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL.

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Superstition in All Ages.



BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

SABBATH-BREAKING.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments—Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN E. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N.Y.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.
Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.
Common-Sense Thoughts on the Bible. 10c.
Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.
Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.
Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.
Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.
God Proposed for Our National Constitution. 10c.
Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.
Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.
Is Spiritualism True? 10c.
Man's True Saviors. 10c.
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.
Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.
Radical Discourses on Religious Subjects. $1 25.
Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.
Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.
Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.
What Is Right? 10c.
What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.
Who are Christians? 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price 25 cents.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED. A Work proving Christianity a Fiction. Most Startling Revelations of the Nineteenth Century. Send Address for Prospectus to ORIENTAL PUBLISHING CO., P.O. Box 446, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1892. Price, 25 cents.

Possibilities and Impossibilities, T. H. HUXLEY, M.A., LL.D.
The Growth of Agnosticism, R. BITHELL, B.S., Ph.D.
Early Verses, The Late CONSTANCE NADEN.
Sundays and Holydays, SAMUEL LAING.
Ecclesiasticism, ALFRED MOMERIE, M.A., LL.D.
Christ a Religious Creation, F. J. GOULD.
After Many Years: A Poem, W. B. MCTAGGART.
The Activities of Agnosticism, AMOS WATERS.
Religion Without Superstition, CHARLES WATTS.
Mr. Gladstone and Supernaturalism, H. J. HARDWICKE, F.R.C.S.
The Land of Death: A Poem, SALADIN (W. STEWART ROSS).
The Triumph of Rationalism, FREDERICK MILLER.
An Agnostic Homily, HON. C. K. TUCKERMAN.
Eternal Life: A Poem, GEORGE HENRY MARTIN.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents: cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works of Charles Watts.

The Teachings of Secularism Compared with Orthodox Christianity. 96 pages. Price, 25 cents.

Secularism: Is It Founded on Reason, and Is It Sufficient to Meet the Needs of Mankind? Debate between the Editor of the Halifax Evening Mail and Charles Watts. With Prefatory Letters by George Jacob Holyoake and Colonel Ingersoll, and an Introduction by Helen H. Gardener. 60 pages, 25 cents.

A Reply to Father Lambert's "Tactics of Infidels." 20 cents. Post free.

Christianity: Its Origin, Nature, and Influence. 32 pages. Price, 15 cents.

The Horrors of the French Revolution: Their Causes. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Secularism: Destructiv and Constructiv. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Bible Morality. Its Teachings Shown to Be Contradictory and Defective as an Ethical Guide. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Agnosticism and Christian Theism: Which Is the More Reasonable? 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Evolution and Special Creation. 10 cents.

Saints and Sinners—Which? 24 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

The Superstition of the Christian Sunday: A Plea for Liberty and Justice. 26 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The Glory of Unbelief. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Nature and the Supernatural; or, Belief and Knowledge. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The American Secular Union; Its Necessity and the Justice of Its Nine Demands. (Dedicated to Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll.) 32 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Theological Presumption: An Open Letter to the Rev. Dr. R. F. Burns, of Halifax, N. S. In this letter the following subjects are dealt with: 1. Why Do the Clergy Avoid Debate? 2. The Position of Agnosticism Toward Christianity. 3. Freethought and Men of Science. 4. The Difference Between Facts and Opinions. 5. Christ and Heroism. 6. Christianity and Slavery. 16 pages. Price, 5 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette pl., New York.

To Regulate the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABULES.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

News of the Week.

CYRUS FIELD, the layer of the Atlantic cable, died on the 14th.

REV. C. TRUESDELL, of Preston, N. Y., has gone insane with religious mania.

A CHICAGO burglar's first request on reaching his cell was for a Bible and cigarets.

THE 70,000 Catholics in Belfast's population of 273,000 complain that the Protestants fill all the public offices.

MT. ETNA, in Italy, continues in eruption despite supplicatory processions by religious people bearing pictures of the saints.

PRESIDENT HARRISON said in a speech at Saratoga on the 12th: "We must insist that in all our schools the morality of the Ten Commandments shall be instilled."

LORD ENNE says that if Home Rule is given Ireland and a parliament established at Dublin, the Protestants of Ulster will repudiate it and ignore its decrees.

AT a Protestant convention at Belfast, Ireland, to protest against Home Rule, Rev. Dr. Lynd said that a Dublin parliament would be "dominated by a most intolerant and arbitrary priesthood."

THE Dublin Independent says that laymen would be horsewhipped for such language as the priests use about Parnellites, and that the people will endure these priestly indecencies no longer.

CAPTAIN LUGARD has given details of the religious war in Uganda, relating how dissension grew between Catholics and Protestants till a Protestant was murdered by a Catholic, whereupon the battle ensued.

REV. FATHER BEHAN said at a meeting at Dublin, "God thrust Parnell down to the grave, where his bones are now rotting." At murmurs of displeasure, he shouted, "When we are your masters we will crush you!"

H. MCCABE, of Keyport, N. J., has been fined for selling tobacco on Sunday, June 18th. Merchants talk of arresting the complainant for driving through the streets on that day, under the Blue law forbidding driving on Sunday except to church.

A JEW named Buschoff has been tried and acquitted in Berlin on the charge of killing a Christian boy to obtain his blood for use in a sacrifice. The anti-Semites cite passages in the Talmud which they hold to encourage the sacrifice of Christians.

IN Ireland fights occur daily between Parnellites and anti-Parnellites. Priests lead the latter party. At Kilrush anti-Parnellites returning from a meeting were waylaid by two hundred Parnellites. Seven priests who led the former were knocked down and would hav been killed but for the arrival of police. They pleaded that mercy be shown them out of respect to the church and their sacred character. They threatened both legal and spiritual penalties.

A NEGRO named George Thompson preaches on the St. Louis levees every Sunday that he is Christ. He says: "I am not only Jesus Christ, but I am God and the Holy Ghost. I am the father of the world, for I know I made it. At present I cannot use my power, but some time in the future I can. I am three-thirds in one. One-third of me is visible. That is Jesus Christ. The second third is God, the father. The third part is God, the Holy Ghost. God is his own son, and God is his own Holy Ghost. So I, being Christ, am God the Father and God the Holy Ghost. I will destroy all unbelievers." The negroes say, "He's Chris', sho'."

THE election manifesto of Premier Salisbury of Great Britain says that if Home Rule is given the Irish the Catholics will persecute the Protestant minority in Ulster province. The manifesto says: "For generations the Irish hav been divided in two sections between whom a bitter antipathy has prevailed, due to historical causes, aggravated by differences in religion. With whatever section one may sympathize, it would be flagrantly unjust to make either section absolute master. . . . The broad feature of the plan must be the abandoning of the Loyalists, especially the men of Ulster, to the unrestrained and absolute power of those with whom they hav been in conflict for centuries. The wrong decision here means the certainty of a bitter and protracted struggle, culminating probably in civil war, and may be the means of condemning them to a doom dreaded beyond any other fate—the means of the subjection of their prosperity and industry, of their religion and lives, to the absolute mastery of their ancient and unchanging enemies."

The Rights of Women
—AND—
THE SEXUAL RELATIONS.

By KARL HEINZEN, the famous German Radical Editor.

An Address to an Unknown Lady Reader. Historical Review of the Legal Position of Women. The Emancipation of Woman. The Passive Prostitution of Women. The Active Prostitution of Men. The Execution of Men. Love and Jealousy. Morality. Marriage. Adultery. Divorce. Is Marriage a Contract? Hanging a Woman. Religion. The Economic Independence of Woman Liberty and the Revolution the Allies of Woman

Paper, 50c. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BEST!
THE
"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 3-ounce coin silver, $22; 4-ounce, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $31 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $15; 11 jewels, $16.50; 15 jewels, $23; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3.60, knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for $6 Solid silver spoons, $1.50 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Extra heavy teas, $3. Etched:
"The Time to be Happy is Now,"
50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.

Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

A SHORT
HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING
A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.
Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

THE
FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF
FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS
TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON, WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
3	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
20	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
25	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
2	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.
Loeb & Loeb, Montgomery.

Arizona.
J. S. Mansfield, Tucson.

California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 117 W. 1st. Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 102 N. Main, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Thos. W. Baker, Selma.
L. R. Titus, 237 South 4th st., San Jose.

Canada.
P. C. Allen, 35 King st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
John McKenna, 80 Yonge st., Toronto.

Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.
C. Smith & Son, 385 Larimer st., Denver.
Stanchfield & Co., 200 Union ave., Pueblo.
Harbottle & Co., Salida.

Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.
A. J. Gardner, Kissimmee.

Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.
Post-Office News Co., 93 Adams, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 417 State st., and Brentano Bros., 204 Wabash ave., Chicago.
Chas. W. Curry, 183 Madison st., Chicago.
Chas. Macdonald, 55 Washington, Chicago.

Indiana.
H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.
A. C. Katt, Fort Wayne.

Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne, New Orleans.

Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.

Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Baker & Holton, 87 Woodward av., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Minnesota.
E. P. Parcher, 8 3rd st., So. Minneapolis.

Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

Nebraska.
J. M. Wiley, P. O. News Depot, York.

New York.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
Abramowitz Bros,, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., N.Y.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.
S. D. Greene, 367 Nostrand ave., Brooklyn.
E. J. Nieuwland, 10th ave. and 157th st.
Anderson & Co., 704 8th ave.
S. M. Bernhard, 119 E. 104th st.
Harlem Book Co., Boulevard Hotel, 124th st. and Lexington ave.

Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 342 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
B. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Day & Co., 259 Superior, Clevel'd.
Alf. Warren Co, 217 Central ave, Cincinnati.
Thos. Goddard, Box 235, Huron.
Standard News Co., 14 W. Tusc st, Canton.

Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 91 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.
G. Thornton, Palace Hotel Block, Heppner

Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden, Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
R. Staley, Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.
Fulton Bros., McKeesport.

Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.
W. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry, Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.
Rich Bros. & Mills, 229 N. Cherry, Nashville

Texas.
H. Hover, Denison.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 916 Main st., Dallas.
G. W. Baldwin, Houston.
E. L. Merrill, Independent Pulpit, Waco.

Utah.
C. H. Parsons, 164 S. Main, Salt Lake City.
Margetts Bros., 76 Main st., Salt Lake City.

Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
J. C. Nathan, 104 S. 2nd st., Seattle.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

West Virginia.
News Store, 123 3rd st., Parkersburg.

England. [London.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st.,
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

ALE AND BEEF

"PEPTONIZED"

For { INVALIDS, CONVALESCENTS, NURSING MOTHERS.

Supplies complete nutrition. Agreeable to the most delicate palate. The only liquid pre-digested Food Tonic on the market.

Physicians Prescribe it. Your Druggist Sells it.

ALE & BEEF CO., 267 W. 17th St., New York.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

The Evolution of the Devil. By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York city. The most learned, accurate, scientific, and philosophical analysis of his satanic majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title-page. Price, 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Ingersoll's Address before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian association ever invited a noted Infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from be ginning to end. The pamph et contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G. J. Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Ingersoll's Great Address on Thomas Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York city. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

Standing Up for Jesus; or what the editor of the Freethinkers' Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents.

Colonel Ingersoll's Photograph. Cabinet size. Price, 20 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It
and
Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., - - - - $1.50.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

Gems of Thought.

HE who keeps his mind under perfect control is happy.—Udanavarga, Buddhistic Scriptures.

EVEN when provocation is given, maintain serenity.—Subha-sutta, Buddhistic Scriptures.

MAY all creatures everywhere, all living things of every kind, enjoy life.—Cullaragga, Buddhistic Scriptures.

IN our science and philosophy, even, there is commonly no true and absolute account of things. The spirit of sect and bigotry has planted its hoof amid the stars. —Thoreau.

THINKING and liberty-loving spirits will rather delight in the idea that the universe is in reality a republic rather than a monarchy, and that it is self-governed in accordance with eternal and immutable laws.—Büchner.

IF God alone permits sin, it is he who commits it; since to permit and to do is the same thing to the absolute master of all. If he foresees that men will do evil, he should not form men. We hav never eluded the force of these ancient arguments; we hav never weakened them. Whoever has produced all, has certainly produced good and evil.—Voltaire.

I HAV no irreverence for the Bible and its God, as the Bible and its God. It and he were the natural evolutionary product and index of a remote and half-barbarous time. The Bible as the Bible and Jehovah as Jehovah I cannot treat with disrespect. It would be quite as legitimate to heap ridicule upon the fact that I had to creep before I had learnt to walk. The Bible and Jehovah are interesting relics of the cradle upon which the baby-world leant before it had strength to stand. I hav no quarrel with those quaint old relics, per se; but when I find that the world would still lean upon them after all these long and weary centuries, in the interest of the human race I do my best to dash the relics to splinters. It is not the Book and the God, in themselvs, that provoke my enmity; it is the pretensions put forward on their behalf by an interested priesthood. These pretensions must excite in every man who is a patriot and a friend of his race feelings of repugnance and aversion. I meet these Protestant pretensions with the most cruel laugh of derision, with the most venomous stab of hatred.—Saladin in God and His Book.

IN the treatment of many questions with which we are confronted in this world, our premises may be absolutely true and our logical processes apparently unassailable and yet our conclusions very much in error. . . . It does not necessarily follow that the explanation which explains is the true one. There are many natural phenomena which are in entire accord with more than one hypothesis. Indeed, there are some things which may be perfectly accounted for on an infinit number of suppositions, but it does not follow that all or any one of them must be accepted. There is nothing especially novel in this proposition, but I submit that to a failure to keep it in sight must be attributed a large measure of the uncertainty of the exact sciences, as well as much useless and bitter controversy in science, religion, ethics, and politics. It is of the utmost importance, therefore, that men of science, before accepting a theory or a hypothesis as final, should carefully scrutinize the steps by which it has been established to see that they are not only sufficient but necessary. The true philosopher will be slow to claim that the theory which h finds sufficient to explain all of a given class of facts is the necessary and true one; he will be constantly on the lookout for a new fact which his theory will not quite explain, and he will hav much consideration for his friendly competitor who finds a different hypothesis equally satisfactory and efficient. Above all, he will not pride himself on the steadfastness of his views, and will rarely bind himself to be of the same opinion this year as last. If the general public could be made to understand the limitations by which science is circumscribed, the tentativ and ever progressiv character of scientific investigation, it would be good for the public and good for science. The human race is greatly handicapped by the presence of a good number of people who strenuously object to being disturbed. During a decade, generation, or century these good but sometimes unpleasant people plant themselvs along certain lines in the domain of science or politics or religion, proclaiming essentially that "here and here only is the truth, and here we fix ourselvs forever." After a while they somewhat unwillingly and with no good grace move forward into a new position, again honestly affirming and believing that the end has been reached.—Ex-President Mendenhall of the Washington Philosophical Society.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6 50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. leather, $4.00; morocco. gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Cloth. 75 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Corgate. 10 cents.
An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

BY PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25
Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. McWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,
Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League
Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,
Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,
Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,
Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore
Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.
By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.

The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Letters to Young People. By (Prince) Peter Krapotkine. With Life of author, by Stepniak. 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. - - 40 cents.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Burgess-Underwood Debate

ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80 cts.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth. - - - - - - 50 cents

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Order of Creation.

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE

HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp, 25 cts.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROBT P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

ANOTHER PREDICTION THAT MISCARRIED.

The burden of Damascus. Behold, Damascus is taken away from being a city, and it shall be a ruinous heap.—Isa. xvii, 1.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? AustinBierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth $1 00.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ideas of God. 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. - - - - 10 cents.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY AND RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH,

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

INVENTORS.

The cost of obtaining a U. S. Patent, in an ordinary case, is only $55, through EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents. MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Pamphlet of advice to Inventors will be mailed free. N.B.—Register all letters and stamps will be sent you to defray this expense. This Solicitor of Patents is an Infidel, a writer for this and other Liberal papers, and, we are informed by old inventors and experienced patentees who hav employed him, he is a skillful Patent Attorney.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

—144—

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

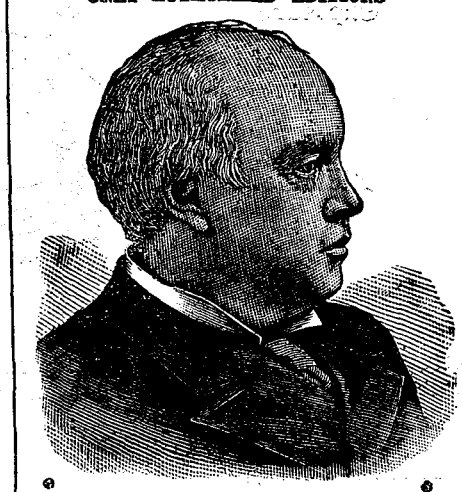
Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.



Vol. 19. No. 31. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, July 30, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

CONSTERNATION AMONG THE REPTILS—WHY THEY HATE INGERSOLL.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50c.; cloth, $2.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt. G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth. 50c.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

THE EVOLUTION OF

THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

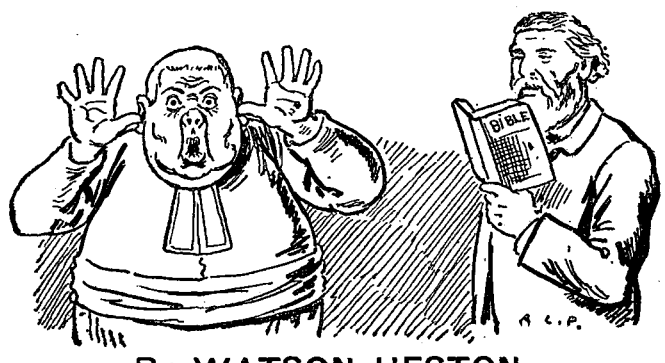
Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. - - - - 10 cents.



JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Corgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Order of Creation.

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE
HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 31. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, July 30, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - - JULY 30, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

The Rights of Children.

Under this title Rev. M. J. Savage, of Boston, undertakes to giv, in the Arena for June, a statement of what may be claimed in behalf of the child. Among other things he claims that a child has a right to a "rational religious education." This must be entertaining reading to the Romanists, who denounce the common schools on the ground that they are godless.

It is amusing to see the extreme of so-called religious liberalism joining hands with the extreme of religious bigotry in the attempt to poison the natures of children. The old fable is repeated—Herod and Pilate are made friends.

No man, it is true, can be expected to discredit his own profession. A minister or a priest must support the particular superstition for which he stands, or his "occupation is gone." He cannot forget his claims to his bread and butter. But the mass of mankind are under no such temptation. And reason has not lost its force in minds not blinded by interest or prejudice.

The first and fundamental right of a child is the right to intellectual liberty. The Catholics contend that the parent and not the state should direct the education of the child. But no one will say that the parent has any rightful authority to abuse or maltreat a child; and if a misguided parent should inhumanly beat or otherwise ill-treat his offspring, it is entirely proper to interfere and rescue the child from abuse. If, for instance, one is wretch enough to attempt to hamstring his children, no one will deny that his horrible purpose should be restrained.

Now, a religious education is a sort of moral hamstringing. For what is a "religious education?" The form of it may differ with the various sects, but with all of them it is the same in essence. It is fettering the mind with dogma, or poisoning it with superstition. And, in the case of a child, this is done before he can perceive the wrong that has been inflicted upon him. It is true that many recover from the evil they hav suffered; but they should be spared the struggle that this imposes, especially when no one has a right to make it necessary. A child is born free; is there any sense or decency in enslaving his mind, and then leaving to him the choice of breaking his chains or wearing them through life?

If religion is a natural aspiration or need of a human being, he may be safely trusted to embrace it in some form when he is developed enough to know what he is doing. But, if it is not natural, what greater wrong can you inflict than to take him in his defenseless years and instill a deadly poison into his nature?

The Chinese put the feet of their young girls into inflexible shoes and make them cripples for life. But this "Liberal" clergyman insists that bands should be put on the brows of young children to make them mental cripples, and that it is the child's "right" to be thus abused. The Chinese process is the more reasonable and humane. But if a child has a right to a natural foot he certainly has a right to a natural brain.

No! you may leave to your children, if you please, your material wealth; you may bequeath to them, if you are rich enough to do it, the priceless legacy of a stainless name—but your opinions, your dogmas, your superstitions you hav no authority to force upon them.

If there were any form o' religion not disfigured by dogma or superstition, an argument might be based on that fact. But where is such to be found? It has been attempted to preserve the name under the guise of such a phrase as the "religion of humanity." But it will not hold; because no religious significance sticks to anything that does not include the glamor or the horrors of the supernatural. The etymology of the term suggests nothing useful. It originally signified "to bind." What freeborn man desires to be bound?

A human being is a child of Nature; and Nature teaches what is to be done with him. You do not put the young sapling in chains. If anything stands in the way of its free growth you remove it. Nature provides the soil, the sun, and the showers for its natural development; and you trust it to the action of these natural forces. But Mr. Savage would advise you to twist and bend it, according to your own arbitrary rules or ignorant conceptions, till it becomes a crooked or perhaps a blasted thing.

The natural trend of human nature is toward virtue and goodness. All the vice and crime that now blot our civilization are the results and consequences of the chains that hav fettered the mind and the wrongs that hav cankered the heart. Break the chains and undo the wrongs, and let unfettered human nature unfold in natural and wholesome growths that shall shame the idiots and bigots whose senseless and vicious methods hav obstructed and hindered human progress already too long.

Mr. Savage attempts to unite in one sentence two contradictory terms. If the education he advises is rational it cannot be religious; if it is religious it cannot be rational.

The World Is Growing Better.

As these times are characterized by a diminution in religious faith, the men who make their living by trafficking upon that faith naturally dilate upon the evils of the age and attribute them to the religious decadence. These men magnify every ill thing that they can find in the present day, and endeavor to terrify the people with horrific pictures of the disasters to which society is plunging, and which can be avoided only by return to the ancient devotion. In consequence, Freethinkers should arm themselvs with proofs that the evils complained of are not increasing, as asserted by the clergy, but are in fact decreasing.

One of the troubles of the age, we are told by the clergy and some misobservers, is an increase in overwork and overworry. We are pleased to see the New York Sun interposing with a denial of this allegation. The case, says that paper, is just the contrary. "The fact is that life for all orders and conditions of men has never been so easy as now. Never before was the return so great for a unit of energy expended. Never before was the labor accompanying the necessary details of living so small. Who now gets the domestic water supply from the nearest pump or lugs it to the upper stories of the house? Where is the tallow dip which furnished the only artificial light of those of narrow means? Who sends to a neighbor to borrow fire because the tinder box is out of tinder? Are fatal diseases always epidemic now as they once were, or is it to be supposed that past generations did not lament their dead? Who now wakes in a panic whenever the fire alarm strikes?

"Yet these are things that all make for worry, and for worry validly grounded. That men do worry over paying the rent to-day is no more certain than it is that they did so in ancient Babylon, where leases hav been unearthed. Is it to be doubted that the gilded youth of Rome knew the cares of an unpaid tailor's bill? In the older novels are not women swooning all over the page, and is any other complaint so prevalent among them as the 'vapors'?

"There never was a time when some men were not overworked and others overworried, but all the evidence is that those of each sort were never fewer than now. There was never a time when some men were not lazy, nor one when, we are warranted in believing, so many as now found themselvs privileged to indulge that pleasing disposition."

We must remark that some of the facilities above attributed by the Sun to the people at large are really enjoyed only by dwellers in cities and improved towns. But, setting aside this small oversight, we will indorse the general proposition that life is easier than formerly. Not a few hardships remain, it is true, and not a few injustices; and we must work amain to remedy them; but of course Freethinkers are deeply conscious that the best way to remedy evils or do anything else is to ascertain and tell the exact truth; so let us find and tell the truth in this.

As a matter of fact, this class of complaints is heard in every age. It is a habit of each generation to deplore that it is less healthy, moral, and happy than the preceding ones. In Shakspere's play of some centuries ago, Orlando cries to his old serving-man:

> "How well in thee appears
> The constant service of the antique world,
> When service sweat for duty, not for meed!
> Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
> When none will sweat, but for promotion."

Yet if we go back to that wished-for "antique world" we find that generation itself looking still farther back to a remoter age as the one in which men sweat not for pay but "for duty."

It may at first sight seem strange, as remarked by the historian Macaulay, that society, while constantly moving forward with eager speed, should constantly be looking backward with tender regret. But these two propensities, inconsistent as they may appear, can easily be resolved into the same principle. Both spring from our impatience of the state in which we actually are. That impatience, while it stimulates us to surpass preceding generations, disposes us to overrate their happiness. It is, in some sense, unreasonable and ungrateful in us to be constantly discontented with a condition which is constantly improving. But, in truth, there is constant improvement precisely because there is constant discontent. If we were perfectly satisfied with the present, we should cease to contrive, to labor, and to save with a view to the future. And it is natural that, being dissatisfied with the present, we should form a too favorable estimate of the past.

In truth we are under a deception similar to that which misleads the traveler in the Arabian desert. Beneath the caravan all is dry and bare: but far in advance, and far in the rear, is the semblance of refreshing waters. The pilgrims hasten forward and find nothing but sand where, an hour before, they had seen a lake. They turn their eyes and see a lake where, an hour before, they were toiling through sand. A similar illusion seems to haunt nations through every stage of the long progress from poverty and barbarism to the highest degrees of opulence and civilization. But, if we resolutely chase the mirage backward, we shall find it recede before us into the regions of fabulous antiquity.

In the early part of this century Macaulay wrote:

"It is now the fashion to place the golden age of England in times when noblemen were destitute of comforts the want of which would be intolerable to a modern footman, when farmers and shopkeepers breakfasted on loaves the very sight of which would raise a riot in a modern workhouse, when men died faster in the purest country air than they die now in the most pestilential lanes of our towns, and when men died faster in the lanes of our towns than they die now on the coast of Guiana. We too shall, in our turn, be outstripped, and in our turn be envied. It may well be, in the twentieth century, that the peasant of Dorsetshire may think himself miserably paid with fifteen shillings a week; that the carpenter at Greenwich may receive ten shillings a day; that laboring men may be as little used to dine without meat as they now are to eat rye bread; that sanitary police and medical discoveries may hav added several more years to the average length of human life; that numerous comforts and luxuries which are now unknown, or confined to a few, may be within the reach of every diligent and thrifty workingman. And yet it may then be the mode to assert that the increase of wealth and the progress of science hav benefited the few at the expense of the many, and to talk of the reign of Queen Victoria as the time when England was truly merry England, when all classes were bound together by brotherly sympathy, when the rich did not grind the faces of the poor, and when the poor did not envy the splendor of the rich."

So let the black-boding clergy be told that as their superstitions grow less our comforts wax greater; that if some evil remains it is at least being steadily diminished by that agent against which they hav always fought, Science; and, finally, that if they are disquieted by the ills of the age the very best manner in which they can help remove them is by taking out of the way their own worthless selvs.

A Traveler's Tale.

An esteemed friend forwards two traveler's tales purporting to be the same story, both told by a reverend, Mr. John Joseph Nouri, D.D., LL.D., who bears the title of Chaldean archdeacon of Babylon and Jerusalem, pontifical delegate-general of Malobar, and ex-grand secretary of the metropolitan archdiocese of Persia and India. The tale he tells in two different ways is that while on an exploring expedition he ascended Mount Ararat, in Western Asia, and there saw Noah's ark. We choose the most picturesque one of his descriptions of his journey and what he saw:

"It was on April 25th at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, that I finally saw the ark upon the mountain.

"There were with me Kahraman, Augustine, Ahanna, Assyrian Christians, men of the desert, and Mohammedans, owners of the horses and donkeys, or masters and guides of the caravan.

"We had journeyed slowly and with great effort up the side of the lofty cone, which reaches to a hight of about 18,000 feet.

"You will recall that we had previously attempted the ascension of both this and the other peak, that it was in March and that we went below to the foothills and remained for another month.

"On this occasion much of the snow on the lower part of the mountain had melted and was trickling down. As we got above this and on the great layers of snow, we toiled mainly with alpenstocks of exceedingly hard and heavy wood from Kurdistan, on the boundary between Turkey and Persia.

"I had got ahead and was making my way as persistently as possible, my face being toward the northeast. I had reached a hight of probably 16,000 feet. Some of my companions had left me at about 15,000 feet, and I went on entirely alone from the point of 16,000 feet.

"I advanced about 1,000 feet more, and I had then between me and the very top—the place of the Ark—nearly another 1,000 feet.

"When I reached the hight of 17,000 feet I observed, with the naked eye, after a great deal of very careful looking, that there was some peculiar colors among the general white color of the mountains covered by the snow and in the midst of the top of the mountain.

"And when I looked I was more encouraged and began to use the glasses. After advancing between 200 and 300 feet on the snow and seeing more clearly the dark or reddish color, but without especial shape, I moved northeast and around the mountain, walking in the snow and using the field-glass.

"I began to see the peculiar color assume shape—it had simply been color before. I saw the shape. It was that of a great vessel—the ark. The rear end, the one most exposed from the snow, was in view first. Going around I saw it all.

"I know it was over 300 yards long, and it stood up fully 100 feet high. There were some window-like turrets or protrusions on top of it and one or more at the sides. A roof had evidently rounded and covered it, but the snow had crushed much of it in, and three-fourths of it was covered and filled with snow. The sun was shining with great brilliancy. It was really warm, almost hot, in its rays. Below the snow was melting, yet a cold wind blew on the top.

"It was not, however, swirling the snow, and therefore everything was as clear and unobstructed as it is possible to imagin it.

"I was almost overcome. The sight of the ark, thus verifying the truth of the scriptures in which I had before had no doubt, but which for the sake of those who did not believe, filled me with gratitude.

"I was transported and triumphant in feeling, and thanked God for his graces and for the proved truth of his holy word.

"The top of the ark that still remained was covered with a cap of from five to ten feet of snow, but in other places, where the top has fallen in, I judge the snow is from thirty to fifty feet deep.

"I went clear around and came back again, and looked at the rear, or stern, critically at length, with great care. Not a cloud, nor even a rift of fleecy snow obstructed the view. It was all as clear and plain as the clearest sunlight could make it.

"Some of the rooms or turrets of the ark were broken half-way by the snow and protruded over. I paused for quite a time, contemplating with gratitude and awe the discovery. I had made the complete circuit of the dome, and had with the utmost care noted the great vessel from many different points.

"I thoroughly assured myself, gazing long and repeatedly at different parts of the great craft that once for forty days and forty nights had on board of it every living and creeping animal and insect and every flying thing in the world.

"At length I called the attention of my companions who had been in the rear to it and they examined it critically, and all admitted that they saw the vessel, the veritable ark of Noah, and were thankful to the almighty for enabling us to see it.

"All of us were in the perfect and complete possession of all our faculties. Nothing in my life, nor in their lives, was plainer in all our experiences."

The other description is briefer, but of the same tenor, and need not be reprinted.

Our friend asks us to ventilate the story, a request with which we cheerfully comply, for surely no building of ancient or modern times needed ventilation worse than Noah's ark. The account so circumstantially set forth is what Colonel Ingersoll would probably call another instance of "the truth of history." The carefulness with which Mr. Nouri has substantiated his story will of course be remarked. Those who doubt it can ask Kahraman or Ahanna, good Christians, who all admitted they saw the ark and recognized it. Their address is Asia, somewhere in the desert of Arabia. The fact that his face was toward the northeast is also an important point, though why is not quite clear, as the holy book says nothing of the direction in which the ark pointed when it took the ground. The hight of the mountain he has also got nearly accurate, and this "just naturally" proves him to be right. The dimensions he exaggerates a bit, as the scriptures say the ark was three hundred cubits long, or a little less than six hundred feet, while he makes it over nine hundred feet, and the hight was only thirty cubits, or less than sixty feet, while before Mr. Nouri it loomed up fully one hundred. Perhaps this discrepancy was because of the reflection or refraction of the sun upon the snow, or it might hav been the shining of Talmage's aurora borealis by the light of which that eminent commentator supposes vegetation to hav flourished before the Lord made the sun. But that the ark was a great vessel—albeit of pecular model—none can deny, neither none will deny, neither that a few more windows than the Lord told Noah to put in would be useful and grateful to the occupants.

The story on its face bears evidence of having been written by a clergyman, and the assurance of such that he thoroughly satisfied himself, by gazing at different parts, that he saw the craft that once contained every living thing on earth, cannot be lightly disregarded. The awe he felt proves it to be the real vessel, for how could any other structure so move him? His great gratitude for the discovery is natural, and is cumulativ, though mute, testimony to his view, for how could he be so grateful at finding anything else? The thankfulness of the Assyrian Christians but adds to the evidence. Altogether it is a most remarkable discovery, and as strong proof as anything else that Christianity is true. The tale as Dr. Nouri tells it needs no corroboration, nor the ark more ventilating. It is as good proof as the stone the Sunday-school superintendent brought from Mount Ararat to establish the reality of the same tale.

There are but two possible views to take of this stupendous discovery. One is, to admit that Genesis is history, and the other is, that the Rev. Mr. Nouri, D.D., LL.D., lies like thunder.

A few years ago Anthony Comstock was refused admission to a Grand Army Post. He thereupon wrote a letter to the commander of the post, glorifying himself and libeling his opponents. Recently the Grand Army Gazette and National Guardsman was induced to publish this letter, and in it is the following paragraph:

"We hav organized against us what is known as the 'National Defence Association,' an association consisting of free lovers,' or more properly, 'free lusters,' ex-convicts, gamblers, and men who fear not God, nor regard man, and by the most unscrupulous assaults this organization has attempted to destroy my good name and reputation. They hav secured contributions from persons whom we hav arrested. They hav made it their business to endeavor to repeal the laws of Congress and the enactments of the legislatures of the states. Their avowed purpose is to prevent the enforcement of these laws, and in carrying out their purposes they hav scrupled at nothing that they thought would cast odium upon me, or prevent the success of the cases which I hav prosecuted."

Mr. Comstock has hardly stated the truth in this matter. The business of the National Defence Association is to do what it can to rescue the victims of the Vice Society's brutal prosecutions and to oppose all legislation giving it more power, at the same time trying to repeal unconstitutional laws and to modify constitutional laws so that they cannot be used by religious malignity to imprison men for expressing their opinions. The Comstock national statute is wholly unconstitutional, as would be the law proposed by Wanamaker for the censorship of the press. The state laws against vicious literature are constitutional, but if Comstock had his way they would include all heresy on religion and medicin, and whatever other heresy Comstock opposed. It is true the members of the Defence Association are persons who do not fear God much, but it is just because they do regard man that they oppose a miserable society of smut-hunters and disreputable detectivs. And if calling names eases Mr. Comstock's alleged mind, we feel sure they will not object to any epithets he chooses to apply. They hav the proud consciousness of knowing that they are not as he is. For which those of them who are Christians no doubt repeatedly and fervently thank God.

Speaking of the Vice Society and its agents, the San Francisco Star asks concerning one Bennett, the agent of the Vice Society of that city, a friend of Comstock's, as his Society is an offspring of the New York organization, these pertinent questions: "What has become of Vice-Propagator Bennett, and the charges against him? What has become of the Vice Society? Both hav hidden themselvs—not in shame, but because public sentiment will no longer tolerate them. This dirty fellow Bennett committed crimes that merit death; but the Vice Society found him innocent, although the church of which he was a member expelled him in disgrace. The Oakland Times persists in repeating the charges that he seduced an innocent young girl under promis of marriage; when she found that he was already married and the father of children, she turned from him with hatred, loathing, and disgust; he pursued her, and because she refused to renew her intimacy with him, he denounced her to her employer as a lewd woman. Not even a community of savages ought to tolerate such a beast. Yet he still lingers in this community! Are we worse than savages? It would seem so." Epithets of "free lover" and "free luster" come with bad grace from members of a society which shields such fellows as this Bennett.

A few weeks ago a reverend gentleman made the statement quoted by Colonel Ingersoll in this letter:

"NEW YORK, June 9, 1892.

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE LOS ANGELES TIMES, Los Angeles, Cal., My Dear Sir: In your issue of May 23d, in the report of a sermon preached by the Rev. B. Fay Mills, on the 22d of May, is the following statement:

"'Robert Ingersoll once spoke three successiv evenings in the same town. The first night the house was crowded; the second night it was half full, and the third night there were just thirty-five people there.'

"There is not one word of truth in this statement. I never lectured three successiv evenings in any town, nor two successiv evenings in any town. So you see that the statement of the Rev. Mr. Mills is untrue. Why the gentleman thought it necessary to make it, I do not pretend to say. The story may hav been told to him, and he, no doubt, was quite willing to believe it.

"It seems to me that clergymen claiming to be in partnership with the Infinit ought to be able to succeed and at the same time tell the truth about friends who do not agree with them. But I may overestimate the strength of the firm. Yours very truly, R. G. INGERSOLL."

The reverend B. Fay Mills has not yet had the decency to acknowledge his own error, nor to produce his authority. And of such, we suppose, will be the kingdom of heaven.

The Albion, Neb., News reports that a few days since "Dr. Scoggin appeared before the village board in behalf of the Baptist church and asked the board to donate water for lawn purposes to the Baptist church for the ensuing year. After some deliberation the board decided they had no authority to, and could not with justice to the taxpayers of the village donate water to any person or persons. Whereupon the doctor informed the board that inasmuch as God furnishes water free, the board had do right to put a charge upon the same. The board called the attention of the doctor to the fact that God did not pay for the pumping of the water in this case."

The methods of the Catholic missionaries in China are so peculiar that the authorities of one province hav found it necessary to issue a proclamation against child-stealing. But notwithstanding, the North China Daily News reports the arrest of a nativ who was on his way to Tan-yang with two children which he confessed were to be sold to the missions there. Of course the story is denied, but the fact of the proclamation being made shows that the authorities fear the methods of the missionaries, who hav over and again been known to pay poor parents money for the release to them of children to be converted.

The Post-Intelligencer, the official paper of Henry county, Tenn., published recently this notice:

"On Sunday next there will be a basket picnic at Hollow Rock. The P. T. & A. railway will giv an excursion rate of fifty cents for the round trip from Paris. The train leaves Paris at 9:45 A.M., and returning leaves Hollow Rock at 5 P.M."

The train carrying these Sunday picnickers, says an Adventist journal, passed within less than a hundred feet of the cell containing the four Seventh Day Adventists imprisoned for quiet farm work done on Sunday.

The Jews hereabouts must hav given up all hope of possessing the land of Canaan, which the Lord promised them if they kept his covenant of circumcision, for a rabbinical conference a few days ago decided to abrogate the custom. Perhaps they realize at last that Jehovah's promises were made to be broken; at least this step indicates that they hav lost confidence in him.

In the West.

News and Notes.

Scappoose advances slowly among the mighty trees, and alongside the vast Columbia. Only a few houses cluster around the station, but a fair audience is present nevertheless from the surrounding country, although it might hav been larger had all the Liberals turned out, but it seems they are disposed to let things drift, and the World's Fair will be closed on Sunday. Fanaticism is strong and hypocrisy is strong in this government, and so humbug is triumphant, and the august Senate shuts the door upon the millions, while the foreign prince and his retinue are received with open arms into the Columbia Exposition on the holy Sabbath. Chicago will repeat the infamy of Philadelphia, and the World's Fair will hav a provincial aspect. It will be like a country show after all. To hav a decent World's Fair we must go to Europe still. America is not cosmopolitan. It is narrow-gage. I did not know that politicians could be so infinitly stupid. The church rot is upon them, and statesmanship ceases to be.

W. W. West is waiting to receive me at Scappoose, and I am soon driven to his broad acres, where the fine stock are roaming, where the river is shining like an immense inland sea, where five great peaks—Ranier, Adams, St. Helens, Jefferson, Mount Hood—are seen in the radiant horizon. The flowers are in bloom, and the hay-fields are musical with the implements of harvest. I find a good day's rest here from sunlight until moonlight. Harry West and family, Mr. Price, and other Liberals are in our circle. Things improve leisurely at Scappoose. I had a better audience than the last time. West keeps his shoulder to the wheel. If the gain is small, it counts for something.

Sunday morning I push on to Tacoma. On the train I meet D. W. Smith and Katie Kehm Smith on their way home to Port Townsend. So my Sabbath day's journey sparkles with Infidel associations. However, we came pretty near having a dash of Puritan gloom. The porter was evidently in a pious frame of mind and said there was to be no card-playing on that day, as it was Sunday. He could black shoes for twenty-five cents apiece and dust coats and take his fees regularly, like a clergyman with his white necktie on, but card-playing was something too awful to contemplate. It seemed to me preposterous that in a Pullman car on the Pacific coast the "holy Sabbath" of a hundred years ago must extend its desolate scepter. I thought I was back in the old country churchyard of New England waiting for the sermon to begin. I did not know but the porter would get right down on his knees and go to praying. However, the conductor overruled his majesty the porter and we played cards merrily, and were not struck with lightning either. That porter would do for the United States Senate. He could carry the palm with Quay for pious snobbery.

I find Tacoma a bustling city, and the Liberals are in the van. They are doing splendid work with Reynolds at the helm; full houses every Sunday evening; audiences swelling to a thousand or more.

Dr. Angus, who is now president of the Washington Secular Union, is an able and energetic officer and will make Liberalism a power throughout the state if enthusiasm and courage can do it. E. G. Bixler, secretary of the Tacoma Union, was the first one to start the ball and demonstrate the popularity of Freethought, even in so orthodox a city as Tacoma seems to be, for it towers with churches on every hand. Bixler believes in Freethought with every fiber of his being. He has the glow and energy of youth—just what we want for the prosperity of our cause. Mr. J. C. Ford introduced me. He is an oldtime TRUTH SEEKER subscriber, having taken it from the very start. Martin Jordan; Eben Pierce; R. Howden Bolton, formerly of Ottumwa, Ia.; N. D. Robertson; Mr. and Mrs. Porter (Mrs. Porter is over eighty years of age), are among the many friends of this place who gave a splendid welcome to the Secular Pilgrim and made the way of toil bright with hope. I hav passed through Tacoma many a time without endeavoring to giv a lecture, and never thought that the fires would blaze so gloriously as they now do. When I met Mr. Robertson at Victoria a year ago he promised that something should be done, and it seems that our comrades at Tacoma hav found the golden opportunity, and I was delighted with the presence of one of the best audiences I hav ever addressed. Tacoma looks to the front still and takes in the commerce of the orient with clever hand. There is a direct line of steamships between here and the East. The harbor of Tacoma can float the largest vessels. Superb buildings, business buildings and hotels, are now being erected at a cost of millions of dollars. Of course the hard times are here as elsewhere. Money is scarce. But there is plenty of life, and round about are the rainbow hues of expectation. Mount Tacoma lifts its brilliant glory to the skies. A beautiful mountain it is, in one magnificent mass sweeping upward against the sapphire dome, ever varying in luster as morning, noon, and night encircle its majestic head. If I were in Seattle I would call this Mount Ranier, but in Tacoma it is Mount Tacoma forever and forever and nothing else. What's in a name? It seems there's a good deal in it for Tacoma and Seattle. It is a hard question to decide. There is evidence that the Indian name is the older name, and certainly it is preferable as a matter of nationality. I am certainly with the Tacomans this trip; I shall call it Mount Tacoma. But when I come to Seattle I shall hav to use the British term.

It is a good thing for Tacoma and Seattle to be rivals. They are both bigger than they would hav been without this tremendous emulation. It has been worth millions of dollars to both cities that they hav been spurred along by such victorious excitements. It has been a battle of genius, of energy, of magnificent enterprise. Seattle would not hav been what it is without Tacoma, and Tacoma would not hav been what it is without Seattle. Neither city has depended simply upon its natural advantages, but upon the extraordinary activity of its citizens.

Monday morning I pursue my way to Buckley, and almost the first one to greet me on the cars was Bell. He had lectured at Seattle the night before, and we are both bound for Buckley, and a jolly time we hav of it in this booming little city, which has grown quite rapidly since I was here. As usual it has had its big fire, and arises more resplendent from the ashes. I lecture on Monday night, and Bell on Tuesday night, and though there are some drawbacks we hav larger audiences than before. We hav a splendid sociable time with oldtime comrades—Coke Ewing, the Miller Brothers, Clarkson, Mr. Grau, Van Alstine, E. Skanser, and others. A veteran has passed away—Mr. A. Wickersham, whose friendly aid to the cause was never wanting. Ewing and Moore make a lively sheet of the Buckley Banner. A new schoolhouse has been built at a cost of nearly $10,000. The mills are busy, yet the great forests stretching for miles away hav been but little penetrated. Some of the best lumber on the coast is here, billions of feet of it, rolling back from White river to the Cascades, in enormous masses. Buckley now glows with electric lights, and a brilliant appearance they make. I do not see much religion in Buckley, but business and progress. Coke Ewing is now judge, and keeps order with impartial hand, and wins his spurs in law practice. E. Skanser has an elegant store, where he keeps good time for everybody with the music of the pendulum, and entertains the Liberal lecturer royally. My old friend Small, although a cripple, and unable to attend the lectures, still reads THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator. He was wounded twice in the army and is unable to work, yet has not secured a pension, although the application has been in for years. That is the justice of the American republic which closes the World's Fair on Sunday. Less religion and more equal rights and fair dealing with the soldier would be better.

Bell takes the midnight train on Tuesday and we giv him a good send-off. I am off on Wednesday afternoon, traveling all night, and the next day evening am at Spangle, where Mr. and Mrs. F. Lacy, Hamilton Buckminster, Mr. and Mrs. Eloy, Mr. and Mrs. Knuth, and others giv me a good welcome.

Spangle is shining in the summer's sun. The harvest fields are all about. The farmers are busy. The sawmill is ringing, and cheerful labor resounds. The new brick schoolhouse on the hill presents a fine appearance. Landlord Frick abundantly supplies the traveler. Mr. Knuth introduces me at the lecture, at Drake's Hall. There is a new church here, but the Liberal spirit still prevails. The schoolhouse on the hill overtops the steeple, and shines with the people's advent that is "coming up the steep of time." SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Spangle, July 16, 1892.

An Open Letter to Frederick Evans,

AN ELDER IN THE SHAKER COMMUNITY AT NEW LEBANON, COLUMBIA COUNTY, NEW YORK.

My Venerable and Respected Friend: I read with interest your description, in the June number of the Freethinkers' Magazine, of the instruments of religious torture which the earl of Shrewsbury purchased from the old castle of Nuremburg, and which are now on exhibition in London. I drop this line to you to suggest whether, as a representativ of the Shaker societies in this country, which are all in favor of absolutely free thought on the subject of religion and all advocates of peaceful methods of settling difficulties between nations and individuals, you could not use your influence successfully in effecting a loan of these interesting relics of former times for exhibition in the World's Fair at Chicago. The Columbian Exposition was not orig nally intended to be a mere museum of curiosities. Its expressed object is to show the progress that has been made by the human family in the sciences, in arts, in government, in agriculture, in mechanics, in social life, and in everything else that goes to giv meaning to the word civilization, during the four hundred years since Columbus revealed to the Old World the existence of the New. On the sacred subject of the rights, not of the race of man, but of the human individual, as to what religious creed he should believe, and how he should worship, if at all, is there anything that would be more in place at the Chicago Fair, and would prompt to more wholesome thinking by every beholder, than the exhibition of these instruments which were actually used by the church in Europe in the propagation of religion?

It should not be forgotten that, although they were employed by the church to carry out her ends, the machinery itself was worked by the agency of the civil government, which in those times and for long centuries, was the servil tool to do all her bloody work of persecution. It is true that instruments for propagating religion, as the rack, the thumb-screw, and the iron boot, are not planned and manufactured for actual use now, in any part of Christendom; but the religious spirit that would use such instruments, if it could only get the consent of the law, proves itself to be still in existence even in this age, in this country, and under the secular Constitution and government of the United States. It is not even under law here as it is in Europe, for the priesthood in Europe, drawing their salaries from the public treasury, hav to be mealy-mouthed in setting forth their claims. But in this country the case is reversed, and the church being independent of the state, the priesthood are riding their high horses, and brazenfacedly demand that their religious notions shall be carried out into law, although they represent but a small minority of the people. For instance, in the name and by the authority of almighty God, but without showing their credentials, they demand that the gates of the Exposition next year shall be shut against the people on Sundays, because in their opinion, that day of the week is a holy day. Without the least sign of modesty they treat the honest convictions of the rest of their fellow-citizens as if they were worthy only of contempt. The Sabbatarian Christians in Tennessee hav incorporated their notions into the laws of that state, and see how they fine and imprison the Adventists, who religiously observe the seventh day of the week as a Sabbath. The spirit of persecution is an incarnate devil which has its dwelling-place in the heart, and longs to show itself in the action of every man who sincerely feels and believes that all other men must accept his creed and worship as he does, or else, by the appointment of God, go down to eternal burning. This is the essential character of religion, as it has painted its own picture on every page of the world's history.

Then, would it not be worth an effort to negotiate for a loan of the earl of Shrewsbury's relics and hav a hall devoted to their exhibition at Chicago? And as all things are better appreciated when seen in contrast, the relics themselvs, the laws justifying their use, a sample of the sentences of death passed upon heretics, and especially the reason why lingering tortures by slow fires were used instead of quick death by decapitation, should be placed in one end of the hall. Over them, in large letters, should be the figures Anno Domini 1492.

At the other end of the hall extracts from our Declaration of Independence affirming the natural, personal, and inalienable right of every human being to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; and those other golden words that, to secure these rights governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers, not from the church, as the representativ of God almighty, but from the consent of the governed. Then, to confirm the hopes of suffering humanity, and make assurance doubly sure that the new nation spoken into existence on the Fourth of July, 1776, was not, as the governments of Europe had been, another religious, and persecuting institution, the declaratory announcement made to the world in our treaty with Tripoli during the administration of Washington, and when the men who founded the republic and knew its genius were still living, that, "In no sense is the government of the United States founded on the Christian religion," should blaze forth in living light upon the walls of day, and in transparencies by night, so that every eye could see it. The beholder should understand that this language does not mean that the government of the United States is hostil to any form of religion, but that, while it does ignore the very existence of them all, it guarantees to every inhabitant of the United States, as a human being, the uninterrupted enjoyment of his belief and worship whatever they may be. In close proximity with these peculiarities of our civil government, a map should hang upon the wall describing the forty-four states, and the inchoate states which compose the republic; and all the states and territories, in their commercial interests, enjoying the blessing of free trade, and prospering, in defiance of drawbacks, as no other nation on earth has ever prospered. The contrast between the two dates, 1492 and the period of 1776–1892; and the condition of the world at these two periods respectivly, would start the inquiry as to the cause of the contrast, and lead men who know how to think and reason to the belief that civilization, with its unnumbered blessings, progresses among men just in proportion as the church, which is the embodiment of religion, decreases in its influences upon the state, and confines itself to the individual.

We hav to-day more than a hundred religious sects in this country, organized upon as many distinct creeds. If they all together composed only one sect, and it embodied the doctrin that civil government was not a secular institute set up by the people themselvs to preserve their liberti s, but a religious ordinance, to be supervised, directed, and governed by the church, after the European fashion, we might, before the close of this century, find ourselvs involved in another civil war. The laws, and even the constitutions of the states, and of the general government, are but an expression of the will of a majority of the people, and may be fundamentally altered by the majority. This being the case, what a thought it is that we owe the continued secularity of our government and our personal rights under it to the fact that the sects are so at war with themselvs, each one believing in dead earnest that it, and it alone, is the Bible-door of heaven to the souls of men, that if one of them would seize the reins of political power to Europeanize the Constitution and set up a theocracy, all the rest of them would combine against the usurper in order to save themselvs from persecution and death!

However, I shall leave the world happy when the time comes, in the conviction that while men hav so much to do in shaping events, they also hav so little; for, like the currents in the ocean, there is a trend in human affairs which is irresistible. Ignorance now is, and has been in all ages, the deadly cancer that eats away human happiness, and knowledge is the only cure for it. The tendency of all invention now is to scatter all the comforts of life through the habitations of men, and thus equalize their condition. In the golden age of the church, when religion was the chief concern of mortals here below, the genius of invention, as we see in the instruments of torture in our imaginary Hall at Chicago, displayed itself, not in devising steam engins, electric telegraphs, and street-cars, but in contrivances which the church got up for the spread of true and undefiled religion among men. But the genius of the Middle Ages, poor and unprolific as it was in useful inventions, was quite equal to the genius of any present inventor in reaching the object aimed at; for, what mechanic in our day could invent a machine for inflicting long-continued and exquisit torture on a sensitiv person equal to the thumb-screws, the iron boot, and the iron maiden, that were stored away in the castle of Nuremburg, awaiting a revival of religion, and a return to their use which never came, and which are now exhibited in London to the people of the nineteenth century?

Glad to see how youthful in mind and body you are in your old age, and remembering with pleasure my visit to Mount Lebanon many years ago, and the hospitable treatment I received, I remain, your friend and well-wisher, A. B. Bradford.

Enon Valley, Pa., July 4, 1892.

Send for free catalog of our books.

Worship.

What is worship? It is a pity that the word has ever been invented. People speak of hero-worship; of course, when we worship, we must hav an object, a hero, a doll, an idol, a deity; an object to whom for one reason or other we attribute qualities which we admire greatly; but this is not all, for this would only be admiration, and who would not admire that which is admirable; but worshiping is, besides admiration, paying adulation, in an enthusiastic manner, to a certain object or person, clothing that object or person with qualities and capacities which we do not know that they possess. It is a frenzy of the mind, an ecstasy of the soul, into which we work ourselvs, without clearly knowing what we are doing, and as all frenzies or passions, it is false, because passion does not reason. Now, as reasonable beings, we should never allow ourselvs to worship; worship is degradation, it is leaving the lofty domain of reason and knowledge and truth, to become the slave of blind passion; he who worships sins, he does wrong. He who is the object of our worship laughs in his sleeve at those who worship him, and generally turns them round his finger; finds in this worship a powerful means to elevate himself and to obtain his desired aim, to sacrifice them to his ambition, to his benefits always and to his glory. So was Napoleon I. the hero of his army, which was led by him through the burning heat of Egypt, and the frozen snow-fields of Russia, and the Alpine dangers of Italy, to gain his battles, to fight for his glory, to serve his ambition; in his heart of hearts he must hav thought them fools and must hav despised them; but their hero-worship made them his tools. It is good for that and for nothing else; it is a passion that blindfolds us, as all passions do, and after the bandage is fallen from the eyes we see that we were the tool of others, that we were foolish enough to serve their purpose, and we are ashamed, but too late. So much for hero-worship. But worship of idol or deity? It is the same thing; it was invented by greedy priests, who found, and do find, their profit in it. The sacrifices to the deities, which are always of the best of their kind, cannot be consumed by the deity, but serve to supply the wants of the priests, and where steers and rams and bucks are no more in use, money has taken their place, according to the march of civilization; money for the priests and feasts of Mecca's prophet, money for the shrines and oracles among the Greeks, money for the churches and preachers of the Christians, money for the Roman Catholic's Saint Peter, money for the Protestant's houses of worship, money for the endless string of idle priests in the service of all the foolish worshipers; and to what end? Suppose there were a personal God, a ruler of the universe. What good does your worship do him? He must find your endless kneeling, singing, and talking in a house set apart to that purpose, very useless, for he will rule as he thinks proper, with or without your singing, talking, and kneeling. And, if there be not such a ruler, if all that is and all that happens, is and happens according to the nature of things, and as the eternal result of existing causes, what then? Well, then, worship is more absurd still.

It would hav been an inestimable blessing to the human race if worship had never been thought of, for it has always been confounded with and put in the place of religion; the latter is as old as the race, but the former is the invention of greedy priests. Religion is the relation between man and man, and can never affect the cause of all things. Religion is the fulfilling of the duties to ourselvs and to others, and is infinitly connected with reason, knowledge, science, progress, and the like. Yes, it is reason, knowledge, science, progress. A religious man is he who first of all takes care of his health and body as the first of all obligations, who studies the laws which rule us, the natural laws of health, cleanliness, generation, growth, development, and obeys them; who studies and obeys the laws of nature in all its departments, not blindfolded without knowing what he does, guided by priests, more ignorant than he, only more arrogant and greedy, but with eyes open, and intelligence unfolded, erect as a man should walk, not eyes closed, knees bent, crouched before an altar or image.

A religious man is he who promotes the bodily and mental welfare of his fellow-creatures, who makes himself, wife, and children, servants, friends, and all with whom he has to do, happy, by faithfulness, justice, and humanity; who treats animals with kindness and care; who tills the land, the source of all blessing to mankind, with intelligent care and ingenious labor, so that, instead of the insane worshiper who, at the command of his hero or in the name of his idol, rages with fury at the destruction of his fellow-creatures by war and persecution, he, on the contrary, promotes their welfare, uniting with them in the study of those laws which govern us, and which, well understood, promote health and prolong life.

Worship is an insanity. Religion is an existence, not an act to be done with at a certain hour, and at a certain place; it is the state of the reasonable being continually developing according to the laws of evolution.

We want no altars but the altar of our pure moral life; we want no church but the world; we want no worship but the holy fire for all that is good, reasonable, and righteous; we want no priests, no mediators, for we are ourselvs the high-priests of nature, and students of her laws.

Stand off, then, ye garbed priests of the eternal, of Brahma, Buddha, Jehovah, Christ—of whatever you choose to name him—stand off, and acknowledge that of the eternal you know not more than we do; stand off, and cease to deceive us. You would never hav entered into your profession had it not been to your own profit. Learn to work at an honest trade, earn your bread by your hands' labor. Crumble down into dust, ye temples of the Lord, for mankind is the lord of creation, and his temple is the world! We hav had enough of fanaticism; let science, knowledge, and reason rule. Men, learn to be Man, but man as nature made him, straight, natural, plain; not deformed, unnatural, crooked, as it is twisted and kneaded in convent and Sunday-school. Mankind, throw off the yoke that you wear on the shoulders! Bend for nobody. Do not search the way to heaven, but tread the footpath here on earth, with steady step. Enjoy life, and make it beautiful for yourself and others, and let worship be a forgotten word. MRS. CHARLOTTE ROBINSON.

Our London Letter.

The second number of "The Liberty of Bequest Intelligencer" speaks somewhat hopefully of the bill formulated by the committee. And as many prospectiv members of the new Parliament hav expressed themselvs favorably inclined toward the measure, it is probable it may hav a hearing in the House before very long, though with all Liberal measures there is sure to be the usual bigoted opposition from the "unco guid." It is only a question at pegging away, and if it is introduced at every available opportunity the opponents will be so heartily tired of it that they will cease to oppose, and be glad to let it pass for the sake of getting well rid of it.

Everyone is now pretty fully occupied with the general election, and so far as things hav gone at present, there seems a decided chance of Gladstone having a term. In that event we shall see a lively session, which will be a welcome change after the dullness of the last two years. I await with considerable interest to see how much fight there will be in the bold Ulsterman, if Home Rule becomes an accomplished fact. Salisbury, the despised of Disraeli, will no doubt bravely advance to the rear in the coming fight, and urge his followers to the front, and eventually declare for the winner. Gladstone is no great shakes except as an orator, but Salisbury is beneath contempt.

Dr. Hayman has been pitching into the bishops (it is said that he was disappointed of a bishopric himself), and states that they recklessly ordain twice as many curates as are likely to get a lucrativ job. It may be so, but not so very long back the cry was that young men were fighting shy of the parson business; perhaps, however, that referred to quality and quantity, as so many wastrels consider they hav a call from the "Holy Ghost" when they cannot find other employment. I hav known several curates and hav found the majority very ignorant, very conceited, and as a consequence very empty-headed; but as their congregations are frequently made to match, there cannot be much cause for one to complain of the other.

The irrepressible Richards has once again tried his fortune at Northampton, but the election will hav none of him. If he were paying his own expenses it is scarcely likely he would go up so often for a beating, but as the money comes from the Tory party he does not object to getting the only notoriety that falls in his way. The editor of the Northampton Reformer has retired from the scene for the time being, and so may stand a better chance next time of trying. If Mr. Gladstone pursues his usual tactics and appeals to the country in pique as he did in 1886, Mr. Robertson will hav an opportunity of attaining his ambition.

The archbishop of Canterbury, at a public meeting, has spoken quite respectfully of other religions than the one he is specially paid to support, much to the astonishment of many of his hearers. He rather reflected on the learned missionaries when he told them they should endeavor to understand the religions they were attacking in other countries, for it is a notorious fact to everyone but themselvs that their knowledge of comparativ religion is remarkably scant. He certainly stated an indisputable truth when he said that missionaries might be said to work like mules, underground and in the dark, only he might hav extended the description to all the members of his craft; the only light they work by is the gleam of the yellow gold. From the general tenor of the remarks of the archbishop, I fear he has been indulging in the perusal of some unorthodox literature, and if he were holding a less important post in the church would run a serious risk of being charged with heresy, though it must be confessed that heresy prosecutions are too costly and uncertain nowadays to be lightly entered into, and moreover it is a fashionable pastime to affect to be unorthodox. J. D.

The Money Question.

Some of the most ridiculous articles on the money question hav appeared in your columns, and a class of writers seem utterly unable to comprehend the nature of money and the basis of its power and functions. Gold and silver seem to them to be "natural money," as a speaker once declared in my hearing, but gold and silver are no more natural money than nickel or copper, and none of these four metals is money until the stamp of some government is placed upon its surface with an avowed declaration to that effect. Money is entirely dependent upon governmental laws for its power and functional qualifications, and nothing but law ever did or will create money and endow it with potency. Now then, if law, and law alone, creates money, where do we find any restriction that compels the use of gold and silver, or forbids the use of any other material substance on which to stamp the fiat of the government, which alone makes money? There is no such restriction, and only the customs of a barbarous and ignorant past compel us to still use and worship these precious metals—precious because of their scarcity. They are no more needed to circulate as money and perform the purpose for which law creates money than are diamonds and sapphires, and until the people realize this fact and profit by it, they will continue to be victims of shylock greed and the machinations of those who corner and control these metals. Of all the questions with which legislation deals, of all that concern the welfare and prosperity of nations, none is greater than the money question. Money, which "is the national medium of exchange for property and products," lies at the very foundation of civilization, and is most essential to prosperity and progress. It is not only the greatest aid to civilization, the mightiest factor for good and evil in the world, but is so simple and comprehensible in its nature, power, and proper purposes, that every person endowed with common sense should find it no difficult subject to understand. But it is the business of bankers, shylocks, and money manipulators to confuse the people with a multiplicity of words, and to so mix theories and twaddle that ordinary minds giv up trying to comprehend financial problems, as many do the "mysteries" of free trade and protection. By holding the fact continually before us, that money is simply the creature of man-made laws, regardless of its material, much confusion can be avoided. Let us next reflect on the fact that all nations make their own laws; and consequently each creates and establishes its own money, and nowhere in the wide world is there such a thing as international money. This last fact is a most important one to consider when financial schemers are trying to delude the people with the idea that an international conference is a necessity before Congress deals with the remonetization of silver. Silver and gold hav a market value in the world regardless of any government stamp, and as the bullion value of each is the basis on which nations receive and exchange these metals in commercial transactions, it is a matter that concerns no other country when domestic currency is under consideration. What the United States sees fit to use as its material for money is no business or concern of any other nation, and only the leading bankers and shylocks who through government privileges manipulate the currency for their own individual benefit, are interested in knowing what Europe thinks of our efforts to remonetize silver; and still many people think we should as a nation defer all action until foreign representativs of other governments sanction or condemn the movement. What nonsense, when we consider that our money circulates only at home and is a legal tender for debts and dues in the United States alone. Let Uncle Sam make his money of that material which our national representativs in Congress shall choose, and let gold and silver as commodities find their value in the markets of the world as does wheat, iron, tin, copper, or any other production from the storehouse of nature.

As gold and silver are never money until so made by the stamp and fiat of some government, and there is not gold and silver enough in the world to supply all nations with a currency of these metals, it is necessary to use some other substance, and paper when endowed with the same legal qualifications as money made of gold and silver, is just as good and potent as a medium of exchange for property and products.

Now, if paper money is good enough to supply a portion of a nation's needs, it is good enough to supply all, and under an established government gold and silver are absolutely needless. Every paper dollar which this government ever issued without a restrictiv clause in its potentiality, had and exercised the same power as the gold and silver dollar; and the only opponents ever found arrayed against the full-legal-tender greenback, were bankers and shylocks. Their reason for fighting it was self-interest and a desire to rob the people, and this fact is revealed in the notorious Hazzard circular issued in 1862, which stands without a parallel in the annals of scheming rascality. Said this circular, "It will not do to allow the greenbacks to circulate as money any length of time, for we (the bankers) cannot control them, but we can control the bonds and through them the bank issues."

And this is just what they hav done, until our nation has become so afflicted with financial evils that revolution stares us in the face, unless the people rise up and break the bonds that enslave them.

The tariff question, on which both parties are harping to divert attention from the more important one of money, is of far less importance to our national welfare and should no longer blind the people to the real cause of our general and deep-seated depression throughout the Union.

The Hazzard circular will ever stand as evidence of the most damnable conspiracy against our nation's welfare and prosperity ever known, and the evils which hav followed its successful scheme for thirty years can never be computed or fully realized.

Poverty, crime, wretchedness, insanity, and suicide are the legitimate results of conditions created by the monopoly and manipulation of money, and any government which permits a privileged class to control its currency will eventually enter the throes of revolution and perish amid the ruins of its former greatness. Since 1873, we hav gone from bad to worse, and the demonetization of silver, which followed the destruction of the greenbacks, marked an era in our decadence that should stand as a warning for all time to come, and never should the fight for righted wrongs cease until bankers and shylocks are shorn of their power to further enslave us by monetary legislation. Our government in theory is founded on the will of the people and should be so in fact; but while a minority of plutocrats control and run it in their own interest, the people will assume the condition of slaves and virtually are such. All the legislation that has for its object the welfare of the people is instantly opposed by the banks and our moneyed aristocracy, and when they saw in 1862 that full-legal-tender greenbacks would destroy their power to enslave the people and rob industry of its fruits, they sent their agents to Congress, who, with the free use of money, shaped legislation so as to put untold millions into their pockets, and from that day to this they hav controled all financial legislation to suit themselvs.

We are on the high road to destruction, and our one-sided and unjust monetary system is mainly responsible for the whole business. Rates of interest prevail in every section that industry can never overcome under the best of conditions, for the annual increase of wealth in this country is of far less per cent than the lowest rate of interest: therefore, many are and must be robbed by usury and a monetary system that was invented for that purpose. We hav a vast number of farmers in the United States that are as much enslaved by usury as the peon of Mexico is by that system of slavery, and neither can escape from the clutches of their masters until legislation which made possible their slavery is changed. Well may Ben Butler predict a war in the near future in this country, for all signs point to a coming crisis, and nothing but monetary legislation which our bankers and plutocrats with all their concentrated power persistently oppose will avert it. As power once obtained is never relinquished except by force, revolution seems inevitable and must come unless the people wake up and regain lost liberties, rights, and powers through peaceful and intelligent legislation.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 4, 1892. C. SEVERANCE.

W. S. Bell Lecturing in Washington.

At Snohomish I met our friends George E. Macdonald, editor of the Snohomish Eye, and wife Grace and their splendid boy, nearly two years old, Eugene, named after the pilot of THE TRUTH SEEKER craft. I had a delightful visit with them. They hav moved into their new house and are contented and happy in this wet wooden country. There are several newspapers in Snohomish, and the editors of each hav tried a free lance with George E. Macdonald, and hav thereby learned the value of discretion.

I hav met with quite a number of intelligent people who entertain the conviction that George E. Macdonald is a peer to Bill Nye in wit and humor, and that if he had a syndicate behind him he would be equally as successful in writing letters to amuse the public. And "there's millions in it."

I did not lecture in Snohomish, as the small-pox was holding the town semi-quarantined. At Sultan City, eighteen miles away, I gave two lectures to large and enthusiastic audiences. The Rev. Mr. Bowers listened to my first lecture and after the audience was dismissed accused me of misrepresentation. I explained, but explanations were not satisfactory. This aroused me to say that I could convict him of misrepresentation, if not palpable falsehood, in any sermon I might hear him preach. He denied that I could, and invited me to come to hear him. I protested that it would be useless, as I could not speak in his church. He assured me that I could. At 11 o'clock I went to church and listened attentivly to all the "divine service." At the close of his sermon he asked me if I wished to ask any question. I replied that I came there under the impression that I was to hav a chance to speak. The man of God told me that I labored under a misapprehension; that he had told me I might ask a question in the line of the sermon. Going on the principle that small favors ought to be thankfully received, I asked him this question: "Do you know God or not?" After a moment's reflection, he replied: "We know God through the love of our Lord Jesus Christ." Then he swung loose into a ten minutes' preach, after which he asked me if his answer was satisfactory. I informed him that it was not. I said briefly, "Your explanation makes God impersonal—an influence—but my question had reference to the personal God, who made Adam and talked with Abraham and Moses; the God who walked on earth among his people. Do you know that personal God?" He replied that he could not be responsible for an imaginary God I might hav in my mind. But I interposed: "This is not an imaginary God, it is the Bible God." Here I was cut off from further remarks. The Rev. Mr. Bowers has made his record in Sultan, and it is that he does not know anything at all about the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

We hav some good Liberal workers at Sultan, among whom are Don W. Evans, H. M. Meredith, H. C. Williams, Wm. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. York. I was very kindly entertained by Mr. York and wife. Sultan is not a large place, but it is quite activ. The Great Northern railroad is now grading its road through this part of the country.

From Sultan I went to Whatcom and had two lectures to large and enthusiastic audiences, but did not raise enough money to pay hall-rent, and hall-rent was only half-price to us. Whatcom and almost all Puget sound is in the gall of bitterness—no business, no money.

Mr. Albert Mohrmann livs at Lummi, a small place some five miles from Whatcom. On invitation I went there and gave a lecture in the dining-hall of his hotel. The room was well seated and lighted, besides being decorated with an abundance of flowers. After the lecture the seats were piled up and the young people "tripped the light fantastic toe." As this was the first Freethought lecture at Lummi it was regarded as a great success. Mr. Mohrmann is an intelligent and decided Freethinker. He is not a changeable man—one thing to-day and something else to-morrow. He abides by his convictions, and pays one hundred cents on a dollar. His wife is an excellent woman, and takes delight in cooking the mutton for the new minister when he comes to make his first pastoral call.

I spoke twice at West Ferndale, but it was on the 3d of July and the people were all in a gleeful high-diddle-diddle spirit about the "Fo'th o' July" and my audience was small, the revenue was small, and everything seemed small except the "Fo'th o' July."

Mr. Thomas McDowell arranged for the lectures here, but the "Fo'th was agin' us."

I am indebted to Mr. Blomquest and family for their courtesies while at Whatcom. I enjoyed the hospitality of their home greatly, and shall long entertain grateful remembrances of them.

I gave only one lecture at Seattle. Warm weather and hard times made it impracticable to attempt more. Mr. Richard Wilson, president of the King County Freethought Association, introduced me to the audience. The business arrangements had been attended to by Mr. R. J. Wilson, the rustler of Freethought in Seattle. At present the Puget sound country is passing through a trying and critical period. No money, no business, and no flattering outlook for the immediate future. But the country at large is in the same boat.

I had the pleasure of meeting the former secretary of the Oregon Secular Union, Mrs. Elva Davidson Blackburn, and her mother. Mr. Charles Blackburn is in British Columbia mining. Mrs. Blackburn and her mother reside on a high hill and hav a fine view of the bay. It is very inspiring to drink in the prospect, but it is killing for a fat man to climb the hill to get there.

I enjoyed several visits with Mrs. Lenont and her sons and daughter. They liv away out in the country, yet it is within the city limits. Their house commands a charming view of lake Union.

At Buckley, Wash., Mr. S. P. Putnam and I meet for the first time in ten years, where we were both booked to lecture on consecutiv nights. We had a very social time after the lecture in company with several other friends in playing high five and hearts. Our companions were exceedingly cheerful, and the hours we spent with them passed away as on wings of light. Our friend Mr. Coke Ewing is the activ worker who looks out for the lecture and the lecturer. Mr. Putnam and Mr. Coke Ewing, with others, remained up to see me off on the train at half-past 1 in the morning, a kindness I duly appreciated. As I had not had much sleep the night before, I was drowsy; soon after I sat down in the cars I fell asleep. In about two hours, when upon the Cascade range, I waked up to see it broad daylight. I was bewildered to think that I had run up a mountain so high that it became daylight almost in the middle of the night. I had forgotten that I had taken the cars at half-past 1, and that I had slept two hours.

At North Yakima I gave only one lecture. The town is situated in the great desert of Washington. The people, however, liv and seem to be proud of their town. Money and ideas are not abundant. Religion holds sway.

Mr. James A. Besk and T. G. Redfield were the only two Liberals who showed any interest in the pilgrim lecturer. But these two brethren labor under serious disadvantages in North Yakima. There are almost no others to come to the rescue.

At Colville I gave two lectures. On the first night I had a very large and enthusiastic audience, but the second evening my audience was small. A picnic had taken nearly two hundred people out of town, and they did not return in time to hear the lecture. Here Mr. William Graham and his wife, Maggie Hope Graham, gave me royal hearty entertainment. They are the soldiers of the cause in this place. If they do not take hold nothing is done, and when they do things hav to move.

The weather is warm and I am trying to keep cool. I am traveling slowly eastward.

W. S. BELL.

The World's Fair Petition.

It is wonderful to see the lack of interest men and women take in Liberal ideas and affairs that relate to their own interests as well as the mass of struggling humanity. I hav been circulating a petition sent me by THE TRUTH SEEKER to hav the World's Fair open on Sunday, and it is amusing as well as exasperating to meet different individuals and hear them express their ideas and see how narrow some of them are—that is, if they ever had an idea, for I hav my doubts that some of these goody-goody Young Men's Christian Association individuals ever had an idea, and I think it would frighten them to death if they should find that they had a mind and could think for themselvs. Well, one of these creatures who belonged to the society that Cain founded said that he would not sign the petition because the Ten Commandments said he should not. Now, I was not aware that all of the Ten Commandments said that he should not sign it or that one of them forbade the young man from putting his name to the list, but I expect he had reference to the one that said, "Thou shalt not work on the Lord's day," etc. And still another said that he did not think the people should hav a good time on the Lord's day, but I am sure that he and many others of the angelic band whose wings must hav started to grow keep only Sunday, and during the six days of the week are guilty of being in the same business that Moses was when the light went out, or follow the example of Father Abraham, Noah, Lot, and many others of God's chosen people. I say, why should they not? They can hav no fear of being punished in the next world, for Sunday is the day they fix up their accounts with God, and Jesus takes it all, and then they can start over to collect another bundle of sins for poor Jesus to carry. How unmanly! what a religion to follow! I would rather be a Chinese and worship my little Joss than follow a religion like it.

I find the average woman a poor creature, for I do pity a woman that livs in superstition of the church, for they seem to consider themselvs as nonentities, and even if they are Liberal enough to favor the petition they will not sign because they are united to some church and are afraid that some one might think they were "Infidels." And then they say their name would not count anyway—just as if the name of Sarah Jones would not count as much as her big brother John or any other male member of the Jones family. But then, I am pleased to state that they are not all alike, for I meet many brilliant women who are very Liberal and are not afraid to let it be known.

I heard a Woman Suffragist make this announcement from the rostrum, "That woman's advance at the present time was due to the advance of Christianity;" when it is, on the contrary, due to its decline, which has been upon us for the last forty years, or ever since our illustrious hero Tom Paine wrote the "Age of Reason." O my poor misguided sisters, why will you cling to the superstition of the Dark Ages? Look to your Bible for inspiration, and don't close your eyes and ears to God's word (as you take it to be), and see what sainted Paul saith of your sex (Tim. ii, 2), and in 1 Cor. xiv, 34, 35, he exclaims, "Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home, for it is a shame for women to speak in the churches." See also 1 Tim. ii, 12, and Eph. v, 22, 23; and I could giv you many others that might be more inspiring.

Now, I say suppose a woman had not a husband—for they are many who hav not—and was so homely and disagreeable that she could not get one and would hav to be an old maid—I say, what would the poor creature do? I suppose she would hav to remain in ignorance unless she could get some of her fortunate (or unfortunate, whichever the case might be) married sisters to giv her information, and then she wouldn't be allowed to make stump speeches, or be a missionary for the heathen Chinese, or pass her time away in any pleasant way, but would hav to wait till she was born again and then run a big chance to secure a husband the next time she inhabited the earth, before she could obtain the desired knowledge her heart craved for. Now, this would be a very brilliant outlook for the American women of the nineteenth century. When we see the ignorance existing among the fair sex, it seems an endless task to place the crown of Freethought upon their brow, for they hav practiced obedience to the church and its priestly craft for so many generations they are even afraid to take a stand on neutral ground for fear of being lost, and we must hav the undivided efforts of all Liberal-minded people to help humanity realize that "foundations for a seat in the kingdom of heaven must be laid out on earth" and you cannot go in on a salvation pass.

I think that many of our Liberal men are greatly to blame for woman's slow advancement, for when they themselvs are extremely Liberal and hav received the light of common sense they seem to think it proper that their wives and daughters should be religious and attend some church, and thereby help to keep up a religion that is based on a falsehood and has been the cause of most of the misery of the past and will be of the future; but then, they may be like Brother Talmage, for he knows which side of his bread is buttered, and it is policy in his case, and others think it is unwomanly to be irreligious. Now, I say if Liberal men would use a little persuasion with the fair sex and advance some of Paine's and Voltaire's arguments, they would soon see that they were on the wrong track and retrace their steps ere it was too late.

Now, if men will continue to shrink from helping woman out of the mire of superstition she will be left to dig her own way as best she can and will fall back many times and thereby need assistance. A great many so-called religious people think it is wonderful how a person can be good out of the church, and can hardly account for it. It has been my experience that those who profess the most religion are the worst villains and hypocrits, and will cheat and misrepresent whenever they get a chance and think they will not be found out. Of course they are not all alike, but I speak of the average; some of the worst criminals we hav are members of the church. In fact, I do not think you will find one but that takes his sins to Jesus; and it is rarely, if ever, you will find an Infidel in the penitentiary.

The churches nowadays are filled with women, with just enough men to fill the pulpits and other offices, and I realize that these divine few hav preached all their sex out except a few belonging to that ancient order of Cain; and I believe the time is coming when women preachers will be in demand; but as soon as woman begins to read what the holy book has to say about her she will be lost in Infidelism, as the Christian crank would say, and will hav no more use for the church than the Chinese had for the Jew when he found out that he had crucified the savior. He wanted to kill him, for he said, "Me no likee you; you kill the Melican man's Joss." I use the above story to illustrate her feelings toward orthodoxy.

It is the constant dropping of the water that wears the stone, and I am pleased with the work that the Liberal papers and magazines are accomplishing; and I think every Liberal-minded person should be a subscriber for at least one Liberal paper or magazine, and if each and every one will do what they can to help in the glorious cause we can be free much sooner, for we all realize that Christianity's tree is losing its branches one by one and will soon topple to the ground and its dust will be mingled with the elements.

ISIS B. MARTIN.

The Cash of the Country.

Just a few lines in reply to your correspondent, H., in TRUTH SEEKER of June 18th. I take his own definition of money as being correct: "That money is nothing more nor less than a certificate that labor has been performed."

Will H. please now tell us why the laborer should pay one hundred cents for this certificate instead of one cent?

H. must not forget that anyone using money must pay the interest upon the cost of its production, and while he handles his coin and smiles he is all the time paying interest upon its cost.

Now, we propose to H. that anything used for money shall be used for nothing else but money until worn out. We will require the law to punish anyone for mutilating or defacing the money of the country. This being the case, paper costing one cent is certainly preferable to coin costing one hundred cents. Do not forget that all people must pay the cost, and interest upon the cost, of their circulating medium. The more intrinsic value in a dollar the more interest to pay. The same rule holds good with any and every article used by man. The cheaper one can obtain an article of the same utility the better.

A farmer might hav his stable fork made of gold; the intrinsic value would be great, but practically it would be worth less than one of iron or steel. So one could hav all household goods of gold or silver, but practically they would be no better, and the interest upon the cost would eat him up. I will just here giv H. an illustration of two men. One used paper, say $20, for fifty years. The first issue cost one cent; he had it renewed four times during the fifty years at a cost of four cents; the interest upon cost being forty cents; at the end of fifty years the $20 had cost him say fifty cents. The other man chose gold at a first cost of $20. Compound interest for fifty years was $2,611. Then, his $20 in gold being worn out, he had to add to his outlay, making the total cost $2,631 for the use of $20 for fifty years. Each paid the interest upon the cost of production.

It is this that keeps the people poor, and deluded or interested writers in the interest of gold bugs will not permit the people to see it.

If we use both silver and gold, we hav a two-horse team to pull our load. If we use paper also, we will hav a three-horse team; and if we will carefully investigate the strength and pulling capacity of the paper horse, we will find his strength equal to the metal horse's, that cost one hundred times as much.

So why not get all paper horses? They are just as good and so much cheaper. But perhaps H. would agree to work my paper horse, which cost a cent, provided I would lay away one hundred cents to redeem the one-cent horse. This one hundred cents I must keep sacred and pay interest upon it to redeem a one-cent horse. Will H. please explain for what purpose he wants money "redeemed?" All this talk about redeeming money is stuff. For what purpose should money be redeemed? Will there ever come a time that we shall not want money? I want my money redeemed in articles of necessity. I want my money to continue its travels as money as long as man shall liv upon the earth and want money. All those idiots wanting money redeemed are those who are looking for a judgment day—a final settling of accounts—when no more money shall be wanted. That day is so far off that we may say it will never come. Will H. hav the kindness to tell us how many hundreds of millions in coin are invested in our circulating medium; then giv us the sum of its yearly interest; then giv us the loss by wear from handling; then giv us the sum total of what we are paying yearly for using coin as money instead of paper?

Then again, we ask H. to please figure up how many millions of people are idle, many worse than idle, for the want of money to do something with. Figure again the thousands that go to the wall every week on account of the tightness of the money market. Please figure up your metallic currency and giv us the per capita to each individual. "Four dollars." Yes, $4. Please tell us who can purchase a home, carry on any business, raise a family, and school his children with $4.

Will H. please figure up the few thousands owning all the property in America, and tell us how they obtained it? By controling the money market, eating up the people, and gathering their substance through interest. Because each dollar cost one hundred cents to produce it; and further, because the people are foolish enough to use an article as a circulating medium that wants capacity. There is not enough to go round. If one lucky fellow gets $8, another poor fellow has not a cent; and when one gets a million, two hundred and fifty thousand poor people cannot hav a cent; and so long as coin is used this state of things will exist.

Will H. please tell us how many millions of this coin are annually used in the arts? How much plate, jewelry, spoons, watches, etc., are made from it? How many millions are plugged into hollow teeth? How many millions are buried—hid away by the miser—or withdrawn from circulation, just because it is intrinsic value? Will he please figure this all up, then tell us how much is left, and I think he will cheerfully exclaim with Puck, "What fools we mortals be!" He will then be willing to admit that intrinsic value should not be used for money. Because it wants capacity. Because the cost and interest eat us up and keep us poor and leave us ever at the mercy of the money sharks. No private individual or bank should issue money. The government alone should do this, and all interest should go to the government and be shared by the whole people, which would be sufficient to pay all expenses of the government. The tax-gatherer would be a thing of the past. Our ports could be opened to the world. Our custom-houses could be sold. Our custom officers could become producers instead of leeches upon the public.

But Shylock has controled us, The coffers of a few are full, those of the many are empty. The remedy is to demonetize both gold and silver. Hav no money but government paper. The government should loan this at one per cent interest to anyone who would giv security, and permit him to keep it so long as the interest was paid.

I would hav the government monopolize the business of loaning money for interest. I would not permit a private individual to loan money for a greater interest than one per cent. In fact, it would be better to forbid it entirely. Then the millions held by the wealthy would seek investments and thus circulate the money. Everyone having security to offer could obtain money at one per cent for all time; no one could be oppressed; the clutches of shylocks would be loosened from the throat of the people; the millions now being hoarded from the hard labors of the poor, in the shape of interest, would flow to the mutual benefit of all, and our prosperity would be greater than that of any people in the world. W. B. RADFORD.

Tallahassee, Fla., July 4, 1892.

The Cause in Washington.

Allow me a little space in your glorious paper to tell you about Washington. Things "do move" here. Less than three months ago seven of us got together and started the first Secular Union in Tacoma. To-day we hav about one hundred members and are growing all the time; nine initiated last Tuesday. We, like the Salvationist, say "Glory"—with a different sound. How did we do this? Because we tried! C. B. Reynolds (may he liv a thousand years), we just love that man. I cannot tell you, lovers of liberty, how much he has done for Washington Liberalism. Twice a week, Sunday and Tuesday, he comes to help us. Always the same genial, calm, determined, unconquerable fire in his eye. Sky-pilots crawl in their holes like foxes. We hav a large hall and it is crowded every Sunday night. W. S. Bell and S. P. Putnam hav each given us a lecture since we started our Union. They are both noble, self-sacrificing men and we will not forget their kindness.

This much for Tacoma, now for the Washington Secular Union. Liberals of Washington, I hav written over five hundred letters and circulars and am waiting for replies, some of which I hav already received. Here is a specimen:

PALMER, WASH.

DR. D. M. ANGUS, Tacoma, President Washington Secular Union, Dear Sir and Brother Liberal: Was in Tacoma 1st and 2d, but could not get to see you, and was unable to get hold of an available $5 bill until now. Sorry I had to disappoint you; also sorry I cannot do more, but this is best I can do at present. Hoping you will hav success in keeping the good Secular Union together and Brother Reynolds better paid than before,

Yours for Freethought, F. D. WRIGHT.

A letter like that right from a liberal heart makes your president feel that labor is a pleasure and that we are in the field to win. I want you Liberals to do all you can. We must hav money to publish ten thousand pamphlets on taxation, as was voted at the annual convention to do. We must hav the legislature next winter repeal the tax exemption revenue law which was sneaked on the statute-books on the closing day of the last session of Congress at Olympia. It will require $200. F. D. Wright is the first to respond; who will be next? Liberals, if you stand by us we will hav the law stricken from the books; but the Union must hav two thousand members.

One month from to-day I will report progress be it good or bad. The pamphlets should be out before September, that the people may hav a chance to learn their lesson before the November election. Liberals, do not vote for any senator or assemblyman who will not on the quiet or otherwise promis to vote to repeal the above law. Go to the nominees personally and get that pledge. You can always get it better before election than after. If you will do this and write me the results of your efforts, I will do the rest.

Yours till reason, right, and justice hav won,

D. M. ANGUS, M.D.,
President Washington Secular Union.

Tacoma, July 14, 1892.

"Pushed By Unseen Hands."

From the Boston Globe.

An artist reproduces nature in such a way that we recognize it as real or ideal. The ideal can be as real to us as any scene beheld with our open eyes. Often the unseen is more real to us than the visible. We are controled by what some call Providence. "Pushed By Unseen Hands," the title of Helen H. Gardener's new book, is a collection of stories so realistic as to leave no doubt of their actuality. The author has stated her facts with the brevity of a lawyer. She compliments her readers in regarding them as as honest as herself, and givs them thoughts by which humanity can be benefited. To look at the questions of the day, and with her best efforts try to alleviate sorrow, is noble. The stories are told with no apparent purpose to adorn a moral, and are the very best fiction, yet no intelligent person can finish the book without wishing to relieve the evils which surround high and low alike.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM's lecture appointments:

Colville, Wash.	July 29–31	Eau Claire and vicinity, Wis.	Aug. 24–29
Missoula, Mont.	Aug. 6, 7	Chicago, Ill.	Sept. 4, 11

Some dates are not filled. Those along the line who desire lectures will please write S. P. Putnam, Palouse City, Wash.

THE Chicago Secular Union has elected officers for the year as follows: President, Horace C. Bennett; vice-presidents, E. N. Geer, Jehu Burr; secretary, George Borst; treasurer, A. M. Freeman.

W. S. BELL's lecture appointments:

Davenport,	Wash.	July 19	Schofield,	Utah.	Aug. 4
Rosalia,	"	" 21	Leadville,	Col.	" 6, 7
Oakesdale,	"	" 22	Salida,	"	" 8
Palouse,	"	"23–24	Canyon City,	"	" 9, 10
Emmett,	Idaho	"27–29	Pueblo,	"	" 11
Morgan,	Utah	" 31	Denver,	"	" 14
Echo,	"	Aug. 1

The New Theology.

From the Herald.

CLERICAL-LOOKING OLD GENT LOQIT.

Do you believe in "the higher criticism"
Which so batters the walls of ancient sheol,
Shackling Mephisto with its witticism
And the Agnostic's famous "I don't know all?"

THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELER.

I'm on the road such long and weary hours,
I hav no time for study, and can't tell
Much of the new theology's sweets or sours,
And am not sound on questions of a hell;
But when I eat a railroad lunch, I plainly see
If there's no future punishment, there ought to be.

Letters of Friends.

The All-Mother.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., July 12, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: All-mother, Cause, or Nature never troubles herself on ghosts, gods, devils, etc.—human phantoms. She moves in eternal rotation's everlasting, itself ever regenerating creativly.

C. ZOLLER, M.D.

Hav Freethonght Gatherings and Lectnres at the Fair.

DETROIT, MICH., June 27, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I just now read "Homer's" suggestion, page 410 of THE TRUTH SEEKER, how to make ourselvs felt during the Fair at Chicago. I think the plan first-class. It would cause thousands of Freethinkers to become acquainted who would otherwise never know the strength of their own army. CARL BLITZ, D.D.

Natnre vs. God.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., July 16, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Freethought has abandoned the Bible God, because he was found not consistent to truth. For this reason Freethought felt obliged to abandon him and substitute Nature instead. We not only found Nature furnishing the principle or essence for the growth of all life, but we found it also the teacher and the real fountain of all life itself.

We agreed, for this reason, that no being should be considered superior to Nature, and that every other being in existence should and must be considered Nature's subordinate. We found this consistent and agreeable with truth, reason, and logic. AUGUST BUESING.

An Anecdote.

TOUTE, ILL., July 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Emblematically we hav kept the Freethought flag flying over our house for the past thirty years. People do not scare at it as much as they used to.

An amusing incident happened a few years ago in our grand jury room. My brother, Thomas Ray, was one of the jurors—the only time he ever served To his great disgust he found each juryman was expected to talk about his neighbors, holding up their misdeeds or shortcomings as choice bits of information. The vim with which most of them performed the pleasant duty showed they felt the importance of the occasion. The chairman, noticing the sober, earnest look on my brother's face, said, "Mr. Ray, you havn't said anything yet. What is wrong in your neighborhood?" "Nothing. We are all Freethinkers. We havn't any quarrels. None of us feels that it would make us any taller to step on some one else." SARAH COPE.

Snperstition.

LORAINE, ILL., July 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav a laboring mind and can make best use of it by the use of the tongue; however, I wish to inform you of my views by the use of the pen. THE TRUTH SEEKER is a journal of perfection in its truthful intentions, but it is objectionable on account of finding more faults than remedies for the faults found. Any man can claim a fault, but it requires the remedy to demonstrate its existence.

Superstition has become hereditary in the mental organization of a low class of the human animal, and now it is preëminently visible to the observing mind.

Phrenology is a true science, and is as essential to science as the flange to a car-wheel.

I long hav learned that the superstitious Christian is as addicted to licentiousness as the goose to bare feet.

Superstition has swayed the human mind till tears in torrents hav flowed. Its woes hav been inflicted on mankind till man knows no place of refuge or ark of safety from its damnable error.

R. H. W.

Heaven a Place of Ill Repnte.

PORTLAND, ORE., July 12, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Heaven must be a beautiful place when a man can commit all the crimes on the calendar and then get a free pass there. We hav just had a case here of a wretch by the name of Charles Wilson, who outraged and murdered an innocent girl fourteen years of age, and through the cowardice of the sheriff of Clackamas county and the trickery of the sheriff of Multnomah county the people were frustrated in lynching the brute, so in the mean time we will hav to wait and see what the law says. Perhaps before he comes to trial there will be so much sentiment that he will be judged insane and justice be cheated out of its just dues. But he says that he is a Methodist and that he will go straight to heaven. Now, if there is such a place as heaven, the victim that he outraged and murdered certainly went there. Now, they cannot certainly meet on social terms, so there must be two or three different grades of society in heaven. Because I never read of a murderer, or ravisher, or robber, or any other criminal, but that was going to get to heaven when he died. Now, I am willing to take my chances in the other place rather than mix with that class of society.

Fraternally yours, ANDREW FRASER.

Sermonic Cnriosities.

DUBLIN, TEX., July 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: During one of our extended drouths in Texas I listened to an appeal for rain to a Baptist's God in this style: "Oh, God, may it rain and rain, and grass grow and grow, and the steer fat and fat and wallow in his own fat. May Texas abound all over with fritter trees and honey ponds, that we may eat and eat and be merry, oh, God! May the ears of corn be as big as wagon hubs, and the grain on 'em as big as iron wedges, so nobody's mill but Brother Hill's can crack 'em, oh, God! We beseech thee, O God, to send us a gully-washer, a chip-floater, a root-soaker—none of your little drizzle-drozzles. Grant this our prayer in our great need and thine shall be our thanks and praise unto the end. Amen."

The same minister, describing the devil, likened his satanic majesty to an immense elephant walking straight up on his hind legs, with horns on him big as vainglorious Catholic meeting-houses, his eyes like two big balls of fire, his ears hung down like a tobacco leaf, and his nose smoked like a tar kiln.

The singsong peculiar to Baptists makes the description more ludicrous.

J. S. MCCARTHY.

A Word on Spiritualism.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., June 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The following article I sent to a leading Spiritualist paper for publication, and because I criticised some of the methods of the Spiritualists they would not publish it.

While I am a Spiritualist, I do not think the Spiritualists are above criticism, and I want their shortcomings shown up to them for their improvement.

A. B. SEVERANCE.

THE REJECTED LETTER.

MR. EDITOR: I was more than pleased with C. H. Murry's article that I hav just read in the Better Way of May 14th. I am glad he had the nerve to criticise some of the trashy nonsense that is given by some from the Spiritual rostrum. I hav long wished to say something on that subject myself, but knowing that a large share of the Spiritualists seem to be delighted to hear anything that comes from a spirit, whether intelligent or not, I expected it would hurt somebody's feelings and I kept still until now. But just as long as people are satisfied to hear that kind of twaddle, we shall hav it, I suppose. The demand will regulate the supply. We hear a great deal of talk about fraud in materialization, but I think there is plenty of it on the rostrum. Not by mediums, but by some ignoramus of a spirit that comes and palms himself off for a Franklin, a Webster, a Channing, a Paine, or some other noted person. Why cannot speakers use less words to express their ideas? But it seems as if the less ideas, the more words. And it is the same with some writers. Words, words, words. The best speakers and writers use the plainest and fewest words. I was pleased with Hudson Tuttle's article. His suggestions were good and practical. I know it, for I hav tried it several times with complete success.

A. B. SEVERANCE.

Close the Chnrches, Not the Fair.

PORTVILLE, N. Y., July 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I see a great talk in most of the papers about closing the Fair at Chicago next year on Sunday. It appears as though the sky-pilots and a few so-called Christian cranks want to run the business of this country regardless of what the majority of the people may say. Now, we all know that Sunday is not their God's day but a day established by a heathen king. And now what day can the laboring class of people spare better than Sunday to go and see the greatest of fairs? Close the churches on Sunday, and all other days of the Fair, so that strangers will not be taken in and robbed—for if they do not rob them outright they will beg them to death. And let all drinking-places, gambling-dens, and houses of ill fame be closed and guarded so that there will not be any use for roughs of any kind. Let all the people demand this in the cause of justice and equal rights. For the people's labors hav made this country what it is, and I say, let them enjoy it as they see fit as long as they injure no one. And surely gambling-dens, houses of ill fame, drinking-houses, and churches are a nuisance.

Bound by no creed,
To no church faction tied,
My love to all mankind
Is like the ocean wide.

JOHN R. COATS.

A Glorions Futnre.

IPAVA, ILL., June 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5.22 for books and the old TRUTH SEEKER for another year, thanking you for past favors, wishing you health and wealth to push with renewed vigor the paper that has driven and is driving from the mind the cruel and ancient barbarian belief in a monstrous, cruel, vulgar, and selfish God. I hope you will liv to witness the dawning of universal reason when there are no men and women who will believe such devilish teachings nor support one who will persist in inculcating such doctrins. I trust the new light may be so broad, so wide, that selfishness will go out with superstition; that men and women standing upon equal footing, inspired with a desire to do right, may go hand in hand living the lives they would hav others liv, doing as they would hav others do, stimulated by the hope of elevating all mankind. As long as men and women believe in the pardoning powers of the pope, as long as they believe and teach their children to believe that sin can be forgiven, humanity will suffer. For when men believe in a God that will pardon all crime against man; that some men and angels are predestined from on high to suffer here and hereafter; that believers are foreordained from on high to prosper, to liv in luxury here and hereafter; that to disgrace, to impose on, to lower, the masses is their elevation and God's pleasure, they will use money and slanderous tongues to accomplish any man's or woman's ruin, yea, destruction, who will not believe and support their devilish scheme.

Thanks to the first schoolteacher and our forefathers and -mothers for throwing off the yoke of a kingdom here and hereafter; who gave us a home, a new life, in the broad field of liberty—a new land freed from kingcraft, where in time oppression will cease to be; a land where every woman will be queen and every child a natural philosopher, where every man will be ashamed to oppress man or slander woman. Yours for progress,

C. S. RANDOLPH.

"Indefinit Periods."

ST. JOSEPH, MO., July 4, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I, for one Freethinker, feel grateful to Theresa Thorndale for determining in our minds the length of the days, in trying to prove that the story of the creation agrees with modern geologists. But it is somewhat hard for me to understand how poor old Jonah survived for three indefinit periods in the belly of the big fish. What a tough old fish he must hav been, and how gray old Jonah must hav been when he came home. I wonder if his wife knew him and if the baby climbed on his knee and hugged and kissed him.

And our old friend Noah, what a lengthy boat-ride he must hav had to be out on the ocean sailing for forty indefinit periods. No wonder he got on a drunk so soon after his arrival and acted so naughty. If that whisky was forty indefinit periods old, it was enough to throw the oldest of us. What a change there must hav been in the mother of Christ and the Apostles from the time that he was laid in the tomb, if that time was three indefinit periods. No wonder Thomas did not know him. How hungry Christ must hav been after fasting forty indefinit periods. And, great Scott! how tough old Methusalem must hav been if he lived nine hundred years and each year was divided into three hundred and sixty-five indefinit periods! And the poor children of Israel, how tired they must hav been wandering in the wilderness for fourteen thousand and six hundred indefinit periods. Was it the same old rooster that crowed to remind Peter that he had denied his master that went to roost three-fourths of an indefinit period before that event happened? If so, he was a "stayer!"

Hoping that Theresa Thorndale may yet giv us much more light on Genesis and modern science, and that THE TRUTH SEEKER and our lofty Brother Heston may long liv to assist her in the work, I am,

Humbly yours for investigation,

R. E. HARBAUGH.

A Mayor and an Ex-Priest.

KENT, O., May 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find clippings from the Cleveland, O., News and Herald, which show that our friends, or the friends of truth, liberty, and right, are coming to the front everywhere. Send the mayor of Toledo, O., your thanks and congratulations, and a copy of the best paper in the world, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Yours truly, L. G. REED.

TOLEDO, O., May 17.—Mayor Emmick has declared himself in favor of Sunday baseball, as he says it would keep men and boys out of the saloons. Every preacher in the pulpit has denounced him and the religious people held a big demonstration. The ball lovers held an indignation meeting last night, at which the action of the ministers of the gospel was condemned, and both sides will attend the commissioner's meeting Wednesday night, when the question will be settled.

CLEVELAND, O., April 19, 1892.

BISHOP HORSTMANN, Reverend Sir: On my way here, where I will lecture next Sunday and Monday on Romanism, in Case Hall, I chanced to buy one of the city papers, the Leader, and in it I see a report of a speech of yours, made last night at the Hollenden. Amongst your many unproved assertions you are reported to hav said, "To us is due the grand principle of religious liberty." I defy you to point out one single instance where your church, when in power, ever allowed "religious liberty." Probably you were thinking of the fire that burnt John Huss and Jerome of Prague; or perhaps it was the massacre of the hundred thousand Protestant Frenchmen done by your children on the feast of St. Bartholomew, or the burning of Bruno, or the Inquisition that was on your mind. Religious liberty from Rome! Bishop, such talk may do for the graduates of parochial schools, but it will never pass as true before the children of the public schools and the enlightened American people. Bishop, "organize," and step out and you will find your level. I challenge you to meet me on Sunday and discuss before an enlightened audience your own assertions. I remain,

Respectfully yours,

JOSEPH SLATTERY,

Ex-priest of Dublin, Ireland, and now a gospel minister.

The Three-Donkey Godhead.

FORT SCHUYLER, June 20, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav just finished reading your excellent paper and deem it a duty on my part to contribute a mite to the Freethought propaganda by way of purchasing some books, for the knowledge I hav received in the way of regenerating my mental faculties and bringing me out of that decomposing, putrefactiv, and non-chemical preparation, the Christian superstition, or theory of three asses making a donkey. I hav been trying to get you some subscribers but thus far hav been unsuccessful, but by persistent efforts hope to hav some fish on my line in the future, when I go out on my next humanitarian trip. So go on with your good work, TRUTH SEEKER and Company, for it seems as though the press as well as the people are contaminated with the religio-superstitious bacillus.

Concerning the failure in organizing Freethinkers into a compact body, allow me to say that I think it is due more to their lack of the almighty dollar than to their lack of devotion to our cause. Can it be once thought that those large audiences who regularly went to hear the late Freethought lectures in New York were people who had considerable money and who were so selfish as not to giv their little mite? Not a bit of it, for it is conclusivly proved from their regular attendance and from the zeal they exhibited in contributing to the initial meetings; and the reason why they did not keep their zeal up by backing it with their money is because they had not the money to back it with, consequently, the poorer ones in the subsequent meetings refrained from contributing, thinking that the richer ones were numerous enough to support it without their giving their mite which helped to support themselvs. We hav no Vanderbilts, Goulds, Astors, and their like, for the simple reason that Freethinkers believe that the laborer is worthy of his hire, no matter in what sphere it may be, and consequently share their fortunes, small or large, with him. Wishing you all, including Heston, the star truth illustrator, prosperity and a broad and open roadway in the future, I will conclude by ordering the appended list of books to help me along in my missionary work.

P. H. ROSENTHAL.

"Days" and "Periods."

HAMILTON, N. Y., July 12, 1892.

MR. JOHN D. DICKINSON, Commissioner of World's Fair at Chicago in 1893, My Dear Sir: There is a theological college in this place under the control of the Baptists, called the Colgate University. It is the largest Baptist college in the United States. In this institution is taught the science of geology, according to scientific discoveries and scientific facts. Such teachings conflict with the teachings given in the book of Genesis, especially as to the age of the world. To reconcile this discrepancy, the teachers of this college say, "One thousand years with the Lord is as one day, and one day is as a thousand years." And in so doing they admit that the seventh space of time since the creation of the world, which is claimed as "holy time," comes in 52,142 years, and not once in seven days, as claimed by the orthodox element of our present time.

Yes, all intelligent, all educated people hav abandoned the teachings of our ancestors, that this world is but six thousand years old, for no one can correctly imagin its age and time. According to the teaching of this Baptist College in this place, in their geological department, the holy time called the Sabbath comes only once, as I hav said, and not once in seven literal days of twenty-four hours each.

In making your decision as to the closing of the World's Fair on Sunday, hav in view: Is this world but six thousand years of age? And if you think it is of so recent origin, you will hav more excuse for closing the gates of the Fair on Sunday, and thus disappointing a very large majority who hope to be present on this interesting occasion.

It is the churches, and they only, who press you so hard to close the gates on Sundays. The masses of the people are not so activ, believing there is not the least danger the Fair will be dead one day out of seven during the whole of its duration.

So in making up your mind as to your duty in this perplexing question, hav in view the facts I hav called to your attention.

Pardon me for trespassing on your patience.

CARLTON RICE.

Liberals Wanted.

EUREKA SPRINGS, ARK., July 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Something over three years ago I wrote from this place describing it as a place of rest and recreation, and narrating my success in circulating remonstrance petitions against the Sunday Rest bill. Great changes hav taken place here since then. The town has assumed metropolitan airs; has built a streetcar line, graded and improved the streets more extensivly, and built "assembly grounds." The assembly grounds consist of a large inclosure, containing an auditorium with a seating capacity of three thousand or more, a swimming pool, and a primitiv "zoo." A sanitarium, with drives, lakes, and gardens, is building. This is undoubtedly the place of all others for rest, recreation, and "outing." The Southwest conference for Bible study is in session now, from the 25th of June to the 3d of July inclusiv. There will be a grand Fourth of July celebration, immediately after which the Interstate Normal School begins its second session. Sam Jones delivers the opening address. As might be expected from what I hav said, this town is badly church-ridden. There is not the number of Liberals nor the spirit of freedom here that there used to be. The Spiritualists still struggle for a share of recognition, and with money and a noted speaker or two to lecture for them for a while, would undoubtedly make great inroads into the churches.

Here is the place for Liberals of all schools of thought to center and make their influence felt. This is a natural educational center, and it is a pity that orthodox humbuggery should be given undisputed control. A little money and energy would put Liberalism on a solid footing here, and the thousands who come here for health, pleasure, and recreation would hav an opportunity of hearing both sides, and I hav no doubt but that a sentiment for religious freedom could soon be aroused here that would make Sunday the gala day of the week and materially lessen the present influence of the churches.

The dangerous illness of my sister brought me here with her, and I am obliged to cancel my engagements to lecture between here and Oregon, and trust my many friends will accept my excuse for and regrets at having to do so. In all probability I will not be able to fill any engagements before September. I hav paid very little attention to the discourses of the divines who are assembled here from all over the country from New York to Texas, but what little I hav heard is simply rehash of the same slush which has passed current with them as argument since the time of Calvin. The necessity of a "Bible conference," where the orthodox clergy meet to encourage each other and "cheer each other up," is a sure sign of the decline in popular faith in the divinity of the Bible.

HENRY ADDIS.

In the Thick of the Fight.

SALIDA, COL., June 21, 1892.

MR. EDITOR, Dear Sir: Six years ago I was engaged in teaching school in Missouri. When it became known that I was a radical Freethinker the "unco guid" literally "froze me out." Myself and wife were twice turned out by Christians from our boarding-place in the dead of winter. For this we could not blame them, as they firmly believed in the inspiration of that book which admonishes all believers that "if any man come unto you and bring not this doctrin, receive him not into your house, neither bid him godspeed." From that hour I resolved to hav a home of my own, even if it was little better than a dry-goods box. Acting upon this resolution, we came here and settled on a piece of government land no one else would hav. By earnest and untiring labor we (for wife has done her share) hav literally "made the desert bloom." We hav now a home (humble, 'tis true) from which no bigot can drive us because we cannot see the mirage of his dreams. As soon as I get my debts paid, which I hope to do this summer, I intend to devote a portion of my time to the spreading of the gospel of humanity. Let no one deceive himself with the view that the destructiv power of Freethought is no longer needed. Christianity is not dead! Neither does it sleep! Long and bitter will be the conflict before science gains the final victory. It is almost impossible to reach those who most need the light. We need more pioneers, more miners and sappers to work with "pick and crow" at the foundations of the Christian citadel. If the facts that bear against the church, the "terrible facts of history," were universally known, Christianity would die for want of nourishment. All honor to the "apostles of liberty" who are already in the field! I hope in the near future to join your ranks and strike a blow for man.

"The fight for freedom once begun,
Bequeathed from bleeding sire to son,
Though baffled oft, is ever won."

Well, we (H. Murray, Otis White, E. R. Naylor, myself, and others) hav been stirring up the orthodox camp, and as a natural and necessary result "it smells to heaven." First we had a debate with a lawyer, the only champion of Christianity we could find who was willing to "stand up for Jesus"—and he was not a member of the church. Then I published a challenge to any person in the county to discuss the divinity of the Bible. Instead of coming to the scratch like men, one of these Rev. (revenue) gents made a scurrilous attack upon the Freethinkers of this vicinity from the "cowards' castle." This moved me to "go out and do battle with the Philistines," therefore I delivered my lecture, "Hard Knocks at Christianity," at the Opera House, Salida. To the surprise of myself and friends, the Methodist Episcopal "sky-pilot" who has been "called" to labor in this portion of the vineyard made his appearance, and endeavored to defend the marvelous performance of his master by quoting the spurious passage in Josephus. He also took me to task for asserting that John Wesley believed in witchcraft. So you can see how far advanced orthodoxy is in this community.

We hav since been struck by a puritanical wave of Sunday closing and Temperance Reform. The editors of this city wear the Christian gag and collar and refuse to publish anything that "hurts the Christian religion," or I would throw hot shot into the orthodox camp until it became too warm to hold them. I am not able at present to bear the expense, or I would hav a lot of hand-bills struck and distribute them "within the walls."

When I reflect on the condition of man in the ages when superstition reigned supreme—when I consider that this giant evil still afflicts the human race—when I consider the greed, the power, the resolution of the church—when I realize how much I owe to "those immortal dead who liv again in minds made better by their presence," I cry aloud, O martyred man! this day, this hour, I consecrate my life to thee! Yours for humanity,

R. WHEELER.

A Case of Answered Prayer.

CONCORDIA, KAN., June 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Having read THE TRUTH SEEKER for several months, and being painfully shocked by the lack of reverence for the creator of heaven and earth, in yourself and your contributors, I hav resolved to write, hoping that I may be instrumental in bringing you to a realizing sense of your situation before it is everlastingly too late, and that you may yet be saved through the blood of a crucified savior. Once I was, like you, a doubter, but thanks be to him who doeth all things well, I now believe.

It is easy to infer from your writings that you do not believe in the efficacy of prayer. That is truly awful! Now, I know of instances in which a watchful and loving God has answered, to the letter, the prayers of a few of his faithful servants who asked in faith believing. I will, with your kind permission, recount, for the benefit of your readers, the circumstances under which such prayers were answered, upon one occasion, and may the lesson sink deeply into their imperiled souls.

It was during the summer of 1881, in the beautiful state of Kansas, a state well known to our politically lacerated country as the hotbed of coyotes, Congressmen, grasshoppers, and other feathered songsters of brilliant plumage, that the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob began in a mysterious way to fuse the stony heart of the unregenerate sinner whose trembling hand traces these humble lines, and the liquefaction has but recently been consummated to the satisfaction of all concerned. But bless God, it is done at last, and I am saved.

At the time alluded to, the Prohibition clause, which still graces our statute-books, was a thing about to be, and the drouth was terrible. Arid winds swept over these dusty plains, reminding us of what sheol was before the late revision, and water from the deepest wells was brought to the surface (when the wells didn't happen to be dry) boiling and hissing, while icemen died of broken hearts. Proud stalks of corn which, early in the season, had boasted of their ability to boom the state, drooped and withered beneath the hot breath from the south, and the gaunt grasshoppers after having devoured every green thing, except wire screens, gathered up their little activ feet and slept with their fathers. This was more than we could possibly bear; so our dear pastor—a man like David, after God's own heart—convoked a meeting for the purpose of praying for rain.

We met and we prayed. If God failed to grasp the import of our supplications, it couldn't hav been through lack of energy on our part, for we shouted like a pack of cowboys. It seems wonderful to me now, in taking a retrospectiv view of that intense epoch, that our noise didn't shake up clouds and produce rain, in spite of an all-wise providence. For five successiv nights we met and went through our vocal gymnastics, while the air grew hotter and dryer every hour. Upon the fifth night I revolted; and while "casting in my feeble testimony on the Lord's side," I took occasion to tell my beloved brethren and sisteren that our style of praying was all wrong, and that God was really taking us at our word, in withholding rain; that having put his promis into writing, viz., "Ask and it shall be given you; for every one that asketh receiveth," he could be held for breach of contract in failing to respond, if we would but fulfill our part of it. I contended that it was evidence of the most consummate imbecility for us to beg for something, and to promis all kinds of unreasonable obedience upon the receipt of that thing, only to render the treaty null by saying: "But, O Lord, thou knowest what is best for us, the insignificant work of thy mighty hand; and O Lord, not our will but thine be done." He was under no obligation after that—of course not. I held that there wouldn't be a drop of rain in Kansas for the next five hundred years, unless we agreed to make our prayers from twenty-five to thirty words shorter. My prophecy was false, as is now proved.

The above remarks produced a startling effect. The congregation arose "as one man," and called me a heretic and a Jonahress, and threatened to fire me. 'Twas an impressiv scene, and one that I remember "even unto this day." Visions of the last events in the lives of such men as Servetus and Bruno danced through my fevered brain; but there was some consolation in the thought that if the worst should come, I was in a measure prepared for the ordeal by the experience of the few previous weeks. God must hav changed their cruel purpose, though, for they made no attempt to fire me. They simply pushed me out into the hot night air, and gave me a pressing invitation to remain away in the future. I went my way home, praising God for having "snatched me as a brand from the burning."

Of course you are impatient to learn how and when those petitions were answered, but everything in its own good time. We had to wait a long time for the rain, and you must take your chances about the end of this authentic page in our nation's history. If you hav been reading your daily papers, as is your duty, it is needless for me to tell you that God has been answering those 1881 prayers this very year. Some thankless people, especially those who hav been driven out of their homes by the floods, declare that the thing is being overdone; but they ought to remember how unrestrainedly we yelled for water eleven years ago. The strength of our howls and the amount of rain are in exact proportion. Another set of grumblers say: "Well, the almighty was everlastingly slow about getting around to our business." They forget that to him a thousand years are as one day, and that eleven years must necessarily seem like a mere wink of time. Such croakers are not constituted to enjoy blessings anyway.

Now, Mr. Editor, won't you and your sneering Infidel friends come to the altar and be prayed for? What more do you need to convince you of the grand truths of Christianity? Won't you come and sing with us, "Once I was blind, but now I can see," etc.? I wish you would do so, for I get a commission of twenty-five cents per capita upon all that I bring into the fold.

RETTA S. ANDERSON.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Across the Atlantic.

Going to Sea.—Life on the Ocean Wave.—"All's Well."—Steerage and Second Cabin.—Sunday Services.—Ingersoll and Jesus.

"Now, you don't want to wear your best toggery on shipboard," said an old friend; "a good, common sort of gown will do. Fix up your oldest flannel, sew up the rips and darn the frayed places, put on an old Newmarket, a soft hat, and some thick underclothing, and you're all fitted out for a voyage, so far as clothes go. And don't take a lot of silk dresses and things—you won't need 'em. Let your land clothes be decent and comfortable, that's all. About eating, don't eat all the trash on the table, while on shipboard. There's mush-and-milk for breakfast—be sure and take that first, whatever else you eat afterward. Then, for dinner, don't neglect the soup—call for an extra plate of soup; 'tis better in the end. I know, for I've been there. You'll be as hungry as a shark in a day or two, but do not stuff too much—be moderate. You'll hav to fee the stewardess, anyhow—five shillings is enough—and she'll bring you a nice cup of coffee and a sandwich in the early morning before breakfast—you'll need it. Sea-sick! Well, you may be sick, and you may not be. That depends. Most likely you will be. But you'd better take along a dozen lemons, and wear a sheet of letter-paper across your chest—your meal-chest—well, you know what I mean. They say a piece o' writin' paper 'll ward off sea-sickness. I dunno—maybe 'twill, but, hark ye, a 'sherry cobbler' is good enough for me. A good stout 'Tom and Jerry' once in a while won't come amiss on shipboard. Pooh, now, you needn't look so 'stonished, better folks 'n you n' I know 'Tom and Jerry' by the taste."

"I always take a gin cocktail," said another, "when I go across—best thing. It braces you up so."

Just then, along came an old sailor who had sailed the Spanish main, and he says, says he, "Don't you touch a cobbler nor a cocktail, or anything of the kind, but go right along just the same as if you were not going to sea, and don't worry. If you're hungry eat; if not, let it alone."

With the above, and many more hints and suggestions, in my mind, I went on board the steamship City of Rome, Saturday morning, July 2d. Bethia and I, dear Mrs. Broadbelt, Mr. Broadbelt, and their lovely daughter, Portia, were there to meet us and say good-bye.

We did expect to see other friends, but if they did come, we missed seeing them in the crowd.

Amid the waving of handkerchiefs and the hum of pleasant voices, some tears and shadowed faces, the big ship pulled out in the stream, and was soon started on her long journey across the Atlantic. We had not gone far before the steering chain parted, and we struck a bar which stopped the ship, but only a little while. Soon we were all right, and again we went dashing on, plowing the deep, deep sea. Walking along the deck, I am reminded of Ruskin's admiration for a ship. "Without doubt," he said, "a ship is one of the loveliest things man ever made, and one of the noblest; nor do I know any lines out of divine [?] work so lovely as those of the head of a ship, or even as the sweep of the timbers of a small boat."

July 3, 1892.—

We are well out at sea, and can soon speak from experience of "A life on the ocean wave—a home on the rolling deep." Yesterday afternoon I took a stroll forward of the ship and into the second cabin and the steerage. Both these places hav a full quota of passengers, and many are very sick—sea-sick. Poor things! I do not wonder. It made me sick to see them in such quarters. The steerage is not a good place, even for cattle, much worse for men, women, and children. How human beings stand it I don't know. But they do. The babies are as bright as new silver, and sweet as June roses, even if their faces are daubed and dirty. The men nearly all smoke pipes, as do some of the women. I sat on a trunk in the steerage quarters, and talked with a miner from the West, who was going back to England to stay. He said labor was so cheapened by Hungarians, and rents so high, he could not make a living. "What will you do over there?" I asked. "Oh, I'm a miner. It's all the business I know," he said.

I cannot see much difference between the steerage and the second cabin on this ship. Perhaps it is better on other lines, but here it is, to my mind, horrible. Somehow, I can't get over the sight of it—the smell of it. It is not many feet distant to the first cabin, but the contrast is vast. Here are elegant upholstery, flowers, trailing vines, canary birds, an elegant piano, fine services, everything lovely, and there a dark, dismal hole, bare, dingy, grimy, greasy—miserable.

If I owned the Anchor line of steamships, I'd reform the steerage the first thing.

Night and day there is a constant lookout. Last evening the watchers took their places in the cabooses up in the rigging and began the lookout as the night came on. Four bells were called and there went out upon the air the cheery sound, "All's well," and we felt safe to retire to our bed above the sea. Every hour during the night the sweet words sounded, and I thought of the brave watchman up there scanning the horizon and the heaving billows, wider than the vision could reach, and felt safe to close my eyes in slumber, because these faithful sailors were there.

This day dawned bright and beautiful. There is no land in sight and not a sail to be seen. It is Sunday, and there was religious service in the commodious dining-room this morning. Dear Mrs. Broadbelt when we parted yesterday morning left a basket of assorted fruit and a package of newspapers for distribution. Thinking Sunday morning a good time for missionary work, I went on deck and handed a Telegram—that was the name of the paper—to whoever wished to take one.

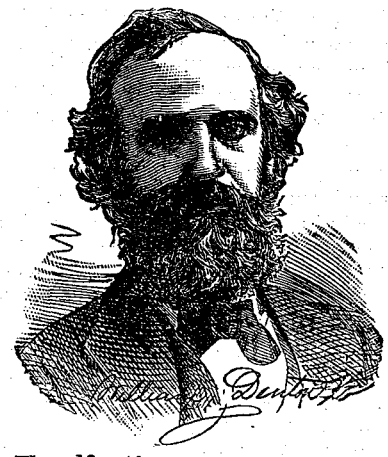
It so chanced that the paper (Jan. 9, 1892) contained Colonel Ingersoll's reply to his clerical critics about the Christmas Sermon, you remember. After the distribution I was invited to attend the service below. Did I refuse? Certainly not.

Well, the services commenced with the hymn, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." Then there was a prayer about going down to the sea in ships. The president of the United States was kindly remembered first by the speaker, and then her majesty, Victoria of Great Britain. The Lord was kindly requested to take special care of all the ship's company. Speaking for myself, I put my trust in the gallant Scotch captain and the watchers up there in the ship's rigging.

The prayer was followed by a short sermon on the "Fundamental Principles of the Gospel," A. B. C.—A. standing for this: "All hav sinned and come short of the glory of God;" B.: "Behold the lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world;" C.: "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will giv you rest."

Application was duly made and another hymn was sung—"Nearer, My God, to Thee"—and the benediction closed the services.

There were hymn-books on all the tables, and Bibles, but I noticed that the "sinners" did not appear greatly affected by the divine service and the statement of their condition, nor were they greatly startled by the notice of the apparition of the lamb of God, and, instead of seeking the proffered rest, each individual sinner rushed for the deck and his steamer chair, where all lolled at ease, read Ingersoll, and watched the white-capped waves below and the blue sky overhead.



I omitted to state that a collection, as usual with religious services, was taken. I doubt if the service would be considered religious if this part should be overlooked. However, as this collection was said to be for the Seaman's Home, it met with general approbation, although, like the services, it did not amount to much.

I listened for an hour to a very animated discussion of the merits of Ingersoll and Jesus, wherein it was stated that as Christianity had caused the death of millions of human beings it was not to be compared with the teachings of Ingersoll, who "puts out the fires of hell with tears of love and pity, and places the seven-hued arch of hope over every grave."

Among the pleasant people I hav met on the ship I would name Miss Josephine Tippett, of Columbus, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Margaret Moody, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox, of Berlin, Conn.; W. Martin Jones, of Rochester, N. Y., one of the kindest-hearted gentlemen on board; Monsieur Gustave Porjes, of New York; Mrs. H. D. Mountheon, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Albree, of Allegheny, Pa., and many others who help to make a sea voyage very delightful.

SUSAN H. WIXON.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.
Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.
Common-Sense Thonghts on the Bible. 10c.
Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.
Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.
Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.
Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.
God Proposed for Onr National Constitution. 10c.
Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.
Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.
Is Spiritualism True? 10c.
Man's Trne Saviors. 10c.
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.
Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.
Radical Discourses on Religions Subjects. $1.25.
Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.
Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.
Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.
What Is Right? 10c.
What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.
Who are Christians? 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED. A Work proving Christianity a Fiction. Most Startling Revelations of the Nineteenth Century. Send Address for Prospectus to ORIENTAL PUBLISHING CO., P.O.Box 446, Philadelphia, Pa.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Price, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1892. Price, 25 cents.

Possibilities and Impossibilities, T. H. HUXLEY, M.A., LL.D.
The Growth of Agnosticism, R. BITHELL, B.S., Ph.D.
Early Verses, The Late CONSTANCE NADEN.
Sundays and Holydays, SAMUEL LAING.
Ecclesiasticism, ALFRED MOMERIE, M.A., LL.D.
Christ a Religious Creation, F. J. GOULD.
After Many Years: A Poem, W. B. MCTAGGART.
The Activities of Agnosticism, AMOS WATERS.
Religion Without Superstition, CHARLES WATTS.
Mr. Gladstone and Supernaturalism, H. J. HARDWICKE, F.R.C.S.
The Land of Death: A Poem, SALADIN (W. STEWART ROSS).
The Triumph of Rationalism, FREDERICK MILLER.
An Agnostic Homily, HON. C. K. TUCKERMAN.
Eternal Life: A Poem, GEORGE HENRY MARTIN.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Colonel Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. Cloth, octavo, 833 pages, $3.

Deity Analyzed. Cloth, 12mo, $1.00.

The Real. Blasphemers. Paper, 12mo, 138 pages, 50c.

Spiritualism Sustained. Cloth, 12mo, 245 pages, $1.

Universe Analyzed. $1.

Books by Saladin.

God and His Book. $1.25.

Woman: Her Glory, Her Shame, and Her God. Two vols. $1.25 each.

Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? 25 cents.

Confessional, Romish and Anglican. 30 cents.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired. Miraculous Religion?

By E. E. GUILD. Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents

News of the Week.

THREE more cases of typhus hav been found in New York city among the Jews from Russia.

THE pope says in an encyclical that Columbus was inspired to his discovery by the Catholic faith.

ANARCHISTS are busy posting revolutionary placards in St. Etienne, France, and the police are equally busy destroying them.

FATHER MAFFEI, of Songavazzo, Italy, has been fined one thousand lire for counseling his parishioners to take no part in the elections.

RUSSIA will replace the teachers of the Jewish synagog schools with teachers under the supervision of the Greek Orthodox or state church, who will teach the Jewish religion with their own coloring impressed upon it.

T. DEWITT TALMAGE, who accompanied the relief ship Leo to Russia, has had interviews with the czar and the czarina, with whom he conferred on religion and politics, and has received many banquets from the city authorities.

EUROPEAN countries are adopting stringent frontier supervision to repel cholera. Professor Drasche, the Austrian cholera expert, thinks that that disease will not penetrate other nations, as in them, he says, bad sanitation like that in Russia has disappeared.

GENERAL SNOWDEN, in command of the riotous districts about Homestead, Pa., says that he learned that a self-constituted press censorship committee of workmen had been harassing correspondents, and took summary measures to put it down.

JOHNSON SIDES, an Indian interpreter, pleaded before the board of pardons at Carson City, Nev., the case of an Indian who had killed a "witch" doctor. To a question he replied, "For the reason that your people used to kill witches," with such a telling effect that the prisoner was freed.

SITTING BULL, JR., who came from North Dakota to Indian Territory a year ago as prophet of the coming messiah, has left for home. He has found the prophet business profitable, having been presented with one hundred horses, six hundred head of cattle, and a carload of blankets and costly trinkets. He has married two Comanche girls, though he already had four wives in Dakota.

HERBERT SPENCER, the English philosopher, has written to a member of the London Russo-Jewish committee: "It is scarcely needful for me to say that I condemn in the strongest manner all religious persecution, be it of Jews, or any sect of Christians, or adherents to other creeds. An utter reprobation of the course pursued by Russia in this matter is a necessary corollary from the views I am known to hold."

CHOLERA is ravaging Russia. The authorities are incompetent to fight it. Ignorance and red-tapeism hamper effort. Drainage does not exist. Superstitious peasants resist sanitation. At Saratoff a report that doctors were burying patients alive caused the murder of two hospital assistants, and a riot in which the town was taken possession of till a rescue by troops. Around Nijnii Novgorod an intestinal disease has killed six hundred children. Religious processions and other ceremonies are largely resorted to to stay the calamities.

ON the 23d Alex. Berkmann, a Polish Jew of Anarchistic principles who livs in New York city, obtained admission on pretended business to the office of Manager Frick of the Carnegie iron-works. He shot Frick twice in the neck and stabbed him twice in the back. Men were about to shoot Berkmann when Frick requested them to desist. Later, Berkmann tried to kill himself by biting a fulminate of mercury cap, such as was used by Anarchist Lingg in the Chicago prison. He was checked before he could bite it. Frick will probably recover.

PROTESTANTS of Ulster province, Ireland, are sketching plans of campaign for the civil war which will follow the granting of Home Rule with its consequent Catholic despotism. One pamphlet declares that while Ulster is numerically inferior to the rest of Ireland, in physical resources and wealth it is superior. For borrowing money, too, its credit would be much better than that of the south of Ireland. The strategic value of the railways is considered with great particularity of detail, and the conclusion reached is that Ulster has little to fear from an attack from the south.

Works of Charles Watts.

The Teachings of Secularism Compared with Orthodox Christianity. 96 pages. Price, 25 cents.

Secularism: Is It Founded on Reason, and Is It Sufficient to Meet the Needs of Mankind? Debate between the Editor of the Halifax Evening Mail and Charles Watts. With Prefatory Letters by George Jacob Holyoake and Colonel Ingersoll, and an Introduction by Helen H. Gardener. 60 pages, 25 cents.

A Reply to Father Lambert's "Tactics of Infidels." 20 cents. Post free.

Christianity: Its Origin, Nature, and Influence. 32 pages. Price, 15 cents.

The Horrors of the French Revolution: Their Causes. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Secularism: Destructiv and Constructiv. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Bible Morality. Its Teachings Shown to Be Contradictory and Defective as an Ethical Guide. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Agnosticism and Christian Theism: Which Is the More Reasonable? 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Evolution and Special Creation. 10 cents.

Saints and Sinners—Which? 24 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

The Superstition of the Christian Sunday: A Plea for Liberty and Justice. 26 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The Glory of Unbelief. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Nature and the Supernatural; or, Belief and Knowledge. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The American Secular Union; Its Necessity and the Justice of Its Nine Demands. (Dedicated to Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll.) 32 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Theological Presumption: An Open Letter to the Rev. Dr. R. F. Burns, of Halifax, N. S. In this letter the following subjects are dealt with: 1. Why Do the Clergy Avoid Debate? 2. The Position of Agnosticism Toward Christianity. 3. Freethought and Men of Science. 4. The Difference Between Facts and Opinions. 5. Christ and Heroism. 6. Christianity and Slavery. 16 pages. Price, 5 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette pl., New York.

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting-Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Books by Helen H. Gardener.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by
ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL.

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offer in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialisti Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will th Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Idea of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Brain and the Bible,

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By B. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.
Loeb & Loeb, Montgomery.
Arizona.
J. S. Mansfield, Tucson.
California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 117 W. 1st, Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 102 N. Main, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Thos. W. Baker, Selma.
L. R. Titus, 237 South 4th st., San Jose.
Canada.
P. C. Allen, 35 King st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
John McKenna, 80 Yonge st., Toronto.
R. J. Moffat, Sea Island, Tulu Island, B.C.
Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.
C. Smith & Son, 385 Larimer st., Denver.
Stanchfield & Co., 200 Union ave., Pueblo.
Harbottle & Co., Salida.
Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.
A. J. Gardner, Kissimmee.
Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.
Illinois.
Post-Office News Co., 93 Adams, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., 204 Wabash ave., Chicago.
Chas. W. Curry, 183 Madison st., Chicago.
Chas. Macdonald, 55 Washington, Chicago.
Indiana.
H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.
A. C. Katt, Fort Wayne.
Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 71 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne, New Orleans.
Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Baker & Holton, 87 Woodward av., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Minnesota.
E. P. Parcher, 8 3rd st., So. Minneapolis.
Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.
Nebraska.
J. M. Wiley, P. O. News Depot, York.
New York.
Brentano Bros., 5th ave. & 18th st., N. Y.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
Abramowitz Bros., 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., N.Y.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.
E. J. Nieuwland, 10th ave. and 157th st.
Anderson & Co., 704 8th ave.
S. M. Bernhard, 119 E. 104th st.
Harlem Book Co., Boulevard Hotel, 124th st. and Lexington ave.
Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 342 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
B. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Day & Co., 259 Superior, Clevel'd.
Alf. Warren Co, 217 Central ave, Cincinnati.
Thos. Goddard, Box 235, Huron.
Standard News Co., 14 W. Tusc st, Canton.
Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 291 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.
G. Thornton, Palace Hotel Block, Heppner
Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden, Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
R. Staley, Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.
Fulton Bros., McKeesport.
Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.
Tennessee.
W. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry, Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.
Rich Bros. & Mills, 229 N. Cherry, Nashville
Texas.
H. Hover, Denison.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 346½ Main st., Dallas.
G. W. Baldwin, Houston.
E. L. Merrill, Independent Pulpit, Waco.
Utah.
C. H. Parsons, 164 S. Main, Salt Lake City.
Margetts Bros., 76 Main st., Salt Lake City.
Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
J. C. Nathan, 104 S. 2nd st., Seattle.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.
West Virginia.
News Store, 123 3rd st., Parkersburg.
England. [London.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st.,
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.
Australia.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.
New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

THE pre-digested FOOD TONIC FOR Invalids, Convalescents and Nursing Mothers

Ask your druggist for it. Prepared BY THE Ale and Beef Co.,

SUPPLIES COMPLETE NUTRITION. Palatable to the most DELICATE TASTE. The only pre-digested FOOD TONIC on the market that is Endorsed by Physicians everywhere.

ALE & BEEF CO., 267 W. 17th St., New York.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It
and
Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

BY PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

The Evolution of the Devil. By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York city. The most learned, accurate, scientific, and philosophical analysis of his satanic majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title-page. Price, 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Ingersoll's Address before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian association ever invited a noted Infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from beginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G. J. Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Ingersoll's Great Address on Thomas Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York city. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

Standing Up for Jesus; or what the editor of the Freethinkers' Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Gems of Thought.

THE paramount question at issue to-day is the maintenance of personal liberty.—Edw. Atkinson.

How ingenious and true is Feuerbach's remark, that the cultured man is a very much more refined being than the God of the savage, that God whose intellectual and physical nature must naturally be exactly proportionate to the stage of civilization of his worshipers.—Büchner.

WE shall expect, that this morning of the race, in which it has been supplied with the simplest necessaries, with corn, and wine, and honey, and oil, and fire, and articulate speech, and agricultural and other arts, reared up by degrees from the condition of ants to men, will be succeeded by a day of equally progressiv splendor.—Thoreau.

IT has often been argued that credulity is safer than skepticism—that "it is safest to believe;" inasmuch as if a man believe in heaven and hell, and there be no such places, he is, if no gainer, at least no loser; whereas the Infidel may lose, and cannot gain. Upon the same principle, it were safest to believe all the religions of the world at once—Christian, Mohammedan, Jewish, Hindoo, Confucian, and all the rest.—R. D. Owen.

IT is illogical to take the ground that the world was cruel and ignorant and idolatrous when the Catholic church was established, and that because the world is better now than then, the church is of divine origin. What was the world when science came? What was it in the days of Galileo, Copernicus, and Kepler? What was it when printing was invented? What was it when the Western World was found? Would it not be much easier to prove that science is of divine origin?—Ingersoll to Cardinal Manning.

How unfortunate am I to hav been born! said Ardassan Ougli, a young icoglan of the grand sultan of the Turks. Yet, if I depended only on the sultan—but I am also subject to the chief of my oda, to the cassigi bachi; and when I receive my pay, I must prostrate myself before a clerk of the teftarder, who keeps back half of it. I was not seven years old, when in spite of myself I was circumcised with great ceremony and was ill for a fortnight after it. The dervise who prays to us is also my master; an iman is still more my master, and the mullah still more so than the iman. The cadi is another master, the kadeslesker a greater; the mufti a greater than all these together. The kiaia of the grand vizier with one word could cause me to be thrown into the canal; and finally, the grand vizier could hav me beheaded, and the skin of my head stripped off without any person caring about the matter. Great God, how many masters! If I had as many souls and bodies as I hav duties to fulfill, I could not bear it. Oh Allah! why hast thou not made me an owl? I should liv free in my hole, and eat mice at my ease, without masters or servants. This is assuredly the true destiny of man; there were no masters until it was perverted.—Voltaire.

I SHOULD regret to be considered troublesome; but I should like to ask Jehovah one or two more trifling questions, the answers to which might put himself and myself on less strained relationships than at present exist between us. If he do not care to roar at me all the way down from the kingdom of heaven, stunning Rahab and alarming "the Lamb's wife," a still small voice, if it speak sense, will quite satisfy me. He may address me some night after I am in bed. I am sure to know his voice instantly from that of bellicose and amatory cats in the back yard, and I will at once get up on my elbow and say, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth thee." 1. We learn from the Ghost's Book that Adam and Eve "heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day." Does the voice of the Lord God often walk in gardens and elsewhere, and does it wear Wellington boots? 2. Was it from the pigeons at Hurlingham, that are hatched to be shot, that Jehovah caught the idea of "creating" man to be cursed? Did Jehovah derive great pleasure from the cursing of the two poor featherless bipeds, Adam and Eve? Is it the favorit recreation of a God to place two weak, silly creatures in a garden, when, in that garden, he has placed a damnation-trap and baited it with an apple, knowing well that his two poor children would munch at the apple, and thereby spring the damnation-trap, letting its terrible teeth cut through their flesh and rasp upon their bones, and upon the bones of generations yet unborn? When I get to heaven am I to be imbued with tastes which will enable me to delight in this sort of thing? If yes, would I not be a trifle better in hell, and, if possible, even further my God from thee?—Saladin in God and His Book.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW, WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.

By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

Materialism:

Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German.
Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

—LIQUOR DRINKING—

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament.

THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not Included in the New Testament.

Price, - - - - - - - - - $1.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, - - - - - - 75 cents.

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIOT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure In the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, - - - - - - - 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price. - - - - - - 10 cents

THE NEW SPELLINGS.

English spelling is the worst in the world. Millions of dollars are wasted each year in the writing and printing of useless letters. The education of our children is retarded and the progress of our people is hampered by our cumbrous, illogical, misleading orthografy. The scholarship of the world is almost a unit in demanding a change. The American Philological Association has recommended the following RULES FOR NEW SPELLINGS for immediate use, and a resolution has been introduced in Congress, instructing the Public Printer to conform to them in all printing for the government:

1. Drop UE at the end of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc.
2. Drop final E in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc.
3. Drop final TE in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, vedet, gazet, etc.
4. Drop final ME in words like programme. Thus spell program, oriflam, gram, etc.
5. Change PH to F in words like phantom, telegraph, phrase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.
6. Substitute E for the difthongs Æ and Œ when they have the sound of that letter. Thus spell eolian, esthetic, diarrhea, subpena, esofagus, atheneum, etc.

☞ If you would array yourself on the side of progress, adopt the foregoing in all that you write, and especially in all that you PRINT.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth. - - - - - 50 cents.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA. Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,

Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,

Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore

Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,
Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - 50 cents.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. - - 40 cents.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

The Rights of Women

—AND—

THE SEXUAL RELATIONS.

By KARL HEINZEN, the famous German Radical Editor.

An Address to an Unknown Lady Reader. Historical Review of the Legal Position of Women. The Emancipation of Woman. The Passive Prostitution of Women. The Active Prostitution of Men. The Execution of Men. Love and Jealousy. Morality. Marriage. Adultery. Divorce. Is Marriage a Contract? Hanging a Woman. Religion. The Economic Independence of Woman Liberty and the Revolution the Allies of Woman

Paper, 50c. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BEST:

THE

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 3-ounce coin silver, $22; 4-ounce, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $31 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $15; 11 jewels, $16.50; 15 jewels, $23; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3.60, knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for $6. Solid silver spoons, $1.50 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Extra heavy teas, $3. Etched:
"The Time to be Happy is Now,"
50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $5, $6. $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.

Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.

Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MORE WIND FROM THE EVANGELICAL BLOWHARD.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

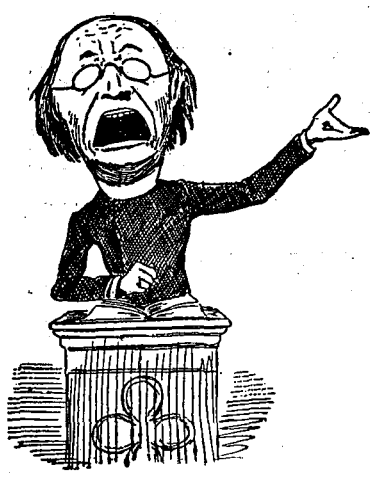
THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY AND RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—



FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

SABBATH-BREAKING.

Origin of the Sabbatic Idea—The Jewish Sabbath—The Christian Scriptures and the Sabbath—Examination of Sunday Arguments—Origin of the Christian Sabbath—Testimony of the Christian Fathers—The Sabbath during the Middle Ages—The Puritan Sabbath—Testimony of Christian Reformers, Scholars, and Divines—Abrogation of Sunday Laws.

—BY—

JOHN E. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 Cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

OPEN SUNDAYS.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

—144—

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

RIPANS TABULES

To Regulate the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABULES.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

Valuable Books on Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞ Catalogues Free. ☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 32. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, August 6, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

DON'T ENCOURAGE THE HEN THAT HATCHES THE BROOD.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF

THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

A SHORT

HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Corgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Order of Creation.

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE

HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 32. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, August 6, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - AUGUST 6, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Who Is Doing the Lying?

A perspicacious friend calls our attention to this editorial in the weekly Post of this city. It is headed "Church Growth vs. Church Decline:"

"Two significant articles appear side by side in the June Forum—'Impending Paganism in New England,' by President Hyde of Bowdoin College, and 'What the Census of the Churches Shows,' by H. K. Carroll, special agent of the census. The two articles throw into strong contrast what may be called the outside and the inside of the existing status of the modern church in America. Read the statistics of the census, and one is impressed by the great growth of the various denominations in numbers and in wealth. Turn to the statements of President Hyde, and one is depressed by the demoralized condition of the rural New England church, by the lapse of New England's rural population into a state bordering on paganism.

"The census figures given by Mr. Carroll are unfortunately incomplete. The returns from two such important bodies as the Protestant Episcopal and the Baptist denominations hav not yet been published, and there are also wanting the returns of some other smaller denominations. Another interesting question cannot be settled by this census—the growth of the Roman Catholic church in the last decade. The church authorities hav always included all baptized persons (even infants) in its enumeration. The census enumeration of Roman Catholics has been confined to communicants. As this is the first census ever taken of religious bodies, there exists no basis for an accurate estimate of growth. All that can be affirmed with safety is that the Roman Catholic church has grown very largely. The effect of immigration in swelling certain denominations is very marked. The various bodies hav added 487,274 to their membership, an increase of 68 per cent, due largely to German and Scandinavian immigration. The Jews hav surpassed even this record, having made a net increase of 80,496, or 160 per cent. The percentage of increase in the total population is 24.86, which shows how far these bodies are keeping in advance of population. But this is true also of a smaller body, like the Congregational, which is but little affected by immigration, and from the character of its membership is greatly affected by modern thought. The Congregational church made a gain of 128,439 members, or 33 per cent. Taking all the denominations so far reported, and there has been a gain of 28.21 per cent in membership, a gain which is 3.35 per cent higher than the growth of population. Or, to take another side, the value of church property owned by the Roman Catholics is $118,381,561. As to other churches, Mr. Carroll makes this general statement: 'The returns for about a hundred denominations, with some of the largest not included, make the enormous aggregate of $463,000,000, representing about 88,000 organizations or congregations.' In the face of such a growth and such a property interest as this who will dare talk of church decline?

"But President Hyde's facts concerning 'Impending Paganism in New England' are just as forcible as those arrayed in the census. Take this statement, a summary of statistics recently gathered by the Maine Bible Society: 'The combined statistics of fifteen counties [in Maine] show that of 134,445 families 67,842 are not attendants upon any church.' But the mere fact that there are so many 'stay-at-homes' is not the most serious fact of the situation, in President Hyde's opinion. There is no vitality in the rural church system. It is frittered away in an unequal struggle to maintain mere denominationalism, so that, as a friend said to President Hyde of home missionary work in Minnesota, 'the only mission of any man out there was to go up and down the state burning half the churches.' This is the similar situation in rural New England, as President Hyde has found it: 'Financially the churches are on the verge of bankruptcy. What money is raised comes not directly in subscriptions and pew-rentals, but through the sewing circle, from fairs and entertainments. The church is supported practically by a club of women, not by families and men.' The truth of this is patent to everyone who has ever closely observed church life in so-called 'decayed' parts of rural New England. But excessiv denominationalism is from one point of view an effect rather than a cause. 'The real line of division between Christians to-day,' says President Hyde, 'is not between denominations.' If the broad men could 'get together,' as the politicians say, this evil of excessiv denominationalism would, he thinks, soon settle itself.

"The contrast, as has been said, between the superficial figures of church growth, as given in the census, and the facts of church decline, as brought out by so accurate an observer as President Hyde, points anew the old moral that mere figures tell only a partial story. Valuable as the census statistics are, the future historian will turn from them to such articles as this on the paganism of rural New England when he attempts to giv a truthful picture of the religious condition of society to-day. The contrast also suggests that the 'unchurched masses' of our cities do not present to the modern church a problem half so difficult of successful solution as do the 'pagan' communities of rural life. In the cities there are thought and activity and responsivness to new ideas and fresh inspirations. The country has been largely drained of brains and heart to enrich the cities. There is comparativly little left to appeal to. In that simple fact lies the supreme discouragement."

If one reads only the first statement, by Mr. Carroll, one would think that Christianity is making marvelous strides and converting the entire country. But when we reflect that Mr. Carroll is one of the editors of a religious paper, that he obtained his figures from ministers, that the greatest of denominations reports as members infants and all who are baptized, and that other churches carry dead men upon their rolls, it becomes evident that things are not quite as rosy for Christianity as they appear on the surface.

It is difficult, too, to reconcile the census figures with the church reports of years past, which hav been long lachrymal dirges over the discouragements met with, such as sparse attendance at meetings, the inroads of the Sunday papers in all the cities and towns reached by railroads, the scarcity of young men of ability as candidates for the ministry, and the notable absence of men at any services. Unless the reports hav been foundationless wails the revelations of the census are remarkably remarkable.

On the other hand the statements of President Hyde apparently are true. They agree with the report made by the committee of the Congregational Association of Massachusetts, made recently, in which it was stated that about two-fifths of the population of that once pious state are non-churchgoers because they disbelieve the creeds, dislike the church, and desire to make Sunday a holiday instead of a holy day. And this statement even was considered too favorable for the churches, the Springfield Republican holding that at least one half of the people of Massachusetts were backsliders from the ancient faith. And anyone who knows New England knows that the churches are, individually, hard up, that the attendance is of women and young girls, and a few incidental young men who attend to look after the safety of the young girls, and that a grabbag festival is more to the liking of the members than a sermon. In short, that the churches are more valued for their social than for their religious worth. And precisely the same reasons hold in building new church edifices. We know of many instances where money has been given to churches by men of avowed unbelief from purely social causes. It is a bad practice, we admit, and almost indefensible, but it is a practice, particularly in new settlements. These buildings are then counted "for the Lord," and much glory obtained thereby.

In making up their returns for the census, the ministers naturally do their best to boost up the popular religion by counting all possible members, even children, who know absolutely nothing of the truth or falsity of Christianity. In our neighboring city of Brooklyn, for instance, in the "May walk" there were hundreds, almost thousands, of tots from six to ten years of age marching with banners proclaiming that "We love Jesus." The ridiculousness of such a proclamation is as great as that of another banner given them, "We do not drink!" Yet these innocent little things are all counted for the churches as Christians, and it is not at all a matter of surprise, to those who understand theological mathematics and ministerial capabilities, that the growth of church membership exceeds in percentage that of the population. The wonder is rather that for the census they do not claim the total population, as they do when reckoning the number of "Christian countries."

But the roguery of the ministerial figures and the misleading character of the official census figures are brought more plainly to view when one gets at the pith and marrow of the matter by asking, What constitutes a Christian? President Hyde but hints at this in his division of church-members into "broad and narrow" parties. By "narrow" we surmise he means orthodox, and by "broad," the uncounted heretics in the churches. The growth of the churches and the growth of Christianity are by no means synonymous. As well might the organization of a social club be counted for Christ as the formation of hundreds of church societies. A new church building does not mean that Christianity is spreading, but rather that a certain number of people desire a place of gathering, and do not want to pay taxes. Real Christianity gains nothing by such advance.

If the census report were ten times more favorable for the church than it is, it would not signify that Christianity is growing. For the facts are that a large proportion of the people in the churches are not Christians. They do not believe the creeds, they do not believe the Bible to be true—they reject the creation scheme, deny the story of the world's peopling, refuse to accept supernaturalism, discard miracles, and doubt the wisdom and efficacy of the atonement. In their cosmogony they can find no place for hell. The Jehovah of the Old Testament is no longer their God, and the personal "Father" of Jesus has become, as Colonel Ingersoll says, an Unknowable, a Force, an Energy—anything but the anthropomorphic deity believed in by the makers of the religion. Such people cannot by any fair method, with any regard for the value of language, with any love of truth, or any desire to express a fact, be held to be Christians. They hav not faith enough to hang a witch or whip a Quaker. They even desire to hav the World's Fair open Sundays, which to the "narrow" party of President Hyde is moral obloquy deserving the severest punishment. Even the clergy of the cities—that is, the educated preachers—are heretics to a greater or less degree. A Tribune reporter brought the real situation dimly into view by asking "a dear old country parson" visiting the city, who had not changed the least of his views for forty years, what he thought of the New York clergy, and obtaining this reply: "Well, I find a few believers among them; but, dear me, how friendly they are with the heretics. They visit and joke with them just as though they were sound in the faith. I don't understand it." And the Sun thinks the dear old fossil would hav been sadder still had he heard the remark recently made by another parson here. "I am an Episcopalian clergyman," he said, speaking slowly, "an Episcopalian, with leanings toward Christianity." Leanings toward Christianity, the result of early training in superstition, is about all that most of the church-members who figure in Mr. Carroll's ministerial census can claim!

On the whole, we believe the census returns to be deceptiv—a willful misinterpretation of the church's increase in order to make a favorable impression upon the public mind. The figures will not bear comparison with the actual facts. And a still more interesting canvass would be that which should report the number of real Christians among the professing church-members. We imagin the result, if honest answers were made to such a question, would startle the country.

Missionary Efforts in Uganda.

The missionary efforts of the Protestants and Catholics in Uganda, Africa, will result in making many angels, if in no other service to the Lord. The latest dispatches state that they are "sending each other with converts to heaven by powder and ball," and that the French bishop has urged the Catholics to continue the war with the Protestants.

Uganda is a heathen land, with natural resources, and its control is desired by the French Catholics, and by the English Protestants, who work largely through the British East Africa Company. King Mwanga is a villainous wretch who first killed the missionaries and then got converted, joining the Protestants. He was deposed, regained his throne, and was afterward captured by the French, but is said to hav escaped and rejoined his Protestant brethren.

A letter written from the German station of Bukoba, on Nyanza Victoria, by the vicar apostolic, Mgr. Hirth, who was driven out of Uganda, contains what are alleged to be the first authentic details about the recent disturbances in that country. Mgr. Hirth declares that the recent bloodshed was the work of the Protestants, supported by the agents of the British East Africa Company, and that recent events in that country form one of the most disgraceful pages in the history of the civilization of the Dark Continent. The writer describes the religious and political state of Uganda during the last three years. He says:

"It was the Protestants who first wished to form a special group, and were thus the cause of a Protestant and a Catholic party being formed, Uganda being divided into equal parts between them. Then from day to day the quarrel became hotter. Religion and politics were mixed up together without the missionaries being able to separate the two questions. The British flag was taken by the Protestants as a signal for gathering together against the Catholics, and the attempt was made to force the flag upon King Mwanga and the whole country. But Mwanga withstood all such attempts. He claimed a guarantee from the officers of the British fort that the flag should afford protection to both parties equally. Instead of this his authority and that of his party was systematically undermined."

A letter from a missionary recently published in a Berlin paper says:

"On the 24th January, the English captain Williams led his troops against the royal residence to seize the king; but Mwanga had fled. Captain Lugard availed himself of the victory to haul down the king's flag. He proclaimed the Mohammedan chief, Mbogo, his successor. These are the facts. All Catholic missionary work is stopped, and fifty thousand Catholics either murdered, sold as slaves, or dispersed in all directions. Who is responsible for all this? The English missionaries, who for years hav preached hatred against the papists, and Captain Lugard, who was sent to protect the Christians against the Arabs, but has now made use of his power to destroy the Catholics and to make an Islamite king."

The history of Uganda so far as known shows that while the heathens are naturally murderous enough, when they get Christianity they become demons indeed; and the horror of the situation is tenfold increased, to the everlasting disgrace of the church, by the efforts of the missionaries to keep up the war, each sect being willing to kill thousands in order to win commercial and governmental control of the territory. It is an object-lesson which cannot be too often impressed upon the adherents of the faith, and which they will do well to diligently study.

A Heathen Humbug Rite.

The London Baptist, naturally interested in such a subject, prints this paragraph:

"As illustrating to what use or abuse the unscriptural practice of infant baptism may be carried, it is curious to learn that in France the state objects to the church being allowed a monopoly in regard to it. Hence the ceremony of civil baptism was performed on Sunday at St. Denis. The ritual had, it seems, been framed by a member of the municipal council, and several children received civil consecration. The baptismal robe consisted of the tricolor flag, which was placed round the infant while certain words were pronounced, and the 'Marseillaise' was sung by those present. Several deputies were invited to this novel 'dedicatory' function."

Of this occurrence a Catholic paper published in Buffalo says:

"The French Freethinkers, the most venomous in the world, having replaced the sacrament of matrimony with civil marriage, are now about to replace the sacrament of baptism with civil baptism. The chief officials of a town named St. Denis hav promoted the scheme with the double design of weaning the people from the church, and of establishing the influence of Freethinking sponsors. Should the parents die the risk of letting the children fall into Catholic hands is lessened by the watchfulness of sponsors devoted to Atheism. The French are a great people, and serve the devil with as much energy as they formerly served God."

It is probable that the municipal council was swayed by the Comtists, as Freethinkers do not believe in such nonsense, whether in the name of an alleged deity or an actual republic. The Comtists, while rejecting Christianity, hav transferred to their mode of worship about all the heathen rites stolen by the Catholic church. This is because Auguste Comte was educated as a Catholic priest and never recovered from the baleful influence. Consecration to humanity may be well enough, but we hav noticed that those most consecrated in theory are the most selfish in action. Like New England deacons, the more pious, the more careful scrutiny will they require. All religions create humbugs and hypocrits, who teach much philanthropy and practice much dishonesty, and simon-pure Comtism differs from Catholicism only as to its basis. The forms are the same.

Connecticut Folly.

The good pious people of Connecticut continue to make themselvs ridiculous, after the manner of their ancestors. They hav now arrested a man for riding a bicycle on Sunday, under this statute:

"SECTION 1,569. Every person who shall do any secular business or labor, except works of mercy or necessity, or keep open any shop, warehouse, or manufacturing or mechanical establishment, or expose any property for sale, or engage in any sport or recreation on Sunday between sunrise and sunset, shall be fined not more than $4 nor less than $1."

The original of this law was passed in 1702, and was distinctly a religious enactment, as it provided that it should "be the duty of the citizens of this state to attend the public worship of God on the Lord's day." No place of business should be opened, no business transacted, no sport, game, play, or recreation indulged in; "nor shall any traveler, drover, wagoner, or teamster travel on said day," except in case of necessity. No person should attend any concert, dancing, or other public diversion on Saturday evening, Sunday, or Sunday evening. No persons should meet in companies anywhere on the Lord's day, except for public worship of God. No proprietor of any vehicle, sleigh, stage, or pleasure wagon, should permit any person to travel in such vehicle on the Lord's day, except from necessity, on penalty of $20 fine. The United States mail was specially permitted to pass through the state. These prohibitions hav been changed from time to time, by striking out certain words, the last change being in 1882, when the words "travel or" were stricken out, finally leaving the law, section 1,569, as quoted.

The application of this bigoted statute is made to Mr. J. B. Osborne, of Fairfield. The complaint charges that "in the town of Fairfield, the day being July 17, 1892—the Sabbath or Lord's day—said Jeremiah B. Osborne, between sunrise and sunset, engaged in vain sport and recreation by then and there riding about said town upon a certain vehicle known as a bicycle, to the great disturbance of the good people of the state, and against the peace and contrary to the form of statute in such cases made and provided."

Mr. Osborne has a pretty good technical defense, as a bicycle is a vehicle, and traveling is not now prohibited. But what defense can Connecticut make when brought to the bar of common sense?

The World's Fair.

The value of the World's Fair appropriation vote, with its Sunday-closing clause, in the United States Senate, is somewhat doubtful at this writing. The appropriation was put into the Sundry Civil Service bill—providing for lighthouses, government printing office, and other important governmental institutions—where it ought not to be, and the House refused to concur, but retained the Sunday-closing clause, which made all government aid conditional upon Sunday closing. Then the House voted to appropriate the money, but a motion was made to reconsider, and as this issue goes to press the result is doubtful. The matter may go over to the December term of Congress.

For the objects of the opposers of Sunday closing, the final defeat of the appropriation is to be hoped, for the reason that the government aid to the Fair aside from the five millions is but a few hundred thousand dollars, and the Fair managers could make more by refusing it and opening the Fair on Sunday. The local officers of the Fair are generally in favor of Sunday opening, and without government prohibition the exposition would probably be open with the exception of the exhibits which the states hav voted to close, and the running of machinery.

By next week the decision will be known. If the five millions are given the Fair, the gates will be shut. If not, there is a chance for nineteenth- instead of seventeenth-century ideas to prevail.

The Literature Fund.

We hav received as donations to our Literature Fund during July the following amounts: G. F. de Lespinasse, $5; Etta Marden, $1; S. Brewer, $2; Allen Lawson, $4.

We shall be glad to add to this right along, as it may be needed for use at any moment, and if no legislativ work should come up to which it may be advantageously applied, there are several millions of benighted Christians in the land who need works of wisdom and common sense to read.

The savage tribes of Africa and similar heathen regions, as we are told by ethnologists, hav gods for all sorts of service—for making rain, for bringing sunshine, to help them in war and in love, and various other things. These savages are called barbarous heathen, and their foolishness is contrasted with the great intelligence of those who believe in the Christian God. But it seems that the preachers who say this should look after their Catholic brethren in Mexico, else there will be ground for thinking that ignorance acts pretty much the same whatever religion it professes. Correspondence from the City of Mexico relates that at Torreon on the Mexican Central railway, a man was brought to the station all cut up and hacked to pieces. He had been taken for a conjuror and was being punished for causing the severe drouth there last year. On the same subject, El Pueblo Catolico, of New San Salvador, prints a number of resolutions promulgated by the principal alcalde of the town and department of Castanas. They are as follows: "Considering that the supreme creator has not behaved well in this province, as in the whole of last year only one shower of rain fell, that in this summer, notwithstanding all the processions, prayers, and praises, it has not rained at all, and consequently the crops of Castanas, on which depend the prosperity of the whole department, are entirely ruined, it is decreed: Article 1. If within the peremptory period of eight days from the date of this decree rain does not fall abundantly no one will go to mass or say prayers. Article 2. If the drouth continues eight days more the churches and chapels shall be burnt and missals, rosaries, and other objects of devotion will be destroyed. Article 3. If, finally, in a third period of eight days it shall not rain, all the priests, friars, nuns, and saints, male and female, will be beheaded, and for the present permission is given for the commission of all sorts of sin, in order that the supreme creator may understand with whom he has to deal." It occurs to us that the supreme creator would better wake up, and that his priests should hustle.

The Rev. Charles Ferguson, of Syracuse, N. Y., knows what he wants, and it is this, as he told a ministers' meeting: "I believe in one organic church for the future, the great American church, of which the president of the United States shall be the acknowledged head, which shall take hold of every phase of American life." The Rev. Mr. Ferguson is teaching very dangerous doctrin. Put into practice it would set the world back several hundred years.

In the West.

News and Notes.

Palouse City is still on the march. The wheat lands are shining, and although but few showers hav fallen for the last month, but little of the grain is burnt, while in other parts of the state it suffered considerably, and occasionally an entire crop is destroyed. The wheat crop of this year will not be so large, nor the grain of such good quality, as last year.

I arrived at Palouse City Saturday night. R. J. Anderson, W. L. Farnsworth, Robert Pfaendtner, Mr. Foster, and others are at the station to receive me, and I find that Freethought keeps pace with the progressiv business outlook of Palouse. I lecture on Saturday evening to a good house. Mr. Foster introduces me. He is a schoolteacher, but is not afraid to stand by his colors. He is devoted to Radical reform.

From the main street of Palouse the hills roll back in ample variety, and here is the residence portion of the city. I find a welcome at the home of Mr. R. J. Anderson on these lofty grounds. When he built on his present location it was regarded as "out in the country," but now the most elegant residences are in the neighborhood. Mr. Anderson has a liking for bees, and he is almost the first and only one to experiment on bee culture in this country. He has been quite successful. The honey is excellent. His bees sometimes travel three and four miles in search of flowers, but they never get lost. When they are sufficiently laden they wind in spiral fashion high in air, and then shoot in a "bee-line" for the hive and make no mistake as to their course. It is interesting to note the ways of these wonderful communities; there is considerable human nature about them. The first queen bee born immediately goes to work and destroys the eggs of all those yet unborn, and reigns without a rival. The queen bee is a thorough monopolist.

Sunday morning Anderson givs me a drive over the Palouse country. It was a lovely day. The sky was full of clouds, but the sunshine flecked them with luminous warmth. The hills were beautiful with the waving grain and the green was just flashing into harvest gold. Mount Steptoe lifted its blue summit to the sky, and Gold Hill raised its massiv front, in whose rocky veins sparkles the yellow treasure.

I lecture on Sunday afternoon and evening. The hall is crowded in the evening. In addition to the speaking Mr. S. A. Weimer furnishes us with delightful music. He is a skilful piano-player, and the notes ripple and dance and flow with exquisit melody.

Palouse has a large Liberal element, more even than are disposed to attend the lectures, for not all hav yet the courage of their opinions. But the list of those who are willing to help is excellent, and represents the best in the community. There is enough here for an organization larger than any church in the place. I cannot mention in my limits the names of all the supporters of Liberalism in this splendid frontier town. They are many.

I was pleased to meet with C. A. Rohrabacher, of Portland, who is writing up for the press the resources of this country. He says that Whitman county raises three hundred bushels of wheat per capita, and that the assessed value of property has increased from seven million in 1888 to twenty million in 1892. Mr. Rohrabacher is vice-president of the Oregon Secular Union, and is an able and earnest advocate of Freethought and of other reforms.

It was rumored among the saints of Palouse that I left on the Monday morning train, and when it was thought I was safely out of town the church party began to boast their willingness for a debate. They were eager to meet the Infidel. It happened that I did not go on the morning train. I was going to Pullman per freight in the afternoon. When I heard of the challenge given I remained over one train, and Pfaendtner and H. D. Harkness went to see the party who had boasted what would be done if the Infidel was only present. When it was found I had not yet gone there was a sudden retreat on the part of the Christians. They had nothing to say. I therefore took the evening train to Pullman, which is about fourteen miles away, and is of the same size as Palouse, and in the midst of the same kind of country.

I did not know anyone in Pullman, but thought I would try my fortune. Mr. J. M. Hubbard, whom I met at Palouse a year ago, lived about four miles out. Mr. N. W. Drinkwater was about a mile, they told me, from town, and I concluded to try the "mile course." So I traveled a mile, and inquired for Mr. Drinkwater's. I was told it was about a mile and a half farther on. This is the way they count miles in this country. You don't know how long they are until you travel them. I finally conquered the two miles and a half, more or less, and found the place I was after, a delightful rural home, in the midst of pleasant fields. A hearty welcome awaited me, and from the moment I shook Mr. Drinkwater's hand I knew that everything was all right for the Pullman campaign.

The next morning, Tuesday, we went into town, and arranged for a lecture that night, and put up bills, but it wasn't half an hour before the Christians had torn nearly all of them down.

After we had posted the bills and were about ready to go to Hubbard's, a telephone was received from Farnsworth, of Palouse, that the Christians were again on the warpath, and challenged the Infidel to meet them at any time. I took the first train for Palouse, hoping that the clergymen had got their courage to the sticking-place. However, as soon as I arrived the saints again went into their holes. They didn't think it worth while to debate, etc. I found it impossible to persuade them to any issue. I therefore left a challenge for the clergymen of Palouse to discuss any question they saw fit any time, and to choose a defender if they thought themselvs not capable of meeting the Infidel. I hope the challenge will be accepted, but I guess they will think that "discretion is the better part of valor."

A much larger audience than I expected greets me at Pullman on Tuesday night, and the encouragement is so great, that it is arranged for me to lecture again on Friday night.

I go home with J. M. Hubbard and spend Wednesday on his big farm of over four hundred acres. It is a fine place for repose in the brilliant sunshine of a cloudless sky. Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard are thorough Liberals, although they were once in the bosom of the church.

We drive to Colfax, about thirteen miles distant, the county seat of Whitman county. It is growing rapidly this summer. It has a prosperous look. New buildings are going up. I meet Mr. and Mrs. D. Wolfard and Mr. and Mrs. Phil. Wilman, who hav always been ready to aid the lectures here. Perhaps some time I shall try it again, although the churches are pretty strong at Colfax and the Liberals rather slow. I enjoy the time at Hubbard's until Thursday morning, when I come down to Hangman's Creek. In early days they hanged five men here and that is the origin of the name—a lurid remembrance.

I am met at Spangle by Frank Lacy and he drives me over to his cabin by the river, nine miles away—a lovely place surrounded with hills and woods, with green fields between, and the creek gliding gently along as if it never had heard of the tragedy from whence it is named. Near by Lacy's home is Hamilton and Smith's grove, and here my lecture is given in the afternoon. There is quite a sprinkling of Liberals along this creek. The land here is excellent wherever it is capable of cultivation. If all the settlers come out it makes quite a gathering. I had a very good number considering there was but little chance for advertisement, and it being a busy time. As usual, the Christians tore down the notices. Besides the speaking we had music and dancing beneath the leafy arches. Charles Peterson, William Smith, and Charles Smith furnished the enlivening strains. There was quite a festival time. When evening comes we adjourn to the house of Lacy and the jollity is continued while the stars look down in the lustrous night.

I hav enjoyed it away up here almost out of the world. Nature presents a wild and beautiful aspect. The sunset is simply gorgeous, as the golden canopy arches from hill to hill and the grass and the trees glimmer in the splendid light. It is quiet here. The breeze blows gently. It is as if you were away from the storms that sweep along the hights. I think I shall hav to come back to Hangman's Creek, for I like the quietude and the gentle scenes, as if the ancient vale of Tempe were opening through the hills into delightful nooks, soft green meadows, and cool groves.

Mrs. Lacy introduced me to the audience, and it was a pleasure to hav woman stand at the front, so that all the world may know that Freethought is for "equal rights and impartial liberty."

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Hangman's Creek, at Lacy's Cabin, July 22, 1892.

To the Liberals of America.

The infamous and cowardly action of the present Congress in voting to close the World's Fair on Sunday compels the Liberals, if they wish to maintain their rights, to organize a political force to oppose the ecclesiasticism which has practically enthroned itself in the state.

The closing of the World's Fair is a political crime, a crime against the working-people of this land, a crime against civil morality itself. The Christian church threatens to vote against any candidate who is not in favor of closing the World's Fair on Sunday.

Liberalism, therefore, must become a voting power. We must appeal to the ballot, and we must do this by a national organization.

There is no organization of this kind now in existence. It is time to form this instrumentality in coöperation with others.

The basis of the organization will be the Demands of Liberalism.

The methods will be as follows:

1. There will be no initiation fees and no assessments. All who believe in the Demands of Liberalism and sign the constitution in good faith, will be voting members.

2. The membership will be purely individual. There will be no auxiliary societies—no wheel within wheel, but simple, direct personal membership and control.

3. No money contributed will be used for the salaries of officers, but only for necessary clerk expenses, and the printing and distribution of Liberal political literature.

4. Candidates will be nominated if thought advisable at any time on the platform of the organization. If no candidates are nominated the candidates of all other parties are to be questioned and their position ascertained, and if in opposition to the Demands of Liberalism, the political power of the organization is to be used against them wherever available.

5. The new organization will not necessarily be opposed to present political parties. Members of all these parties can be members of the Liberal organization provided they endeavor to make the Demands of Liberalism a part of the platform of the party to which they belong and will refuse to vote for candidates who are opposed to these Demands.

6. The name of the new organization will be "The Freethought Federation of America."

It is believed that by proper and decided effort in a few years one hundred thousand Liberal voters will be ready to meet the aggressions of ecclesiasticism at the polls.

It is believed that women if they do not vote hav a right to vote and therefore the Liberal women of America are invited to aid in this organization.

The first meeting will be held at Chicago Sunday, September 4th. All who are in favor of the purpose and methods outlined in this call are requested to be present or send their names as members.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Thomas Paine.

[In the North American Review for August, Colonel Ingersoll has a long article upon Thomas Paine, from which we make the following extracts. The magazine containing the article entire supplied for fifty cents.]

"A great man's memory may outliv his life half a year,
But, by'r lady, he must build churches then."

Eighty-three years ago Thomas Paine ceased to defend himself. The moment he became dumb all his enemies found a tongue. He was attacked on every hand. The Tories of England had been waiting for their revenge. The believers in kings, in hereditary government, the nobility of every land, execrated his memory. Their greatest enemy was dead. The believers in human slavery, and all who clamored for the rights of the states as against the sovereignty of a nation, joined in a chorus of denunciation. In addition to this, the believers in the inspiration of the scriptures, the occupants of orthodox pulpits, the professors in Christian colleges, and the religious historians, were his sworn and implacable foes.

This man had gratified no ambition at the expense of his fellow-men; he had desolated no country with the flame and sword of war; he had not wrung millions from the poor and unfortunate; he had betrayed no trust, and yet he was almost universally despised. He gave his life for the benefit of mankind. Day and night for many, many weary years, he labored for the good of others, and gave himself body and soul to the great cause of human liberty. And yet he won the hatred of the people for whose benefit, for whose emancipation, for whose civilization, for whose exaltation he gave his life.

Against him every slander that malignity could coin and hypocrisy pass was gladly and joyously taken as genuin, and every truth with regard to his career was believed to be counterfeit. He was attacked by thousands where he was defended by one, and the one who defended him was instantly attacked, silenced, or destroyed.

At last his life has been written by Moncure D. Conway, and the real history of Thomas Paine, of what he attempted and accomplished, of what he taught and suffered, has been intelligently, truthfully, and candidly given to the world. Henceforth the slanderer will be without excuse.

. . . . . .

In the winter of 1774 Thomas Paine came to America. After a time he was employed as one of the writers on the Pennsylvania Magazine.

Let us see what he did, calculated to excite the hatred of his fellow-men.

The first article he ever wrote in America, and the first ever published by him anywhere, appeared in that magazine on March 8, 1775. It was an attack on American slavery—a plea for the rights of the negro. In that article will be found substantially all the arguments that can be urged against that most infamous of all institutions. Every line is full of humanity, pity, tenderness, and love of justice. Five days after this article appeared the American Anti-Slavery Society was formed. Certainly this should not excite our hatred. To-day the civilized world agrees with the essay written by Thomas Paine in 1775.

At that time great interests were against him. The owners of slaves became his enemies, and the pulpits, supported by slave labor, denounced this abolitionist.

The next article published by Thomas Paine, in the same magazine, and for the next month, was an attack on the practice of dueling, showing that it was barbarous, that it did not even tend to settle the right or wrong of a dispute, that it could not be defended on any just ground, and that its influence was degrading and cruel. The civilized world now agrees with the opinions of Thomas Paine upon that barbarous practice.

In May, 1775, appeared in the same magazine another article written by Thomas Paine, a protest against cruelty to animals. He began the work that was so successfully and gloriously carried out by Henry Bergh, one of the noblest, one of the grandest, men that this continent has produced.

The good people of this world agree with Thomas Paine.

In August of the same year he wrote a plea for the Rights of Woman, the first ever published in the New World. Certainly he should not be hated for that.

He was the first to suggest a union of the colonies. Before the Declaration of Independence was issued, Paine had written of and about the Free and Independent States of America. He had also spoken of the United Colonies as the "Glorious Union," and he was the first to write these words: "The United States of America."

In May, 1775, Washington said: "If you ever hear of me joining in any such measure (as separation from Great Britain) you hav my leave to set me down for everything wicked." He had also said, "It is not the wish or interest of the government (meaning Massachusetts), or of any other upon this continent, separately or collectivly, to set up for independence." And in the same year Benjamin Franklin assured Chatham that no one in America was in favor of separation. As a matter of fact, the people of the colonies wanted a redress of their grievances—they were not dreaming of separation, of independence.

. . . . . .

On Nov. 2, 1779, there was introduced into the assembly of Pennsylvania an act for the abolition of slavery. The preamble was written by Thomas Paine. To him belongs the honor and glory of having written the first Proclamation of Emancipation in America—Paine the first, Lincoln the last.

. . . . . .

During the Revolution our forefathers, in order to justify making war on Great Britain, were compelled to take the ground that all men are entitled to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. In no other way could they justify their action. After the war, the meaner instincts began to take possession of the mind, and those who had fought for their own liberty were perfectly willing to enslave others. We must also remember that the revolution was begun and carried on by a noble minority—that the majority were really in favor of Great Britain and did what they dared to prevent the success of the American cause. The minority, however, had control of affairs. They were activ, energetic, enthusiastic, and courageous, and the majority were overawed, shamed, and suppressed. But when peace came, the majority asserted themselvs and the interests of trade and commerce were consulted. Enthusiasm slowly died, and patriotism was mingled with the selfishness of traffic.

But, after all, the enemies of Paine were few, the friends were many. He had the respect and admiration of the greatest and the best, and was enjoying the fruits of his labor.

The revolution was ended, the colonies were free. They had been united, they formed a nation, and the United States of America had a place on the map of the world.

Paine was not a politician. He had not labored for seven years to get an office. His services were no longer needed in America. He concluded to educate the English people, to inform them of their rights, to expose the pretenses, follies, and fallacies, the crimes and cruelties of nobles, kings, and parliaments. In the brain and heart of this man were the dream and hope of the universal republic. He had confidence in the people. He hated tyranny and war, despised the senseless pomp and vain show of crowned robbers, laughed at titles, and the "honorable" badges worn by the obsequious and servil, by fawners and followers; loved liberty with all his heart, and bravely fought against those who could giv the rewards of place and gold, and for those who could pay only with thanks.

Hoping to hasten the day of freedom, he wrote the "Rights of Man"—a book that laid the foundation for all the real liberty that the English now enjoy—a book that made known to Englishmen the Declaration of Nature, and convinced millions that all are children of the same mother, entitled to share equally in her gifts. Every Englishman who has outgrown the ideas of 1688 should remember Paine with love and reverence. Every Englishman who has sought to destroy abuses, to lessen or limit the prerogativs of the crown, to extend the suffrage, to do away with "rotten boroughs," to take taxes from knowledge, to increase and protect the freedom of speech and the press, to do away with bribes under the name of pensions, and to make England a government of principles rather than of persons, has been compelled to adopt the creed and use the arguments of Thomas Paine. In England every step toward freedom has been a triumph of Paine over Burke and Pitt. No man ever rendered a greater service to his nativ land.

. . . . . .

To avoid arrest and probable death, Paine left England. He had sown with brave hand the seed of thought, and he knew that he had lighted a fire that nothing could extinguish until England should be free.

The fame of Thomas Paine had reached France in many ways—principally through Lafayette. His services in America were well known. The pamphlet "Common Sense" had been published in French, and its effect had been immense. "The Rights of Man" that had created, and was then creating, such a stir in England, was also known to the French. The lovers of liberty everywhere were the friends and admirers of Thomas Paine. In America, England, Scotland, Ireland, and France he was known as the defender of popular rights. He had preached a new gospel. He had given a new Magna Charta to the people.

So popular was Paine in France that he was elected by three constituencies to the National Convention. He chose to represent Calais. From the moment he entered French territory he was received with almost royal honors. He at once stood with the foremost, and was welcomed by all enlightened patriots. As in America, so in France, he knew no idleness—he was an organizer and worker. The first thing he did was to found the first Republican Society, and the next to write its Manifesto, in which the ground was taken that France did not need a king; that the people should govern themselvs.

One of the grandest things done by Thomas Paine was his effort to save tne life of Louis XVI. The convention was in favor of death. Paine was a foreigner. His career had caused some jealousies. He knew the danger he was in—that the tiger was already crouching for a spring—but he was true to his principles. He was opposed to the death penalty. He remembered that Louis XVI. had been the friend of America, and he very cheerfully risked his life, not only for the good of France, not only to save the king, but to pay a debt of gratitude. He asked the convention to exile the king to the United States. He asked this as a member of the convention and as a citizen of the United States. As an American he felt grateful not only to the king, but to every Frenchman. He, the adversary of all kings, asked the convention to remember that kings were men, and subject to human frailties. He took still another step, and said: "As France has been the first of European nations to abolish royalty, let us also be the first to abolish the punishment of death."

Paine was second on the committee to prepare the draft of a Constitution for France to be submitted to the convention. He was the real author, not only of the draft of the Constitution, but of the Declaration of Rights.

In France, as in America, he took the lead. His first thoughts seemed to be first principles. He was clear because he was profound. People without ideas experience great difficulty in finding words to express them.

From the moment that Paine cast his vote in favor of mercy—in favor of life—the shadow of the guillotin was upon him. He knew that when he voted for the king's life, he voted for his own death. Paine remembered that the king had been the friend of America, and to him ingratitude seemed the worst of crimes. He worked to destroy the monarch, not the man; the king, not the friend. He discharged his duty and accepted death. This was the heroism of goodness—the sublimity of devotion.

Believing that his life was near its close, he made up his mind to giv to the world his thoughts concerning "revealed religion." This he had for some time intended to do, but other matters had claimed his attention. Feeling that there was no time to be lost, he wrote the first part of the "Age of Reason," and gave the manuscript to Joel Barlow. Six hours after, he was arrested. The second part was written in prison while he was waiting for death.

Paine clearly saw that men could not be really free, or defend the freedom they had, unless they were free to think and speak. He knew that the church was the enemy of liberty, that the altar and throne were in partnership, that they helped each other and divided the spoils.

He felt that, being a man, he had the right to examin the creeds and the scriptures for himself, and that, being an honest man, it was his duty and his privilege to tell his fellow-men the conclusions at which he arrived.

He found that the creeds of all orthodox churches were absurd and cruel, and that the Bible was no better. Of course he found that there were some good things in the creeds and in the Bible. These he defended, but the infamous, the inhuman he attacked.

In matters of religion he pursued the same course that he had in things political. He depended upon experience, and above all on reason. He refused to extinguish the light in his own soul. He was true to himself, and gave to others his honest thoughts. He did not seek wealth, or place, or fame. He sought the truth.

He had felt it to be his duty to attack the institution of slavery in America, to raise his voice against dueling, to plead for the rights of woman, to excite pity for the sufferings of domestic animals, the speechless friends of man; to plead the cause of separation, of independence, of American nationality, to attack the abuses and crimes of monarchs, to do what he could to giv freedom to the world.

He thought it his duty to take another step.

Kings asserted that they derived their power, their right to govern, from God. To this assertion Paine replied with the "Rights of Man." Priests pretended that they were the authorized agents of God. Paine replied with the "Age of Reason."

This book is still a power, and will be as long as the absurdities and cruelties of the creeds and the Bible hav defenders. The "Age of Reason" affected the priests just as the "Rights of Man" affected nobles and kings. The kings answered the arguments of Paine with laws, the priests with lies. Kings appealed to force, priests to fraud. Mr. Conway has written in regard to the "Age of Reason" the most impressiv and the most interesting chapter in his book. Paine contended for the rights of the individual, for the jurisdiction of the soul. Above all religions he placed Reason, above all kings, Men, and above all men, Law.

The first part of the "Age of Reason" was written in the shadow of a prison, the second part in the gloom of death. From that shadow, from that gloom came a flood of light. This testament, by which the wealth of a marvelous brain, the love of a great and heroic heart were given to the world, was written in the presence of the scaffold, when the writer believed he was giving his last message to his fellowmen.

The "Age of Reason" was his crime.

Franklin, Jefferson, Sumner, and Lincoln, the four greatest statesmen that America has produced, were believers in the creed of Thomas Paine.

The Universalists and Unitarians hav found their best weapons, their best arguments, in the "Age of Reason."

Slowly, but surely, the churches are adopting not only the arguments, but the opinions, of the great Reformer. Theodore Parker attacked the Old Testament and Calvinistic theology with the same weapons and with a bitterness excelled by no man who has expressed his thoughts in our language.

Paine was a century in advance of his time. If he were living now his sympathy would be with Savage, Chadwick, Professor Briggs, and the "advanced theologians." He, too, would talk about the "higher criticism" and the latest definition of "inspiration." These advanced thinkers substantially are repeating the "Age of Reason." They still wear the old uniform—clinging to the toggery of theology—but inside of their religious rags they agree with Thomas Paine.

Not one argument that Paine urged against the inspiration of the Bible, against the truth of miracles, against the barbarities and infamies of the Old Testament, against the pretensions of priests and the claims of kings, has ever been answered.

His arguments in favor of the existence of what he was pleased to call the God of Nature were as weak as those of all theists hav been. But in all the affairs of this world, his clearness of vision, lucidity of expression, cogency of argument, aptness of comparison, power of statement, and comprehension of the subject in hand, with all its bearings and consequences, hav rarely, if ever, been excelled.

. . . . . .

Paine came back to America hoping to spend the remainder of his life surrounded by those for whose happiness and freedom he had labored so many years. He expected to be rewarded with the love and reverence of the American people.

. . . . . .

In 1802 the people of the United States had exceedingly crude ideas about the liberty of thought and expression. Neither had they any conception of religious freedom. Their highest thought on that subject was expressed by the word "toleration," and even this toleration extended only to the various Christian sects. Even the vaunted religious liberty of colonial Maryland was only to the effect that one kind of Christian should not fine, imprison, and kill another kind of Christian, but all kinds of Christians had the right, and it was their duty, to brand, imprison, and kill Infidels of every kind.

Paine had been guilty of thinking for himself and giving his conclusions to the world without having asked the consent of a priest—just as he had published his political opinions without leave of the king. He had published his thoughts on religion and had appealed to reason—to the light in every mind, to the humanity, the pity, the goodness which he believed to be in every heart. He denied the right of kings to make laws and of priests to make creeds. He insisted that the people should make laws, and that every human being should think for himself. While some believed in the freedom of religion, he believed in the religion of freedom.

If Paine had been a hypocrit, if he had concealed his opinions, if he had defended slavery with quotations from the "sacred scriptures"—if he had cared nothing for the liberties of men in other lands—if he had said that the state could not liv without the church—if he had sought for place instead of truth, he would hav won wealth and power, and his brow would hav been crowned with the laurel of fame.

He made what the pious call the "mistake" of being true to himself—of living with an unstained soul. He had lived and labored for the people. The people were untrue to him. They returned evil for good, hatred for benefits received, and yet this great chivalric soul remembered their ignorance and loved them with all his heart, and fought their oppressors with all his strength.

We must remember what the churches and creeds were in that day, what the theologians really taught, and what the people believed. To save the few in spite of their vices, and to damn the many without regard to their virtues, and all for the glory of the Damner:—this was Calvinism. "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear," but he that hath a brain to think must not think. He that believeth without evidence is good, and he that believeth in spite of evidence is a saint. Only the wicked doubt, only the blasphemer denies. This was orthodox Christianity.

Thomas Paine had the courage, the sense, the heart to denounce these horrors, these absurdities, these infinit infamies. He did what he could to drive these theological vipers, these Calvinistic cobras, these fanged and hissing serpents of superstition from the heart of man.

The churches of 1809 could not be the friends of Thomas Paine. No church asserting that belief is necessary to salvation ever was, or ever will be, the champion of true liberty. A church founded on slavery—that is to say, on blind obedience, worshiping irresponsible and arbitrary power, must of necessity be the enemy of human freedom.

The orthodox churches are now anxious to save the little that Paine left of their creed. If one now believes in God, and lends a little financial aid, he is considered a good and desirable member. He need not define God after the manner of the catechism. He may talk about a "Power that works for righteousness;" or the tortoise Truth that beats the rabbit Lie in the long run; or the "Unknowable;" or the "Unconditioned;" or the "Cosmic Force;" or the "Ultimate Atom;" or "Protoplasm;" or the "What"—provided he begins this word with a capital.

Thomas Paine had passed the legendary limit of life. One by one most of his old friends and acquaintances had deserted him. Maligned on every side, execrated, shunned and abhorred—his virtues denounced as vices—his services forgotten—his character blackened, he preserved the poise and balance of his soul. He was a victim of the people, but his convictions remained unshaken. He was still a soldier in the army of freedom, and still tried to enlighten and civilize those who were impatiently waiting for his death. Even those who loved their enemies hated him, their friend—the friend of the whole world—with all their hearts.

On June 8, 1809, death came—Death, almost his only friend.

At his funeral no pomp, no pageantry, no civic processions, no military display. In a carriage, a woman and her son who had lived on the bounty of the dead—on horseback, a Quaker, the humanity of whose heart dominated the creed of his head—and, following on foot, two negroes, filled with gratitude—constituted the funeral cortége of Thomas Paine.

He who had received the gratitude of many millions, the thanks of generals and statesmen—he who had been the friend and companion of the wisest and best—he who had taught a people to be free, and whose words had inspired armies and enlightened nations, was thus given back to Nature, the mother of us all.

If the people of the great republic knew the life of this generous, this chivalric man, the real story of his services, his sufferings and his triumphs—of what he did to compel the robed and crowned, the priests and kings, to giv back to the people liberty, the jewel of the soul; if they knew that he was the first to write, "The Religion of Humanity;" if they knew that he, above all others, planted and watered the seeds of independence, of union, of nationality, in the hearts of our forefathers—that his words were gladly repeated by the best and bravest in many lands; if they knew that he attempted, by the purest means, to attain the noblest and loftiest ends—that he was original, sincere, intrepid, and that he could truthfully say: "The world is my country, to do good my religion"—if the people only knew all this—the truth—they would repeat the words of Andrew Jackson: "Thomas Paine needs no monument made with hands; he has erected a monument in the hearts of all lovers of liberty."

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Letters to Workingmen.

RIGHTS OF SUFFRAGE.

In my last I emphasized my objection to politics. I am moved to a still farther consideration of the subject by the fact that while my friends fully indorse my assertions that political methods are all wrong and that politics itself is a mass of corruption, they still cling to the hope of reforming it, and one project for so doing is to extend the "right of suffrage" to the female half of humanity. And I am requested by a lady friend to write to some politician asking him to lend his influence to the passing of a bill indorsed by the New York Workingwomen's Society and labor organizations of men to enable workingmen to vote. And to please my lady friend I hav done so, saying to this gentleman: "If it be true that government is organized to render justice in society; and if it be true that the governed should hav a voice in choosing their governor; and if it be true that the laboring man is benefited by the exercise of such choice, then why should workingwomen be deprived of like privilege? I plead for justice and equity." From the standpoint of the politician it seems to me that the logic is unanswerable. But if, as I believe, government is not organized to render justice in society, and that the governed should hav a voice in choosing only their own governor, and that it is not true that the laboring man is benefited by the exercise of such choice, I can see no justice or equity in extending the "right of suffrage" to woman. Justice and equity are destroyed by the "right of suffrage." I hav endeavored to show how delusiv is the hope of reforming politics; the thing in itself is pernicious—that is to say, it is opposed to that "greatest good to the greatest number" which its advocates in the shape of "woman's suffrage," as well as various other kinds of "suffrage," are forever harping upon. The trouble is that the human mind has evolved from ignorance, and ignorance always bases its predicates upon appearances, and appearances are almost always deceptiv; and as I hav said, we are the slaves of habit. Hence, when we accept a thing as true it is like that "greatness going off" which, the poet tells us, "rends the soul and body," to change our minds. It required the death of martyrs to establish the fact that the world turned on its axis. Hence we find the repugnance of the mind to enter upon new channels of thought; we are inclined to make an idol of our belief, and when opposition is raised we are more eager in defending our idol than studying the ideas contained in the opposition. Friends, think of this. I believe it the greatest obstacle to true civilization. A new idea is propounded; we never stop to consider the fact that it was projected for the good of humanity, but proceed to trample it into the mire simply because it clashes with some preconceived ideas of ours. Persecution attends the birth of all important ideas, and the name associated with the idea is held synonymous with every evil and the idea is often lost in the persecution of the name.

A few years ago Socialism, which means and always meant an improved condition of society, was such a name and its advocates were considered the lowest and most dangerous class in existence. To-day this persecution is being raised from the name of Socialism and bestowed upon its next of kin, Anarchism. That which stands for perfect equality is given to those whose brutal natures would establish the most rigorous rule. And so it is in the realm of thought, the ancient is respectable, the new suspicious. And the evils of society, although invariably attendant upon certain systems, these systems being long established, hav become respectable; and while we denounce the evils and deplore them, we are ever ready to fight for the maintenance of the system.

The scientific method of thought is playing havoc with the ancient theory of religion, and we are beginning to realize that most of the evils of society that are being antagonized by the religion of to-day owe their origin to the religion of the past; and a scientific analysis of the religion of to-day shows it to be identical with the religion of the past. That is to say, that each appeals to the emotions rather than the intellect. Both are conservativ in their nature and respectability their highest aim, and what is true of religion is equally true of politics. The scientific method cannot be employed to advance them, and the man of science rather avoids them. He fears the thunders of respectability. The fact is, superstition is the origin of both, and reformers on both lines are so imbued with the superstition, that they fail to see that the evils they are fighting are the legitimate children of the superstition they love. And so they would apply the bark of the dog to cure its bite, and so my lady friend would apply "woman's suffrage" to cure the evils of "man's suffrage." Let me say right here I am in favor of woman's rights as I am in favor of man's rights, no more, no less. I would hold from them no right that men enjoy or can enjoy; but the "right of suffrage" has to me a different meaning than simply the right to make our preference known, as the ballot in politics has a different meaning than simply a method of determining the wishes of the various individuals of society. "Suffrage" to me means an arbitrary exercise of power to enforce the decrees of the will of a few politicians. Senator Ingalls has truly said: "The purification of politics is an iridescent dream. Government is force. Politics is a battle for supremacy. Parties are the armies. The Decalog and Golden Rule hav no place in a political campaign. The object is success. To defeat the antagonist and expel the party in power is the purpose. In war it is lawful to deceive the adversary; to hire Hessians; to purchase mercenaries; to mutilate; to kill; to destroy." Let me illustrate. A large army is situated in a field adjoining a community ostensibly to assist the majority in enforcing their methods of organizing, directing, and controling the interests of the community. Now, for the avowed purpose of determining the wishes of the majority, the officers of the army, who, by the way, are composed of the members of the community, place in certain localities boxes, which they label ballot-boxes. Then a day is set apart for the inhabitants to deposit their ballots, which express nothing but a name, and that name simply a choice between a few other names submitted by some party—a party, most frequently, which the good sense of the majority would reject, inasmuch as this party by their methods of choice do not and cannot embody the good sense of the community—unless we spell it cents, for it is notorious that money always has and, by the very conditions of the case, must influence their choice. To illustrate, I might refer to the address the good lady submitted to me, that Hamilton Wilcox made before the State Women's Suffrage Association. He said: "Were I a rich man and able to giv my whole time, I do not doubt that soon afterward I could hav carried this bill, and all of you women who hear me would hav been voting for years." This unconsciously tells the story that it is not principle but money and influence that moves the politician. The various parties supposed to represent the various issues for the regulating, guiding, and governing of the people submit their choice of ballot, certain names. As a matter of fact these names of candidates for election do not represent the issues involved, as they are selected only as to their ability to poll a large vote. Again, let me remind you that principle plays little or no part in that ability. These names thus submitted, the people are called upon to exercise their "right of suffrage," and the lucky man takes his place in the grand army whose guns are leveled at the community to enforce his decrees. And as the bugbears "patriotism" and "citizen's duty" begin to fail to frighten the people into stultifying themselvs, we are threatened with a law compelling us to exercise this "right of suffrage." I want you to carefully consider the difference between this and the right of choice. There is all the difference there is between slavery and liberty, and extending this "right" to the other half of the community will in no wise alter the facts of the case. Helen Wilmans, who, by the way, portrayed the evils of politics in the most glowing colors before she swallowed the opiate Theosophy, once said: "Does anyone believe that woman, if she had the electiv franchise, would don the badges of servitude furnished them by their bosses and march to the polls like voting cattle to vote away their own legitimate rights and the rights of their children?" Well, I, for one, fail to see why we should suppose that she would be able to alter the program very materially, having worn "the badges of servitude furnished them by their"—I will not say bosses, but husbands and lovers, priests and ministers, ancient customs and modern fashions. Is it exactly proper and safe for her to hurl stones at her brother politician? The average voter, without a doubt, "votes away his own legitimate rights and the rights of his children." But Helen should not blame the man. He does the best he knows how. Reform is the watchword of them all. The question is, What is in this "female suffrage" to do us good? Are they as a class more intelligent, more responsible, more earnestly anxious for the good of humanity? Would female political schemes be superior or more efficient? If sincere reformers among men are forced into the "herd of voting cattle," how are the women to escape a like fate? "But politics is necessary, we must use it to effect reforms or abolish wrongdoing in government. So long as malformation exists we must hav something to restrain evil men. Government may be bad, but would not no government be worse?" And then the old orthodox question follows, "What would you giv us in place of government?" And I answer, while a restraining or counteracting power may be necessary, I would giv you nothing in place of government. Government does not exist. We giv it "a local habitation and a name." Still it is an "airy nothing"—a myth. Men exist and make themselvs a power for good or evil. But can you clothe men with "sovereign authority?" Where do you get it? You may become a slave yourself, but

> Must I cringe, must I obey them,
> Must I be frightened when madmen stare?

I want you to think of this "sovereign authority." Where does it come from? What is its effect? Does corruption put on incorruption and mortality immortality? We hear of men introducing business qualifications into government offices, but it is a delusion. What has "sovereign authority" got to do with business qualifications? I want you to think of this "sovereign authority." It is what possessed or obsessed the medicin man of the Indians. It was the "indwelling spirit" of the fetich of the savage. What has business, commerce, or science to do with this? We hav an authority in "the butcher, the baker, the candle-stick maker," the specialist in science and art, the man who has learned his trade and made himself a master in the business. But the politician,

> Clothed in a little brief authority,
> Uses his heaven for thunder,
> Nothing but thunder.

I ask you, friends, to look upon this creature as he is, a contemptible usurper of your rights. Think not to make him more respectable by giving him a helpmate in the form of a female politician, but withdraw your support, ignore his thunder, and his "sovereign authority" will fail to hide his deformity; and commerce, the business of the country, will soon establish the proper power; free trade, free money, and free competition will unite in sending to the front the best men. Liberty will destroy the power of avarice. Cost will be made the limit of price, and the millionaire and pauper be no more.

Buffalo, N. Y. A. L. Ballou.

The American Secular Union Congress.

At the meeting of the board of directors of the American Secular Union Saturday evening, July 23d, it was decided to hold the sixteenth annual Congress of the organization at Chicago, beginning October 23d and continuing at least three days.

This date was selected that advantage might be taken of the reduced rates on the various railroads to those attending the dedication of the Columbian Exposition October 21st and 22d, which will be Friday and Saturday.

Liberals will thus hav an opportunity to attend the dedication and also the Congress immediately following. This, however, necessitates the opening of the Liberal Congress on Sunday, as to remain in the city until the next Thursday or Friday would subject Secularists to needless expense.

Hon. C. B. Waite, Dr. Joseph N. Greer, and John F. Geeting were appointed committee on program, and Dr. Greer and E. N. Geer committee on hall.

This is certainly the most important Congress that has ever been called during the existence of the Union. It is desired that Liberals, so far as possible, should attend. Each and all should make a supreme effort to be present.

Questions of grave import are to be considered. Due notice has been given that an effort will be made to revise certain clauses in the constitution. Soon after the election of the present board Judge Waite announced that he should advocate the changing of the third Demand. Its present reading is, "The repeal of all laws enforcing the observance of Sunday as a religious institution rather than an economic one justified by physiological and secular reasons."

President Waite's amendment is, "No laws enforcing the observance of any Sabbath."

At the coming convention it will also be decided as to what action shall be taken in regard to an international congress in 1893.

One prominent Freethinker, an honorary vice-president, writes: "The World's Fair is upon us and somebody must represent the Liberal element in the United States on that occasion or Freethought in America will be hopelessly disgraced in the eyes of the world. That must not be." Others are equally emphatic in their expressions.

During the past nine months the secretary has appealed often and earnestly to Liberals to ignore all disagreements and devote their energies to the advancement of the Secular cause. The time has come when such action is a necessity, as is amply illustrated by the contemplated Sunday closing of the World's Fair. To remain longer indifferent is to become equally criminal with those who are endeavoring to effect such a union of church and state as shall deprive American citizens of religious liberty.

The taxation of church property is another of the questions demanding immediate attention, and should be taken up and advocated with such earnestness and eloquence as to thoroughly awaken the people to the danger threatening republican institutions from further unjust exemptions. The tract on this subject written by Dr. Westbrook should be widely circulated, the working people educated and aroused as they hav been in regard to Sunday closing. They should be made to realize that every dollar in the form of taxes unpaid by the church must be assumed by them.

The people hav permitted various privileges to the church. It has become arrogant with the granting of them and follows but the course of bigotry in all ages. It is not satisfied with the various priestly perquisits it enjoys, but throwing aside all disguise demands for its divinities the nation itself. And so the old battle for religious liberty is to be fought once again. The sooner this is understood the better. The church has built itself up into a power through dishonest depletion of the people. Americans, good-natured and indolent to a fault, hav permitted the theft. It required that the doors of the Columbian Exposition should be closed in their face to arouse them to the danger.

Let the next Congress take up these questions in earnest. Let it be a representativ Congress. Let the board of directors, the incoming officers, be the choice of the people. There should be no wire-pulling, no clique, no dishonest methods. But let that be done which shall seem best in the judgment of all.

Funds are needed to carry on the work. The Congress will involve expense. Arrangements will be made for it as economically as possible, but do the best we can there must be considerable outlay.

The case against the appropriation of public funds to ecclesiastical institutions is still pending. Not enough has yet been secured to carry it through.

Liberals! Will you not come forward at once and with a generous contribution sustain this splendid organization of your own creation—representing as it does the principles upon which this republic is founded—the American Secular Union?

Mrs. M. A. Freeman,
Cor. Sec. Amer. Secular Union.

Items of Foreign News Interesting to Freethinkers.

The Universal Freethought Congress will be held at Madrid, Spain, Oct. 12–19, 1892.

Colonel Ingersoll's lecture, "Liberty," appears, excellently translated, in the April number of our Dutch contemporary De Dageraad.

The literature of the Salvation Army during 1891 numbered forty-five million copies. How many copies did the Freethought literature number? Turn in your pennies to the Literature Fund, and urge your friends to subscribe to The Truth Seeker.

Our friend Henry V. Berghell, the Finnish-Swedish Freethought martyr and exile, who at the present time livs at Minneapolis, Minn., contemplates publishing a new Swedish-American Freethought paper, Fria Ord. The first number will appear when six hundred subscribers hav made their appearance. The subscription price is $1.

The Freethinkers of Italy are not organized, hence, although numerically strong, they are annoyed on all possible occasions. Their literature is suppressed. The magazine, Prometheus, has ceased to exist, owing to political dealings between the government and the Catholic church. Indictments for blasphemy are common, although convictions are rare. Freethinkers must organize if they will liv in peace.

Our friend, C. Cilwa, editor of La Vérité, has a good deal of Yankee push about him. His whole existence is devoted to Freethought and reform, he is a member of various societies, and yet he finds time to edit two publications. We hav not seen the latest, Le Bluet, but La Vérité is constantly improving. To insure the best of articles he has at present offered five prizes for the five best essays on "Separation of Church and State," "Cremation," and "The Inquisition." The essays are not to be less than two hundred and fifty lines nor over three hundred. As soon as they appear—if we get the copies safely, as we expect to—we will reproduce them for the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The value of real estate—not taxed—belonging to the church in Bohemia is 300,000,000 gülden. The number of clergy is 3,650 persons; hence the average cash value of each is more than 80,000 gülden. The number of inhabitants of Bohemia is 5,843,250. Placing the annual tax on church property—not taxed—at 3,500,000 gülden, each inhabitant is worth but 600 gülden. As the immortal Goethe said, "The church has a good stomach."

The following statistics from the report of the minister of public education in Belgium are more than interesting—they are decidedly instructiv. In 1884 there were closed in Belgium: 192 kindergartens, 1,247 private schools, and 15 trades-schools. 305 public schools were abolished. 1,168 teachers were discharged, without any reason given; 1,500 teachers were put on half pay, and 3,300 teachers put on the "retiring" list. In 1884, December, there were left but 10 public schools. Such was the record of the Catholic, the state church, party. Then matters came to a change. The Liberal party came into power, the Freethinkers organized, and the result is that now there are 1,674 public schools, 370 parochial schools, and 38 free normal schools. In 1884 the cost to the state of each pupil was 55 francs; now it is but 31 francs.

Progress of the Cause in Washington—"She Do Move."

At times the overburdened worker for reason, right, and truth finds reason for discouragement because anticipated great results do not immediately appear. Yet the seed of truth is never really sown in vain; sooner or later it will surely germinate.

Two years and a half ago, under the fostering care and through the self-sacrifice of the Liberals of Walla Walla, the convention of Liberals of the state assembled at Seattle to form the Washington Secular Union. No newspaper published in the city would or could be hired or persuaded to giv one line of notice of our convention. A column and a quarter giving an account of a brutal prize-fight, a quarter column to a dog-fight, but no word, no line, to a large gathering of Liberals. Two papers actually refused to insert advertisements of the convention; one, that charged extra rates, published it only in a first edition of a hundred copies or so, just so they could claim they had inserted it and claim payment.

Newspapers are run for the money there is in the business, and consider it impolitic to publish anything that would lose them advertising patronage as well as subscribers.

But "she do move." Read the following extracts from two leading newspapers of the city, one the leading organ of the Republicans, and the other of the Democrats, both articles published the same day:

From the Post-Intelligencer, July 17th, leading article, "A Crank in Religion, Politics, and War:"

> The recently published "Life and Letters of Gen. Thomas J. Jackson" (Stonewall Jackson), prepared by his wife, contains a good deal of evidence that the famous Confederate soldier was a narrow-minded bigot in both religion and politics. In an interview with his brother-in-law, Colonel Barringer, of North Carolina, which Mrs. Jackson incorporates in her memoir, Jackson is represented as uttering the following barbarous speech: "No quarter to the violators of our houses and firesides. The Bible is full of such wars, and it is the only policy that would bring the North to its senses."

Of course "the Bible is full of such wars." The Hebrews believed in human slavery, as did General Jackson; the Hebrews believed in polygamy and concubinage, which General Jackson rejected, and yet he was religious and political crank enough to defend the policy of slaughtering surrendered prisoners, even as Samuel did Agag. The speech we hav quoted is a melancholy illustration how a naturally tender, humane, and pious man could be led by religious and political fanaticism to advocate the adoption of the "black flag" in the nineteenth century against a civilized foe.

From the Seattle Telegraph, a leading Democratic paper, heretofore strongly Catholic, I extract a passage from a leading article in the issue of July 17th, "A New Commandment:"

> The experience of mankind has unfortunately too often been that justice will only come as the consequence of a strife. After nearly nineteen centuries of so-called Christian civilization and with the experience of centuries of ancient refinement and social progress as a guide, we are not very much further on the road to the settlement of public grievances by reason than were our ancestors in the most remote age of which we hav record.
>
> An appeal to brute force is still the dernier resort for the solution of most difficulties, whether between nations or individuals. As long as men could be coerced to do what is right or submit to what is wrong by the threat of punishment or the hope of reward in another world, the semblance of order was preserved; but appeals to the fears or hopes of mankind, as to what the future may hav in store, hav lost very much of their efficacy, and even those who are still influenced thereby are not agreed as to who is authorized to indicate what is the line of duty.
>
> The lesson which the recent riots and bloodshed appear to hav for the churches is that they must get more closely in touch with the real need of the people and go to them preaching the gospel of fair play as a present remedy for present ills.

In the next column we read:

> The essential feature of all orthodox religions, whether Christian or otherwise, is the monarchical idea. A sovereign ruler makes laws and punishes the infraction of them or rewards the observance. The object of all his subjects must be the increase of the sovereign's glory. His acts of grace are of his own motion. None has any right to claim consideration. Nearly all—probably all the old religions are based upon this idea. The creeds of the orthodox churches are largely reproductions in the spiritual world of the ideas prevailing in the political world when they were settled. These political ideas, when applied to the universe at large, were made square with the conceptions of what was the science of the day, and mixed up more or less with myths and traditions.
>
> The resulting compound was orthodoxy as it is generally taught, but very rarely accepted. From this there has naturally been a revolt as science has shown a different state of facts relating to nature and the universe from what our forefathers accepted; as research has demonstrated the true nature of mythology, and as experience has proved that the monarchical idea of government is not the correct one. There has come to be a widespread demand for a new religion.

Such declarations, in the leading articles of our most influential newspapers, are evidence of the advancement that Freethought is making, for the editors dared not thus frankly express their honest convictions until well assured that a large majority of their more intelligent readers were in sympathy with the truth.

Liberals should redouble their diligence, follow up every advantage gained, organize, draw nearer together, cultivate fraternity, sociability, and unite in their efforts to secure repeal of all laws and usages that are contrary to the letter or spirit of our bill of rights as stated in our state constitution; and at this time there is especial need of work and money to educate the masses on the infamous revenue law that exempts church property from taxation, as well as property of any and all sectarian schools, hospitals, or other so-called benevolent church institutions, run solely for the purpose of making proselytes, or for the cash there is in them.

C. B. REYNOLDS, Sec. Wash. Secular Union.

Boston.—Homestead.—The Fair.

Some three weeks ago I came to Boston to spend with a dear friend her eighty-fifth birthday—dear old Boston—where I became a young bride of eighteen years, joyous and hopeful, feeling that life was indeed a blessing. Though I hav drunken the bitter waters of sorrow, and for many long years my daily meat has been affliction, I find a return of pleasure as I take in the fact that Boston is still Boston. Notwithstanding it has ofttimes "stoned the prophets," sent back into bondage the flying fugitiv, imprisoned men whose crime was calling things by their right names, yet knowing and feeling sorrow for the wrongs of which she has been often guilty, I still love her and am glad that here was once my home.

I need not say that the condition at Homestead of the workingmen and their families is crowding out of my mind all else; your readers who know me at all know me as a "labor reformer" and as one who feels always that the cause of the poor is the cause demanding the best thought of all thinking people, but I am compelled to believe that we can do but little better work for the working people than the work you, dear TRUTH SEEKER, are doing weekly in showing to those who will read that the superstitions of the church, some of which crowd themselvs into every department of activ life, are in reality the greatest oppressors of the working people.

The case of the soldier whose inhuman treatment by the officer commanding, acquiesced in by the under-officers, is of the same character as that inflicted upon the negroes of these states for many years, and still practiced, as the daily records inform us. I wonder if the military law permits the treatment of soldiers with such cruelty, and if there is any redress. I should think that the colonel would tremble for his own life if he should command in action any of the soldiers who witnessed the outrage upon a fellow-soldier. Yesterday I read the appeal which Wendell Phillips made to the legislature of Massachusetts for the removal of Judge Loring from the office of probate judge, as he presented the same, signed by the citizens of Massachusetts in large numbers, because of his inhuman acts in the case of Anthony Burns, the fugitiv returned by him to bondage. It is to be hoped some military Wendell Phillips may arise who shall plead the cause of the soldier with as good result as the late Wendell Phillips pleaded the cause of the widows and orphans of Massachusetts—Judge Loring was removed. I hope to liv long enough to know that men so brutal as the one inflicting the punishment and the others who acquiesced in the atrocity hav lost the right to wear the uniform of military officers.

I wonder if the keepers of saloons—the saloons in Chicago—will not think it obligatory upon them to send a vote of thanks to Congress for having made it possible that they shall receive great profit in their business by prohibiting the keeping open of the World's Exposition every seventh day. Alas, for the ignorance of lawmakers! The great Catholic church studies to keep its members ignorant, and the Protestant church does about the same. Through its influence editors are imprisoned because they publish truth, distasteful truth. Men are shut up in jail for doing manual labor on Sunday. The mails are closed against the writings of people who do not bow to the religious opinions of Mr. Wanamaker, and the people are not alarmed. I hope THE TRUTH SEEKER will continue to speak the truth without fear, and that its Editor may liv to see the government Secular instead of Christian.

LUCY N. COLMAN.

Boston, July 29, 1892.

Theological Geography.

But the strictly biblical men of science, such eminent fathers and bishops as Theophilus of Antioch in the second century, Clement of Alexandria in the third, and others in centuries following, were not content with merely opposing what they stigmatized as an old heathen theory; they drew from their Bibles a new Christian theory, to which one church authority added one idea and another another, until it was fully developed. Taking the survival of various early traditions, given in the seventh verse of the first chapter of Genesis, they dwelt on the scriptural declaration that the earth was, at creation, arched over with a solid vault, "a firmament," and to this they added the passage from Isaiah in which it is declared that the heavens are stretched out "like a curtain," and again "like a tent to dwell in." The universe, then, is like a house: the earth is its ground floor, the firmament its ceiling, under which the almighty hangs out the sun to rule the day, and the moon and stars to rule the night. This ceiling is also the floor of the apartment above, and in this is a cistern, shaped, as one of the authorities says, "like a bathing-tank," and containing "the waters which are above the firmament." These waters are let down upon the earth by the almighty and his angels through the "windows of heaven." As to the movement of the sun, there was a citation of various passages in Genesis, mixed with metaphysics in various proportions, and this was thought to giv ample proofs from the Bible that the earth could not be a sphere.—Dr. Andrew D. White in The Popular Science Monthly for August.

Our Pagan Sunday.

The World's Fair at Chicago is quite likely to be a financial failure anyhow, and will doubtless be a disastrous failure if it is closed on the pagan Sunday (Dies Solis), falsely called the Christian Sabbath.—W. H. Burr in the Washington Post, July 18th.

"Pushed By Unseen Hands."

From the Omaha Bee.

Helen H. Gardener is just about to giv to the world another book under the title of "Pushed By Unseen Hands," which promises from advance-sheets to be as popular as "A Thoughtless Yes' and "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" These stories are highly commended from a scientific point of view by recognized scientific authority. As a writer of short stories Helen Gardener has achieved an enviable reputation, and her new book givs indication that she does not intend to relinquish this charming method of giving to her readers pleasure with profit, whatever else she may do.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM's lecture appointments:

Missoula, Mont.	Aug. 6, 7	Chicago, Ill.	Sept. 4, 11
Eau Claire and vicinity, Wis.	Aug. 24–29

Some dates are not filled. Those along the line who desire lectures will please write S. P. Putnam, Palouse City, Wash.

W. S. BELL's lecture appointments:

Leadville, Col.	Aug. 6, 7	Pueblo, Col.	Aug. 11
Salida, "	" 8	Denver, "	" 14
Canyon City, "	" 9, 10

Letters of Friends.

Objects to Having It Said He Has Lame Senses.

NEW YORK, June 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: All Materialists will please take notice and go to the eminent Spiritualist, August Buesing, of Jacksonville, Fla., for "truth, reason, and logic." He will measure to you any quality and length by his yardstick. His senses are neither too lame nor too feeble, as are ours, Materialists', to handle and dissertate on any and all knowledge of the past, present, or future time for all eternity. It appears to me he has tasted the past and touched the future; heard angels singing and playing harps, and Gabriel's blast; smelled fresh brimstone from hell, and can see around corners quick as lightning, and anyone not able to comprehend it and agree with him must be simply "an ignoramus, a lunatic, a brute, or a liar."

Truly he handles us Materialists without gloves. But I think it will be better for us not to follow him and be a little careful to glove our hands for our health's sake if we hav anything to say at all. Besides, he might kick us sky-high out of all existence.

In to-day's TRUTH SEEKER, June 25th, Mr. Wettstein trys to explain to him nature's way of action and working, but I consider his time and labor wasted. It is useless to controvert, more to convert, a being like Mr. Buesing. Let him severely alone according to Prov. xxvii, 22.

We may not expect to read anything edifying and lucid from this Spiritualist of Jackassville, but it is at least ludicrous.

We will keep good distance.

FREDERICK KOEZLY.

Preachers Suppressing Rival Amusements.

TOLEDO, O., June 11, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The pious, over-fed followers of the meek and lowly in this city are not meeting with very flattering success in their crusade against what they call "Sunday desecration." In fact, their efforts thus far hav all resulted in failure.

In the beginning of the season they started out to put down Sunday baseball. First, they tried the faith cure. Special sermons and special prayers were offered in all the churches by all the pious drones in the city. They supplicated the throne of grace with all the hypocritical cant of which they were capable. They saw that Sunday baseball drew the crowd. Their churches were becoming as lonesome and deserted as a last year's bird's nest. No money could be collected from empty benches. So they entreated their God to make bare his arm and smite the wicked ball-player, and lead back to the fold the man with the dollar and save their collections from utter annihilation. But notwithstanding all their howling and prayers the crowds at the ball-grounds grew larger each Sunday. The prayer-answering God (?) was deaf to their entreaties, and regarded not their groaning and their lamentations. They had his promis, it was down in black and white, "What things soever ye shall ask in prayer believe ye shall receive, and ye shall hav it." The only condition necessary to insure success was belief. Do the preachers believe? If they do, failure proves their God is dishonest. If they do not, then they subject themselvs to the condemnation expressed in Mark xvi, 16: "He that believeth not shall be damned." So, Mr. Preacher, God is either a first-class fraud, or you will all be eternally damned for not believing him. One of these positions is true. Take that which you please, for both are against you.

Well, prayer having failed to stop Sunday baseball they tried another scheme. They managed to influence the board of police commissioners, "who, by the way, are a lot of old orthodox grannies," to hav the players arrested. They succeeded. These hypocritical paupers who profess to teach a religion of love, mercy, and forbearance, having secured the assistance of the entire police department, are moving heaven and earth to hav the ball-players sent to state prison, but they did not succeed. The jury, men of intelligence, not having the fear of God in their hearts but being full of sympathy for their fellow-man, hav brought in a verdict of "not guilty." We are waiting anxiously to see what the next move will be.

W. WINTER.

Christian Falsehoods Refuted.

UKIAH, COL., July 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The inclosed letter, as you see, is a copy of one to the Rev. Harison Price, a former pastor of the Ukiah Campbellite Christian church, who still exercises a special interest and oversight in its superintendence, and during Brother Foster's five weeks' revival was very fervently and enthusiastically engaged both night and day in calling sinners to repentance. Therefore I make free to call his attention to one or two of Brother Foster's inconsistencies as a reminder that he is a little deficient in Bible lore as well as those whom he denounces as Infidels.

Yours truly, THOS. MCCOWEN.

REV. HARISON PRICE, Dear Sir: Since enjoying the privilege of listening to the late series of discourses by Rev. W. A. Foster, which of course were intended for our hearing and benefit, and now the same having become common property, I beg leave to suggest for your consideration a little brief comment, not in detail by any means, but more especially with regard to the one point of consistency. First, his discarding the Old Testament, as "having been given especially for the Jews, and for nobody else—having no application whatever to Brother Foster or anyone but the Jews." And still he holds on to it, quotes from it, and preaches from it.

Then he rejects reason and conscience as unreliable guides; running counter to Paul's admonitions of "Come let us reason together;" "Be ye always ready to render a reason for the hope that is within you."

But dropping this question, I will refer to one other of some importance. You will recollect, in speaking of mankind being led astray in trusting to themselvs, or to their reason, instead of trusting to the teachings of the Bible, he delineated the ravages of witchcraft and the end-of-the-world craze, as being attributable to this cause, when, on investigation, we find the very reverse of this is the fact. First, see Saul's death raid of the witches, leaving only the witch of Endor (1 Sam. xxxviii; Lev. xx, 27; Ex. xxii, 18). Now, friend Price, whatever there is of witchcraft, good, bad, or indifferent, it is clearly recognized in these texts, and Brother Foster could hardly be ignorant of the fact. Then, in answer to the interrogatories of the disciples, as to the time of Christ's coming and the end of the world, after alluding to all the incidents that should occur before this period, he says, "Verily I say unto you, this generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled." Now, whatever may be meant by this declaration, or whatever construction may be put upon it, the end of the world is clearly recognized. Therefore, it is hardly worth while to try to disguise the fact, or to attempt to make reason responsible for leading mankind into the miasmatic slough of witchcraft and the end-of-the-world craze, since both are unmistakably taught in the Bible.

Yours respectfully, THOS. MCCOWEN.

Anxious That Freethought Be Spread.

LEON, IA., July 20, 292.

MR. EDITOR: We hav been reading your paper for several years and would feel quite lost without it. Our little boys are always anxious to open it to see what are the new pictures. It contains so much good reading that it seems too bad it can not be read in every home in the land, but too often would ignorance and prejudice consign it to the flames after taking a glance at it. What is to be done to overcome this prejudice?

I like the plan Katie Kehm Smith suggested in her article, "What Must Liberals Do To Be Saved?" and published in THE TRUTH SEEKER some time in March. I believe it worthy of an experiment. The churches are an example of what organization can do. It seems there ought to be some plan on which Liberals could unite and work together to make Liberalism more popular.

We meet with persons who neither want to read nor talk Liberalism; if they would read something from the Liberal standpoint, perhaps they would not be so prejudiced nor hav such bitter thoughts toward us. I suggested this to our schoolteacher when we were having Bible reading forced upon our children, and she sneeringly replied, "I don't want to read your Infidel papers."

It seems there are some people who regard Infidels more as criminals or as persons who hav no rights that Christians are bound to respect than as fellow-beings with equal rights and privileges. But they are not all like this, by any means.

If we had regular meetings with a good lecture once or twice a month, many lukewarm Liberals might be aroused to a sense of duty and try to use their influence more for the spread of Liberalism and the cause of humanity. There are some liberal-minded Christians who would drop in just to hear what the lecturer had to say, and in time popular prejudice might be so far overcome that others would not be afraid to hear. In my opinion, people must be willing to hear and read before they will use any reason on this subject. I would like to see Katie Kehm Smith's plan given a trial, at least. Let it begin in the cities and larger towns and gradually spread throughout the country.

It is a hard struggle, when Christianity has fought and stigmatized Infidelity for so many hundreds of years; but, thanks to the brave Infidels of the past who hav done so much for human liberty, and to the true Infidels of to-day who are doing such grand and noble work for the same cause, Liberalism is slowly but surely and firmly gaining ground.

Is the cause of Liberalism to be represented at the World's Fair? It certainly ought to be.

Yours for truth and justice,

ELLEN E. LONG.

Against Many Abuses.

EAST RANDOLPH, N. Y., July 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: This is a beautiful day. The summer air is rich and fragrant, and the smiling sunshine adds dazzling splendor to the green drapery of the glittering mountains in the distance. The attractiv pictures of the white and fleecy blue sky with its roaming billows of clouds; the silvery waters that make music low and sweet; the charming little feathery songsters of the maples, enhance life as all blend together to instruct and delight us. And to me it is more joy to hold sweet communion with nature outside the prison doors of a church than to be confined inside and listen (as I hav for four Sundays) to no refreshing, inspiring, uplifting, new ideas.

Orthodoxy is a foe to the human race, an obnoxious weed that hinders the flowers of progress from blooming in the brains of humanity. And, indeed, it is no wonder that so many refrain from attending church. The pulpit cannot intellectually entertain the mind-hunger of the pews; hence other places, to a vast majority of people, are more welcome. Rather than be in continual pain for an hour Sundays we walk the streets and fields; visit our friends; visit the lake and the falls; read the excellent Sunday papers, THE TRUTH SEEKER, the Freethinkers' Magazine, the Arena, and the Review of Reviews, each and all containing thoughts fresh from the world's ripest scholars. And oh, how much pleasure and profit we derive therefrom.

Sundays should be, above all other days, a day the poor should enjoy themselvs, a day of rest and pleasure with family and friends, for it is the only day they really hav in seven, for the other six they toil to keep from starving—while those they work for luxuriate on the enormous profits of the white slaves' sweat, tears, and, in many cases, blood. A few rich nabobs—the government "protects"—are robbing the common people. And now these persons wish to deprive the poor of visiting the World's Fair on Sunday. It is no wonder the poor strike. It is no wonder they protest against their oppressors. And politicians of all parties should see justice done to all who labor—men, women, and children. For my part, I entertain no ill will toward the rich who deal honestly with the poor, but the robbers who swindle the poor every day—each and all of you hav my contempt!

The leeches of this country, preacher and priest, hav been in partnership too long with the money kings for the poor people's welfare, and to-day I call upon all working people, Ask for your rights, and see to it that you get them. But do not be so foolish as to destroy property, or let those you love suffer in the least by any reckless act of yours. In closing, I wish to thank THE TRUTH SEEKER and all the defenders of liberty for the noble work of the past, and may the day soon dawn when justice will receive its just reward.

Very truly, R. R. JONES.

Hav Sacred History at the Fair.

MOUNDS JUNC., ILL., July 18, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: While the Sunday-opening aspects of the Columbian Exposition are being referred to occasionally, it seems strange that Sabbatarians are overlooking their opportunity to devote the day to an illustration of the sacred history of the world, as: The happy condition of its earlier inhabitants; the untimely diversion of eating apples, with its appalling effects; the subsequent deluge; the ingenious device for saving samples of the original stock; the divine interposition of the "great physician," whereby the fearful effects of apple-eating were (provisionally) suspended; the heroic and persistent efforts of individuals to carry out the divine and beautiful plan for man's redemption, together with proofs of its simplicity and effectivness—although stoutly resisted by such stupid heads as Bruno, Servetus, Democritus, Galileo, and Copernicus.

A special department should be asked for and a special fund demanded for providing the means of illustration—which should be on the grandest conceivable scale—and such sacred artists as Joseph Cook and Talmage should be at once made directors.

It must be confessed that the genesis of the world is a little difficult of display in Jackson park, but with the Lord's aid old Joshua had the sun arrested, and the making of a world like ours is a slight matter if the same God can be enlisted—and surely the efficacy of prayer has not "ceasted," as the girl said of the rain. It is true a beautiful ripe June would be best for spectacular effect in the apple episode, and it would be well to set some in the greenhouse, and some outdoors, to prolong the occasion. Rev. Mr. Talmage's experience in the Holy Land will enable him to provide a treat, and a surprise to the crowd, by means of a Chicago waif secreted in the bull-rushes. Government aid could be secured, now that this is a "Christian nation," and Prof. Joseph Cook could open communication with visitors to bring samples of living animals, whereby a veritable Noah's ark may be put afloat, and also found after the "great delusion" with every member safe aboard.

I take a good deal of satisfaction in advance, at observing the antics of a walking fish of the South Pacific, which possesses the power to thrust the eyes out of their sockets, enabling it to look before with one eye and behind with the other, earning for himself the name "stare-about." Although no special mention is made of the behavior of this little fellow in the ark, I dare say he furnished great diversion to his compagnons de voyage. Out of respect for the brilliant professional gentlemen whose names are suggested to our Christian friends as managers and commissioners for "Sabbath display," no more incidents in the beautiful history will be alluded to; but I hope the splendid opportunity to overthrow Infidelity, and establish the Sublime Religion of Jesus, will not be overlooked and passed by.

JAS. H. CRAIN.

Instructiv Debate.

ROGERS, ARK., June 31, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: There was recently held here a five days' debate, of two sessions each day, of two hours each session, between Rev. J. N. Hall, of Fulton, Ky., and J. E. Remsburg, of Oak Mills, Kan. The first proposition was: "The Bible is an inspired revelation from God." Mr. Hall affirmed and Mr. Remsburg denied. The second proposition was: "The Christ of theology is a myth, and the four gospels which purport to giv a record of his life and teachings are unworthy of credit." Mr. Remsburg affirms and Mr. Hall denies.

The discussion on the part of Mr. Hall was conducted in a dishonest, unfair, and not even in a gentlemanly manner. Mr. Hall is a good talker, and has good command of language; is well informed; but he never failed to misrepresent the position of his opponent from one to four times in every speech. He never failed to notice all argument adduced by his opponent which he could twist or distort in any possible manner to make it mean something different from what the plain reading indicated; and all argument that would not in any possible manner admit of twisting or distorting he would pass over in silence.

As an instance of this kind of argument I will mention one. Mr. Hall in trying to prove that the account given in Genesis of the creation harmonized with geology, said "day" in that account did not mean a space of twenty-four hours of time, but meant "a period or an indefinit length of time." Mr. Remsburg quoted the commandment which says, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. For in six days the Lord created the heavens and earth," etc. Mr. Hall justified God in all the cruelties ascribed to him in the Old Testament in his dealing with the people of that age, thus admitting that God could not, or would not, furnish any better plan than engaging in wars of extermination, and thus putting himself on a level with the most brutal savages; and because Mr. Remsburg could not receive this as a true delineation of God's character he called him a blasphemer. The question is, Who was the blasphemer in this case?

When Mr. Hall came to the second proposition in the discussion, he justified God in the crime of seduction, thus admitting that God could furnish no better plan of salvation than indulgence in the crime of seduction. Now, may we not reasonably infer from this kind of reasoning that it is on account of this kind of immoral teaching that so many of the clergy indulge in this overshadowing business with other men's wives and daughters?

At the opening of each session of Mr. Hall's part of the discussion he thought it necessary to ask the blessing and help of God, that he might do all things decently and in order (thus admitting that he could not be honest, fair, and gentlemanly without the help of his God), then through the entire discussion proved by his dishonesty and unfairness that his God could not, or would not, help him to do all things decently and in order. After Mr. Remsburg proving his superiority in honesty, fairness, and courtesy, without the assistance of Mr. Hall's God, I will state how he treated the right of Mr. Remsburg to close his part of the discussion. Mr. Hall, with the aid of the necktie fraternity, without request or permission, had the audacity to close the debate with prayer, and in that prayer had the impudence to ask his God to assist him in converting Mr. Remsburg and his friend, so that they would accept the immoral teaching of his God.

Wishing you success in spreading the truth, I am yours for truth, E. H. D.

A Preacher Vanquished.

FLAT CREEK, LA., July 3, 292.

MR. EDITOR: My aged friend James Bird, of Atlanta, Winn parish, La., is a veritable walking library. He is a Voltaire living in obscurity, as he never writes anything for publication to let himself be known away from home. He is very learned in language, history, and natural sciences. He is one of the most brilliant and entertaining conversationalists that it was ever my good fortune to meet. Because he is intellectually in advance of his neighbors, and because he knows more than they do, they call him an Infidel. In regard to origin and destiny he is Agnostic, and modest enough to say, "I don't know." But they are gnostic. They think they know, because, as the Indian convert said, "The preacher tell me so." Some years ago a new preacher came to his village and heard that Mr. Bird was an Infidel. On Saturday night he went to see Mr. Bird and entreated Mr. Bird to go and hear him preach, saying, "If you will come out and hear me preach perhaps I can convert you." Perhaps he had read about how the famous chatterer Dr. Talmage knocked down his men of straw, and was green enough to believe that he could knock down a real, living Infidel. Mr. Bird promised him that he would go. So on Sunday he went to church and seated himself immediately in front of the pulpit, where the minister could hav a full swing at him. The minister preached a sermon of the Talmagian order against the great unknown (to him) which he called Infidelity. He said that the Infidels were not sincere in their professions; that they did believe, but were not honest enough to acknowledge it. When he concluded the services he stepped down out of the pulpit and extended his hand to Mr. Bird, saying, "I hope you are not offended with me." "Oh, no," replied Mr. Bird, "not at all. The like of that does not disturb my equanimity in the least. I hav been hearing the like of that until I hav become used to it." Now, there happened to be a man present that day named James Dove, who was partially paralyzed and had to use crutches, and had to be assisted in mounting his horse. The preacher saw Mr. Dove helped upon his horse and went to him. Laying his hand upon Mr. Dove's thigh, he said: "Oh, my poor afflicted brother, I am very sorry for you indeed. If I had the power to heal your infirmities, I would most gladly do so." Then was Mr. Bird's opportunity and he used it. He said: "You hav no faith or you could heal him. You are no more a believer than I am. If you believed the gospel which you preach you would hav the power to heal him." He then commenced to quote the last twelve verses of the gospel according to Mark. The preacher knew what was coming and started to his horse. By the time Mr. Bird was done quoting his scripture the preacher was on his horse and out of hearing distance, and a crowd of people were standing there, some laughing and others looking amazed. This story is no fiction. It is a real occurrence, as narrated to me by Mr. Bird. And it appears to me that the story is worthy of a place in the columns of the grand old TRUTH SEEKER.

Tertullian said: "We oppose to them [the heretics] this step above all others, of not admitting them to any discussion of the scriptures. If in these lie their resources, it ought to be clearly seen to whom belongs the possession of the scriptures, that none may be admitted to the use thereof who has no title at all to the privilege" (Prescription Against Heretics, C. 15).

The Catholic church took the Bible away from the people, but Protestantism gave it back to them, and the Bible is the sharpest weapon that we hav to fight Christianity with. No Freethinker who is worthy of the name will run from a preacher, but will stand his ground with the Bible in one hand and the torch of reason in the other, and make the other fellow do the running. P. F. SHUMAKER.

Prohibition and Liver Disease.

CLIMAX, MINN., July 10, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of June 25th appears an article headed, "Prohibition Party Principles." In this article the writer attacks every man and woman that belongs to the Prohibition party as persons that are afflicted with a diseased liver, and says the gall is thrown into the blood in place of into the right channels and this derangement of the system causes the Prohibitionists to look upon the supreme bench of the courts as monstrous devils dealing out vengeance for money. This, I suppose, applies to the antimonopoly plank, or to the plank that says that all appointments for all civil offices chiefly clerical in their duties should be based upon qualification, and not upon party service. These are the only demands in the Prohibitionist platform that this awful remark can apply to, and how appropriate it may be I shall leave to the reader to decide.

And if it should happen to be the case that Mr. Heald, the writer of the mentioned article, should hav a few neighbors that are affected with liver disease and are Prohibitionists, I do not think the principles of the party should be held responsible.

Now, after Mr. Heald has described the awful condition of the health of a Prohibitionist and described how his reasons are affected, he goes on and says, "Little is the wonder he sees in the use of innocent wine a dreadful griffin with open jaws ready to swallow the world at a gulp." Since Mr. Heald thinks that the Prohibition party is a wolf attacking the lamb "innocent wine," we will hav to look at what they say. The first plank says: "The Prohibition party declares that the manufacture of and sale of alcoholic beverages shall be made public crimes and punished as such." And in another place they declare against the saloon. Now, I do not want to say that I believe the first plank is perfect, as it looks to me to be too restrictiv; but I am free to say that it is the best plank that ever has been in any political national platform on this subject. I think that what the Prohibition party wants to abolish is the abusiv use of intoxicating drink, and the only question is how to get at the evil. We all know that the distiller and the saloonkeeper are in the business for the profit or money that there is in the business. They are in the business for no other reason. I will take it for granted that Mr. Heald will agree with me that the drinking habit is a bad habit and is the cause of lots of suffering and depravity, crime and corruption, and it is plain to see that every person that forms a drinking habit becomes a source of profit to the distiller and to the saloonkeeper, and for this reason it becomes the business for a certain class of the community to get every youth to form the drinking habit and become a source of revenue to the whisky trust for his lifetime, and according to this principle the saloon and liquor interest of the country are organized. I believe that this is a dangerous element for society to be controled by, and therefore I think that people should come together and agree upon some popular plan to suppress the saloon traffic. This gentle expression of "innocent wine" is all right for music to the ear, but apply it to the saloon element of the city of New York with the Tammany Tiger at its back and the gentle lamb becomes a stinging serpent; and any other city will stand the same comparison as to the saloon element.

Now, Mr. Heald has told us all about what the Prohibitionists think and also the reason why they think so, so will you please tell us the benefit that we get from the saloon, how many great men the saloon has produced, and how it is a blessing to society? In fact, tell us all that you think about the saloon and the liquor traffic—and not so much what you think about the Prohibitionists, as under such a discussion Prohibition should be the subject and not the Prohibitionists.

Now, before closing allow me to make a business suggestion to Mr. Heald, if he believes his own statement to be true that all Prohibitionists suffer from disease of the liver. Get the exclusiv control of some of the best patent medicins for disease of the liver and commence to cure all the Prohibitionists of their ailments. There were four years ago 246,406 voters in the party. These, with all their families, would giv you a fine lot of customers, and with good profit on the medicin your fortune and fame would be made and you will die as a benefactor to your race. You would also get the praise and aid of the whisky manufacturers and dealers, and also of the two good old parties.

ANDREW STEENERSON.

Lively Debates on Religion.

FORT FAIRFIELD, ME., July 11, E.M. 292.

MR. EDITOR: It seems very strange to me not to write a letter for THE TRUTH SEEKER once in a while, or now for more than a year, especially when I am dealing such sledgehammer blows at Christianity, so called, in all its fearful and horrid forms as I am now doing almost every day. I want the members of THE TRUTH SEEKER family to understand that I am handling that hydra-headed, triple-headed monster without gloves. I had a red-hot discussion here one evening last winter with the wife of a neighbor, and in her house too. She asked me a few questions, which I answered in my usual Radical style, and then she piled it to me hot and heavy, thick and fast. I folded my arms, bent forward a little, rounded up my broad shoulders, and sat there and took it with a smiling countenance. When she wa done, or ought to hav been, I turned upon her like a Rocky mountain grizzly bear upon its prey. And, Mr. Editor, although I say it, you ought to hav been a mouse in the crack, so to speak, and heard the Gilmanian thunder roar and rumble and crash and reverberate through the house—as Paine said, "Like thunder through the sky, and in the distance far away waken the slumbering ages!" I confess I never talked so plain-heartedly to a woman on that subject before. When I became disgusted with her and did not want to listen to any more such fresh, flat, and insipid talk, I got up and buttoned up my overcoat. Then I looked her in the face and said: "'Thou shalt be overshadowed by the spirit of the highest, and he shall come upon thee and thou shalt conceive and bear a son.' Then, said I, God almighty left the throne of the universe, over which he was supposed to be presiding with unerring wisdom, and came down on this little insignificant eight-thousand-mile earth and got the Virgin Mary in a family way! God almighty committed debauchery with a young lady engaged to be married! There's where you get your Jesus Christ from! There's where you get your savior of the world from! There's the man whose innocent blood you expect is going to wash away the black sin of billions of people. And a belief in that debauchery, as Paine said, is called faith in the Lord and savior Jesus Christ! God came down here and adulterized with the Virgin Mary, and she conceived and bore a son. Good night! Shut the door! Rats!" And out of that house I went, and hav not been into it since after saying all that.

Awhile after that I locked horns with a man and gave him all he wanted in a few minutes. I felt inspired to talk to him, for I knew my listeners, who were my nephews, wanted me to. I am doing my duty with my tongue, at any rate.

I think, sometimes, THE TRUTH SEEKER, if possible, grows better and better with each succeeding issue. I might attempt to name some of its ablest correspondents. But it is of no use, for I should hav to name them all. There is not, in my opinion, another such paper, being supported by such a corps of able correspondents, on this terrestrial ball called the earth.

As I talk a great deal on religion I want stern facts with which to deal. And I want you to add a note to the bottom of this letter (if you print it, and I really hope you will do me that honor) and tell me, as near as you know, how many millions of people hav been burnt at the stake and otherwise tortured and put to death in the name of Christ and religion by the Catholics. I hav read an estimate of three millions, and one of three hundred millions. Now, which is it? Or is it neither? Please acquaint me with the fact in that case.

I dreamed night before last of being in New York city. But I did not call on THE TRUTH SEEKER. I dreamed the same night of receiving a visit from Colonel Ingersoll right here in my house. And of shaking hands with him? Well, I guess so!

Yours for liberty in the fullest sense of the word, H. H. GILMAN.

[Estimates differ, according as records vary, or as different investigators ascribe a given war to religious or to secular causes. Victor Hugo accuses the Christian sects of having killed by torture and war ninety million. Another reckoning by a competent authority is as follows: "It is estimated that over one million persons perished during the early Arian schism, one million in the Carthaginian struggle, seven million during the Saracen slaughter in Spain, five million during the eight Crusades, two million of Saxons and Scandinavians, one million in the wars against the Netherlands, Albigenses, Waldenses, and Huguenots; and one hundred million during the Justinian wars, saying nothing of minor conflicts, secret murders, and the extermination of from twenty to thirty million Peruvians and Mexicans. The great and good king Charlemagne baptized and beheaded four thousand five hundred Germans in a single day."—ED. T. S.]

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Across the Atlantic.

Over the Trackless Main.—Celebrating the Glorious Fourth on Shipboard.—A Procession of Icebergs.—A Fine Lecture.—Burial at Sea.

"Water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink." The great blue-green billows dancing, dashing, splashing on every side, leaping, rolling, tumbling, present a beautiful and entrancing sight. The ship plunges onward amid the huge water-giants and rolls and rocks with the waves as though they were playfellows.

All who possess sea legs hav put them on to-day, and yet they go reeling and staggering like drunken men—swaying from side to side with the motion of the ship.

What a wonderful expanse of water! But the captain knows the path like a book. I think I never before had so much respect and admiration for Americus Vespucci, Columbus, John Cabot, and the early navigators as since I began this sea voyage. How brave they were to undertake such a journey over seas with which they were not acquainted—over the trackless main, where no paths had been made, in crafts so rudely and clumsily built that we wonder they could ever accomplish the results they did.

Of course, being the anniversary of our national holiday, our dinner must be appropriate to the occasion. Below is the menu, and you will perceive it to be somewhat mixed, politically and otherwise:

MENU.

SOUP.
A la Cleveland.
A la Harrison.

FISH.
California shark, Yankee sauce.
Baked bluefish, Behring Sea sauce.

ENTREE.
Fillets of beef, a la J. G. Blaine.
Cutlets, a la Dave Hill.
Compote of pigeon, a la Dave Campbell.

ROAST.
Beef of America, tiger sauce.
Mary's little lamb, a la Yankee Doodle.

BOILED.
Chicken and smoked Cincinnati.
Ladies' delight, America.
Leg of pork, a la Bismarck.

VEGETABLES.
Asparagus from Oyster bay.
String beans from Alaska.
Green peas from Charleston.
Long Island potatoes.
Potatoes from away down South.

SWEETS.
Pudding, Republican.
Pudding, Democratic.
Prohibition pie.
McKinley jellies.
Souffles, a la Stevenson.
Taffy for the Alliance.
Peaches, a la Whitelaw Reid.
Hail Columbia cream.

Strawberries. Nuts. Oranges.
Apples. Raisins.
Tea. Coffee. Ice water.

It was announced in the afternoon that there would be an observance of the day after dinner in the large dining-hall, and, on the tables being cleared, as many as the room could comfortably contain were in the seats, while others filled the space in the saloon above. The following program was presented, Rev. W. W. Landrum, of Virginia, presiding in a very felicitous manner:

HYMN.—America.—By the Company.
ESSAY.—America the Oldest Country in the World.—Miss I. Wilbour, Washington, D. C.
The Empire State.—Rev. Geo. F. Nelson, New York city.
Women of America.—Miss Susan H. Wixon, Fall River, Mass.
SONG.—Heaven Upon Earth.—Mr. Gustav Porges, New York.
America's Open Gates.—Rev. S. H. Lee, Springfield, Mass.
America As It Ought to Be.—Mr. W. Martin Jones, Rochester, N. Y.
ORIGINAL POEM.—Flag of the Free.—Mrs. H. C. Ralston, Washington, D. C.
Where America Was Born.—Rev. Dr. Steele, Philadelphia, Pa.
RHYME COMPOSED FOR THE OCCASION.—Bugle Call.—By the Company.
Star-Spangled Banner.—By the Company.
PRAYER.—Rev. Dr. Wilkinson, Chicago.

After the services, which were certainly unique, all felt they had done their duty by the best country under the sun, and her health was drunk in lemonade and other beverages.

As this is a British ship, some one proposed three cheers for her majesty, Queen Victoria, and then three more cheers for the gallant commander of the City of Rome, Captain Young, which were given with a will. It seemed very odd to me to be mixed up in a celebration of Independence Day out in mid-ocean, with clergymen and politicians; of the former profession there are fifteen on board, but I stood it very well, and my remarks were received with much apparent favor. There is no knowing, however, what might hav been the consequence had my heretical notions been widely known on board the ship. They might hav thought it better to hav thrown me overboard as a Jonah rather than to hav invited me to take part in a Fourth of July performance.

I am informed that there are upward of eleven hundred human beings on board. What a cargo! The appointments of the ship are fine, with piano, organ, library, singing birds, and growing vines, so that one would hardly think he was on the sea, were it not for the sometimes rough-and-tumble of the ship as she strikes the rolling billows.

July 5.—

We are off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, about eleven hundred miles from Sandy Hook. Suddenly the word was passed around—"An iceberg! An iceberg!" All rushed to the rail, or as near as they could get to it. Sure enough, there appeared against the horizon a most magnificent sight. It stood like some half-ruined marble palace, towered and turreted, carved and rounded, white and clear against the sky. It was about five miles distant, and the hight was supposed to be two hundred feet out of water. An iceberg is supposed to hav four times its outer hight under water, so this one must hav measured in the neighborhood of eight hundred feet. Pretty soon another iceberg was discerned. This had the form of a cone, with a projection near its top, and was large and handsome. By and by, another iceberg came in sight. This had the shape of an old Gothic temple with curves and annexes. Such a glorious spectacle I never expect to see again. This was only four miles away, and we could see the fringe of icicles upon it, shining in the sun, and at times glistening like many-colored jewels. In my schooldays I remember of curiously following the proportions of the icebergs pictured there, but I did not then expect to ever behold a real one with my own eyes. But of icebergs there seems to be no end to-day, for we hav seen no less than five, some of them of huge, and all of them of beautiful, proportions. We hav seen only two vessels to-day, probably fishing craft. The sun shone clear, the skies were fair and the waters of the Atlantic blue and foaming.

"Am I sea-sick?" you inquire. Not at all. I do not know what it means yet, but may before the voyage is over. I see, however, that some are less fortunate and suffer much from the dreaded mal de mer. I think if they would come on deck, and get a breath of the pure and invigorating air, instead of remaining in their poky, dark state-rooms, they would feel much better.

This evening, July 5th, there was a lecture in the main saloon by Dr. John Murray, LL.D., F.R.S., a member of the Challenger exploration party. The subject of his discourse was "Ocean Currents," and proved exceedingly interesting.

July 6.—

A very sad and pathetic event occurred to-day. A woman in the steerage died yesterday after a brief illness, and was buried to-day between 3 and 4 o'clock. The body was incased in a rude box, made by the ship's carpenter. There were holes in it and a weight was put in that it might sink the more readily. It was covered with the American ensign, as she was an American citizen, and laid upon an improvised bier. The gangway was opened, ropes and blocks put in readiness, and the service for the burial of the dead read by the purser, and then, solemnly but quickly, the body was lowered into the sea, the hungry sea, that seemed to greedily part to receive its new gift. In an instant it was out of sight, gone down to the bottom of a magnificent cemetery, nearly three miles in depth. I was greatly distressed at some remarks, overheard this morning, by some thoughtless persons. "Ah, indeed, a death, then we shall hav a new sensation!—something to put in our diaries!" and, speaking of the burial, one inquired, "What time will the performance take place?" Let us charitably hope that no friend of theirs will ever be the chief factor in such a "performance."

The woman whose cold remains hav gone down to the bottom of the sea was the mother of two little children, as well as a prospectiv mother. The baby of eighteen months cried piteously for its dead mamma, as well as the older child of six years, who keenly realizes its loss. This evening a concert was held in the main saloon for the benefit of the little ones, and a handsome sum was realized. I was requested to be one of the collectors, and everyone responded liberally except one gruff old Dutchman, a minister. "Hum," said he, "I'll giv my contribution to the purser!" "Cannot you trust an American woman?" "Hoo, hoo," he grumbled, "I remember that Judas carried the money-bag." "But Judas was a man, not an American woman; we could expect nothing different from him, as his work was fore-ordained."

Later, he came stumbling along and put a silver half dollar in my hands, and then walked off with the air of a benevolent prince of the realm.

July 7.—

Another death occurred last evening. A feeble baby closed its little eyes in everlasting sleep, and this morning its emaciated casket of clay was lowered into the remorseless sea with the same ceremonies as the day before. Down it went; the waters closed over it; the ship sailed on, leaving the dead behind it.

Perhaps it is not surprising that in a company of eleven hundred human beings, as are on this ship, there should be an occasional death, but it is a sad and solemn event anywhere, far more so in the middle of the ocean.

Dr. Murray gave another exceedingly interesting lecture this evening on the phenomena of the ocean. He was introduced by W. Martin Jones, Esq., of Rochester, N. Y., who presided in a very happy manner. The lecture was replete with information.

I hav just been made acquainted with Mr. John Barry, a member of Parliament, a genial gentleman, proprietor of the Kirkcaldy floor-cloth and linoleum factories.

There are four hundred and eighty-six first cabin passengers. They comprise an intellectual company—teachers, professors in colleges, lawyers, editors, physicians, poets, musicians, and others. The time passes pleasantly, but I shall be glad to step on dry land once more.

This afternoon Dr. Murray treated the ship's company to another interesting talk on the composition of the ocean. It is rarely that passengers on shipboard hav the pleasure of listening to three discourses by so able and so distinguished a scholar upon matters of interest and instruction. We all appreciate certainly the great favor. I asked the doctor if he would kindly state his opinion as to the probable age of the earth. He replied, "It is very, very old," and his eyes twinkled as they seemed to add, "Much older than some of these divines do think." Dr. Murray is accompanied by his lovely wife and a charming little girl babe, whose name is Margaret Pitcairn Murray.

Mr. Jones has taken pictures of several of the company on board to-day; among others, the pictures of the two little girls, Lizzie and Maggie Gould, whose mamma was buried in the ocean the other day. We brought them from the steerage on deck and away forward to the bow of the ship, where the "kodak" man caught them instantaneously.

The children in the steerage are, as a rule, bright and interesting, and I hav taken much pleasure chatting with them.

We were coming along toward the coast of Ireland, although not in sight of land, when at sunset our eyes were delighted with a beautiful rainbow spanning the horizon and gleaming upon the waters—indeed a lovely bow of promis.

SUSAN H. WIXON.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50c.; cloth, $1.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper. 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt. G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., - - - $1.50.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of to-day."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Why Don't He Lend a Hand? and other Agnostic poems. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Cloth, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

News of the Week.

A special Catholic celebration of Columbus and his discovery will be held at New York October 12th.

Lava streams from Mt. Etna are advancing on the villages around, notwithstanding continual prayer by the inhabitants.

The Turkish embassador at London has expressed great indignation at the abuse of Mohammedan worshipers by Christians at Liverpool.

Talmage had such a pleasant visit with the czar that he declares he believes that the Russian system has been "monstrously misrepresented."

The Jews in Moscow hav now about all been ejected, and are massed near the frontier unable to cross because of the German guard against cholera. This disease will probably ravage them.

Superintendent Pratt of the Carlisle Indian school says that the Catholic church hires members of Congress to attack the national schools, and that it supports a lobby at Washington and seeks to control politics.

G. Curtis, of the Smithsonian Institute, official meteorologist to the government rain-making expedition, says: "The experiments hav utterly failed to demonstrate that explosions can develop a storm or produce a measurable rain."

On the 24th ult. the bishop at Brussels, Belgium, blessed a banner for an Anti-Socialist League in the cathedral. Later, while Anti-Socialists were holding a meeting in a hall, Socialists pushed in and destroyed the blessed banner.

At St. Petersburg there has been a miraculous discovery of an image of the Virgin in the foundation of a church being built on the spot where Czar Alexander II. was killed. The Virgin revealed the presence of the image to an old woman in a dream.

The two-hundredth anniversary, on the 29th ult., of the hanging of Rebecca Nourse for witchcraft was commemorated at Salem, Mass. A monument was dedicated to the forty men and women who testified to Rebecca Nourse's innocence, thereby risking death at the hands of the clergy and fanatics.

In a letter denying that he permitted nuns to make collections through the government departments, Grover Cleveland writes: "I know Cardinal Gibbons and know him to be a good citizen and first-rate American, and that his kindness of heart and toleration are in striking contrast with the fierce intolerance and vicious malignity which disgrace some who claim to be Protestants."

On the 29th ult. Congressman Thos. Watson, of Georgia, declared in the House that Congressmen continually appeared on the floor drunk and incoherent. His charge was resentfully opposed. He was backed by Jerry Simpson, a fellow-member of the People's party. Watson said: "Because ten of the People's party are powerless in the grasp of your tyrannical majority, you want to make me a scapegoat or a martyr."

One of the pamphlets issued by the Protestants of Ulster province, Ireland, preparatory to the war with Catholics which would follow Home Rule, says on the Ulster troops and their necessary training: "We must hav no Bull Runs; better to wait for months till our soldiers shall hav acquired disciplin than incur such a danger. We must not begin serious work with a scratch army, although we should hav nothing but a scratch army to fight."

Berkman, who attempted to assassinate Frick, says: "I believe in liberty and justice. I hav only been in your country five years, but I know its Constitution. Who ever livs up to it? Does the capitalist consider that the workingman is his equal? Every rich man is a traitor to his country. What work did Frick ever do to giv him the right to hold in his hands the happiness of thousands of workmen? I believe that every man is king and that every tyrant should die."

The appeal of the Catholics of Manitoba to the British privy council to compel the Manitoban government to maintain their separate schools has been dismissed. The Catholics will not submit, but will petition the Dominion government to ask the British House of Commons for an amendment to the Manitoba constitution continuing the separate schools. This move, says a dispatch, "it is feared will open up old feuds of race and religion in Canada and may lead to most serious trouble. Canada now faces a tremendous difficulty. Controversies less bitter hav led to civil wars."

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by
ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL.

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.

Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.

Common-Sense Thoughts on the Bible. 10c.

Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.

Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.

Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.

Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.

God Proposed for Our National Constitution. 10c.

Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.

Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.

Is Spiritualism True? 10c.

Man's True Saviors. 10c.

Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.

Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.

Radical Discourses on Religious Subjects. $1.25.

Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.

Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.

Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.

What Is Right? 10c.

What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.

Who are Christians? 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

And Treatment of Mediomania.

By R. F. Marvin, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting-Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address,
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Works of Charles Watts.

The Teachings of Secularism Compared with Orthodox Christianity. 96 pages. Price, 25 cents.

Secularism: Is It Founded on Reason, and Is It Sufficient to Meet the Needs of Mankind? Debate between the Editor of the Halifax Evening Mail and Charles Watts. With Prefatory Letters by George Jacob Holyoake and Colonel Ingersoll, and an Introduction by Helen H. Gardener. 60 pages, 25 cents.

A Reply to Father Lambert's "Tactics of Infidels." 20 cents. Post free.

Christianity: Its Origin, Nature, and Influence. 32 pages. Price, 15 cents.

The Horrors of the French Revolution: Their Causes. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Secularism: Destructiv and Constructiv. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Bible Morality. Its Teachings Shown to Be Contradictory and Defective as an Ethical Guide. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Agnosticism and Christian Theism: Which Is the More Reasonable? 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

Evolution and Special Creation. 10 cents.

Saints and Sinners—Which? 24 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

The Superstition of the Christian Sunday: A Plea for Liberty and Justice. 26 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The Glory of Unbelief. 22 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Nature and the Supernatural; or, Belief and Knowledge. 24 pages. Price, 10 cents.

The American Secular Union; Its Necessity and the Justice of Its Nine Demands. (Dedicated to Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll.) 32 pages in cover. Price, 10 cents.

Theological Presumption: An Open Letter to the Rev. Dr. R. F. Burns, of Halifax, N. S. In this letter the following subjects are dealt with: 1. Why Do the Clergy Avoid Debate? 2. The Position of Agnosticism Toward Christianity. 3. Freethought and Men of Science. 4. The Difference Between Facts and Opinions. 5. Christ and Heroism. 6. Christianity and Slavery. 16 pages. Price, 5 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette pl., New York.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED.

A Work proving Christianity a Fiction. Most Startling Revelations of the Nineteenth Century. Send Address for Prospectus to

ORIENTAL PUBLISHING CO., P.O.Box 446, Philadelphia, Pa.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.

Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?

By F. F. [illegible] cloth, 30 cents

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By Wm. McDonnell. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

To Regulate the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABULES.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.
Loeb & Loeb, Montgomery.
Arizona.
J. S. Mansfield, Tucson.
California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 117 W. 1st, Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 102 N. Main, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Thos. W. Baker, Selma.
L. R. Titus, 237 South 4th st., San Jose.
Canada.
P. C. Allen, 35 King st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
John McKenna, 80 Yonge st., Toronto.
R. J. Moffat, Sea Island, Tulu Island, B.C.
Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.
C. Smith & Son, 385 Larimer st., Denver.
Stanchfield & Co., 200 Union ave., Pueblo.
Harbottle & Co., Salida.
Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.
A. J. Gardner, Kissimmee.
Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.
Illinois.
Post-Office News Co., 93 Adams, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., 204 Wabash ave., Chicago.
Chas. W. Curry, 183 Madison st., Chicago.
Chas. Macdonald, 55 Washington, Chicago.
Indiana.
H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.
A. C. Katt, Fort Wayne.
Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne, New Orleans.
Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Baker & Holton, 87 Woodward av., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Minnesota.
E. P. Parcher, 8 3rd st., So. Minneapolis.
Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.
Nebraska.
J. M. Wiley, P. O. News Depot, York.
New York.
Brentano Bros., 5th ave. & 18th st., N. Y.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
Abramowitz Bros., 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., N.Y.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.
E. J. Nieuwland, 10th ave. and 157th st.
Anderson & Co., 704 8th ave.
S. M. Bernhard, 119 E. 104th st.
Harlem Book Co., Boulevard Hotel, 124th st. and Lexington ave.
Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 342 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
B. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Day & Co., 259 Superior, Clevel'd.
Alf. Warren Co, 217 Central ave, Cincinnati.
Thos. Goddard, Box 235, Huron.
Standard News Co., 14 W. Tusc st, Canton.
Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 291 Alder st., Portland,
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.
G. Thornton, Palace Hotel Block, Heppner
Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden, Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
R. Staley, Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.
Fulton Bros., McKeesport.
Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.
Tennessee.
W. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry, Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.
Rich Bros. & Mills, 229 N. Cherry, Nashville
Texas.
H. Hover, Denison.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 346½ Main st., Dallas.
G. W. Baldwin, Houston.
E. L. Merrill, Independent Pulpit, Waco.
Utah.
C. H. Parsons, 164 S. Main, Salt Lake City.
Margetts Bros., 76 Main st., Salt Lake City.
Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
J. C. Nathan, 104 S. 2nd st., Seattle.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.
West Virginia.
News Store, 123 3rd st., Parkersburg.
England. [London.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st.,
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.
Australia.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.
New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

NURSING MOTHERS USE

ALE AND BEEF

"Peptonized."

Because it generates a full supply of rich milk. It is a genuine nourishment—a health-giving food.

YOUR DRUGGIST SELLS IT.

ALE & BEEF CO., 267 W. 17th St., New York.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

The Evolution of the Devil. By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York city. The most learned, accurate, scientific, and philosophical analysis of his satanic majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title-page. Price, 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Ingersoll's Address before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian association ever invited a noted Infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from be ginning to end. The pamph et contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 1. Contributors: G. J. Holyoake, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, Karl Blind, Lydia R. Chase. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

Bruno Pamphlet No. 2. Contributors: R. G. Ingersoll, Thos. Davidson, T. B. Wakeman, G. J. Holyoake, et al. 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

The Bruno Monument. A fine engraving printed on extra heavy enameled paper, 10x12 inches, for framing; put up in pasteboard tubes for mailing. 20 cents. Ten copies for $1.50.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Ingersoll's Great Address on Thomas Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York city. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

Standing Up for Jesus; or what the editor of the Freethinkers' Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

NOTHING is more sacred, or can be more sacred, than the well-being of man.—Ingersoll.

THE most noteworthy thing about Jehovah and his Decalog is this: He, as the Bible shows, broke every "commandment" in it save one. That one was, Thou shalt hav no other God before me. Through all his slaughter and lust and lying he always retained a good opinion of himself, and kept at least one item of his Decalog intact by never bowing his knee to any other God. He could endure Rahab and Ruth; he could favor incestuous Lot and gory David; but he could not stand Ashtaroth or Baal.—Saladin in God and His Book.

IN earlier ages, the mysteries of life were conveniently referred to God; but, now, we see the laws of nature satisfactorily explaining all the facts of existing forms, and we only refer back to God the origin of matter and force. This is merely saying that as yet we are ignorant of the first cause of all existence; but, having resolved so many of the acts of God into intelligible processes of nature, does not analogy suggest that what is still unknown may yet be discovered by the advancing mind and unceasing investigation of man? —Robt. C. Adams.

THINK of the importance of Friendship in the education of men.

He that hath love and judgment too
Sees more than any other do.

It will make a man honest; it will make him a hero; it will make him a saint. It is the state of the just dealing with the just, the magnanimous with the magnanimous, the sincere with the sincere, man with man. . . . All the abuses which are the object of reform with the philanthropist, the statesman, and the housekeeper are unconsciously amended in the intercourse of Friends.—Thoreau.

NOT as the humble and submissiv slave of a supernatural master, nor as the helpless toy in the hands of heavenly powers, but as a proud and free son of nature, understanding her laws and knowing how to turn them to his own use, does the creature of modern civilization, the Freethinker, appear; being no longer, as Brookes called him, that "unhallowed medium between angel and beast," but the incarnation of the mightiest effort of nature. Though on the one hand he partakes of all the weaknesses and imperfections of his animal nature and origin, on the other he is raised up above this nature of his and becomes the ruler of the world, by virtue of the enhanced powers of his highly-developed nervous system.—Büchner.

THE worthlessness of earthly life is inculcated with a distinctness which seems intended as an encouragement to the indirect suicide of monastic asceticism: yet the same moralists who bewail this earth as a vale of tears take the liveliest interest in the prolongation of human life, and court popularity by indorsing every measure tending to promote the progress of sanitary reform. The inevitable result of such inconsistencies is a moral confusion resembling the bewilderment of the guests invited to the banquet of Rueckert's Hakim Baba, who urged his visitors to indulge in wine, but thrashed them fearfully if they showed any signs of intoxication. From the chaos of conflicting theoretical and practical lessons our children, by the aid of experience, somehow manage to evolve a moral compromise code of their own; but what a waste of time could be saved, how many hours of doubt, perplexity, and repentance could be obviated, by a system of ethics inculcating precepts in harmony with the laws of nature and the facts of actual life!—Prof. Felix Oswald.

WE, miserable Frenchmen, who boast of having recovered some small part of our senses, in what a horrid sink of stupid barbarism were we immersed! Not a parliament, not a presidial court, but was occupied in trying sorcerers; not a great jurisconsult, who did not write memorials on possessions by the devil. France resounded with the cries of imbecil creatures whom the judges, after making them believe that they had danced round a caldron, tortured and put to death without pity, in horrible torments. Catholics and Protestants were alike infected with this absurd and frightful superstition; the pretext being, that in one of the Christian gospels, it is said that disciples were sent to cast out devils. It was a sacred duty to put girls to the torture, in order to make them confess that they had lain with Satan, and that they had fallen in love with him in the form of a goat. All the particulars of the meetings of the girls with this goat were detailed in the trials of the unfortunate individuals. They were burnt at last, whether they confessed or denied; and France was one vast theater of judicial carnage.—Voltaire.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth. - - - - - - 50 cents

THE NEW SPELLINGS.

English spelling is the worst in the world. Millions of dollars are wasted each year in the writing and printing of useless letters. The education of our children is retarded and the progress of our people is hampered by our cumbrous, illogical, misleading orthografy. The scholarship of the world is almost a unit in demanding a change. The American Philological Association has recommended the following RULES FOR NEW SPELLINGS for immediate use, and a resolution has been introduced in Congress, instructing the Public Printer to conform to them in all printing for the government:

1. Drop UE at the end of words like dialogue, catalogue, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell demagog, epilog, synagog, etc.
2. Drop final E in such words as definite, infinite, favorite, etc., where the preceding vowel is short. Thus spell opposit, preterit, hypocrit, requisit, etc.
3. Drop final TE in words like quartette, coquette, cigarette, etc. Thus spell cigaret, roset, epaulet, vedet, gazet, etc.
4. Drop final ME in words like programme. Thus spell program, orifiam, gram, etc.
5. Change PH to F in words like phantom, telegraph, phrase, etc. Thus spell alfabet, paragraf, filosofy, fonetic, fotograf, etc.
6. Substitute E for the difthongs Æ and Œ when they have the sound of that letter. Thus spell eolian, esthetic, diarrhea, subpena, esofagus, atheneum, etc.

☞ If you would array yourself on the side of progress, adopt the foregoing in all that you write, and especially in all that you PRINT.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW.
WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.

By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

Materialism:

Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German.
Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

—LIQUOR DRINKING—

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament.

THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not Included in the New Testament.

Price, - - - - - - - - - - $1.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, - - - - - - 75 cents.

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIOT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, - - - - - - - 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can have their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J. P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,

Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,

Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore

Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial to Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,
Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Candle From Under The Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - - - 50 cents.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, - - 40 cents.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

The Rights of Women

—AND—

THE SEXUAL RELATIONS.

By KARL HEINZEN, the famous German Radical Editor.

An Address to an Unknown Lady Reader. Historical Review of the Legal Position of Women. The Emancipation of Woman. The Passive Prostitution of Women. The Active Prostitution of Men. The Execution of Men. Love and Jealousy. Morality. Marriage. Adultery. Divorce. Is Marriage a Contract? Hanging a Woman. Religion. The Economic Independence of Woman Liberty and the Revolution the Allies of Woman

Paper, 50c. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BEST:

THE

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 3-ounce coin silver, $22; 4-ounce, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $31 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7 50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $15; 11 jewels, $16 50; 15 jewels, $23; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3 60, knives, $1 75; forks, $1.75; all for $6. Solid silver spoons, $1.50 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Extra heavy teas, $3. Etched:

"The Time to be Happy is Now,"

50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2 75, and $3 50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.

Diamonds. 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1. and returned free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

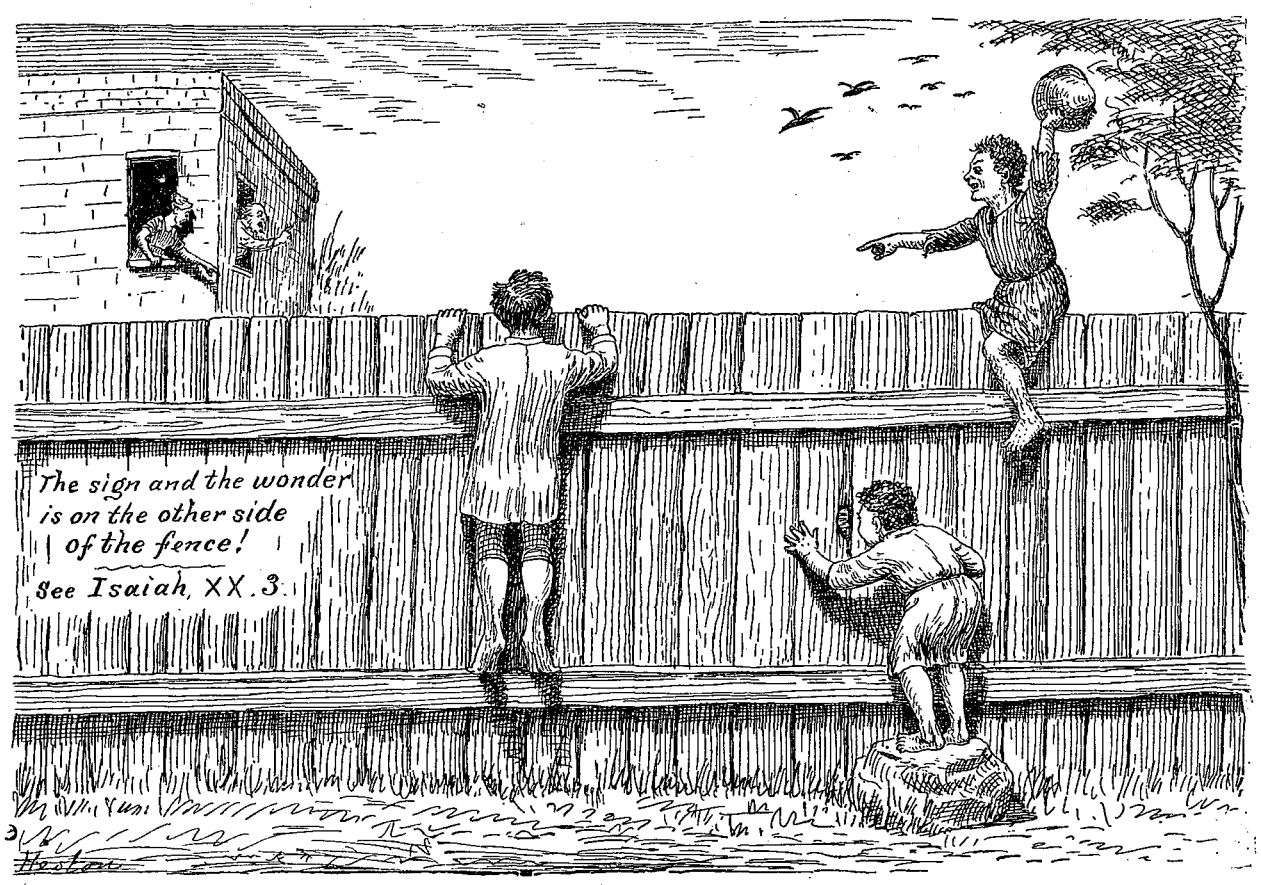
Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va



A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.

Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A WONDERFUL SIGN AND THE SIGN OF A WONDER.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50
21.	History of Religion. E. E. Evans	20

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

—THE—

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON. WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
3	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
20	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
15	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
2	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY AND RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PUSHED :: BY :: :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shilo.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity.—"That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 c. in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

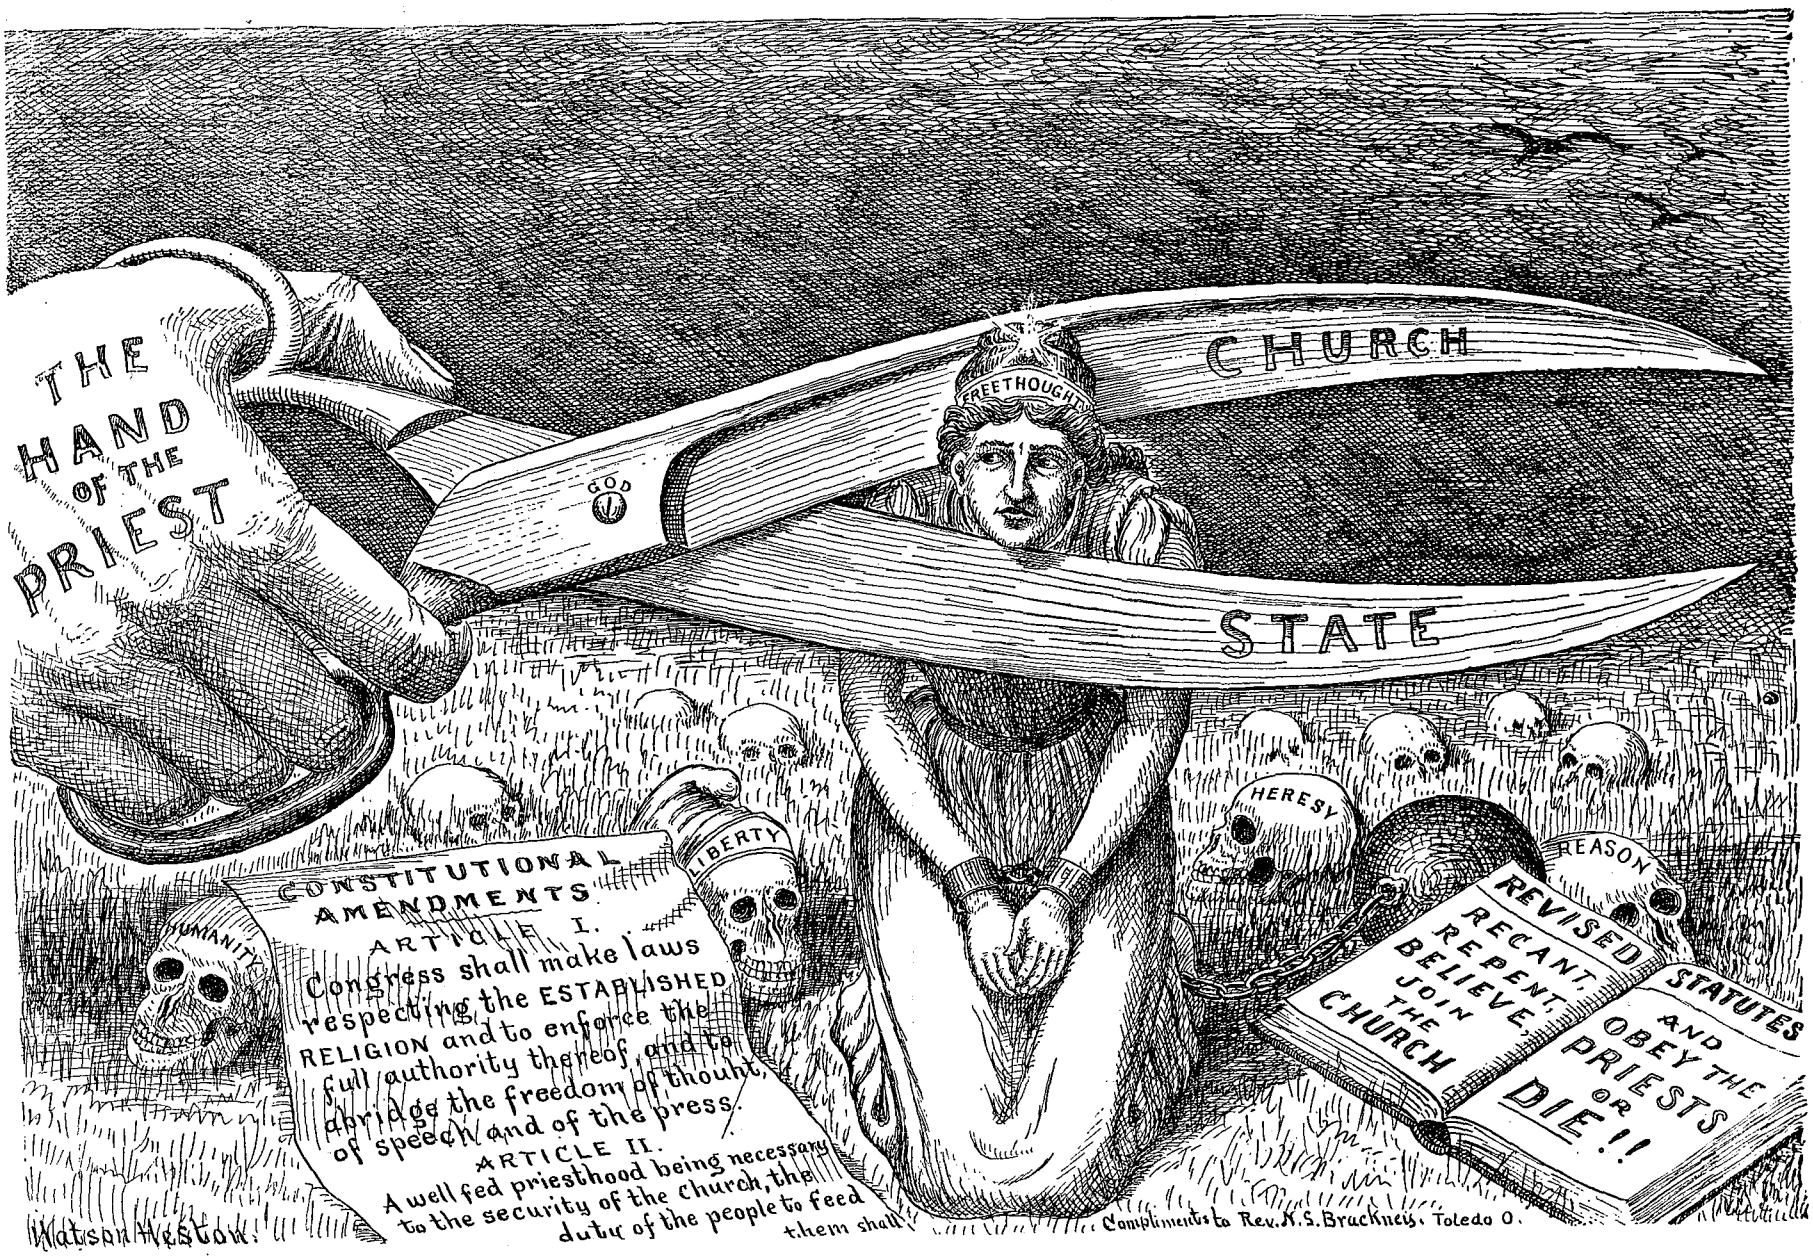
"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.



Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 33. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, August 13, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

A

HISTORY OF RELIGIONS.

BEING

A Condensed Account of the Results of Scientific Research and Philosophical Research.

By Elizabeth B. Evans.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF

THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

A SHORT

HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price. - - - - - - 10 cents.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins.
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price. 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper. 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound; red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Order of Creation,

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MÜLLER, PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE, E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 33. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, August 13, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - AUGUST 13, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Hostility to Religion.

A Western Unitarian paper has the courtesy to acknowledge the receipt of Robert Adams's "Travels in Faith," and the good sense to commend it. But the writer closes as follows: "And it is more to be commended because it is entirely free from the hostility to religion which characterizes so many of THE TRUTH SEEKER publications."

This criticism is natural enough. The Unitarians do not want the preaching trade broken up any more than do their Presbyterian brethren. But they should not be angry if all do not agree with them, nor should they expect less than hostility for their superstition from Freethinkers. When Captain Adams wrote his book he was not the pronounced Infidel he has since become, but nevertheless his account of his travel from tradition to reason is valuable as a means of leading others along the same path. What he writes now is quite as hostil to religion as any work published from this office.

That THE TRUTH SEEKER is hostil to religion we admit. And in taking that attitude we maintain that we are right. Supernatural religion is a superstition. It has no foundation in fact—none at all. Christianity is but one form of supernatural religion, and we oppose it because it is not true, and because it has done and is doing an almost infinit amount of harm in the world. So far as any human being knows, or can know, there is no such being in the universe as the Christian deity; no such localities as heaven and hell; and the stories it puts forth as to the creation of the world, and the plan of "redemption" or "salvation" of man, are equally false. There never was a man born of a virgin and there never will be. There never was a miracle performed and there never will be. There never was a man who descended into hell, stayed there three days, and then rose to heaven via the earth, and there never will be. If Jesus Christ ever lived he was a human being and not the son of a God. He never brought a dead man to life, nor can his own death effect any change in the destination of any other man's soul—if any man has a soul. The whole scheme is an ingenious swindle by the priests, beginning with the medicin-man of the savages and finding its fullest development in the pope of Rome. It is absolutely and utterly and wholly unprovable in any way, shape, or manner; and all the priests of all the religions in the world hav never been able to demonstrate a single affirmation they make regarding future states of existence and the means by which man shall enjoy or regret them. On the other hand, so far as their tales relate to knowable things they hav been proved to be false. Their theology has been riddled a thousand times; their Bible is known to be untrue, and their creeds but the vaporings of men deluded and desirous of deluding others.

Why, then, should not men who see these things be hostil to the men who propagate them?

In the past Christianity, which our Unitarian friend the enemy means by "religion," has done incalculable harm in the world mentally and physically. It has prevented man from advancing in knowledge of his environments, it has turned him from studying things which would benefit him to brooding over fancies having no foundation in fact, and kept him in ignorance and slavery. It has always opposed freedom of thought and action, claimed to hav authority over man from some supernatural being, and used every means at its command to force him to do that non-existent being's will—which, interpreted, has ever been the priest's will. Further than that, religion has influenced the church to torture him, to kill him, to enslave him, and to make of him a brute as well as a victim. The church, influenced by religion, has committed the most horrible atrocities of which history has any record. It has also deceived men, persuaded them to act against their own best interests, and aided the strong to oppress the weak, by proclaiming subjection to rulers to be God's will. The church never looks forward, but always backward, and cries to its victims, keep back! keep back! The church has been the ally of all infamous despots, the mainstay of barbarous civilizations, and the activ repressor of all attempts to gain more liberty. There is no science it has not opposed, no important achievement of man which it has not characterized as "thwarting the will of God," and it never, in all its centuries of dishonor and crime, was the first to seek the betterment of the human race. In all good works it has lagged behind, crying hold on! It has killed the pioneers of liberty, of science, and in whatever country it has had power it has made the world a cemetery or an intellectual slave-pen. In former times it killed where it could not repress; now, it represses because it cannot kill.

These things being so, is there even one good reason why all men, instead of only the Freethinkers, should not be hostil to religion?

Our President's Slip.

It is very well to celebrate the 21st of October as the four-hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America, but there is no particular reason why our pious Presbyterian president should command the people to go to church on that occasion, or why they should "express their gratitude to divine providence for the devout faith of the discoverer and for the divine care and guidance which has directed our history and so abundantly blessed our people." It is not the province of Mr. Harrison, or any other politician clothed with a little brief authority, to tell the people what they shall do on that or any other holiday.

Divine providence, that is, the Christian Providence or God, had little to do with the discovery of this country. It would hav been much more nearly in keeping with the facts of history to hav commanded thanks to be given to Allah, the Mohammedan God, for it was the followers of the false prophet who advanced the science of mathematics and astronomy to the point of determining the shape of the earth, and it was from the writings of their astronomers and philosophers that the mariners of Genoa conceived the idea that a ship sailing westward across the Atlantic would circumnavigate the globe and fetch up at the East Indies. While the Mohammedans were elaborating their theories and advancing human knowledge the Christians were so benighted as to care nothing for the matter, giving their attention to image-worship, transubstantiation, the merits of the saints, miracles, shrine-cures, and kindred nonsense. And when Columbus, through the writings of Averroes, an Arabian philosopher and physician, and an acquaintance with Toscanelli, the Florentine astronomer, became convinced that the Mohammedans were right and endeavored to demonstrate the theory, the Christians, who may be supposed to hav had the ear of their God—our Divine Providence of the present—unanimously condemned him. Furthermore, when he sought to interest powerful rulers in his proposed attempt the ecclesiastics opposed him by pointing out to the princes the irreligious tendency of his theory, its heretical origin, and they offered as proof the Pentateuch, the Psalms, the Prophecies, the Gospels, the Epistles, and the writings of the "Fathers"—Saint Chrysostom, Saint Augustine, Saint Jerome, Saint Gregory, Saint Basil, Saint Ambrose, and other prominent noodles. Moreover, Columbus had no devout faith that he would discover anything. He sought to take cargoes to India without breaking bulk, and he thought when he did find land that he had reached the eastern coast of Asia; and he died in that belief. There was no guidance to his project from any divinity, but if any god is to get the credit of the affair it should be Allah.

These are things doubtless which our worthy Presbyterian president does not know, as they are not usually taught in Sunday-schools. But there is one thing that as president he should know; that it is none of his constitutional business to issue religious proclamations commanding the people to thank his God for anything. They may hav other gods which they prefer to worship, or possibly they may prefer to worship none at all.

And You, too, Brutus.

An admirable satire upon Christian missionary effort, perhaps unintentional, is this editorial in the Sun. It is headed "The Evidences of Religion:"

"We shall tolerate no humbug in the howling dervishes who hav come here from Egypt to convert us all to the religion of the Prophet. When they present us with the evidences of Islamism, in order to prove the divine origin of that faith, we shall examin these evidences with instruments of precision under the light of modern criticism, according to the laws of reason guided by the revelations of science in a spirit of equity for the sake of truth. They shall hav justice at our hands, but we must warn them against trying to indulge in any nonsense. We tell them that we cannot accept Mohammedanism without satisfying evidences of its truth.

"For example, they promis to giv evidence of the truth of their religion by working miracles under its influence. Here is a thought that commands our attention. We stand still for a moment when it is presented. They are ready to eat burning charcoal, chew and swallow glass, swallow swords, dance on naked swords, and perform other such wonders through the power of Allah, whose aid they invoke in prayer. We freely admit that these things appear to be extraordinary in their nature, and that even very good Christians may be justified in giving heed to them.

"We dismiss at once the suggestion that the devil has anything to do with these performances of the dervishes from Egypt who are in New York.

"Two important questions now arise. The first of them is, would the performance of these amazing deeds by the dervishes be proof positiv of the truth of their religion, or of Allah's connivance with their desire to turn us all into Mohammedans? We are not prepared to say that it would; but we must add that we hav not time just now to take up a question that might be debated for weeks without being settled.

"The other question, which can be settled without very much trouble, is this: Do the dervishes really and truly perform miracles through prayer? Here we hav a proposition to offer. We propose that their deeds and their methods shall be investigated during their stay in New York, properly and fairly investigated, without prejudice or prepossession. We suggest the appointment of a committee of investigation, made up of competent citizens, who shall prepare a report upon their consumption of burning charcoal and cold glass, their swallowing of swords, dancing with bare feet on naked swords, and their other deeds that hav the appearance of being at least preternatural. The committee should be composed of believers in different creeds, men of science, including both chemists and physiologists, representativs of Tammany, logicians, theologians, lawyers, thaumaturgists, mugwumps, Wall street operators, and religious editors. We hav in our eye about twenty men and women who would constitute a befitting committee; but we prefer not to giv names at present. We would prefer that the Rev. Dr. Briggs would be chosen as an expounder of the higher criticism, that Col. Robert G. Ingersoll would stand for Agnosticism, Brother Talmage for logic, Larry Godkin for mugwumpery, Mr. James P. Archibald for the walking delegates, and so on until the requisit number of committeemen were selected. The committee would examin the neck of the sword swallower, the feet of the sword dancer, the mouths of the burning charcoal eaters and glass consumers; they would also examin the swords, the charcoal, and all the paraphernalia of the performers, and then giv us a correct account of the results of the performances.

"These picturesque Egyptian dervishes or priests who hav come here to propagate the Mohammedan religion, who profess to perform wonders as evidence of the truth of that religion, who pray five times daily under the rule of the one hundred and one beads, who wear the fez, the green turban, the yellow robe, and the sandals, must be brought under the American system of inspection, and their work must also be inspected.

"It is a serious thing for them to ask us to giv up our religion and adopt theirs. They must justify their pretensions before we giv heed to their appeals."

How would that read if turned around? Supposing some Mohammedan paper of Cairo should begin an able editorial this way: "We shall tolerate no humbug in the shouting Methodists who hav come here from the United States to convert us all to the religion of Jesus. When they present us with the evidences of Christianity, in order to prove the divine origin of that faith, we shall examin these evidences with instruments of precision under the light of modern criticism, according to the laws of reason guided by the revelations of science in a spirit of equity for the sake of truth," etc., etc. And then, supposing the paper went on to say that while the shouting Methodist missionaries should hav justice they must not indulge in any nonsense, nor try to make assertions go for proof. For example, suppose the Mohammedan journal warned them that miracles unsubstantiated wouldn't go; that the promises of Jesus that true believers should drink deadly poison, handle serpents, remove mountains with a word, and so on, should be actually performed and not merely alleged to be capable of performance; and the organization of a committee proposed, to consist of prominent sheiks, khatibs, imans, muezzins, and kains from the seventy and odd sects of Mohammedanism, to settle the question whether the missionaries really could drink deadly poison, handle serpents, remove mountains, cure diseases by kissing glass cases containing old bones, and by prayer and faith. This committee would, of course, make a report upon the amount of deadly poison drank, the number of rattlesnakes, tarantulas, vipers, scorpions, asps, adders, etc., handled; how many real devils were actually cast out, and the number of new languages learned instantly, as well as the number of dead men raised and sick cured by kissing glass cases and by prayer. The committee also would investigate the stomachs of the poison drinkers, the wounds of the snake-bitten ones, the devils cast out, the sick cured, diagnosing their cases both before and after, analyze the glass case, the old bone, and examin all the paraphernalia of the performers. Supposing the Mohammedan journal of Cairo proposed all these things, wouldn't its readers think that unless the missionaries submitted to the tests in good faith they themselvs had little faith in their savior and his promises?

The Mohammedan journal, believing in the divine right of all Mohammedans to run all things religious as they please, might add that "these picturesque American Methodists or missionaries who hav come here to propagate the Christian religion, who profess to perform wonders as evidence of the truth of that religion, who pray morning and night and at meals, who wear plug hats, black coats, white chokers, and high-legged boots, must be brought under the Egyptian system of inspection, and their works must also be inspected." Supposing the journal, which naturally made things so by saying them, should say all this, and then giv as a reason, that "it is a serious thing for them," meaning the American missionaries, "to ask us to giv up our religion and adopt theirs. They must justify their pretensions before we giv heed to their appeals," what would the missionaries say? Wouldn't they write back to the societies which sent them, saying that the Mohammedans, who had no better religion than the one the missionaries taught, and in fact very nearly the same in substance but with prophets and priests named differently, no better substantiated, and just as full of absurdities and errors and preposterous and impossible claims, were a most impudent people and veritable Infidels, doomed to everlasting perdition —and serve them right? Why, of course they would.

Our readers will put us under obligations if they will kindly send us the names and addresses of all the Freethinkers they know, that we may send out sample copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER with a view to inducing new subscriptions. And if present subscribers will speak a good word for us occasionally to their friends we will thank them heartily. Our list needs extending, and the people need the paper.

The World's Fair.

Unless the law is changed at the next session of Congress the probabilities are that the World's Fair will be closed on Sundays. The appropriation bill, modified to one-half the original demand—or $2,500,000—has been passed with the Sunday-closing clause retained. This amount, together with other comparativly small sums, "upon condition that the said exposition shall not be opened to the public on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday," and if the appropriation is accepted by the World's Columbian Exposition, which is an Illinois corporation, the World's Columbian Commission, which is a body created by Congress, is directed to make such rules as shall require the closing of the Exposition on Sunday.

This is an outrage upon the rights of American citizens, for in this piece of religious legislation Congress has violated the Constitution, which forbids it to recognize one religion above another. By voting Sunday to be the "Lord's day," Congress has practically established the Christian religion. But if it had established Judaism by recognizing Saturday as the Sabbath what a howl would hav gone up from every Christian pulpit in the country.

Considering this action and its final effect, the Times says: "As the matter stands the Sunday-closing requirement appears as virtually a bold attempt to exercise the authority of the national government to forbid the opening of the Fair by a state corporation on the first day of the week, on which the receipts would probably exceed those of any other two days, and come largely from those who would otherwise contribute nothing. The managers can get rid of the restriction by refusing to accept the funds, and it might be a profitable thing to do. It is by no means certain that the Sunday-closing restriction could be enforced by the government. Suppose the $2,500,000 is taken and expended upon the buildings and other preparations for the Fair, and that the government goes on and completes its exhibit and provides for the award of prizes, medals, etc., and then when the time comes for opening the gates the commission should decide that they might be kept open seven days in the week. What could be done about it? Could the government recover its money, or by any process of law compel the shutting up of the Fair grounds?!"

It may be that Congress will reconsider its action, or that the Fair managers will refuse the money on the terms imposed, but each possibility is highly improbable. But the closing of the Fair is not the worst part of the bad business. That is, that Congress has violated the Constitution by recognizing the holy day of a religious sect and thereby practically established that religion.

Priests in the Saddle.

The chaplain of the United States Senate, himself an unconstitutional officer, taking stolen money for a useless office, writes jubilantly of the Congressional vote to close the World's Fair on Sunday, and incidentally utters this crow of triumph:

"During the debate you might hav imagined yourself in a general council or assembly, or synod or conference, so pronounced was one Senator after another. The debate had in it the earnestness which springs from conviction and conscience toward God, the perennial fountain of all true eloquence. Say not that the former days were better than these, for the Congress of the United States never numbered abler, truer, nobler men than fill the chambers to-day! And never more surely than now would avowed hostility to God, his day and word and house and kingdom, remand a public servant to private life."

It appears, however, that the chaplain has overdrawn the picture of the real piety of the Senate. Senator Peffer bluntly said that the talk of the Senate was "only hypocrisy," and the World corroborated him in these words:

"The key of the whole matter lies right there. Congress is dealing with this question in a spirit of the most arrant hypocrisy. There are men there who sincerely believe it would be wrong to open the Fair on Sunday, and whose vote to forbid it will be conscientiously given. But the great majority of the members of both houses hav no such scruples. They do not themselvs observe Sunday as a Sabbath. They hav no hesitation in doing what they please on that day. But they think that a loud profession of Sabbatarian views will commend them to constituents, and they are willing to embarrass the Fair and rob it of its best service to the multitude for the sake of falsely impressing constituents with their piety."

The New York Evening Post said the same thing:

"Senator Quay as the champion of morality and religion in this country is an impressiv figure. Under his pious leadership, and yielding to the convincing scripture texts which his daily study of the Bible enabled him to bring forward, the Senate voted that the appropriation for the World's Fair should be made only on condition that the gates be closed on Sunday. It was ideally fitting that this hypocritical piece of legislation should hav been fathered by the man whom the religious press of the country has freely denounced as a stench in the nostrils of honest men. While keyed up to such an unwonted pitch of virtue, the Senate also voted that no liquor should be sold on the grounds of the Fair. This was really sublime in men who were at that moment standing above a restaurant which their votes and patronage keep alive, and in which all kinds of liquors are on sale, a full price-list of wines being officially published. We hav heard of cynical politicians 'pandering to the better elements of society,' but if any Senator thinks to strengthen himself politically by such open thrusting of the tongue into the cheek while posing as a severe moralist, he must be counting upon an extraordinary number of hypocrits among his constituency."

There is one sentence in the chaplain's letter to which particular attention should be paid—that is, that those officers who oppose Christianity will be promptly retired to private life. The church is mounted on a very high horse indeed when her mouthpieces can afford to speak so plainly. It means that the preachers hav gone into politics for the benefit of their religion, and propose to dictate in legislation. At present they possess the power, because they are organized, and it will be a matter of no little interest to Freethinkers to watch when they will stop. They may attempt to revive the old statute, still in force in the District of Columbia we believe, punishing a blasphemer with death for his third offense!

Death of John C. Bundy.

Mr. John C. Bundy, of the Religio-Philosophical Journal, died on August 6th at his home in Chicago. Though he has been in poor health for a long time, his last illness was brief, and his death is a surprise.

In his conduct toward THE TRUTH SEEKER and its Founder Mr. Bundy has made several errors of the head, the latest being the institution of a libel suit for several thousand dollars. Although we could not see how he could torture the language used by Mr. Wettstein into libelous meaning, and were confident that no jury would agree with him, we can forgiv the bringing of the suit a thousand times easier than his treatment of Mr. Bennett while the latter was suffering in prison, the victim of a religious conspiracy. That attack we never did forget nor forgiv.

As his life was pleasant and he had friends who loved him and whom he loved, death to him when only in his prime seems a mistake of nature. He fought the world's battle as best he saw, and when the grave closes the errors men make may well be forgotten. To his wife and friends we extend sympathy in their sudden affliction and sincerely hope it will be accepted in the spirit offered.

New York's Museums Open on Sundays.

The park commissioners hav voted the Museum of Natural History sufficient additional funds to keep the building open Sunday afternoons. With the evening openings this will make that institution of more value than ever to the public.

The Museum of Art has had its doors open on Sunday afternoons for several months, and more visitors pass the turnstiles on that day than in all the other days of the week added together.

From this final victory for the right both Sabbatarians and Secularists can learn something. The first, that old Puritan notions are no longer omnipotent and that religion must ultimately yield to common sense. The Secularists can learn that though defeated often their ideas will finally prevail because of their inherent justice. This Sunday opening is now a fact, because it is the right thing, a thing the people want, and because the agitation was begun in a way to command a hearing from the managers and to receive the aid of the great daily papers. Persistence accomplishes much, but doing a thing properly helps it along, too.

The Christian Advocate says: "The work of Christian missionaries in Africa is obstructed by the inhabitants of Christian countries who will sell opium or rum to the Africans for a money profit. Some of those in Boston who send hundreds of thousands of gallons of rum to Africa are devout-appearing attendants, we are informed, at the house of God. Morally they are not above, and may be below, the most mercenary slave-traders."

Prof. L. J. Bertrand, of Paris, has been considering the relic business, and finds that if the Romish church authorities are right, the original saints were fearfully and wonderfully made. "We hav," he says, "seven heads of St. Ann, twenty-one fingers of St. John, twenty-five portraits of the Virgin by St. Luke, thirty skeletons of St. Pancras, such a heap of nails that a baggage train could not carry them, such an enormous number of true pieces of the true cross that the Bois de Boulogne could scarcely giv as much wood. With the stones which received the tear and the chalk on which fell the drop of milk, we might easily build a new Vatican, and with the scattered bones of any saint, we could rebuild the skeletons of an army of giants." It was one of the wrists of this same St. Ann that the knaves of the Romish church brought from Rome for the adoration of the superstitious Catholics of this city, and which, they alleged, performed several medical miracles.

Freethinkers who hav attended the congresses of the American Secular Union and other gatherings of the elect will no doubt recall one who was always with us, though by no means poor. An old gentleman, looking like a middle-aged one, so unobtrusiv that it required some time to make his acquaintance, yet one of the warmest friends Freethought ever had. In appearance he had the conventional look of a minister, and his white choker and quiet ways sometimes led casual acquaintances at hotels to sympathize with him over the advent of the Infidels into the town. That was John Downes, of Steubenville, Ohio, who died July 26th, aged seventy-seven. Mr. Downes was one of the victims of the grip epidemic of last fall, and has since suffered with bronchial trouble. On Sunday a stroke of paralysis brought the end of life. The weekly Star records that he was "one of the best men who ever lived in Steubenville," and that his "whole life was marked by its purity and generosity. No better nor kinder father ever lived. He was the very soul of honor and was a man of such gentleness that to know him was to admire and like him. He had only the benefit of a limited school education, yet he had improved himself so by self-culture that he was recognized and esteemed as one of the best-read and most intelligent men in the city. He was an Agnostic in religious matters, and upon this subject he held very decided views and was a frequent and valued contributor to a number of periodicals. Charity for others governed his whole life, and he was always the same good, pure, and generous man." To his memory we pay a tribute of respect and affection, for we knew him well. The world has lost another man who was striving to improve it.

In the West.

News and Notes.

The orthodox made quite a kick at Pullman. It was proposed that the band should play at the lecture. Immediately the church threatened to withdraw all support of the musical fraternity if this unhallowed proceeding was allowed. The Liberals promptly replied that every dollar taken away by the bigotry of pious boycotters they would replace by another. So the boys played without fear of the thunders of the church. The music was excellent, and rolled Freethought on to victory. A large audience was present at the Opera House, and it responded enthusiastically to Liberal ideas. The beginning of the work at Pullman is auspicious. I enjoyed on this occasion the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Booth. They are ardent in the cause, and aid with generous devotion. It was a pleasure to meet with those who are so hopeful of the people's advent, and strike against every wrong that oppresses humanity. I was delighted with the breezy Western spirit of Pullman. It is alive with progress. I like the Palouse country all round. Its glowing wheat fields, its broad, beautiful sceneries, its gorgeous sunlight, its stalwart people, giv hope and courage—make one look forward. It is a brilliant, enchanting picture that greets the eye in this glorious summer weather.

I must thank Mr. W. W. Taylor, Dr. Webb, the Ross brothers, Mr. St. Lawrence, Mr. Clemgard, Mr. Hubbard, Mr. Drinkwater, and others for their earnest efforts in this campaign. They had to rustle in order to overcome the orthodox resistance, but they scored a handsome victory. Mr. St. Lawrence, whom I met several years ago at Goldendale, is leader of the band here. Like Homer, he is blind but has a genius for the melodious art. Mr. Clemgard has had a varied experience in the church and out of it. He has just written a book on the myths and prophecies of religion, which presents quite an array of facts from ancient history to show the unreal foundation of orthodoxy. I hav found at Pullman a notable company of Freethinkers. With the encouragement received here and at Palouse City, with Moscow and other places opening for the future, I feel sure that this magnificent country will never rest under the shadow of orthodoxy.

We hav a great time at Rosalia, the best meetings we hav ever had in this lively town, where I never spend a dull day. As luck would hav it a young minister, Rev. Mr. Haues, a "Dutchman," as he termed himself, was ready for debate, and we had it for three nights, and the hall was crowded to its utmost capacity. My opponent is an earnest young fellow, recently a woodchopper, he said, but the spirit of the Lord called him to the ministry of the Baptist church. He did better than some older heads would hav done. He confessed his inability to answer all my arguments. In fact, he did not debate in regular fashion, but devoted most of his time to exhortation. He met the cold facts presented with religious fervor. He is a very good speaker, considering that he has had to make his own way and educate himself. He will make his mark, I guess, for he has the courage of his convictions and the ardor of youth. He treated me in a gentlemanly manner, is somewhat Liberal, and accepts by no means the strait-jacket of orthodoxy. He kicks over the traces now and then in good manly fashion.

The main subject of the discussion was the divinity of the Bible, and the audience showed an intense interest in the question. Mr. St. John Skinner presided. The time was equally divided. A wide field was passed over, and there was no anger on either side, and it is believed that a great gain has been made for the Liberal cause. When both sides can be fairly presented there is no fear of the result.

Rosalia always givs a rousing welcome. William Fish, A. Dorsey, P. Proff, Sam Avery, Whalen and Ferguson, of Plaza, and others make up our host. There is no lack of friendly support. The labors of the campaign are mingled with jolly companionship. On Sunday I enjoyed the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin. The harvests round about Rosalia are not quite so good as last year, but on the whole the outlook is cheerful. Rosalia has a bright look ahead.

I pass through Spokane on my way to Davenport. I find some stanch Liberals here to shake hands with—Dr. Cary, Mr. McQuarrie, and others. Spokane is pretty dull now. Hard times are staring people in the face. But there are too many resources for Spokane to be a failure. It is a handsome city. Its business buildings are among the finest I hav seen.

Davenport spreads its ample fields before me, and here also I find the way is onward. I giv three lectures in the new schoolhouse, and the audience increases although it is a busy time and farmers are getting down to work lively. There are prospects of a fine harvest in this section.

Davenport grows. New buildings hav been put up since I was here. The schoolhouse makes a splendid appearance on the hill and adds to the attractions of the town.

My old friend Colonel Robinson has died since I was here. He was a decided Liberal, a man of learning and eloquence. I miss his genial welcome.

H. L. Wilson is right on hand for the work. We could not do without him in Davenport.

I am, as usual, at the home of the Seldes, and here the hours pass merrily by. After the lecture we come home in the glorious starlight, the "grays" speeding rapidly along, and the squirrel and the coon do flit in the obscure rays. Mrs. Selde spreads an ample lunch, and the hospitality of this pioneer home makes happy the midnight hour. We sleep to our hearts' content, and arise not for the day's duties until the sun is far up in the blue heavens.

They hav been having quite a battle in the schools here, about Bible-reading, prayers, etc. Henry Selde was expelled because of his Liberal views and determination to stand by his rights. After much patience and courageous work, Freethought has proved triumphant, and the schools are now conducted in a secular fashion. So much for pluck.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in its convention here a few days ago, passed a very singular resolution, among others—namely, that they would not ride or walk on Sunday. They are unco holy indeed. How are they going to church if they do not walk or ride? Will they roll, or tumble, or creep, or leap? How will they get there? Or will they stay at home and sleep all day?

Mr. and Mrs. Feese, Mr. Wiis, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Ramm, add their hospitalities to the occasion. Mrs. Greenshields furnishes beautiful flowers for the platform, and on Thursday I visit her pleasant home six miles from Davenport, where the genial spirit of Liberalism prevails. Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Putnam and the bright little children I am glad to see. Dr. Jacobs, Chas. Blake, and Chas. Garber are present from Reardon, and want me to come to their town the next time, which I will do. Mr. and Mrs. Whittaker come eighteen miles each night to the lecture. P. Jensen, S. Neilson, Geo. Spiva, Martha Karl, Mrs. Muehl, P. Johnson, Andy Pettigrew Walsh, formerly of Colville, and others, make up the splendid Liberal host of Davenport and vicinity. I can report progress of this outpost. I had to reach it four years ago by wagon, a journey of forty-two miles from Spokane. Now the iron horse thunders along, and a hundred homes are shining in the place of one.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

At Selde's, Davenport, Wash., July 29, 1892.

SEND for free catalog of our books.

What Caused a "First Cause" To Create the Universe Six Thousand But Not Six Quadrillion Years Ago?

The axiomatic predication of science that time is eternal, alone proves beyond cavil and equivocation that there is no "God," no "beginning," no "designer," and no "first cause;" and the absence of these supernatural and prenatural agencies, of course, establishes the fact that the universe is eternal in its abstract existence and possesses in its aggregated form all the potencies to cause, create, and evolve all the innumerable phenomena in existence now, in the past, or which may exist in the future.

It will be cheerfully conceded by the Materialist (who, as a result of his close and analytical research, is compelled to deny the hoary, but still popular, phantasmagoria which hav in the past been invented to account for cosmic existence) that such existence in its majestic grandeur and infinitude, as revealed by astronomy, is, indeed, incomprehensible, awe-inspiring, bewildering, mysterious, and absolutely beyond human solution; yet it must be conceded that its existence—unlike that of a God—is a self-evident fact, a reality beyond cavil and dispute, and which, in turn, proves that such existence, in its elementary form, or in the form of its constituents, is eternal; furthermore, that of the two propositions, it is far more reasonable to affirm the eternity of the known than of the unknown.

Cosmic existence requires no proof. It is self-evident—here and there and everywhere. (It is not my aim nor desire to argue with the ultra-scientist who has reasoned all abstract being out of existence except as he complacently creates it in his muddled brain.) All endowed with ordinary senses can perceive it, and this universal conception of the existing material universe should alone be absolute and sufficient proof to all the world, that such existence, in its atomic aggregation, is eternal, never was caused, never began, and hence never needed a God to create, a cause to cause, or a designer to design it.

There is only one definit and correct answer to the Theist's favorit taunt, "Whence came it?" and that is: "It never came; it is eternal!"

It exists. This simple fact absolutely proves its eternal existence. To insist that the universe at one time did not exist implies the absurdity that nothing—after being and remaining nothing during all the ages of beginningless time prior to the assumed "beginning"—suddenly produced from itself or from nothing an infinit universe! But nothing is nothing and destined always to remain nothing. It possesses no powers, attributes, potencies, etc., to produce, even during eternity, a universe or mouse. If then at any time in the past nothing had been in existence—or rather nothing had existed—nothing, of course, would exist now.

On the contrary: we know absolutely nothing about a God. No two original thinkers, theologians, or idealists, hav the same ideas concerning such a being or power, and all definitions of such a thing or creature, as entertained by various nations, sects, or tribes, vary as humanity itself. Professor Swing says: "Our heavenly father is in the morning star and in the laughter of a child," but when analyzed this sentiment would constitute him an Atheist. These conceptions generally embody animals, grotesque monstrosities, human beings, both nude and (in fear of Anthony Comstock) those modestly draped in mantle and trousers! Of late the champions of the "new school of theology," realizing the absurdity of an anthropomorphic conception of a God, proclaimed the existence of a vague, "spiritual," aerial, larger, and more diffused being or power, who or which—though not invested with flesh and blood, as the God of Moses—is still supposed to be endowed with attributes to think, eyes to see, ears to hear (though, not having uttered a word since "he" last spoke to the inspired men of old, it is feared "he" has lost his powers of speech), and otherwise resembling man. Still, not having been revealed to the strongest lenses of our scientists when sweeping through boundless space, nor his anatomy having been on the dissecting table, I fear the God of the "new school" is simply on a par with the Hottentot's or Choctaw Indian's.

All attempts to solve the problem of existence by postulating a "God," "creator," or "first cause," must and will ever remain efforts of childish reasoning and a lamentable failure. It positivly explains nothing and only infinitly complicates the mystery. It simply divests the visible all of, and invests an invisible nothing with, potencies and powers to cause all phenomena.

A "first cause," or God, implies an infinit something—of which, however, we know absolutely nothing—possessing attributes and powers superior to those existing in nature, and amply sufficient to cause to spring into existence miraculously, from preëxisting nothing, an infinit universe.

It implies that such "first cause," or "God," prior to the (imaginary) "beginning" was not a cause, but eternally inactiv, latent, non-productiv, in an absolute condition of negation, etc., and that such cause during all the infinit cycles of ages preceding such "beginning" did not cause or produce a solitary effect.

It implies that after being eternally inactiv and cause of absolutely nothing, during all the ages of beginningless time, "he" or it did, suddenly and miraculously, so stupendously change "his" or its characteristics as to create a universe!

And, last but not least, it presents to thinking men and women the following grotesque proposition: The universe exists, consequently a "God" or "first cause" must hav preceded it. This "first cause" is eternal, never was created and never needed a "creator." Six thousand years ago, according to Bible chronology, this "first cause" or "God" caused the universe. No other causes existed with or beside it prior to that time. It was the "beginning" of the "heavens and earth." Until then "it" or "he" alone monopolized all space and all time. During all the ages of beginningless time "it" or "he" did not cause a solitary thing—not a world, sun, moon, star, or even a single atom. Eternal darkness reigned here and there and everywhere.

This is a correct statement of affairs existing during the eternity preceding six thousand years ago, when the universe, according to the Christian and Jewish mythology, began.

But now the question naturally arises to the thinking mind: What caused the "first cause," after an eternity of non-activity, to create the universe? Here certainly is a magnificent, imposing effect (if true). The Theist's "God," or "first cause," certainly didn't cause it, for what these would or could not do or cause to be done during the vast eternity preceding this (imaginary) creation, they, of course, would or could never do. This "first cause" is supposed to be omniscient, omnipresent, and unchangeable, consequently what this "God" could or would not do during the eternity preceding the "beginning," "he," of course, would never do.

What, then, in the name of reason, caused the universe, or what caused the "first cause," or "God," to create it after an eternity of non-existence? There is no effect without a cause. But during an eternity all existing causes had refused, or declined, or been unable to produce the universe; what, then, I ask, was the cause which caused the "first cause" or "God" suddenly to create it six thousand but not six quadrillion of years ago? If there existed no causes or conditions outside of the Theist's "God," then, of course, this "God" having, in "his" superlativ wisdom, deemed it best not to create it during all eternity, and being unchangeable, the creativ act would never hav been consummated. But if there were other causes in existence which prompted or caused this "God" to do that which, without such agencies, "he" would not hav done, then, by this concession, the Theist's "God" is instantly stripped of "his" divine attributes, ceases to be the true "creator" and designer, as other causes are revealed, existing exterior, anterior, and superior to "him," and which really preceded the Theist first cause.

Thus we see that all arguments predicating a "first cause," a "God," a "creation" or "beginning," do not only not explain but infinitly mystify existing problems; and that the only rational conception of nature is the eternal existence of all matter—which is force—and which, possessing within itself all the necessary attributes of self-existence and self-formation (not creation), needs no "creator" or "first cause" to aid it in its evolution to highest forms.

Existing now, absolutely proves that in its elementary form it has always existed, so always will exist. Furthermore, assuming harmony and order now, and evolving worlds, suns, systems, trees, flowers, and men, proves it has ever evolved such forms, and that consequently in the dim vista of eternity (time going back forever and ever and matter existing likewise forever and ever) there never was a first world, first sun, first tree, or first man, but all such phenomena are but repetitions of similar phenomena having been evolved forever.

Because it is plain that any particular first world, sun, or system, would again imply an eternity of time preceding its formation, when it created nothing, which, if true, would absolutely hav prevented such first world at any time. It is either eternal standstill or eternal activity. Both cannot be true. Being activ to-day proves the universe has been ever activ in the past and will be activ forever in the future.

Which, then, I ask, is the more reasonable—that a "first cause," of which we know absolutely nothing, can exist uncaused, and then from nothing create an infinit universe (without crowding itself out!), or that the universe which we all alike behold in august splendor—self-evident and real, continually struggling to evolve into sun, world, flower, or man—is self-existent and eternal?

Rochelle, Ill. OTTO WETTSTEIN.

Shall the World's Fair Be Open on Sunday?

NEW YORK, July 15, 1892.

A. E. GAMMAGE, ESQ., My Dear Sir: You ask my views on the subject of opening the World's Fair on Sunday.

1. There are two reasons given in the Bible for "keeping" the Sabbath. The first is that God having made the world in six days and rested on the seventh, therefore, man shall rest on the seventh. We know that this is not true. We now know, if we know anything, that God did not make the world in six days and rest on the seventh. It will not do to say that he made the world in six "periods" and rested on the seventh. This would be no argument in favor of keeping the Sabbath.

2. The second reason given in the Bible for keeping the Sabbath is that God had brought out the Jews from Egypt. If this is the real reason, it applies to no people except the Jews. It certainly could not hav been expected that the Egyptians would think a day sacred for that reason. The reason given applied only to the Jewish people, and if that be the real reason, then the Sabbath is for the Jews and for no others.

3. There is another point. The day that was made sacred, according to the Bible, was Saturday, and not the day we keep. There is nothing in the Old or New Testament to show that God ever changed the day, and there is no warrant to be found in the "sacred scriptures" for keeping the day we call Sunday. The day we keep was kept by pagans long before the Jewish people were released from Egypt. It was a day sacred to the sun—not sacred in the sense that people were not to enjoy themselvs, but sacred in the sense that on that day they were to enjoy themselvs. That day was a festival, not a penitentiary.

This worship of Sunday is of modern growth. It seems to hav reached its hight in Scotland, then in England, and from England it was brought by the Pilgrims and Puritans to the New World. It is a relic of asceticism—of the idea that man can please God by making himself miserable. The Jews at one time kept the Sabbath so strictly that if anyone, by accident, fell down, he would not rise until after sunset. On Sunday they built no fires in their houses—they shivered and thanked God. They ate cold victuals with pious gratitude, and longed with all their hearts for the next day.

At one time in Scotland it was discussed whether it was right to rescue drowning men on Sunday. The most pious took the ground that they should not be rescued; that the drowning was God's punishment for the violation of the day, and that man should not endeavor to rescue his fellow-man from the judgment of God.

The question now is whether here, in this country, in this nineteenth century, the World's Fair shall be closed on Sunday.

Admit, for the sake of argument, that the day is absolutely sacred—ought the Fair to be closed? What will be the effect of looking upon great pictures or statues, of seeing the wonderful machines that man has invented? Will the tendency be to degrade or elevate, to demoralize or enlighten?

If looking at these pictures, at these statues, at these machines, enlarges the mind, educates the brain, cultivates the tastes, certainly there can be no objection to opening the Fair on Sunday, no matter how sacred the day is. Can anyone conceive of a better way to keep Sunday—admitting the day to be sacred—than to develop the brain and civilize the heart?

From this it follows that whether the day is sacred or not the Fair should be open.

There will be many thousands of people in Chicago. They must do something on Sunday. They will not remain in their rooms and read Baxter's "Call to the Unconverted," neither will they attend church. They must do something, and it is impossible to conceive of a better thing for them to do than to examin and study the triumphs of genius. Even the most devout will hardly object to looking at the world about us on Sunday, at the undulating fields, the green and spreading trees, the rivers, and clouds. Neither will they think it wrong on Sunday night to gaze on heaven's dome inlaid with stars. And yet all things are from the same source. Nature works through man, and the great painting and the great statue are and hav been as naturally produced as rivers and trees and stars.

Of course the idea that one day is better than another is infinitly absurd, that a space of time can be called "holy," or that man is under any more obligations one day than another, to do good, to love mercy and to increase the happiness of his fellow-man.

All things that man ought to do on any day of the week, certainly can be done on Sunday without sin. The whole matter may be summed up in this: It is never right to do wrong, and it is never wrong to do right.

Most people imagin that Sunday should be kept sacred by not doing anything on that day for the good of man, but by devoting your entire time to the worship of God—that is to say, in doing something for God. There is nothing a man can do for God, as God needs nothing; but there are many things we can do for our fellow-men, because many of them are in constant need.

All days should be for the good of man, and that day in which the most people are really happy is the best day. Yours very truly,

R. G. INGERSOLL.

Father Tom and the Pope;

OR, A NIGHT AT THE VATICAN.

By Rev. Francis Mahony (Father Prout),

As related by Mr. Michael Heffernan, Master of the National School at Tallymactaggart, in the county of Leitrim, to a friend, during his official visit to Dublin, for the purpose of studying political economy, in the spring of 1838.

When his riv'rence was in Room, ov coorse the pope axed him to take pot-look wid him. More be token, it was on a Friday; but for all that, there was plenty of mate; for the pope gave himself an absolution from the fast on account ov the great company that was in it—at laste so I'm tould. Howandiver, there's no fast on the dhrink, anyhow—glory be to God!—and so, as they wor sitting, afther dinner, taking their sup together, says the pope, says he, "Thomaus"—for the pope, you know, spakes that way, all as one ov uz—"Thomaus a lanna," says he, "I'm tould you welt them English heretics out ov the face."

"You may say that," says his riv'rence to him again. "Be my sowl," says he, "if I put your holiness under the table, you won't be the first pope I floored."

Well, his holiness laughed like to split; for, you know, Pope was the great Prodesan that Father Tom put down upon purgathory; and ov coorse they knewn all the ins and outs ov the conthravarsy at Room. "Faix, Thomaus," says he, smiling across the table at him mighty agreeable, "it's no lie what they tell me, that yourself is the pleasant man over the dhrop ov good liquor."

"Would you like to thry?" says his riv'rence.

"Sure, and amn't I thrying all I can?" says the pope. "Sorra betther bottle ov wine's betuxt this and Salamancha nor's there fornenst you on the table; it's raal Lachrymalchrystal, every spudh ov it."

"It's mortial could," says Father Tom.

"Well, man alive," says the pope, "sure and here's the best ov good claret in the cut decanther."

"Not maning to make little ov the claret, your holiness," says his riv'rence, "I would prefir some hot wather and sugar, wid a glass ov spirits through it, if convanient."

"Hand me over the bottle of brandy," says the pope to his head butler, "and fetch up the materi'ls," says he.

"Ah, then, your holiness," says his riv'rence, mighty eager, "maybe you'd hav a dhrop ov the nativ in your cellar? Sure it's all one throuble," says he, "and, troth, I dunna how it is, but brandy always plays the puck wid my inthrails."

"'Pon my conscience, then," says the pope, "it's very sorry I am, Misther Maguire," says he, "that it isn't in my power to plase you; for I'm sure and certain that there's not as much whisky in Room this blessed minit as 'ud blind the eye ov a midge."

"Well, in troth, your holiness," says Father Tom, "I knewn there was no use in axing; only," says he, "I didn't know how else to exqueeze the liberty I tuck," says he, "of bringing a small taste," says he, "of the real stuff," says he, hauling out an imperi'l quart bottle out ov his coat-pocket; "that never seen the face of a gager," says he, sitting it down on the table fornenst the pope; "and if you'll jist thry the full ov a thimble ov it, and it doesn't rise the cockles ov your holiness's heart, why, then, my name," says he, "isn't Tom Maguire." And wid that he outs wid the cork.

Well, the pope at first was going to get vexed at Father Tom for fetching dhrink that a-way in his pocket, as if there wasn't lashins in the house; so says he: "Misther Maguire," says he, "I'd hav you to comprehind the differ betuxt an inwitation to dinner from the succissor of Saint Pether, and from a common nagur ov a Prodesan squireen that maybe hasn't liquor enough in his cupboard to wet more nor his own heretical whistle. That may be the way wid them that you wisit in Leithrim," says he, "and in Roscommon; and I'd let you know the differ in the prisint case," says he, "only that you're a champion ov the church and entitled to laniency. So," says he, "as the liquor's come, let it stay. And in throth I'm curis myself," says he, getting mighty soft when he found the delightful smell of the putteen, "in inwestigating the composition ov distilled liquors; it's a branch ov natural philosophy," says he, taking up the bottle and putting it to his blessed nose. Ah! my dear, the very first snuff he got ov it, he cried out, the dear man, "Blessed Vargin, but it has the divine smell!" and crossed himself and the bottle half a dozen times running.

"Well, sure enough, it's the blessed liquor now," says his riv'rence, "and so there can be no harm anyway in mixing a dandy of punch; and," says he, stirring up the materi'l wid his goolden muddler—for everything at the pope's table, to the very schrew for drawing the corks, was ov vergin goold—"if I might make bould," says he, "to spake on so deep a subjic afore your holiness, I think it 'ud considherably fhacilitate the inwestigation ov its chemisthry and phwarmaceutics if you'd jist thry the laste sup in life ov it inwardly."

"Well, then, suppose I do make the same expiriment," says the pope, in a much more condescinding way nor you'd hav expected—and wid that he mixes a real stiff facer.

"Now, your holiness," says Father Tom, "this bein' the first time you ever dispensed them chymicals," says he, "I'll jist make bould to lay down one rule of orthography," says he, "for conwhounding them, secundum mortem."

"What's that?" says the pope.

"Put in the sperits first," says his riv'rence, "and then put in the sugar; and remimber, every dhrop ov wather you put in after that spoils the punch."

"Glory be to God!" says the pope, not minding a word Father Tom was saying. "I never knewn what dhrink was afore," says he. "It bates the Lachrymalchrystal out ov the face!" says he—"it's necthar itself, it is, so it is!" says he, wiping his epistolical mouth wid the cuff ov his coat.

"'Pon my secret honor," says his riv'rence, "I'm raally glad to see your holiness set so much to your satiswhaction; especially," says he, "as, for fear ov accidents, I tuck the liberty ov fetching the fellow ov that small vesshel," says he, "in my other coat pocket. So devil a fear ov our running dhry till the butt-end of the evening, any how," says he.

"Dhraw your stool in to the fire, Misther Maguire," says the pope, "for faix," says he, "I'm bent on analyzing the metaphwysics of this phinomenon. Come, man alive, clear off," says he, "you're not dhrinking at all."

"Is it dhrink?" says his riv'rence; "begorra, your holiness," says he, "I'd dhrink wid you till the cows 'ud be coming home in the morning."

So wid that they tackled to, to the second fugee apiece, and fell into larned discourse. But it's time for me now to be off to the lecthir at the boord. Oh, my sorra light upon you, Docther Whateley, wid your pilitical econimy and your hydherastatics! What the dioul use has a poor hedgemaster like me wid sich deep larning as is only fit for the likes ov them two that I left over their second tumbler? Howandiver, wishing I was like them in regard ov the sup ov dhrink, anyhow, I must brake off my norration for the prisent; but when I see you again, I'll tell you how Father Tom made a hare ov the pope that evening, in theology and the cube root.

Well, the lecthir's over, and I'm kilt out and out. My bitther curse upon the man that invinted the same boord! I thought onst I'd fadom the say ov throuble; and that was when I got through fractions at ould Mat Kavanagh's school, in Firdramore—God be good to poor Mat's sowl, though he did deny the cause the day he suffered! but it's fluxions itself we're set to bottom now, sink or shwim! May I never die if my head isn't as throughother as anything wid their ordinals and cardinals—and, begob, it's all nothing to the econimy lecthir that I hav to go to at two o'clock. Howandiver, I musn't forget that we left his riv'rence and his holiness sitting fornenst one another in the parlor ov the Vatican, jist afther mixing their second tumbler.

When they had got well down into the same, they fell, as I was telling you, into larned discourse. For, you see, the pope was curious to find out whether Father Tom was the great theologian all out that people said, and says he: "Misther Maguire," says he, "what answer do you make to the heretics when they quote them passidges agin thransubstantiation out ov the Fathers?" says he.

"Why," says his riv'rence, "as there should be no sich passidges I make myself mighty aisy about them; but if you want to know how I dispose ov them," says he, "just repate one ov them, and I'll show you how to catapomphericate it in two shakes."

"Why, then," says the pope, "myself disremembers the partic'lar passidges they allidge out ov them ould felleys," says he, "though sure enough they're more numerous nor edifying—so we'll jist suppose that a heretic was to find sich a saying as this in Austin: 'Every sensible man knows that thransubstantiation is a lie;' or this out of Tertullian or Plutarch: 'The bishop ov Room is a common imposther:' now tell me, could you answer him?"

"As easy as kiss," says his riv'rence. "In the first, we're to understand that the expression 'every sinsible man' signifies simply, 'Every man that judges by his nath'ral sinses;' and we all know that nobody folleying them seven deludhers could ever find out the mysthery that's in it, if somebody didn't come in to his assistance wid an eighth sinse, which is the only sinse to be depended on, being the sinse of the church. So that, regarding the first quotation which your holiness has supposed, it makes clane for us, and tee-totally agin the heretics."

"That's the explanation sure enough," says his holiness; "and now what div you say to my being a common imposther?"

"Faix, I think," says his riv'rence, "wid all submi sion to the betther judgment ov the learned Father that your holiness has quoted, he'd hav been a trifle nearer the truth if he had said that the bishop ov Room is the grand imposther and top-sawyer in that line over us all."

"What do you mane?" says the pope, getting quite red in the face.

"What would I mane," says his riv'rence, as composed as a docther ov physic, "but that your holiness is at the head ov all them—troth I'd a'most forgot I wasn't a bishop myself," says he (the deludher was going to say, at the head of all uz)—"that has the gift ov laying on hands. For sure," says he, "imposther and imposithir is all one, so you're only to understand manuum, and the job is done. Awouich!" says he, "if any heretic 'ud go for to cast up such a passidge as that agin me, I'd soon giv him a lesson in the p'lite art ov cutting a stick to welt his own back wid."

"'Pon my epostolical word," says the pope, "you've cleared up them two pints in a most satiswhacthery manner."

"You see," says his riv'rence—by this time they wor mixing their third tumbler—"the writings ov them Fathers is to be thrated wid great veneration; and it 'ud be the hight ov presumption in anyone to sit down to interpret them widout providing himself wid a genteel assortment ov the best figures ov rhetoric, sich as mettonymy, hyperbol, cattychraysis, prolipsis, mettylipsis, superbaton, pollysyndreton, hustheronprotheron, prosodypeia and the like, in ordher that he may never be at a loss for shuitable sintiments when he comes to their high-flown passidges. For unless we thrate them Fathers liberally to a handsome allowance ov thropes and figures, they'd set up heresy at onst, so they would."

"It's thrue for you," says the pope; "the figures of spache is the pillars ov the church."

"Bedad," says his riv'rence, "I dunna what we'd do widout them at all."

"Which one do you prefir?" says the pope; "that is," says he, "which figure of spache do you find most usefulest when you're hard set?"

"Metaphour's very good," says his riv'rence, "and so's mettonymy—and I've known prosodypeia stand to me at a pinch mighty well—but for a constancy, superbaton's the figure for my money. Divil be in me," says he, "but I'd prove black white as fast as a horse 'ud throt wid only a good stock ov superbaton."

"Faix," says the pope, wid a sly look, "you'd need to hav it backed, I judge, wid a small taste of assurance."

"Well now, jist for that word," says his riv'rence, "I'll prove it widout aither one or other. Black," says he, "is one thing and white is another thing. You don't conthravene that? But everything is aither one thing or another thing; I defy the apostle Paul to get over that dilemma. Well, if anything be one thing, well and good; but if it be another thing, then it's plain it isn't both things, and so can't be two things—nobody can deny that. But what can't be two things must be one thing—ergo, whether it's one thing or another thing it's all one. But black is one thing and white is another thing—ergo, black and white is all one. Quod erat demonsthrandum."

"Stop a bit," says the pope; "I can't althegither giv in to your second minor—no, your second major," says he, and he stopped. "Faix, then," says he, getting confused, "I don't rightly remimber where it was exactly that I thought I seen the flaw in your premises. Howsomdiver," says he, "I don't deny that it's a good conclusion, and one that 'ud be ov materi'l service to the church if it was dhrawn wid a little more distinctivness."

"I'll make it as plain as the nose on your holiness's face, by superbaton," says his riv'rence. "My adversary says black is not another color, that is, white? Now that's jist a parallel passidge wid the one out of Tartullian that me and Hayes smashed the heretics on in Clarendon sthreet—'This is my body—that is, the figure ov my body.' That's a superbaton, and we showed that it oughtn't to be read that way at all, but this way: 'This figure of my body is my body.' Jist so wid my adversary's proposition: it mustn't be understood the way it reads, by no manner of manes; but it's to be taken this way: 'black'—that is, white, is not another color—green, if you like, or orange, by dad, for anything I care, for my case is proved. 'Black'—that is, 'white,' lave out the 'that,' by sinnalayphy, and you hav the conclusion, 'Black is white,' or by convarsion, 'White is black.'"

"It's as clear as mud," says the pope.

"Begad," says his riv'rence, "I'm in great humor for disputin' to-night. I wisht your holiness was a heretic for two minutes," says he, "till you'd see the flaking I'd giv you!"

"Well, then, for the fun of the thing suppose me my namesake, if you like," says the pope, laughing, "though, by Jaymany," says he, "he's not one that I take much pride out ov."

"Very good—divil a betther joke ever I had," says his riv'rence. "Come, then, Misther Pope," says he, "hould up that purty face ov yours, and answer me this question: Which 'ud be the biggest lie, if I said I seen a turkey-cock lying on the broad ov his back, and picking the stars out ov the sky, or if I was to say that I seen a gandher in the same intherestin' posture, raycreatin' himself wid similar astronomical expiriments? Answer me that, you ould swaddler!" says he.

"How durst you call me a swaddler, sir?" says the pope, forgetting, the dear man, the part that he was acting.

"Don't think for to bully me!" says his riv'rence; "I always daar to spake the truth, and it's well known that you're nothing but a swaddling ould sinner ov a saint," says he, never letting on to persave that his holiness had forgot what they were agreed on.

"By all that's good," says the pope, "I often h'ard ov the imperance ov you Irish afore," says he, "but I never expected to be called a saint in my own house either by Irishman or Hottentot. I'll till you what, Misther Maguire," says he, "if you can't keep a civil tongue in your head, you had betther be walkin' off wid yourself; for I beg lave to giv you to understand that it won't be for the good ov your health if you call me by sich an outprobrious epithet again," says he.

"Oh, indeed! then things is come to a purty pass," says his riv'rence (the dear funny soul that he ever was!), "when the likes of you compares one of the Maguires ov Tempo wid a wild Ingine! Why, man alive, the Maguires was kings ov Fermanagh three thousand years afore your grandfather, that was the first ov your breed that ever wore shoes and stockings" (I'm bound to say, in justice to the poor Prodesan, that this was all spoken by his riv'rence by way of a figure of spache), "was sint his majesty's arrand to cultivate the friendship of Prince Lee Boo in Botteney Bay! O Bryan dear," says he, letting on to cry, "if you were alive to hear a boddagh Sassenagh like this casting up his counthry to one ov the name ov Maguire!"

"In the name of God," says the pope, very solemniously, "what is the maning ov all this at all, at all?" says he.

"Sure," says his riv'rence, whispering to him across the table, "sure you know we're acting a conthrawarsy, and you tuck the part ov the Prodesan champion. You wouldn't be angry wid me, I'm sure, for sarving out the heretic to the best ov my ability."

"Oh, begad I had forgot," says the pope, the good-natured ould crethur; "sure enough you were only taking your part, as a good Milesian Catholic ought, agin the heretic Sassenagh. Well," says he, "fire away now, and I'll put up wid as many conthrovarsial compliments as you plase to pay me."

"Well, then, answer me my question, you sanctimonious ould dandy," says his riv'rence.

"In troth, then," says the pope, "I dunna which 'ud be the biggest lie: to my mind," says he, "the one appears to be about as big a bounce as the other."

"Why, then, you poor simpleton," says his riv'rence, "don't you persave that forbye the advantage the gandher 'ud hav in the length ov his neck, it 'ud be next to onpossible for the turkey-cock lying that a-way to see what he was about, by rason ov his djollars and other accouthrements hanging back over his eyes? The one about as big a bounce as the other! O you misfortunate crethur! if you had ever learned your A B C in theology, you'd hav known that there's a differ betuxt them two lies so great that, bedad, I wouldn't wondher if it 'ud make a balance ov five years in purgathory to the sowl that 'ud be in it. Ay, and if it wasn't that the church is too liberal entirely, so she is, it 'ud cost his heirs and succissors betther nor ten pounds to hav him out as soon as the other. Get along, man, and take half a year at dogmatical theology; go and read your Dens, you poor dunce, you!"

"Raally," says the pope, "you're making the heretic's shoes too hot to hould me. I wondher how the Prodesans can stand afore you at all."

"Don't think to delude me," says his riv'rence, "don't think to back out ov your challenge now," says he, "but come to the scratch like a man, if you are a man, and answer me my question. What's the rason, now, that Julius Cæsar and the Vargin Mary was born upon the one day?—answer me that, if you wouldn't be hissed off the platform."

Well, my dear, the pope couldn't answer it, and he had to acknowledge himself sacked. Then he axed his riv'rence to tell him the rason himself; and Father Tom communicated it to him in Latin. But as this is a very deep question, I never h'ard what the answer was, except that I'm tould it was so mysterious it made the pope's hair stand on end.

But there's two o'clock, and I'll be late for the lecthir.

(CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

A Freethought Federation To Be Organized.

How much is implied in that simple phrase, "to think freely!" How apparently boundless is its scope! There are few words in the whole range of the human vocabulary which hav power to stir the deepest emotions of the human heart like that one word "freedom" and its kindred appellations. What deeds of heroism hav been performed at the magic sound of its name! And what an infinity of suffering hav men endured in all ages, in order to secure for themselvs and others one small modicum of human liberty.

Much attention has of late years been paid to the claims of Freethought, and a numerous class of persons hav been included under the term "Freethinkers" who are of various shades of opinion, from sentimental Deism to matter-of-fact Atheism. And these, though they hav agreed in one thing—viz., the necessity of destroying superstition—still hav exhibited but very little tendency toward union among themselvs for any practical reformatory purposes. Freethought is no new thing; it has existed in all ages, even as we understand it—viz., the right to question the dogmatic teachings of an arrogant priesthood. Freethought existed in Greece, Egypt, and Rome, though scarcely ever as a recognized right.

We hav at present the right to Freethought passivly conceded, if not practically recognized; and if Freethinkers are wise, they will utilize to the highest the vantage already gained. But, upon the question of organization the mass of Freethinkers appear somewhat apathetic; it is the few alone who are activ.

The events that hav recently occurred in our land are of such a nature that they should be sufficient in themselvs to rouse the energy and enthusiasm of even the most indifferent Freethinker.

The fusion of all classes of religious fanatics has succeeded in securing the sanction of Congress to close the gates of the World's Exposition upon the first day of the week. Not only hav we had to contend with the united efforts of the Sabbatarians in our own country, but we hav had to strive against what little influence the religionists of Europe hav been able to exercise upon our legislativ bodies; for even the musty old bench of bishops in the British House of Lords hav had the audacity to petition our legislature recommending that the gates of the Fair shall be closed on Sunday.

In order to meet this effectivly, and to check the inroads made upon the liberties of the people by the clerical party, we now propose to organize a Freethought Federation in America for political purposes; and it is to be hoped that every well-meaning Freethinker will come forward and assist.

By an effectiv union of all Freethought voters, we could, to a large extent, hold the balance of power between the two political parties, and compel them by legitimate means to a proper recognition of our rights as Freethinkers.

Our coworker, Samuel P. Putnam, has undertaken the arduous task of organizing such a Union among the Freethinkers of America, and I can assure him that he has my hearty sympathy and coöperation in such a movement. As affairs in this republic are brought to such a state by the interference of the ecclesiastical machines, it is time that every Freethinker rouse himself into the activity and vigor of life, and giv his aid in this matter.

The time has now come upon us when we must seek that union which givs strength and means.

Realizing the splendid results accomplished by the Freethought party in England, France, and other parts of Europe, chiefly the result of organization, we hav every reason to believe that beneficial results will follow a like movement in the United States. There are hundreds of thousands of Freethinkers in our land, and could they only be organized, we could then dictate instead of being dictated to. Freethinkers, let your presence and support be felt upon this occasion, and do not forget the meeting in Chicago on Sunday, the 4th of September, of which further announcement will be made.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH.

The International Freethought Congress.

FREETHINKERS OF THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA, Friends: The Freethinkers' International Congress will take place at Madrid, Oct. 12–19, 1892.

The general council of the International Federation has the honor of inviting you to contribute to the success of this Congress by your moral and material participation.

This invitation is addressed to all Freethought societies, whether connected or not with the International Federation; to Freethinkers not belonging to any particular society; to economic, philosophical, and scientific societies; to societies for the propagation of Secularism and anticlericalism, and, in general, to all partisans of liberty of conscience.

The Congress coincides in date with the grand festivities at Madrid in commemoration of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus, 1492.

The committee of organization is composed of Messrs. D. Antonio Machado, professor of the University of Madrid; Visconde de Torres-Solanot, publisher and capitalist; José Amoros, engineer; Odon de Buen, professor of the University of Barcelona; Francesco Rispa, ancient member of Cortes; Francesco Ruiz, typograph; Felix Navarro, architect; Antonio Rolden, doctor of medicin; Fernandez Morales, provincial deputy of Madrid; Raimundo F. Duranol, capitalist; Manuel Matoses, author; Nicholas Salmeron y Garcia, mechanic; Enrique Cantalapiedra, engineer; Ramon Chies, alderman of Madrid; Fernando Logano (Demofilo), publisher at Madrid.

Our Spanish friends propose the following program:

I.—PRINCIPLES.

1. The Christian ideal and the modern ideal; their reciprocal opposition.

2. The opposition of Christianity and Catholicism.

3. Incompatibility of Catholicism with modern life: (a) with science; (b) with positiv morality; (c) with a republican state, and the latter with constitutional monarchy; (d) with the new social organization: the foolishness of the pretension of the compatibility of Catholicism with Socialism; (e) with art; (f) with economic life.

4. The most efficient and rapid means of purifying modern life from the poisonous virus of Catholicism: (a) through conscience: by secular education; (b) through politics: by separation of church and state, suppression of the theocratic despotism on the Philippi island, and of religious missions in general; (c) through the social life: by the suppression of the sacerdotal character and the monastic institutions; (d) through public administration: by secularization of all institutes of charity, instruction, and correction, and all military and civil institutions which are dependent upon the state, the province, or the commune; (e) through the acts of civil law: by secularization of the civil authorities.

II.—HISTORY.

5. History of the emancipation of conscience. Part taken herein by the French Freemasonry: mission accomplished by the Masonic order.

6. Evolution of Freethought in Spain: (a) before the Arabs; (b) during the reign of the Arabs; (c) during the Middle Ages; d during the last century; (e) during the present epoch.

7. Obstacles produced by the false science of theology against positiv science. The council of Lisbon. Junto of Salamanca.

8. Influence of the discovery of America on the emancipation of thought. The Puritans; the United States of America; Mexico and its laws of reform; the republics of Central and South America.

III.—ORGANIZATION.

9. Exposition of the situation of each land relativ to Freethought. Statistics of the clerical and Freethought forces.

10. The Universal Federation of Freethinkers. Discussion of its laws.

11. Federation of the Spanish-American Freethinkers. Methods of organization and of commanding public recognition.

The above proceedings being finished, the general council proposes the following three questions for discussion:

1. Freethought and the social organization of the future.

2. Influence of dogmas on the march of biologic and geologic problems.

3. Mysticism and the perturbations of the nervous system.

The general council appeals to the devotion and international spirit of Freethinkers in hope that all nations will be represented at the Congress at Madrid, the success of which is partly assured by the presence of a considerable number of brethren from Spain and Portugal. Already hav the Federation of Freethinkers of France and that of Belgium agreed to send a number of representativs to Spain.

Directors: Napoléon Navez, engineer, correspondent for Italy; Emile Gorissen, architect, correspondent for Portugal; Léon Furnemont, advocate, correspondent for Spain; Gustave Nelson, member of the general council and correspondent for the United States and Canada.

Memoirs, essays, and contributions will be received by Mr. Léon Furnemont, lawyer, treasurer International Freethought Association, correspondent for Spain, 61 rue de la Putterie, Brussels, Belgium.

Send adhesions to the Congress, individuals or groups, to Mr. E. Gorissen, secretary, rue de Progrés, Scharbeck-Brussels, Belgium.

The Cause in Washington.

Thanks to the indefatigable efforts of our esteemed and most efficient president, Dr. D. M. Angus, of Tacoma, there is a revival of interest among the Liberals of our state, and a general awakening to the necessity of activ, persistent work to secure the repeal of our present infamous revenue law, which exempts church property from taxation up to $5,000, and fully exempts all church property used for denominational schools, hospitals, orphan asylums, homes for the indigent, etc., etc., if "wholly or in part sustained by charity."

As soon as the necessary funds are received the Washington Secular Union will issue ten thousand small pamphlets on "Taxation of Church Property," and hav them judiciously distributed throughout the state to educate the people on this great question and inspire them to action, that the monstrous wrong be righted.

TACOMA SECULAR UNION.

The Tacoma Secular Union has removed to its new hall, 1,117 Tacoma avenue, and held a meeting there on Tuesday, July 19th. A number of new members were added to the roll. The society is now an established success, and is exercising considerable influence in imparting courage to the weakly ones to rally to our standard, while the consideration and social respect in which its members are held force our Christian friends to recognize it as a power for good.

The new hall is nearly twice as large as the Wheeler Hall (our previous place of meeting), and has the additional advantage of a splendid dancing floor, convenient large anterooms, and a very fine piano. Now our lady members enliven our meetings with sweet melodies and play accompaniments to our singers.

Our regular Tuesday evening meetings each week increase alike in the numbers in attendance and in interest.

Tuesday, July 26th, we gave our first social and ball. All were surprised and delighted at its perfect success. It really far exceeded the hopes and expectations of the most sanguin. The program of exercises preceding the ball was really excellent. Music by the Tacoma Zither Club. Address by the president. Recitation, "Helping Mother," by young Miss Freda Wilde (very ably delivered, her first effort in public; she gave evidence of possessing oratorical and dramatic ability of high order). Songs, duets, trios, etc.

The Scotch songs by the deserved popular favorit, Robert Howden, and the recital of "St. Peter" by that truly wonderful little child of genius, Stella Langdon, electrified and entranced the audience.

The dancing was kept up until 12:30 A.M. The music was superb and received high and well-deserved encomiums.

Sociability is the strength and dependence of the church; realizing this, the Tacoma Secular Union are doing all possible to cultivate sociability and fraternity to make Liberals of the city better acquainted, so they will feel greater personal interest in each other's welfare, and mere acquaintance ripen into real friendship. The socials and ball will be repeated every month.

SUNDAY EVENING LECTURES AT GERMANIA HALL.

The interest and attendance continues unabated. Last Sunday night, July 31st, the subject was, "Wrongs To Be Righted," and we had a very large audience—the most enthusiastic of the whole course.

A minister of the Methodist Episcopal church on Sunday morning, July 17th, declared from his pulpit that "the Infidels of Tacoma attempted to get up a series of lectures, and, by dint of a large amount of advertising and great exertion, they succeeded in getting nearly one hundred persons to their first lecture; but each succeeding Sunday there was a rapid decrease in attendance and last Sunday they could only muster eleven persons, so they gave up in hopeless despair." That minister really tried to liv up to the Bible teaching—Rom. iii, 7—lying for the glory of God. Yet as ministers now claim that when in Genesis it says a day it really does not mean a day, but more than a thousand years, under that method of interpretation the eleven persons would mean eleven hundred, and so the minister spoke much nearer the truth than is usual with him when in the pulpit.

A Campbellite minister proposed to discuss with me the claim of the divine inspiration of the scriptures, but at the last moment crawled out—claimed the Ministerial Alliance of Tacoma would not permit him to hold discussion on that subject. Some of his church folks seem to hav worried him a good deal over his failure to meet the Infidel lecturer and in public refute him, since he declared he could do it so easily. He "would fire just two texts of the blessed Bible at him and that would effectually silence him." He sought our ex-president, Mr. Eber Pierce, and offered to lecture two or three nights to the Tacoma Secular Union, provided we would pay hall-rent, advertising, and all expenses. He felt assured we should reject such a silly proposition, since if we wished to hear him we could attend his church any Sunday and save all expenditure except of our time and patience.

But we accepted, making the only condition that he should remain on the platform after his lecture and listen to my review of what he had said. He agreed and we engaged the hall, but knowing the tricks of the trade, I sent him a written memorandum of agreement, just exactly as he had asked for, but he refused to sign. He said he would lecture, but would not stop to hear any reply that might be made. He said the Ministerial Alliance would not permit him, but they had sent for Clark Braden, a man who had defeated and silenced all the leading Infidel lecturers, the principal ministers of the Adventists, and many leading orthodox ministers. He was a man of wonderful fearlessness and never hesitated to throw mud if provoked.

Alas! for poor old dying Christianity when its only hope and champion is the poor creature Skunk Braden.

Truly, the Bible description of the ministers of Tacoma is literally and exactly fulfilled. "His watchmen are blind; they are all ignorant; they are all dumb dogs; they cannot bark; sleeping, lying down, loving to slumber. Yea, they are greedy dogs which can never hav enough and they are shepherds that cannot understand; they all look to their own way, every one for his gain, from his quarter" (Isa. lvi, 10, 11).

C. B. REYNOLDS, Sec. Wash. Secular Union.

Fremont, Wash.

Bible Readings.

NO. 3—ON EVIL SPEAKING.

Question. What fearful denunciation did the blessed redeemer pronounce against those who should apply the word fool to another?

Answer. "Whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell-fire" (Matt. v, 22).

Q. How well did his most illustrious apostle guard his own tongue in this respect?

A. "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die" (1 Cor. xv, 36)!

Q. Did Jesus himself abstain from using this language which he forbade?

A. "Ye fools, and blind" (Matt. xxiii, 17, 19; Luke xi, 40). "Then he [Jesus] said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets hav spoken" (Luke xxiv, 25).

Q. Does his reputed father set us a brilliant example in this matter?

A. "But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee" (Luke xii, 20).

Q. Did the "man after God's own heart," the "sweet singer of Israel," the prophet who "spake as he was moved by the Holy Ghost," pay any attention to this precept?

A. "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God" (Ps. xiv, 1; liii, 1). "Understand, ye brutish among the people, and ye fools, when will ye be wise" (Ps. xciv, 8)?

NO. 4.—ON ABSTAINING FROM FOOLISHNESS.

Q. What was the opinion of the greatest king of God's chosen people concerning fools?

A. "A brutish man knoweth not, neither doth a fool understand" (Ps. xcii, 6).

Q. What did the wisest man that God ever made think of fools?

A. "A prating fool shall fall" (Prov. x, 9, 10). "It is as sport to a fool to do mischief" (Prov. x, 23). "A fool layeth open his folly" (Prov. xiii, 16). "The fool rageth, and is confident" (Prov. xiv, 16). "A fool despiseth his father's instruction" (Prov. xv, 5). "Let a bear robbed of her whelps meet a man, rather than a fool in his folly" (Prov. xvii, 12). "A fool hath no delight in understanding" (Prov. xviii, 2). "A fool's mouth is his destruction" (Prov. xviii, 7). "The fool walketh in darkness" (Eccl. ii, 14). "A fool's voice is known by a multitude of words" (Eccl. v, 3). "Wisdom is too high for a fool" (Prov. xxiv, 7). "The lips of a fool will swallow up himself" (Eccl. x, 12). "The instruction of fools is folly" (Prov. xvi, 22).

Q. To whom do the above inspired remarks of the good and wise men apply?

A. "O, foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you?" (Gal. iii, 1). "For we ourselvs also were sometimes foolish" (Titus iii, 3). "We are fools for Christ's sake" (1 Cor. iv, 10). "As a fool receive me. . . . I speak as it were foolishly. . . . I speak as a fool" (2 Cor. ii, 16, 17, 23). "I am become a fool" (2 Cor. xii, 11). "The prophet is a fool, the spiritual man is mad" (Hosea ix, 7). "He [God] leadeth counselors away spoiled, and maketh the judges fools" (Job xii, 17). "Anger resteth in the bosom of fools" (Eccl. vii, 9). "God is angry with the wicked every day" (Ps. vii, 11).

A. H. DARROW.

Phœnix, A. T., July 17, 1892.

Boycott the Churches and Saloons.

The liquor-dealers and the church people seem to feel pretty sure that they are victorious in their united labors to hav the World's Fair closed on Sunday. But there is one thing the people can do who are compelled to keep out of the great exhibition on Sunday—they can, and should, boycott both institutions—that is, visit neither the church or the saloon. The theaters will be open, and as yet, we hav not learned that they are so selfish that they are not willing to stand a fair competition with the Fair.

H. L. GREEN.

"Pushed By Unseen Hands."

From the Boston Traveler.

Helen H. Gardener has recently taken a leading place among American writers, a place well earned by her "A Thoughtless Yes" and "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" Her latest volume, one of short stories, issued by the Commonwealth Company, New York, must add to her already enviable reputation. These stories hav the marks of a brilliant genius, they are original in style and design, and are a new thing in literature. Realistic in the extreme, they are at the same time delightfully artistic.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

These tales illustrate strange influences that shape human action and yet seem to lie outside of the actor. "An Echo from Shilo" has a Spiritualistic atmosphere. "A Hall of Heredity" pictures the working out, in a promising son, of prenatal influences. The tales are strange, and Dr. Spitzka, the brain specialist, writes that two of the stories deal with curious things usually observed only by specialists in the field of heredity. Such experiences confirm the belief that man is by no means a free agent.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM's lecture appointments:

Eau Claire and vicinity, Wis.	Aug. 24–29	Chicago, Ill....	Sept. 4, 11

Some dates are not filled. Those along the line who desire lectures will please write S. P. Putnam, Palouse City, Wash.

Letters of Friends.

Buy Liberal Literature Instead of Paying Pew-Rent.

RIDGEWAY, N. Y., July 4, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find check for $9, for which send the Bible Picture Book, etc., as inclosed list.

I hav decided to help keep the torches of our Liberal papers alive and circulate Liberal matter, instead of paying pew-rent in even as Liberal a church as the Universalists'—who hav a church here. And I hav years ago been an activ member, serving the Niagara Association as their standing clerk for twelve to fifteen years, and until I resigned because I had evoluted above and beyond them.

Yours, GEO. L. PRATT.

Effect of Closing the Fair.

NEW BRITAIN, July 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: My brother and myself had circulated two petitions to hav the World's Columbia Exposition open on Sundays, and had about one hundred signatures when Congress passed the law which made all of our efforts of no avail. At first we were disappointed. But when we reflect, we know that it was always the nature of Christians to be proscriptiv and tyrannical, and it was necessary before they could evolute for them to show that they are the same now as they were in the Dark Ages. The only reason they do not resort to torture now is, they hav finally made the discovery that they lose in numbers by doing so. And if they were not so obtuse to reason they would know that by their tyrannical action in closing the Fair they hav aroused a spirit of investigation regarding days set apart for worship that will cause many of their own adherents to leave their religion for something which does not try to make laws to compel others to forego the pleasure and instruction of this the greatest of World's Fairs. Their evolution to Liberality is slow, and I regret it; but sure, and I am glad of it. GEO. F. ELLIOTT.

Good Philosophy.

KIRKSVILLE, MO., July 18, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We find that there are cranks in the Liberal ranks as well as in the churches; as evidenced by the communication from G. R. Schoch, which you publish—and pass without comment, for it deserves none, and these remarks may be considered as a waste of time on my part and a waste of space on yours.

Diversity of opinion is a law or order of nature. People hav always differed and always will. I find you publish articles adverse to your honest convictions. This is Liberality. Difference of opinion leads to investigation, and investigation to the acquirement of knowledge; hence, as a means of investigation, let us hear all sides of any question of interest. We are not perfect beings, or possessed of all knowledge, and perhaps it is best that it is so. If it were possible for man to know all, or reach a state of absolute perfection, he would hav reached a state of inactivity, a state of death. Eternal progression would be preferable to eternal perfection. It is proper to discuss all subjects in a proper manner through a Liberal paper, otherwise it would not be Liberal.

Fraternally, WILLIAM HART.

Thinks That No One Can Really Believe the Bible.

BUFFALO VALLEY, TENN., July 12, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav waited for some time, hoping to get some new subscribers, but my efforts are futil. I hav loaned my paper to some of my neighbors, and they read it with much interest.

I feel satisfied that if men and women would read and investigate, the old orthodox notions about the Bible and Bible God would disappear from the earth. I verily believe that no good man or woman with even a moderate share of Nature's gift, common sense, can believe the absurd things in that book called the Bible. It seems to me that it must be a matter of honesty and dishonesty. I am willing to believe that a very ignorant person, who cannot read nor write, might believe the story as it has been told them; but for a person who has made some progress in mathematics to tell me that he believes all the book called the Bible, I am willing to admit that it astonishes me. I cannot think he tells the truth. Christianity was a fraud to start with, and lies had to be told to start it, and it seems that those who advocate it hav no hesitancy in looking you in the face and telling you lie after lie, following the footprints of those who commenced the business. So I do not believe that a man or woman with good common sense can believe the absurdities of Christianity. So I cannot believe that a man who is a church-member has benefited the world as much as one who has said the Bible is immoral.

M. BARTLETT.

Our Picture Books Not Bad Enough to Suit Christians.

ELSINORE, CAL., July 20, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The Pictorial Bible received, and I must say it is "great." It is going the round of Elsinore and doing a whole lot of missionary work. I think, though, that Heston knocks all the romance out of his angels by rolling up their sleeves, and God is robbed of his holy character by looking too much like Moses. As the old Democrat of Kentucky once complained of Petroleum V. Nasby's Democracy, I think I can see that Heston is doing religion more harm than good, although I must admit his illustrations are more chaste than those of illustrated Bibles. I remember some of the great battles between God's troops and those of Satan, which Doré illustrated so profusely for "Paradise Lost," where the angels rode winged horses, but I hav failed to find a single one of Heston's jackasses sporting a pair of wings. While this is perhaps more to nature, still it is hardly fair; as a mule is half-horse he should, at least, hav one wing. Doré used to always leave his male and female angels naked, while I notice Heston clothes his. This fact, I think, injures the sale of the book amongst Christians at this place; perhaps elsewhere, too. It may be, too, if Heston's angels and Gods, etc , were to expose their persons as Doré's do, our efficient postal authorities would be so well pleased with his works that they would pass them through the mails free or at reduced rates. As they are, they certainly lack the genuinness of religion and you can hardly blame church people for refusing to sanction them or for banishing them from the boys and girls of religious families.

There are a lot of other reasons why the book is likely to be unpopular in Christian families which I would like to mention, but space forbids. F. H. HEALD.

Realistic Letter.

PHENIX, ARIZ., July 18, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I will write you a few words, as my husband has been taking your papers for some time, and I like them best of all books. My mother and father were Catholics. They raised me in that church. They were poor farmers, so they had no money to send me to a Catholic school, and our priest forbade me to go to a free school. They claimed all I needed to learn was my prayers and to work, so I lived a slave to my religion until I was sixteen years old. I did feel so bad that I could not write letters like other girls. I left my mother, and went to make my home with a good lady. She had good learning. She was a midwife. So she learned me all that she could when she was at home. This lady never did belong to any church. But she was loved by all who knew her. Well, every minute that I was not at work I had a book in my hands. Well, I was happy then, for I was free. When I quit my church my relations were all mad at me for a while. But I was brave, and earned my own living, and kept myself out of their way. So they all loved me and wanted me to save my soul. I would laugh at them and tell them I had never sinned or been wicked. I learned to do all kinds of work that a woman needs to know. Here is my religion: to help anyone that is in need or sick or hungry or helpless. I hav always been able to do kind favors, or to giv good advice to my friends. Most people called me a faith doctor. I did not like that name, but I never said anything about it. I do treat everybody well if they do me, and if they do not treat me well I will let them alone. I am thirty-one years old. I am the mother of five children. I always tell them the truth when they ask me anything. I will sure send them to free schools. I am disgusted with religion, and so is my husband. Our religion is to pay for all we get, and to hav plenty, and to liv to the laws of our government.

Well, I will close by sending my best wishes to all free truth seekers. Excuse bad writing and spelling, for religion is the cause. I hope all the girls will follow me. MARY R. BEAUVAIS.

Ridicule Is a Proper Weapon Against the Like of Christianity.

DENVER, COL., July 22, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I notice a communication in your paper of July 2d, signed M. B. S., objecting to the caricatures of THE TRUTH SEEKER on the grounds that they "repel and disgust those who are not thoroughly weaned from religious notions." No doubt these same followers of a "half-breed God" who are filled with infinit disgust at your shockingly sacrilegious illustrations of his "Holy Nibs's" actions, could hav stood side by side with Moses and unblushingly witnessed their God's obscene display of his "back parts" to his obedient servant. To them the book of Ruth in all probability lays down a most excellent example for all young widows to emulate, and the holy conduct of the daughters of Lot conveys to them a spirit of godliness and obedience. No, my friends, there must be no compromise. The very nature of the strife renders it impossible. We are engaged in a battle for that which our god (Reason) tells us is a noble principle and a grand truth. The survival of the fittest can alone attest the result. No weapon can be too severe with which to stifle error and falsehood. Our fight is for a noble and philanthropic cause and the more bitter the medicin the more permanent will be the cure in the end.

Strong and sincere are the sympathies which flow from our hearts to the poor wretches whose feet hav never trod the bright and beautiful path of Truth, those whose intellectual faculties are stagnant and their life blighted by imbibing indigestible priestly messes of mythological lies, but we cannot afford to dilute our medicin with conservatism. It had better be made stronger than otherwise. A conservativ stand never gained a victory, and a compromise between what our Reason tells us is right and wrong has never been effectual or productiv of good. If I am not correct in the above (to me self-evident) propositions I would regard it as a kindness in some reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER to put me on the right track. I regard a conservativ stand as proof positiv of a lack of sincerity in the principle in question, or else pure cowardice. To those Liberals who would spread their principles broadcast in the land and stand by their honest convictions I say, Radicalism is your only hope. You must destroy darkness with light, eradicate error with truth. Ridicule is ofttimes a good and effectiv weapon.

Let the good work go on. "A little more grape," Mr. Editor.

Ever yours for Freethought and Liberalism, FRANK LEARY.

Ingersoll Should Be Nominated.

ATLANTA, GA., July 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In speaking of R. G. Ingersoll as a possible candidate for the presidency, J. F. Clancy remarks, in his letter in THE TRUTH SEEKER of July 23d: "Is it possible to elect R. G. Ingersoll president of the United States? And if not, what is the use of talking?" I, for one, think there is not only room for talk but room for action, for I hav heard R. G. Ingersoll mentioned as candidate for the presidency scores of times in the last three years in as many as half a dozen states, and by those who were orthodox and expressed themselvs as being strictly opposed to the colonel's anti-orthodox accomplishments, while they admired him as a man and believed he would, if elected president, perform his official duties with a sense of honor and justice impossible to any other man, and that it would not be long (in their belief) before he would be a candidate for the presidency, and that he should hav their vote. Only a few weeks ago I handed a copy of THE TRUTH SEEKER to a gentleman and requested him to take it home and read it. He looked at it a few moments and handed the paper back with the remark that he was a Baptist and did not believe in such nonsense, but if Colonel Ingersoll ever ran for president he should vote for him. The situation is this: there are so many parties in the field that laymen are expecting the Liberals to nominate a ticket sooner or later, and will be surprised if the Liberals fail to do so. And as politics stands to-day it matters not to you or me which party, Democrat or Republican, is in power, as the situation would remain unchanged. Therefore, this is the time for action. We do not need to make an appropriation for a campaign, but each Liberal could afford to send $1 for the expense of printing and receive in return as many tickets as he thought he could cause to be used on election day. I realize it is not probable, although it might be possible, for us to elect our man, for all we know; but there is one thing certain, our man would receive votes enough to bring us into such prominence that either party in another campaign might be willing to slip a plank into their platform for our benefit for the sake of our votes. The only thing to be considered is this, Would such a demonstration benefit our cause to that extent that we would not be imposing upon the feelings of a candidate to ask him to enter into a candidacy with certain defeat staring him in the face?

Wishing the good old paper success, I am, With you for liberty,

C. E. MOORE.

Philosophical Thoughts On Religion.

PROVO CITY, UTAH, June 29, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed $4—$3 for subscription for 1892, and $1 for the Bible Picture Book.

I like the paper—"Letters of Friends," and the pictures. If Christianity's religion is a humbug and an imposition, there cannot be too much ridicule, burlesque, jokes, fun, or pictures made about it, not too much blasphemy against it. It might hav originally been invented to make the human animal better, and perhaps, with all its Inquisitions and bloodsheds, the world might hav been worse without this eternal scaring with hell and promising of heaven. If all Christians proved to be good, and all unbelievers bad absolutely (as Christians and priests are trying hard to make it appear), then we surely know. But we hav discovered that man can be just as honest, moral, and happy without believing God, apple-stealing, Jonah, son of Ghost, Sabbath, and praying, etc.

I hav been investigating, reading, writing, and discussing religions, ever since young; been initiated in several; but as for me, I do not find spirit in it. I hav proved almost all, and now hold fast to the best, and only reliable, so simple and comprehensible a fool need not err in it. Yet I hav sympathy and like for Christians, as some mean well, are sincere, and better in it. But again, some, in spite of their talk, to love enemies, meekness of Christ, return good for bad, and happily enduring persecution, prove at every turn to be disagreeable, spiting, petty, trifling, and angry with anyone who differs. They believe they are the majority and we ought to be decent enough not to dispute them. I say, forgiv them, for they think they are doing good. Christians are gradually turning to common sense. Though man must hav a little hobby, little foolishness, some kind of stimulant, and there is some intoxication in preaching and screaming for Jesus. It becomes second nature to some. They see the beauty in it, but not the disorder, nonsense, and contradictions. It is a cloak, a sign of recognition in that fraternity. But how glorious it would be if all could agree upon the common law of morality. Yours, A. SWARD.

The Latest Christian Lie.

SAMOTH, ILL., July 4, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The recent controversy evoked from the clergy's ignominious attempt to suppress free speech on the Telegram's commendable course in publishing Colonel Ingersoll's famous "Christmas Sermon," stirred up the stagnant sentinels upon the watch-tower of Zion, and as a result, the air echoed with their holy howls.

The editor of the St. Louis Daily Chronicle, I suppose, is a fanatic of the first water. The portrait of Lambert, the champion of Catholicism, appeared in his organ, and furthermore the News apprises its numerous readers that Mr. Lambert had coerced America's Infidel orator to recant and accept his doctrin of damnation.

This editor in his enthusiasm told all but the truth, which the following correspondence will reveal:

SAMOTH, ILL., May 16, 1892.

COL. ROBERT INGERSOLL: Please pardon the presumption I assume in addressing you, but the purport that prompts this inquiry I regard as of paramount importance to me, as well as to the public.

What I refer to is an item that appeared recently in the columns of the St. Louis Daily Chronicle, informing its innumerable readers that Father Lambert has compelled the "great Agnostic" to change his convictions and believe in a literal "hell." A score or more of my intimate friends hav importuned me to write you whether the report contained any accuracy or foundation in fact.

Certainly I can never arrive at the conclusion that you hav doffed your head to the dogma of eternal punishment, which was born of barbarism on one hand, and the "obscene chatter of baboons" on the other, and which loots life of love and jewels of infinit joy.

Hoping this rumor, afloat like flotsam and jetsam on the wild sea of newspaper piracy, is contemptibly false, I shall anxiously await your reply to quash it.

Thanking you in advance for the favor, I am, with great respect,

Yours affectionately,
CHAS. D. MCBRIDE (aged 22).

Below I append a verbatim copy of Mr. Baker's rejoinder, which ought to crush all the orthodox falsehoods in their incipiency:

NEW YORK, N. Y., May 18, 1892.

CHAS. D. MCBRIDE, ESQ., Dear Sir: Colonel Ingersoll is absent from the city, but I can answer for him that there is no truth whatever, nor foundation in truth, in the ridiculous report that he has renounced his long-held views against orthodox Christianity or weakens the slightest in his abhorrence of the damnable doctrin of eternal punishment.

On the contrary, as his days grow, his views, so long held and proclaimed, deepen and strengthen.

Thanking you for your kind letter, I am, Yours truly, I. N. BAKER, Sec'y.

Colonel Ingersoll, we infer, prefers Buckley's "cold stones of Agnosticism" instead of his calorific liquid lake of brimstone, where Beelzebub of late is compelled to wear an overcoat to protect his imperial majesty from the inclement weather.

Yours for the religion of reason and the "test of truth,"

REV. CHAS. D. MCBRIDE.

A Fine Place—Even the Children Are Infidels.

PORT ANGELES, WASH., July 12, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed $5, for which please send the following books: Bible Picture Book, "Pushed By Unseen Hands," "Infidel Death-Beds," and "Crimes of Preachers." The rest to be applied to my subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER. I would send for more books but the Raymond Brothers are going to stock their news-store with Liberal literature and I can get what I want from them. I hope all the Liberals here will patronize the Raymond Brothers.

The churches hav trusted almost too much to Jesus to pay it all for them. The Congregationalist church is without a preacher. The Catholic church has been sold to the county and is now used as a court house. The Salvation Army consists of two women and four or five men, and though Jesus, according to the sixth chapter of Matthew, said, "Be ye not as the hypocrits are, for they sound a trumpet before them and love to stand praying on the corners of the streets to be seen of men," still these simple but well-meaning people continue to sound their trumpet and pray on the street corners, though their attention has been called to the sixth chapter of Matthew. But they are not doing much harm, if any. It is very seldom that anyone stops to listen to them. Though Liberalism is growing, there is a Methodist and also a Baptist church, and two or three saloons, doing what they can to obstruct the progress of knowledge and civilization. There are several schools here, and in one of them there is only one scholar who believes in Christianity. The children took TRUTH SEEKERS and Liberal tracts to school until the teacher told them not to bring any more. The Liberals hav a meeting every Sunday evening in the Opera House and we expect Mrs. Reynolds to come and lecture for us before long.

A government reserve of three thousand acres adjoining the town of Port Angeles has been opened for settlement. Some of it has been surveyed into lots a hundred feet by a hundred and forty. Each settler can hold one lot by living on it, but will eventually hav to pay the government for the expense of surveying it. Several thousands hav taken homes in this reserve. Still there is room for many more. I would like to hav Liberals come. But they should hav money enough to liv on for a while, as this place is overrun with workingmen.

Yours for truth and justice,
FRANK MORSE.

Radical Views in Finance.

SEATTLE, WASH., July 12, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Please publish this clipping on the infamy of our Congress in demonetizing silver—one of the most infamous pieces of legislation that was ever passed by the American Congress; one that has caused more suffering, crime, and misery than all other bills combined. It ought to be wiped out, and John Sherman with it, the most infamous man in Congress to-day. If you think it will do to show the American people the morality of our Congressmen, I should like to hav you do so.

The clipping speaks for itself.

I am a free-silver man and a Greenbacker as far as such currency is needed to carry on the business of the country, and in favor of the government loaning direct to the people. The same security that the national banks require is good for the government. It does not require a middle-man to distribute the money of the government among its creditors. The national banks pay one per cent interest to the government and collect fifteen per cent from the people for the use of it. The gold bugs and the national bankers contract the currency so as to get a larger rate of interest for the use of government money. I fully indorse the St. Louis platform, with the exception of tariff for revenue only. I cannot go that.

Yours fraternally, W. BURRITT.

THE SEYD BRIBERY.

The News republishes the affidavit of Mr. Frederick A. Luckenbach, that details his talk with Ernst Seyd in 1874, in which he was told by Mr. Seyd explicitly that he was sent to this country in 1872–1873 by the governor of the Bank of England and German bankers to secure the demonetization of silver, and that he brought with him £100,000 to be used for the purpose, which he spent on Congressmen; and that he had authority to draw for £100,000 or as much more as might be needed to accomplish the result.

The reason the News does this is that the Associated Press—headquarters at Chicago—declined to send it over the wires as Associated Press news. It is more evidence of the hundreds that hav lately occurred to prove that the Associated Press as now managed is in the grip of the gold power and that it will not aid in scattering any information that will prove injurious to it. No more important document or news item has been secured for the public in many months than this is. Here is an affidavit of an eminently respectable resident of Denver, a gentleman largely acquainted with prominent commercial people in the East, who has lived many years in New York and Pennsylvania, detailing with clearness a conversation with Mr. Seyd under his own roof, by whose death the seal of secresy is removed, in which he gave particulars of his visit to the United States to corrupt its Congress with British and German gold that silver might be demonetized, and how well he succeeded. If such an item against the silver men had been supplied the Associated Press would hav flashed it to every corner of the country that the silver men might be confounded. Comment upon such unmitigated partisanship is unnecessary.

It is not improbable that the News may again publish the affidavit. It should be circulated. If the Associated Press puts up the bars in front of the only channel that reaches all the country it is the duty of silver men to commence distributing the document themselvs. They should make it their religious duty to mail the News containing it—every copy—to their friends in the East, marking it, so that they may learn some of the infamies of the conspiracy by which silver was demonetized.

Money Again.

FLAT CREEK, LA., June 27, E.M. 292.

MR. EDITOR, Dear Sir: In your issue of May 28th I find a letter from another financial Solomon (in his own estimation), in which he essays to answer Colonel Ingersoll's utterances on the money problem with ipse dixits of authority, epithets, and abuse, instead of arguments. His article has the ring of a young cock just beginning to crow. Mr. O. I. Jones certainly lacks experience in the arena of debate, or he would not come blustering into the ring with such an incautious, self-confident air and assault the world's champion in polemics. In his estimation, Colonel Ingersoll is an ignoramus, a child, and a dogmatist, and he thought to knock the colonel out of the ring with a few hard words and borrowed ipse dixits. Colonel Ingersoll is the deepest and clearest thinker and the greatest orator that the world ever produced. He could giv more real facts about money in an hour than Mr. Jones ever knew. Yet because he is Agnostic and modest enough to say, "I don't know," Mr. Jones charges him with ignorance. Mr. Jones thinks that he knows. If he attracts the attention of the colonel at all it will only be to provoke a smile. I hav acquired the reputation here of being a first-class debater. When I was young and inexperienced as Mr. Jones appears to be I would quote the ipse dixits of authority in debate, but I learned by experience that we could never settle a mooted question by quoting the ipse dixits of authority upon it. On the tariff question and the money question we could pile up the ipse dixits of authority mountain-high on both sides, and the size of the piles would just depend upon the diligence of the parties in hunting up the ipse dixits. Very few words are required to express a fact, but many words are needed to talk around a fact, or to cover up and conceal a fact. So the bulk of arguments and ipse dixits are to be found on the side of an issue which is opposed to facts. Now, if Mr. Jones was expressing his own individual thoughts, I would not assume the task of answering him, but the thoughts which he is defending are the children of some other brain, which a political party (young and inexperienced as Mr. Jones appears to be) has adopted and is trying to induce the rest of us to help support.

Mr. Jones quotes from the grand old Grecian philosopher, Aristotle, the sentence, "Money is the creation of law." Now, I cannot answer or criticise Aristotle, because I do not know whether he meant by the word "law" a statute law or a law of nature. I do not know what kind of money he meant, nor how it was made.

He quotes Jeuly Tiffony as saying in his "Constitutional Law:" "There is legally no such thing as gold or silver money or paper money. Money is the sovereign authority impressed on that which is capable of taking and retaining the impression. The value is in the stamp and not in the metal or material." Now, if Tiffony is right, the United States cannot make money, because we hav no sovereign authority in this country to impress on anything. I hav never seen any sovereignty, and do not know how it looks, and if I were to see its impression on a coin, I might take it to be a panther's track. There is not much sovereignty left now anywhere outside of Russia. As we hav been sending shiploads of provisions to feed the famished Russians, perhaps Russia will be neighborly enough to send us a shipload of sovereignty to make money of by impressing it upon our old clothes or upon chips of gutta percha. Why does it take a larger plate of silver than of gold to receive and retain the impression of a dollar's worth of sovereign authority? Cannot sovereign authority be condensed so that a dollar's worth of it can be impressed upon a nickel? It seems to me, as Russia now has a monopoly of sovereign authority, that she ought to furnish the rest of the world with money.

What kind of money can be based upon the credit of the nation except the nation's promises to pay? If a nation issues more promises than it is able to redeem, it will not be good money. The words "dollar" and "cent" express a concrete idea, the same as the words "bushel" and "pint." Our Congress has made the word dollar mean 25.8 grains of gold or 412½ grains of silver. The words "ten dollars" mean 258 grains of gold or 4,125 grains of silver. The words "dollar" and "cent" when abstracted from coined metal hav no meaning. Congress has never provided that a certain quantity of paper shall be called a dollar, and it never has attempted to fix the value of a dollar by prescribing how much wheat, corn, cotton, butter, or cheese shall be given in exchange for a dollar. The value of a dollar compared to other kinds of property is just what the man who has the dollar can get in exchange for it. A dollar will buy more corn, wheat, or meat in Kansas than in New York. It will buy more dry goods in New York than in Kansas. The dollar has only a relativ value, and compared to any other species of property its value is different at different times and places. Gold and silver being of uniform quality and of small bulk and weight, their value is more uniform than that of any other kind of property.

What would be the result of increasing the circulating medium to $50 per capita? Answer. It would take $2 to buy as much of any other kind of property as $1 will buy now. It would double or triple the money price, in dollars, of all kinds of property without increasing its real value. It would double or triple the wages of labor as expressed in dollars, but the laborer's wages would buy no more of the necessaries and comforts of life then than now. It would rob the creditor class of from one-half to two-thirds of their wealth and giv it to the debtors. Contraction of the currency has been robbing the debtor class and giving to the creditors for the last twenty-five years. It is now time to turn the scale the other way, in the interest of justice, but expansion should come as slowly as the contraction did.

It seems to me that the People's party has drawn its inspiration on the money problem from "Rational Communism," a book published by the Truth Seeker Company. The author of that book was a deep thinker and a clear and strong writer, and I can only take issue with him in the financial part of his scheme. Without a specie basis for money I am not able to think how we could determin the value of a paper money unit or a note of exchange. This is the vital point in any legal-tender paper money scheme. What will we measure the value of a paper dollar with? I hav never seen this question answered by any Greenbacker or fiat-moneyiter, and until it is answered I cannot be a fiater. I do not believe that Communism can ever succeed where money is used. I learned from Prescott's "Conquest of Peru" that the Peruvians had made Communism a grand success without the use of money, and I hav been told that the Mormons made it a grand success without money. Under a system of private ownership of property we cannot do without money. Communism cannot succeed with it.

The intrinsic or bullion value of the metal in coin is the only measure of money value which we hav or can hav. Paper money without a specie basis would act like a kite without a tail. Some men may know how to measure the value of an impression of sovereignty, but in regard to that I am Agnostic. I should guess the value of an impression of sovereignty was a plus quantity to humbuggers, and a minus quantity to honest people who earn their living.

P. F. SHUMAKER.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight.
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Across the Atlantic.

Land in Sight.—Customs Officials.—Bonnie Scotland.—A Splendid Hotel.—The Cathedral and the Necropolis.—Birthplace of Robert Burns.

After eight days on the water, even with pleasant company round and about, one begins to weary of water—north, south, east, and west—and longs for dry earth and green grass.

On the evening of July 9th, when it was announced that land would be in sight on the morrow, everyone became jubilant. As if to add to the general happiness, a rainbow, just before sunset, arched the sky and touched with its brilliant hands the shimmering sea. Seemingly, in anticipation of the incoming joy of the morning, it would add its crown and benediction on the voyage.

About 3 A.M. there was great running to and fro on the deck, rolling of baggage, and altogether too much racket to enable anyone to sleep well. After a while I decided to dress and investigate the source of the confusion. Coming from my room and looking out of the port, I clapped my hands and exclaimed, "Land, oh, land!"

Yes, there it was, the bald, bold, rugged, beautiful coast of Ireland, "ould Ireland." What odd, strange scenery! Rough, fantastic, rocky shores, with here and there a lighthouse to warn mariners off the dangerous rocks and shoals. By and by are noted neat, cultivated fields and lowly cottages cuddled here and there.

The sun came up in splendor, but at 5 o'clock in the morning, while the skies grow glorious with the luminous sun, we remember it is about midnight in Massachusetts and her sister states, and dear friends at home are fast asleep in the darkness, with only the stars shining down upon them.

At Moville a tender came and took off some passengers, but we went on to Greenock.

Oh, how green and fresh the earth is as we go on, and how charming the coast range of Scotland—for "Auld Scotia" is in sight. Land of Wallace, Edwin Ruthven, Helen Mar, Bruce, and Bannockburn, that I hav seen in dreams, now in reality before my eyes. Ah, Scottish chieftains, ye are gone, but your glory and renown survive. Bagpipes and oatcakes, globe flowers, crowberry, primula farinosa, haloscias Scoticum, pink and white heather, how ye mingle your scents on the breezy morning air—in imagination now, but soon I shall see you face to face.

Irregular Scotland, with a mainland from Dunnet head in the north to the Mull of Galloway in the south, only about two hundred and eighty miles, yet so indented in sea-coast that its total extent is a good three thousand miles.

Here, in old Caledonia, once lived the ancient tribes of savage shepherds and hunters of Celtic origin. Mysterious Druids, yet a brave and hardy people, whose old legends delight the heart and mind of the reader. They fought the Roman invaders manfully and well, and will be brave defenders as long as the thistle and the rose grow and bloom.

Yonder is Ailsa Craig looming up out of the sea like a proud and haughty giant. A dispute arose among the passengers as to its name, and the deck-stewards were appealed to, Daniel and Richard Watson. Daniel, who is a Scotchman, said it was "Ailsa Craig, and nobody else!" Richard said (Richard is an Irishman): "I've sailed the Spanish main, and all the seas over and over again, I've been shipwrecked yonder, and I'll tell ye, that is Paddy's Milestone, and I know it!" Finally the question was settled by a jolly Englishman, who said it was Ailsa Craig all the world over to Scotchmen, but the Irish believe it to be the place where St. Patrick banished all the snakes of Ireland, and they always stop to do it honor, hence it is called "Paddy's Milestone."

We steamed up the frith of Clyde to Greenock, where all our trunks were examined by the officials of the custom-house.

Such a time you never saw. Such hunting for trunks! Such hurlyburly and buzzing of tongues! Such running hither and thither! Such anxious faces, open mouths, and staring eyes! Such pompous officers, ordering and pulling over nightgowns, pocket-handkerchiefs, and stockings.

What were they looking for? you inquire.

Prohibited goods, and these are cigars, spirits (alcoholic), and song folios. Well, it was a queer experience. Some trunks were overhauled unmercifully, while others were only opened and the cover slammed down without any examination whatever, while the excited owner was left to strap, tie, and buckle as best he could. The agony was all over in a half hour and the perspiring travelers started on their way to Greenock in the steam-cars. The cars are quite different from our American system, as you are aware, and it seemed very odd to be shut up in a compartment with six others, but the doors were not locked, as was formerly the rule.

The scenery all the way up the Clyde is lovely and romantic.

Arrived at Glasgow we were glad to find rest and refreshment at the Caledonian Central Hotel, said to be the finest in the kingdom. It is, indeed, as elegant as the most fastidious could ask for. I would like to describe it, but hav not time.

Glasgow is a wonderful city whose streets cross at right angles. Everywhere are parks, gardens, terraces, statues, and many fine buildings. The drinking water is the best in the world, and is brought from Loch Katrine. They build iron ships here, and there are many machine shops and mills for chemicals, the largest works being those of St. Rollix—covering sixteen acres, and said to be the largest in the world. The best Turkey red dyes are made here. Besides, there are glass-works and mills. Glasgow is a wide-awake, stirring city, and is said to hav a population of eight hundred thousand.

It was founded away back in antiquity—some placing it about the year 580—by a son of the king of Cumbria whose name was Kentigern, but his teacher, St. Servan, called him Mongah, which in Celtic means "Beloved Friend." There are so many lovely legends and good deeds connected with his name that we must believe he merited the title. The common people were charmed with him, but, like all who try to do good and liv according to their ideas of right, he suffered persecution by the Cumbrian king and others.

In 1638, the world-famous assembly of Presbyterians met here, and they boldly denounced and abjured Episcopacy, hurrahing for Presbyterianism forever.

In 1690, "good William and Mary" conferred a charter upon Glasgow giving the people the right to elect their own magistrates.

Among other things that we must remember of Glasgow is that it raised a regiment of a thousand men and fitted out fourteen privateers to aid the American Revolution.

Of course you want me to tell you about the famous cathedral. It stands on the highest ground in Glasgow. One has a fine view of the winding river Clyde, its valleys and green meadows; the great factories, shops, residences; Dumbarton rock, Paisley and Argyleshire mountains, and by the water the great wall of the quays, fifteen thousand feet long.

The cathedral is Gothic in style, and a tablet at its entrance announces that George Baillie, a member of the faculty of procurateurs in Glasgow, gave his large fortune to endow "Baillie's Institution" for promoting the intellectual culture of operativs in Glasgow, for free public libraries, reading-rooms, and unsectarian schools. I do not believe George Baillie was much of a Presbyterian, do you?

An official in a gorgeous red vest, red stripes on black pants, gold band on hat, and abundance of dignity, waved our party into the musty, dim, and dusty old relic of ancient days. This cathedral was founded in the year 1136, and it is a marvel that so much of it is still in a fine state of preservation. The architecture and the noble columns are beautiful, impressiv, imposing, and do credit to the old designers. There are dingy old crypts that were once used for church services as well as burial-places of high dignitaries by the Catholics, but the zealous reformers destroyed all that they thought savored of idolatry, mutilating the images and destroying the fine carvings.

Bible stories are pictured in the stained-glass windows, some of these windows being thirty feet high. They were made in Munich—the windows, I mean—and as you walk along, the eyes of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and other patriarchs and prophets seem to follow you all the way at every turn and corner. The old sexton is very jolly, and keeps his courage and yours up by telling many quaint legends as you pass through the gloomy corridors and basements that hold the dead. There are figures in marble and bronze, old battle-flags, remains of an old altar, and many antiques. Here is imaged the great seal of Scotland that the old man describes as follows: "This is "The fish that never swam,

The bell that never rang,
The bird that never flew,
The tree that never grew," ending with, "Let Glasgow flourish by the preaching of the word. Amen."

Truly, I was glad to get out of the twilight of the cathedral into the pure air again. But it is a magnificent building to look upon, and that is about all it is good for in these days.

Behind it is the Necropolis, three hundred feet in hight, well filled with marble monuments and granit tablets from top to bottom. Very conspicuous is the statue to John Knox and a marble shaft on which is inscribed, "There lieth he who never feared the face of man, who oft was threatened with dag and dagger, yet hath ended his days in peace and honor."

The Necropolis is reached by a bridge called the "Bridge of Sighs," because the mourners go over it to reach the burial-place of their dead. It is certainly the most beautiful spot for the purpose my eyes ever beheld.

BIRTHPLACE OF BURNS.

We boarded the train at Glasgow for Ayr and the ride is through charming and picturesque scenery. Every house in Scotland has chimney pots, or "jennys," as they call them, upon the chimneys; at least, I observe them upon every house I hav yet seen. And such a country for sheep! On all sides are noticed the black-faced Highland sheep, browsing contentedly, unthinking, poor things, of the murd'rous hand upraised to strike them down. It was a pleasant ride to Ayr, and a two-miles drive in a wagonet brought us to the little thatched cottage where Robbie Burns first saw the light. Such a quaint old house, a "clay biggin," and so full of stirring heart-memories. Here the poet was born, and in this low-roofed dwelling he lived for seven years. The same old dresser is there yet, and a few of the dishes that his mother used. There is the old fireplace, and yonder in that niche is the spot where the bed stood on which he slept. A bed is there yet, but it is not the original Burns bed. One of our party somewhat irreverently lifted the tow mattress, when out flew a small army of moths which caused a general shaking of American garments. Mementoes bearing the poet's name and picture of the home are sold here now, and the lady in attendance has as much as she can do to wait on the eager customers. Leaving the house, we go a little way to "auld kirk Alloway," ivy-covered and slowly passing to decay. It seems as if the very witches, "ghaists, and owlets" are there yet that Tam O'Shanter's imaginativ eye saw the night of his eventful ride. The old sexton with crape on his left arm recited the poem with fine fervor, and as he pointed to the window of the kirk where Tam is supposed to hav peeped in upon the witches and hastened on in fear and agony of terror, he raised his voice, and, really, one could almost see the auld gray mare leaping along the road minus "her ain gray tail." A little way on the Burns monument stands, amid a garden abloom with gay flowers and glossy green shrubbery. We gathered some daisies from the grave of the father of Burns, and the sexton said two nieces were also buried there. "I laid them in!" said he; "I laid them in!"

The "bonnie Doon" flows along close by, and as I wandered musingly on its banks, my heart went away to the poet who could write:

Ye banks and braes o' bonny Doon,
How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair?
How can ye chant, ye little birds,
And I sae weary fu' o' care?
Thou'lt break my heart, thou warbling bird,
That wanton'st through the flowery thorn,
Thou mind'st me of departed joys,
Departed never to return.

Right over there are the "brigs of Ayr." You remember the "auld brig" was built in the thirteenth century, and I half expect to see the "genius of the stream" arise before me, as I survey the lovely panorama—

A venerable chief advanced in years;
His hoary head with water-lilies crowned.

The seasons as Burns depicted them stand out in splendor, and

Next followed Courage with his martial stride,
Benevolence, with mild, benignant air.
. . . . . .
Last, white-rob'd Peace, crowned with a hazel wreath,
To rustic agriculture did bequeath
The broken instruments of death.

Regretfully we turned from these scenes, more than ever in love with the people's poet.

No one has touched the human heart like Burns. He sang to the poor; he sang to the people everywhere. Like a bird he sang because he had to, and the misty hills, the valleys, the skies, the people, were all an inspiration to his quick brain. The song was in his heart, and it burst forth in such marvelous strains as must ever echo down the aisles of time. The mother of Burns, she who gave her son the melodious gift, comes before my mind. I see her bonny Scotch face, aglow with love and pride, her fond eyes kindling with delight as she listened to the poetic utterances of her boy—her boy always. But she has gone; bonnie Jean has gone; Highland Mary has gone; the poet, the sweet singer, has gone—but they made this spot in Ayr sacred forevermore, where many a pilgrim will e'er delight to linger.

The "presbytery of Ayr" has long since forgiven him for saying:

Thy strong right hand, Lord, mak' it bare upo' their heads,
Lord, weigh it down, and dinna spare,
For their misdeeds.

Reclining on the banks of bonny Doon, and surveying the glorious landscape, I said, "I do not wonder Burns so touched the human heart with his melodies." He was in touch with humanity, and the world is better because he lived, loved, and wrote.

SUSAN H. WIXON.

Send Twenty-five Cents
FOR
MADHOUSES AND ABUSE OF LUNATICS
And get the Plain Dealer—a Liberal weekly paper—free for six months.
Address ELMINA D. SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion.
Have We a Supernatural, Inspired Miraculous Religion?
By E. E. Guild. Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 80 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.
Radical Romance.
By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED.
A Work proving Christianity a Fiction. Most Startling Revelations of the Nineteenth Century. Send Address for Prospectus to ORIENTAL PUBLISHING CO., P.O.Box 446, Philadelphia, Pa.

To Regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABULES.
RIPANS TABULES
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents

PUSHED BY UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORK

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Idea of God. 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.

Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full index, 446pp., $1.50.

News of the Week.

A few days ago a free fight occurred in the Methodist church at Mahogany, O.

The planet Mars has been unusually near the earth, but we hav failed to find traces of inhabitants.

Julius Wise, hanged at Lexington, S. C., for murder, joined the church an hour before execution.

Talmage says: "I judged from his questions that the czar is more interested in religion than in politics."

Bismarck says that the clericals are at their old work of trying to undermine German unity. They can make better terms for themselvs with a disunited than with a united Germany.

Doubters assert that the miraculous finding of an image of the Virgin in the foundation of a church at St. Petersburg was a cheat got up to quicken zeal in behalf of the church-building fund.

It has transpired that the riots at Tashkend were due not wholly to cholera and superstitious antipathy to medical measures, but partly to religious excitement caused by the governor's interfering with rites in the mosques.

At the shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre, Canada, twenty-five thousand pilgrims hav gathered to celebrate the translation of the relic of the Virgin Mary's mother, which lately wrought such wonderful cures in New York, to the cathedral of Thaumaturgus.

At Kleinweisch, Germany, on the 7th, lightning struck a church and killed two men and rendered thirty unconscious for an hour. A second bolt followed, knocking the bell from the tower, tearing open the roof, and paralyzing the pastor and four boys.

Cal Wood, executed for murder at Clinton prison, N. Y., on the 2d, devoted the whole of his time for his last few days to reading the Bible, getting many portions by heart. His last words were: "God remember me in heaven. God help. God help. God remember me. Lord remember. God help. God rem"——

Herbert Spencer writes of Russia: "My hope is that the intensified despotism of late years, displayed by these measures against the Jews, as in other ways, leading as it does to the accumulation of various explosiv forces, will end in a catastrophe which will break up into half a dozen kingdoms this great barbarian empire."

At Ayacucho, Peru, Agent Penzotti of the American Bible Society was allowed to display six boxes of Bibles for sale several hours, but presently resentment appeared, and in a few days his house was entered and his stock of Bibles burnt, he fleeing and narrowly escaping with his life. Catholic disfavor of the lay use of Bibles was the cause.

Cholera is ravaging the cities of Russia, nearly all of which are without drainage. Physicians hav sometimes advised drainage, but their power was too slight to cause them to be heeded, the church and the state monopolizing all prestige and influence. A dispatch says: "Practically no sanitary measures are enforced to stay the progress of the disease."

George Thompson, the negro Christ of St. Louis, says: "I am the Ten Commandments. I am the whole word of God. The Bible in print is not to be read aright. No one can read it right unless he becomes my follower. The Bible in print is only increased darkness to the reader. I will do away with nature. Everybody that rejects my teaching shall sicken and die. They who accept it shall hav life eternal."

Herr Most says of Berkman, who attempted to assassinate Frick: "He joined a small group of ultra-Nihilists, who called themselvs Autonomists. There were only eight or nine of them, and their theory was that every man was the source, center, and justification of any action he chose to perform, without further responsibility to any other being. Every man was a law unto himself, and their one rule was to do just as they wished."

Action will be taken against O'Mara, chief of the Pittsburgh police, and Layton, chief of the police of Long Branch, N. J., on the charge of illegally imprisoning and then abducting a Long Branch baker named Mollick, suspected of complicity in the attempted assassination of Frick. It is charged that they refused to let him see counsel or be brought before a justice. Each of these denials of the rights of habeas corpus entails severe punishment, as does their carrying of him to Pennsylvania, which will be held kidnapping. It is said that measures quite Russian in their despotism hav often been practiced against Anarchists in Chicago and other places.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50c.; cloth, $2.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt. G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. Marvin, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, 3 cents

Valuable Books on Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞Catalogues Free.☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

H. L. Green has printed as a tract Colonel Ingersoll's speech at the dinner of the Unitarian Club. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for a half dollar.

Number 21 of THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY is a "History of Religions," being a condensed statement of the various religious foolishnesses of the world and how the idiotic beliefs arose. It is by Elizabeth E. Evans, and the price is 25 cents.

Those having cash to invest in mortgage and not knowing how to secure themselvs fully or to intelligently weigh up the safety of the investment will find considerable aid in "A Treatise on Mortgage Investments," by Edward N. Darrow, 201 Hennepin ave., Minneapolis, Minn. Price, $1.

Religious mugwumps will, perhaps, like "Not on Calvary," being "A Layman's Plea for Meditation on the Temptation in the Wilderness." It is an excuse for God to those who are determined to be Christians, but who cannot see why, if he is all-love and all-powerful, there is suffering for the world. The pamphlet is very neatly gotten up. Price, 35 cents.

"Merry Tales of the Monks," published by Jordan Brothers, Philadelphia, is an imitation of the Heptameron and Decameron, and a rather poor one, as many of the tales are rather stupid and the morals educed not worth the labor of reading, much less writing, them. The wit is also absent in many cases, and the presence of the Comstock law on the statute books prevents them from being broad enough to be naughty. Price, 50 cents.

Four new works just put into the Humboldt Library are, "Glimpses of Nature" (double number, 30 cents), by D. R. Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E.; "Flowers, Fruits, and Leaves," illustrated, by Sir John Lubbock, F.R.S., LL.D. (double number, 30 cents); "Studies in Pessimism," by Arthur Schopenhauer, 15 cents; and "Modern Science and the Science of the Future," by Edward Carpenter, 15 cents. The books in this Library are all admirable and useful, and are extremely low in price.

There is not much of the sea flavor to W. Clark Russell's latest work, "A Strange Elopement," and those who hav read his other sea stories and liked him for writing them will feel somewhat disappointed with the new one. But it shows the hand of the skilled novelist, with fertil imagination, and will amuse for an evening, though his admirers must regret that he writes no more yarns like "The Wreck of the Grosvenor," "A Sailor's Sweetheart," etc., yarns with pictures of sea life never excelled. Price, $1. Published by McMillan & Co.

"Pushed by Unseen Hands," by Helen Gardener, is a collection of short stories written to show the influence of heredity upon the race. Incidentally she has made them the best of her fictional writings, and all her friends will desire them upon their book-shelves. Dr. Spitzka commends them as possessing great scientific value, and Don Piatt thinks them "rare fiction." Both critics are right, and the reader can, as the author suggests, determin the value and quality of the message for him from the mental outlook from which he approaches it. Price, $1.

Moncure D. Conway's Life of Thomas Paine is now for sale at this office. The two large volumes are handsomely printed, of about 500 pages each, and the first contains a portrait of Paine. The work is entitled to a more extended review than we can giv it in these brief notices of books, and will receive it shortly, but in the mean time we may say that this Life is the only one at all approaching completeness and of sound authority as a biography. Every Freethinker should hav it for his own information and to answer the annual slanders upon Paine. It ranks with Parton's Life of Voltaire, which is paying its author a very high but deserved compliment. From this time on there will be but one Life of Paine, as this includes all that is in the others, and much more. It is a scholarly and judicial record, written in an exceedingly pleasant style, by a writer in close sympathy with the subject of the memoir. Price, $5.

"Pray You, Sir, Whose Daughter?" is Helen Gardener's latest addition to the literature of the century, and may be considered a companion book to "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" both being in the line of reformatory work for the benefit of women. There are, however, some things in the older work happily missed in this, but the author still paints man a little more demoniacally strong and woman a little more saintly weak than either sex really is. However, it is a novelist's privilege to exaggerate and draw characters that never did exist, and we suppose it is art.

The book is dedicated to her husband, a man whose amiability and goodness ought to incline her to draw less severe indictments of the masculin sex, and is prefaced by Elizabeth Cady Stanton, who believes so strongly that women are equal to men in all qualities that she sometimes forgets to recognize the fact that if they were they would not be the victims she says they are, nor the playthings and supporters of priest and church; nor would woman allow her affection and goodness to be taken advantage of by men to make her suffer so cruelly. However, Mrs. Stanton's preface sets forth the purpose of the book so plainly and sympathetically that we print it entire; and not only as an exposition of the story but as well because it reveals the thoughts of a woman whose opinion is eagerly sought:

"In the following story the writer shows us what poverty and dependence are in their revolting outward aspects, as well as in their crippling effects on all the tender sentiments of the human soul. Whilst the many suffer for want of the decencies of life, the few hav no knowledge of such conditions.

"They require the poor to keep clean, where water by landlords is considered a luxury; to keep their garments whole where they hav naught but rags to stitch together, twice and thrice worn threadbare. The improvidence of the poor as a valid excuse for ignorance, poverty, and vice, is as inadequate as is the providence of the rich, for their virtue, luxury, and power. The artificial conditions of society are based on false theories of government, religion, and morals, and not upon the decrees of a God.

"In this little volume we hav a picture, too, of what the world would call a happy family, in which a naturally strong, honest woman is shriveled into a mere echo of her husband, and the popular sentiment of the class to which she belongs. The daughter having been educated in a college with young men, and tasted of the tree of knowledge, and, like the gods, knowing good and evil, can no longer square her life by opinions she has outgrown; hence with her parents there is friction, struggle, open revolt, though conscientious and respectful withal.

"Three girls belonging to different classes in society; each illustrates the false philosophy on which woman's character is based, and each in a different way, in the supreme moment of her life, shows the necessity of self-reliance and self-support.

"As the wrongs of society can be more deeply impressed on a large class of readers in the form of fiction than by essays, sermons, or the facts of science, I hail with pleasure all such attempts by the young writers of our day. The slave has had his novelist and poet, the farmer his, the victims of ignorance and poverty theirs, but up to this time the refinements of cruelty suffered by intelligent, educated women, hav never been painted in glowing colors, so that the living picture could be seen and understood. It is easy to rouse attention to the grosser forms of suffering and injustice, but the humiliations of spirit are not so easily described and appreciated.

"A class of earnest reformers hav, for the last fifty years, in the press, the pulpit, and on the platform, with essays, speeches, and constitutional arguments before legislativ assemblies, demanded the complete emancipation of woman from the political, religious, and social bondage she now endures; but as yet few see clearly the need of larger freedom, and the many maintain a stolid indifference to the demand.

"I hav long waited and watched for some woman to arise to do for her sex what Mrs. Stowe did for the black race in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' a book that did more to rouse the national conscience than all the glowing appeals and constitutional arguments that agitated our people during half a century. If, from an objectiv point of view, a writer could thus eloquently portray the sorrows of a subject race, how much more graphically should some woman describe the degradation of sex.

"In Helen Gardener's stories, I see the promis, in the near future, of such a work of fiction, that shall paint the awful facts of woman's position in living colors that all must see and feel. The civil and canon law, state and church alike, make the mothers of the race a helpless, ostracized class, pariahs of a corrupt civilization. In view of woman's multiplied wrongs, my heart oft echoes the Russian poet who said: 'God has forgotten where he hid the key to woman's emancipation.' Those who know the sad facts of woman's life, so carefully veiled from society at large, will not consider the pictures in this story overdrawn.

"The shallow and thoughtless may know nothing of their existence, while the helpless victims, not being able to trace the cause of their misery, are in no position to state their wrongs themselvs.

"Nevertheless all the author describes in this sad story, and worse still, is realized in every-day life, and the dark shadows dim the sunshine in every household.

"The apathy of the public to the wrongs of woman is clearly seen at this hour, in propositions now under consideration in the legislature of New York. Though two infamous bills hav been laid before select committees, one to legalize prostitution, and one to lower the age of consent, the people hav been alike ignorant and indifferent to these measures. When it was proposed to take a fragment of Central park for a race-course, a great public meeting of protest was called at once, and hundreds of men hastened to Albany to defeat the measure.

"But the proposed invasion of the personal rights of woman, and the wholesale desecration of childhood, has scarce created a ripple on the surface of society. The many do not know what laws their rulers are making, and the few do not care, so long as they do not feel the iron teeth of the law in their own flesh. Not one father in the House or Senate would willingly hav his wife, sister, or daughter subject to these infamous bills proposed for the daughters of the people. Alas! for the degradation of sex, even in this republic. When one may barter away all that is precious to pure and innocent childhood at the age of ten years, you may as well talk of a girl's safety with wild beasts in the tangled forests of Africa, as in the present civilizations of England and America, the leading nations of the globe.

"Some critics say that everyone knows and condemns these facts in our social life, and we do not need fiction to intensify the public disgust. Others say, Why call the attention of the young and innocent to the existence of evils they should never know? The majority of people do not watch legislativ proceedings.

"To keep our sons and daughters innocent, we must warn them of the dangers that beset their path on every side.

"Ignorance under no circumstances insures safety. Honor protected by knowledge, is safer than innocence protected by ignorance.

"A few brave women are laboring today to secure for their less capable, less thoughtful, less imaginativ sisters a recognition of a true womanhood based on individual rights. There is just one remedy for the social complications based on sex, and that is equality for woman in every relation in life.

"Men must learn to respect her as an equal factor in civilization, and she must learn to respect herself as mother of the race. Womanhood is the great primal fact of her existence; marriage and maternity, its incidents.

"This story shows that the very traits of character which society (whose opinions are made and modified by men) considers most important and charming in woman to insure her success in social life, are the very traits that ultimately lead to her failure.

"Self-effacement, self-distrust, dependence and desire to please, compliance, deference to the judgment and will of another, are what make young women, in the opinion of these believers in sex domination, most agreeable; but these are the very traits that lead to her ruin.

"The danger of such training is well illustrated in the sad end of Ettie Berton. When the trials and temptations of life come, then each one must decide for herself, and hold in her own hands the reins of action. Educated women of the passing generation chafe under the old order of things, but, like Mrs. Foster in the present volume, are not strong enough to swim upstream. But girls like Gertrude, who in the college curriculum hav measured their powers and capacities with strong young men and found themselvs their equals, hav outgrown this superstition of divinely ordained sex domination. The divine rights of kings, nobles, popes, and bishops hav long been questioned, and now that of sex is under consideration and from the signs of the times, with all other forms of class and caste, it is destined soon to pass away."

The price of the book is 50 cents in paper covers and $1 in cloth.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

BY CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

BY PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

The Evolution of the Devil. By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York city. The most learned, accurate, scientific, and philosophical analysis of his satanic majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title-page. Price, 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Ingersoll's Address before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian association ever invited a noted Infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from be ginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Ingersoll's Great Address on Thomas Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York city. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

Standing Up for Jesus; or what the editor of the Freethinkers' Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

CONVALESCENT.

The time between a severe sickness and complete recovery is one that needs the most careful attention especially in regard to food. Any physician will tell you that is the only mild stimulant, combined with a perfect food known that makes blood and muscle and builds up the system by its easily digestive and assimilative qualities. For sale by druggists Send for descriptive circular.

ALE AND BEEF

"PEPTONIZED"

ALE & BEEF CO., 267 W. 17th St., New York.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth, - - - - - 50 cents.

Gems of Thought.

THE sense of death is most in apprehension. —Shakspere.

THE ideas of God in the Bible are human conceptions.—Robt. C. Adams.

GOD is made the author of sin in all systems except in that of the Atheists.—Voltaire.

THE ages most noted for religious enthusiasm . . . were notoriously immoral.—Benton.

To discuss the true principles of morality, men hav no need of theology, revelation, or of God.—DeHolbach.

THE orthodox Christian church givs dogma the first and morality the second place in the order of its teachings.—Modern Thought.

THERE are only two things in which the false professors of all religions hav agreed; to persecute all other sects, and to plunder their own.—Colton.

IT appears to me one of the most immoral dogmas ever advanced that a man must believe anything without evidence to prove it.—B. Russel.

I AM influenced at the present time by far higher considerations and by a nobler idea of duty than I ever was when I held the evangelical belief.—George Eliot.

THROUGH a large part of human history the intensely religious ages hav not been distinguished for social purity, truth-telling, honesty, or justice.—M. J. Savage.

To quarrel with one who honestly thinks differently from ourselvs, would be no less unreasonable than to be angry with him for having features unlike our own.—Professor Lawrence.

RELIGION is impure and morality ignoble when recompense is the leading principle. . . . The theory of vicarious atonement destroys personal responsibility, the most essential element of moral character. —Anon.

I COULD never divide myself from any man upon a difference of opinion, or be angry with his judgment for not agreeing with me in that from which perhaps, within a few days, I should dissent myself.—Thomas Brown.

SUCH theories as predestination and election hav been, from first to last, fruitful sources of immorality. . . . There never was a doctrin broached that seemed so sure to breed moral pestilence as the doctrin of salvation by faith alone.—Chadwick.

THOSE who only behave themselvs on earth in order that they may be rewarded a thousandfold in heaven, act like Jews lending money at usury. "The pious," says Börne, "look at heaven as a court, and look down with contempt on all those who hav not the entry, like themselvs."—Büchner.

HE who says that animals are mere unchangeable machines, shews that he has never observed any of them. If they are only machines, the most superficial observation of the smallest among them proves that these machines observe, compare and judge, or, in other words, that they possess all the faculties of reason.—Pouchet.

MEN nowhere, east or west, liv yet a natural life, round which the vine clings, and which the elm willingly shadows. Men . . .. need not only to be spiritualized, but naturalized, on the soil of earth. Who shall conceive what kind of roof the heavens might extend over him, what seasons minister to him, and what employment dignify his life! . . . The winds should be his breath, the seasons his moods, and he should impart of his serenity to Nature herself.—Thoreau.

FROM BUDDHISTIC SACRED LITERATURE.

MAY wisdom be always with us.—Buddhistic Scriptures, Inscription in Temple of Nakhon Vat.

IN performing good deeds I reduce suffering.—Ibid, Buddkaghosa's Parables.

WHATEVER I understand to be right I desire to practice.—Ibid, Rock Inscriptions of Aroka.

To do wrong knowingly and then refuse to confess it, is double guilt.—Ibid, Pratimoksha.

LET us now unite in righteousness, cherishing good, living in gentleness.—Ibid, Travels of Fa-hien.

HAPPY will be the world when all sentient creatures shall liv in tranquillity.—Ibid, Fo-sho-hing-tsan-king.

THE fool who sees his own folly is wise so far; the fool who takes his folly for wisdom, is a solid fool.—Ibid, Dhammapada.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by

DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c. cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR

LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards. 40 cents.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,

Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BEST!

THE

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 3-ounce coin silver, $22; 4-ounce, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $31 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7 50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $15; 11 jewels, $16 50; 15 jewels, $23; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3 60, knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for $6. Solid silver spoons, $1.50 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Extra heavy teas, $3. Etched:
"The Time to be Happy is Now,"
50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2 75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.

Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

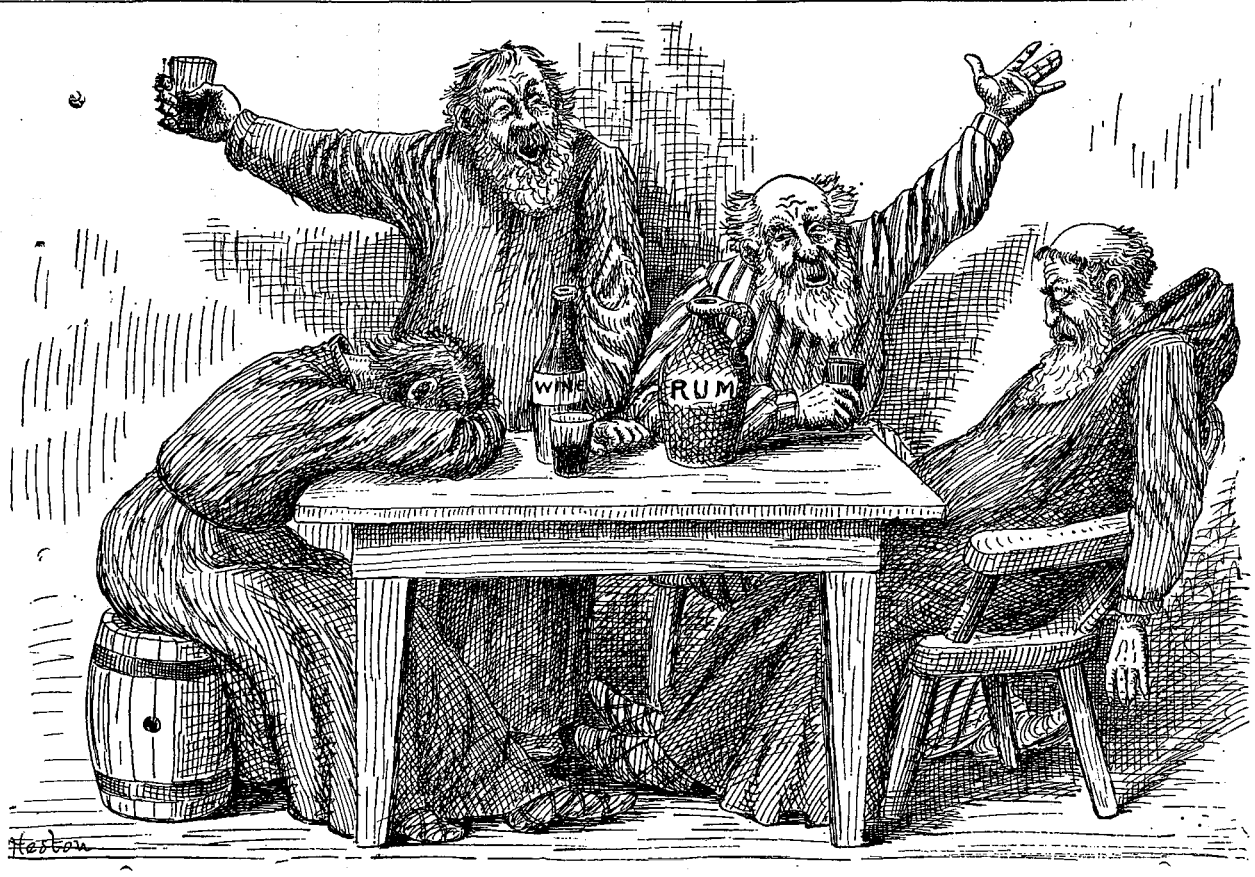
Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY, No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER, Snowville, Va.



A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.

Address, DR. ROBT P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

AN INSPIRED LOT.

But they also hav erred through wine, and through strong drink are out of the way; the priest and the prophet hav erred through strong drink, they are swallowed up of wine, they are out of the way through strong drink; they err in vision, they stumble in judgment.—Isaiah xxviii, 7.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? AustinBierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50
21.	History of Religion. E. E. Evans	20

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure,

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

THE

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON. WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	" The Church Robbing the People.	5	" Missionaries.
3	" Thanksgiving.	1	" The Lord's Instruments.
6	" Sabbath Laws.	25	" Bible Doctrines and Their Results
14	" Children and the Church.	1	" The Church and Slavery.
10	" Woman and the Church.	2	" Priests and Politics.
6	" The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	" Ireland and the Church.
4	" Studies in Natural History.	2	" Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	" The Bible and Science.	1	" The Uses of the Cross.
25	" The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	" Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1	" Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	" Persecutions of the Church.
4	" The Atonement Scheme.	12	" Some Allegories.
4	" The Lord and His Works.	3	" Heaven.
2	" Prayer.	6	" Hell.
10	" The Creeds.	7	" Miscellaneous.
1	" Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY AND RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price, cloth, $1; paper, 60 cents.

PUSHED :: BY :: :: UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

—BY—

HELEN H. GARDENER.

CONTENTS:

Preface.—An Echo from Shilo.—Old Safety-Valve's Last Run.—How Mary Alice Was Converted.—A Hall of Heredity.—"That Reminds Me Of"——.—His Mother's Boy.—Mr. Walk-a-Leg Adams "Meets Up With" a Tartar.—Onyx and Gold.—In Deep Water.—A Prison Puzzle.

Price, 50 cents in paper; $1 in cloth. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents,

Brain and the Bible

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

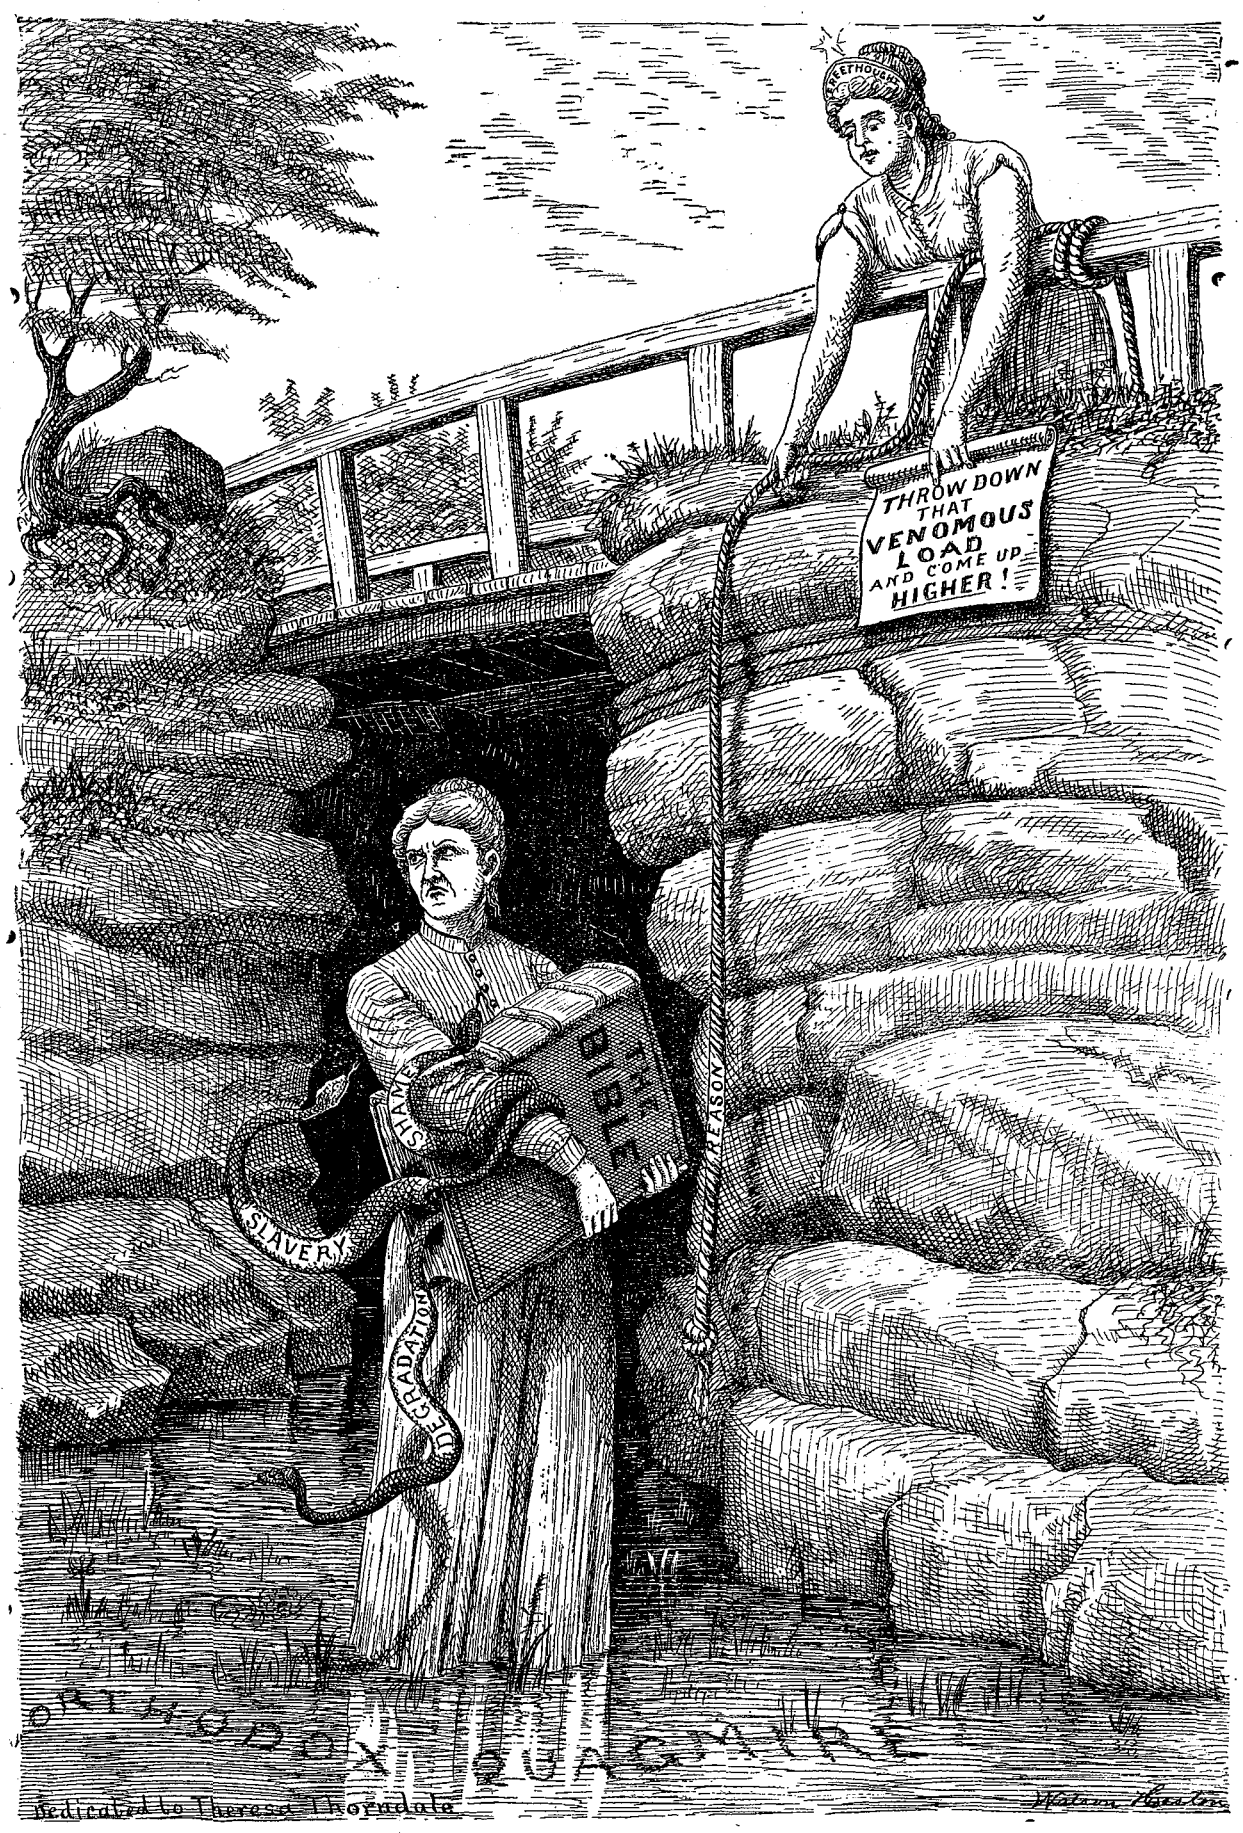
Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.



Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 34. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, August 20, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

ORTHODOX OBSTINACY—THE DANGERS OF FEMININE FANATICISM.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

A

HISTORY OF RELIGIONS.

BEING

A Condensed Account of the Results of Scientific Research and Philosophical Research.

By Elizabeth B. Evans.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, - - - - - 10 cents.

INGERSOLL'S WORKS.

ONLY AUTHORIZED EDITIONS

Principal Works: Gods and Other Lectures; Ghosts and Other Lectures; Some Mistakes of Moses; Interviews on Talmage; What Must We Do to Be Saved? Blasphemy; Crimes Against Criminals. 1141 pages. In one vol., half calf, $5.

Prose Poems and Selections. From his Writings and Sayings. Silk cloth, $2.50; half calf, $4.50; half mor., $5; turkey mor., $7.50; tree calf, $9.

Gods and Other Lectures. Comprising The Gods, Humboldt, Thomas Paine, Individuality, Heretics and Heresies. Paper, 50c.

Ghosts and Other Lectures. Including Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child; The Declaration of Independence; About Farming in Illinois; Speech Nominating James G. Blaine for Presidency in 1876; The Grant Banquet; A Tribute to Rev. Alex. Clarke; The Past Rises Before Me Like a Dream; and A Tribute to Ebon C. Ingersoll. Paper, 50c.

Some Mistakes of Moses. Contents: Some Mistakes of Moses; Free Schools; The Politicians; Man and Woman; The Pentateuch; Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, He Made the Stars Also, Friday, Saturday, Let Us Make Man, Sunday, The Necessity for a Good Memory, The Garden, The Fall, Dampness, Bacchus and Babel, Faith in Filth, the Hebrews, The Plagues, The Flight, Confess and Avoid, Inspired Slavery, Marriage, War, Religious Liberty; Conclusion. Paper, 50c.

Interviews on Talmage. Being Six Interviews with the Famous Orator on Six Sermons by the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage, of Brooklyn, to which is added A Talmagian Catechism. Paper, 50c.; cloth, $1.

Blasphemy. Argument by R. G. Ingersoll in the Trial of C. B. Reynolds, at Morristown, N. J. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

What Must We Do to Be Saved? Analyzes the so-called gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and devotes a chapter each to the Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Evangelical Alliance, and answers the question of the Christians as to what he proposes instead of Christianity, the religion of sword and flame. Paper, 25c.

Thomas Paine's Vindication. A Reply to the New York Observer's Attack upon the Author-hero of the Revolution, by R. G. Ingersoll; together with A Roman Catholic Canard, by W. H. Burr. Paper, 15c.

Limitations of Toleration. A Discussion between Col. R. G. Ingersoll, Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, and Ex-Governor Stewart L. Woodford. Paper, 10c.

Orthodoxy. A Lecture. Paper, 10c.

Civil Rights Speech. With Speech of Hon. Frederick Douglass. Paper, 10c.

Opening Speech to the Jury: In the suit of the B. & M. Tel. Co. vs. W. U. Tel. Co., 1886. Paper, 10 cents.

Crimes Against Criminals. Price, 10c.

A Lay Sermon. On the Labor Question. Paper, 5c.

Stage and the Pulpit. An Interview on their Comparative Merits, and Opinions on the Trial of the Chicago Anarchists, the Catholic Church, etc. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll on McGlynn. Paper, 3c.

Bible Idolatry. Paper, 3c.

Ingersoll Catechised. Paper, 3c.

The Truth of History. Paper, 3c.

Life. A Prose Poem. In color, on board, beveled, gilt edges, 50c.

Lithograph of R. G. Ingersoll. 22x28 inches, heavy plate paper, 50c.

Photograph (Cabinet) of R. G. Ingersoll, 50 cents.

Liberty in Literature. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. By Robt. G. Ingersoll. An Address Delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890. With Portrait of Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." Price, paper, 25c.; cloth, 50c.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By WM. McDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illnstrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, anthor of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circnmstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great anthor were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an acconnt of his world-lamented death and bnrial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithfnl chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, mnch to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" shonld be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c. 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper. 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Corgate. 10 cents

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actnal slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Order of Creation,

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE

HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 34. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, August 20, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - AUGUST 20, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Christianity's Effects Upon Health and Medical Science.

In an article published not long ago, entitled "Rationalism Lengthening Our Lives," we briefly surveyed the achievements of Science in advancing human health and longevity. We will now giv a short history of what Christianity has done in the same field.

Both the Jewish and the Christian religion inculcated that disease is an infliction by God or by Satan. Of disease sent by Jehovah we hav instances in the epidemic that destroyed fourteen thousand seven hundred Israelites, and was arrested only by the high priest Aaron; the pestilence sent in retribution of David's wicked numbering of the people, which killed seventy thousand and was stayed by burnt-offerings; the plague with which Jehovah menaces sinners, and the one described in Revelation. See also Num. xi, 33, and xvi, 41–50. Such diseases, too, as the leprosy of Miriam and Uzziah, the boils of Job, the dysentery of Jehoram, the withered hand of Jeroboam, the illness of Asa, and many others, are ascribed to the vengeance of God or to the malignity of the devil and his spirits. In the New Testament we find examples like the woman who was "bound by Satan," the fever which was treated by rebuke, the person whom "the devil ofttimes casteth into the fire," and others.

The belief in a numerous and ever-present legion of devils was fostered by the notion that the gods whom the heathen had worshiped were demons. As during the early centuries the worshipers of the pagan gods were in continual warfare with the Christians, it was conceived that the gods of these misbelievers were enlisted in the warfare also, and it grew a settled habit with Christians to consider almost every physical or other ill as the work of these impious spirits. The declaration of St. Paul that the gods of the heathen were demons (1 Cor. x, 20) was a corner-stone of the theory. The leaders of the early church fortified the belief. Origen said: "It is demons which produce famin, unfruitfulness, corruptions of the air, pestilences; they hover continually in clouds in the lower atmosphere and are attracted by the blood and incense which the heathen offer to them as gods." St. Augustine wrote: "All diseases of Christians are ascribed to the demons; chiefly do they torment fresh-baptized Christians, yea, even the guiltless, new-born infants." Tertullian insists that a malevolent angel is in constant attendance upon every person. Gregory of Nazianzen affirms that physical pains are the work of evil spirits; he informs us that the laying on of consecrated hands will effect a cure, but that there is no efficacy in medicin. St. Nilus and St. Gregory of Tours dilate on the sinfulness of employing medicin instead of the intercession of saints. The church fathers in general reprobated the doctrin, which had been broached by the Greeks, that disease arises from natural agencies and may be cured by them, and condemned as useless and sinful a resort to physicians and surgeons rather than to supernatural means.

Besides, unusual and uncomprehended events, such as the appearance of comets and falling stars, and earthquakes, were held on scriptural authority to be "signs and wonders" sent as foretokens of divine chastisement. Consequently, such signs having appeared, the calamities which next occurred were inevitably looked upon as supernatural visitations.

The church not only discouraged investigation into the remedies of disease, but encouraged habits of living which produced it. It denounced all care for the health or for life as this-worldliness, and treason to the other and only excellent world. It derived its maxims from scripture. "Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink, nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on." "Bodily exercise profiteth but little." "There is nothing from without a man that, entering him, can defile him." One of the unhealthful customs was that of seclusion in small and unventilated cells of monasteries. Another was the avoidance of exercise by many of the dwellers in these establishments. Fastings, often undergone by the feeble and the ill, constituted another health-destroying practice. The neglect of cleanliness, too, was a cardinal virtue among the pious. St. Jerome and the Breviary of the Roman church, says Prof. Andrew D. White, "dwell with unction on the fact that St. Hilarion lived his whole life in utter physical uncleanness; St. Athanasius glorifies St. Anthony because he had never washed his feet; St. Abraham's most striking evidence of holiness was that for fifty years he washed neither his hands nor his feet; St. Sylvia never washed any part of her body save her fingers; St. Euphraxia belonged to a convent in which the nuns religiously abstained from bathing; St. Mary, of Egypt, was eminent for her filthiness; St. Simon Stylites was in this respect unspeakable—the only thing that can be said is, that he lived in ordure and stench intolerable to his visitors. The Lives of the Saints dwells with complacency on the statement that when sundry Eastern monks showed a disposition to wash themselvs, the almighty manifested his displeasure by drying up a neighboring stream until the bath which it had supplied was destroyed." Says Professor Oswald: "The deadliest blow to the cause of health was struck by the anti-natural fanaticism of the Middle Ages, the world-hating infatuation of the maniacs who depreciated every secular blessing as a curse in disguise, and despised their own bodies as they despised nature, life, and earth. The disciples of the world-renouncing messiah actually welcomed disease as a sign of divine favor, they gloried in decrepitude and deformity, and promoted the work of degeneration with a persevering zeal never exceeded by the enlightened benefactors of the human race. For a period of fifteen hundred years the ecclesiastic history of Europe is the history of a systematic war against the interests of the human body; the 'mortification of the flesh' was enjoined as a cardinal duty of a true believer; health-giving recreations were suppressed, while health-destroying vices were encouraged by the example of the clergy; domestic hygiene was utterly neglected, and the founders of some twenty-four different monastic orders vied in the invention of new penances and systematic outrages upon the health of the poor convent-slaves. Their diet was confined to the coarsest and often most loathsome food; they were subjected to weekly bleedings, to profitless hardships and deprivations; their sleep was broken night after night; fasting was carried to a length which often avenged itself in permanent insanity; and their only compensation for a daily repetition of health-destroying afflictions was the permission to indulge in spiritual vagaries and spirituous poisons; the same bigots who grudged their followers a night of unbroken rest or a mouthful of digestible food indulged them in quantities of alcoholic beverages that would hav staggered the conscience of a modern beer-swiller. The bodily health of a community was held so utterly below the attention of a Christian magistrate that every large city became a hotbed of contagious diseases; small-pox and scrofula became pandemic disorders; the pestilence of the black death ravaged Europe from end to end—nay, instead of trying to remove the cause of the evil, the wretched victims were advised to seek relief in prayer and self-torture, and a philosopher uttering a word of protest against such illusions would hav risked to hav his tongue torn out by the roots and his body consigned to the flames of the stake."

Under this ecclesiastical régime the human frame became infested with a multitude of corruptions. Scrofula and consumption attained a prevalence and virulence which modern science is but commencing to abate. Infants, and youth, and young persons before their prime, were mowed down so almost inevitably that it seemed as if the life-term of human beings should be reckoned as equal but with that of dogs and cats. Death reaped his prodigious harvests equally by individual diseases and by epidemics. Of the extent and deadliness of these latter, the epidemics, we modern dwellers under the wings of Science cannot easily form a conception. In the fourteenth century the black death swept off twenty-five millions in Europe; half the population of England perished. In the seventeenth century the great plague exterminated a large part of the inhabitants of Christendom. In the eighteenth century an unusually severe pestilence made away with multitudes in southern Europe. The dreadful ravages of cholera at periods nigher the present are near examples.

Throughout these long periods the clergy succeeded in keeping possession of the credit of being the only averters of these calamities. Every cathedral or abbey, and nearly every parish church, owned some fetich which was given out to possess curativ properties. This was sometimes a relic of Christ, or of the Virgin or other personage connected with divine beings, or a relic of a saint. Again, it was a miraculously produced object, such as a picture, statue, etc. The ordinary paraphernalia of church worship, too, were vouched to be surpassing remedies of illness. Prayers and ceremonies were likewise ranked high as curativs. This notion, like all the others, was bottomed on texts from that source of half our modern ills, the Bible. "If any man is sick among you, let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord." "And the prayer of faith shall cure the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up." From the traffic upon these fetiches the ecclesiastics derived an immense revenue, and waxed greater and greater in power to keep down the scientific inquirers who feebly attempted expostulation. Lands, money, and privileges flowed in upon them without measure. Especially did great pestilences provide them with rich harvests. The whole evolution of modern history, remarks Professor White, not only ecclesiastical but civil, has been largely affected by the wealth transferred to the clergy at such periods. It was noted that after the great plague in the fourteenth century, the black death, had passed, an immensely increased proportion of the landed and personal property of every European country was in the hands of the church; well did a great ecclesiastic remark that "pestilences are the harvests of the ministers of God."

Among the various means of placating the offended God who had inflicted some malady, processions bearing images of divine personages or saints are to be mentioned. At the present writing these ceremonies, with the various others, are being employed by sufferers from typhus and cholera in Russia, and from volcanic eruption in Italy. In the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries fear of the prevailing plagues drove multitudes to form great processions, the members of which scourged their bodies as they went, hence taking the name of flagellants. These mad creatures trooped everywhither over the lands, flogging, praying, shrieking psalms, and dancing. Pretenders to divinity continually arose in their ranks, and the resulting sects fell upon each other tooth and nail. Many of these bands of maniacs fell into licentious orgies. Europe was like nothing but one vast madhouse.

Occasionally some plague was found to proceed not from a principal supernatural power but from a lesser one, as a saint. In 1680 the church authorities at Rome luckily found out that the pest then prevailing was due to St. Sebastian's resentment at having had no statue set up to him; such a monument being erected, the plague subsided,

Sometimes ridiculous scrapes were got into by the ecclesiastics in their applications both to the heavenly and to the infernal powers. At Rome, in 1522, to stay the plague then raging they decided upon the astounding recourse of a sacrifice to devils. They reasoned, first, that the present plague bore the earmarks of those sent by demons and not by God; second, that Rome had been the home of the chief of the pagan gods who constituted these demons; third, that as the great amphitheater at Rome had been the chosen resort of these demon gods a sacrifice offered to them there would be likely to reach their notice, and not improbably might mollify their wounded feelings. Pursuantly, an ox decorated with garlands was solemnly sacrificed in the amphitheater after the ancient heathen custom. The plague continuing, the churchmen became scared as they reflected on what they had done, and nervously ordered no end of expiatory processions and ceremonies to propitiate God, the Virgin, and the saints, who had doubtless become infuriated at this application to their rivals.

Limitations of space compel us to continue to our next issue this account of some of the goodly effects of that very valuable, profitable, and praiseworthy institution, Christianity.

Errors in the Bible.

The Christian Intelligencer prints this dogmatic misstatement:

"What is gained by reiterating that there are errors in the scriptures, and that there is in them a mighty human agency? If the persons making these declarations are really biblical scholars they know, or ought to know, that the errors which possibly, we may even say presumably, exist, are very few in number, and of decidedly inferior importance, that do not affect a single moral precept or a single doctrinal statement of revelation."

This is about the worst exhibition of ignorance or dishonesty that we hav seen lately.

It is admitted by all Christian scholars that the scriptures are full of errors. The many revisions they hav undergone indisputably prove this. And instead of being few in number, they are so numerous that no one knows precisely how many there are. First we heard of twenty thousand different readings, then of thirty-two thousand, then of fifty thousand, till, in the collation of the manuscripts for Griesbach's edition, as many as one hundred and fifty thousand were discovered. Professor Michaelis, in his Introduction to the New Testament, said, "No one will deny that the early Christians, who differed from the ruling church, hav altered the New Testament in numerous examples according to their peculiar tenets." "And so much so," says the Rev. Mr. Nolan, in his "Inquiry," page 400, "that little confidence can be placed in any edition." The Rev. T. H. Horne, in the second volume of his "Introduction to the Scriptures," admits that "all manuscripts, the most ancient not excepted, hav erasures and corrections." The Rev. Mr. Pope, in his treatis on the "Miraculous Conception," affirms that "the Cambridge and the Alexandrian manuscripts swarm with corruptions and interpolations." We hav the authority of Origen that Celsus charged the early fathers with having three or four different readings for the same text, or, as he expressed it, "they hav altered the gospel three or four different times, as if they were drunk, and, when pressed by their adversaries, recurred to that reading which best suited their purpose." Du Pin informs us that "there is a great discrepancy between the copies, which must be attributed either to the negligence of the scribes or to the audacious perversion of others, or to those who correct the text by arbitrary additions or omisions, who oftentime hav put in and left out as they thought it most convenient." Du Pin adds to this, "It cannot be said that no fault has crept into the scriptures by the negligence or inadvertency of the transcribers, or even by the boldness of those who hav ventured to strike out, add, or change some words which they thought necessary to be omitted, added, or changed." Mr. James, librarian of the University of Oxford, in his work on the "Corruption of the Scriptures," on page 372, says: "Let us pass a step or two further and inquire whether they hav not corrupted the Bible in like sort, or worse, rather, if it be possible, to a degree of impiety beyond the degrees of comparison, and yet so plainly to be proved against papists, as he that hath but one eye to see shall plainly discover it, and thence be induced to suspect the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet, sitting in the holy place and admiring himself above the holy of holies. He shall observe infinit varieties, contrarieties, and contradictions and oppositions between two Bibles, set forth by two popes within two years, both commanded to be read, as are mentioned in the briefs. You shall see the popes breathe hot and cold, say and unsay the same thing twice, and in fine they hav truly verified the Bible to be a nose of wax, plied and wrought into fashion for their own advantage. A shame it is that any Christian should presume to add or take away aught from the word of God. Yet oh, intolerably fraud, not any simple Christian or layman, but the bishop of Rome, chief pastor of the church, sole judge of all controversies, whose lips should preserve knowledge, and his tongue speak no deceit, hath audaciously presumed to add and take away whole sentences, to change words of the holy writ into a clear contrary meaning—to make, as it were, white black and black white." The Rev. Mr. Cooper, in his "Tracts," page 521, expressly says, "Were a Socinian to make a new translation, he would translate under the guidance of his Socinian opinions, and properly." The Rev. Dr. Campbell, in his introduction to his "Translation of the Scriptures," makes some remarks about Beza, who published the edition of the Greek Testament from which our English version is taken: "Here we hav a man," says he, "who, in effect, acknowledges that he would not hav translated some things in the way he has done if he would not thereby strike a severe blow against his adversaries or ward off a blow which an adversary might aim against him."

And if these errors, or different readings, do not make doctrinal changes, why are there so many Protestant sects, and why do the Catholics require the Bible to be expounded only by their "learned" men—men who know what the church wants to hav taught? As for the moral precepts, they are not the result of any revelation, but of human experience; and they are not peculiar to the scriptures, but were formulated centuries before we had the Bible. It has been well said that the good in the Bible is not original, and what is original is not good.

Mr. J. D. Shaw's Error.

In THE TRUTH SEEKER recently a correspondent living in Texas criticised the people of some towns in that state quite severely, giving instances of what he considered their depravity, and applied harsh names to the perpetrators.

We should not refer to this, as our own correspondents hav rebuked him sufficiently, if rebuke be necessary, except that our greatly valued contemporary, Mr. J. D. Shaw, has seen fit to hold THE TRUTH SEEKER itself responsible for the sentiments expressed, and to indulge in some unworthy language.

And we refer to it now only to ask Mr. Shaw if he considers his conduct fair? If the case were reversed, what would he say to us?

It may be that this is a good opportunity to say, though until we saw the current Independent Pulpit we had supposed our readers possessed the good sense to discern it, that each writer for THE TRUTH SEEKER is solely responsible for the opinions he or she expresses. As a matter of fact, the Editor finds that he can entirely agree with very few of them. But, for all he can say, that may be his misfortune and not that of the writers. A Freethought paper edited on the lines of one man's experience and knowledge would be rather narrow, however broad the man might think himself. It certainly would not be a Freethought paper.

One Congressman Who Knows His Mind.

During the debate over the World's Fair appropriation two weeks ago, we wrote to Amos J. Cummings, who was opposing the gift, urging him to work for Sunday opening in connection with the appropriation. He replied:

"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVS U. S.
"WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8, 1892.

"DEAR SIR: Certainly, the Fair ought to be open on Sundays, whether the government makes any appropriation or not. That is the one day in the week in which workingmen and their wives and children can visit the Fair without losing time. I did everything I could to hav Congress allow the Fair to be open on Sunday, but was beaten by more than two to one. At all events the decision should hav been left to those in charge of the Fair. Sunday closing has undoubtedly robbed the Fair of $3,000,000 receipts, and for whose benefit? Men who ought to know say for the benefit of the liquor saloons and theaters, which are always open on Sunday in Chicago. Yours truly, AMOS J. CUMMINGS.

"MR. E. M. MACDONALD, N. Y."

The most utopian Utopian that we hav heard of lately is the Rev. L. A. Banks, of Boston. In a lecture delivered at Round Lake the other day he attacked and conquered the poverty problem in one paragraph: "The five largest Protestant denominations," said the lecturer, "can stop every legalized dram-shop in either Boston or New York, if they will only try to attend to their business on a strictly business basis, as the dram-shops do. Let them keep open all day and late into the night, and offer light and music and fellowship to all comers—not to the pewholders alone, but to those who are too poor to own a pew. Pew rent has got to go if you are to save the souls of the tenement-house poor. I am tired of the cant of the saying 'saving souls.' The church had better undertake to save men and women, as well as souls. The churches should not only be free, but there should be free entertainments, to which the poor should hav as hearty an invitation as regular attendants. There should be a sort of employment bureau attached to each church, so that when a member got out of employment the preacher might appeal for him." He closed with these words: "If I had been brought up in the tenement districts, as so many of my people were, I would hav cursed the Christian God that could hav so neglected me." When the Rev. Mr. Banks knows more he will know that sentimental charity will never remedy the social evils of to-day, and he will also know that the church is founded upon a religion which teaches the poor and the rich that whatever they hav, whether nothing or much, is given them by the Lord, and that to rebel against the divisions of men into beggars and millionaires, rulers and ruled, is to strive against God.

In the West.

News and Notes.

After Washington comes Montana, a stretch of nearly a thousand miles, with magnificent mountains and plains, almost a continent in the vastness and variety of its resources. I leave Spokane on Friday evening, July 29th, and Saturday morning reach Drummond, on the main line of the Northern Pacific. I change cars at this point, and go south twenty-eight miles to Phillipsburg. This is one of the oldest towns in the state, a mining center years before the railroad was built. It has about three thousand inhabitants, and it makes a lively and picturesque appearance. Round about it roll up volumes of smoke from the mighty factories that pour forth the glittering metal. The mountains tower above thousands of feet. Up these mountains I must climb four miles, until I reach a hight of eight thousand feet, and there is Granite, the end of my journey. It is a stupendous mount, and a glorious one. The grade is excellent, and we travel with comparativ ease. The prospect extends for a hundred miles away, with a hundred shining peaks in every variety of form, and blue sweeps of plain between, and glittering depths of canyon in the mellow sunshine that beneath the clear skies rolls its measureless splendor. Up and up I climb and wind around while new and brilliant scenes extend until at last the city of Granite, right against the precipitous crags, hangs on for dear life as if every moment it would tumble into the enormous abysses beneath. Here are the biggest mills in the state, the largest machineries. Here is a cosmopolitan people drifted from all parts of the world, and the mountain-sides heave with tumultuous industry.

When I read Alexander E. Klain's article a few months since in THE TRUTH SEEKER it struck me then that this would be a good place to venture; that in this lofty citadel I might unfurl the flag of Freethought. I was not mistaken. I was well rewarded for my plunge into this far and unknown territory. I found wide-awake supporters and splendid audiences. I gave two lectures, Sunday and Monday evenings, in the Miners' Union Hall. The Miners' Union is very strong here, having a membership of nearly one thousand. It owns a handsome property, and the hall in which I spoke is one of the largest in the state. These were the first Freethought lectures in Granite, and the welcome was all that I could desire. Mr. Klein acted as chairman of the meetings. Thomas McGowan, S. E. Carr, E. W. Thomas, B. Lindsay, and others were not afraid to be counted on the platform. Most of the Liberal cohort are young men, who hav already had a varied experience of life. Alex. Klein was born in Hungary, left home when only eleven years of age, and has since made his own way in the world. He traveled over a considerable part of Europe, especially Switzerland, came to this country when sixteen years old, found himself in New York without acquaintance, not knowing the language, and with just twelve cents in his pocket. But he forged ahead, and compelled fortune to smile upon him. He is only twenty-three years old now, with a great enthusiasm for Freethought and Reform, with a glorious hatred of king and priest, and a whole-hearted devotion to progress.

E. W. Thomas has had many adventures by land and sea of a novel and thrilling character, and is still young. He has learned Freethought directly from nature and humanity. S. S. Carr is a veteran —a forty-niner—but the spirit of early times does not desert him. He looks forward and not backward. These are the kind of men we meet generally in mining camps—men of travel—of observation, of practical ability, who hav fought and won by natural force. A mining camp has plenty of interest and change. The great mills; the superb engins, big and monstrous, yet polished as a lady's ring, without a particle of dust on the gleaming surface, the ponderous wheel rolling round like a planet, and the shaft sweeping with lightninglike brilliance and power; the swarthy workers coming and going by the hundreds in the gloom and light —these present a panorama of infinit meaning and wonder. On these bold and barren hills the mightiest force of civilization thunders its music, and man's grim warrior surpasses the gods with his victorious arm. Mr. Thomas, who runs the engin of the Bimetallic, invited me to take a view with him while at his post. It requires the alert brain here. How the terrific machinery that could crush a thousand at a blow, responds to the most delicate touch. The shaft is thirteen hundred feet deep; out of this, in eight minutes and a half a hundred miners are taken in squads of sixteen by the swift machinery. This beats Jonah and the whale. The biggest fish-god ever made couldn't land a hundred at that rate. They pile forth voluminously. You might almost imagin they were shot from a cannon's mouth.

I did not find Granite dull at all the three days I stayed there. I did find it a little bit monotonous going to church on Sunday morning, but as I had not been to church for a long time I rather enjoyed the curiosity of the thing. It was a good deal like examining ancient specimens. I did wonder how people could listen with an air of solemnity to such by-gone tales. The subject of the sermon was "The Unity of the Church." As Christians hav killed about nine million Christians during the last thousand years it does not look as if one could rejoice much in the unity of the church. However, the minister fixed it up all right; the differences did not amount to much after all.

Talking of "specimens," the Bimetallic Company hav just lifted a piece of ore weighing about thirty-five hundred pounds, of ruby silver, etc., which is to be sent to the World's Fair. There is more civilization in that one mass of ore than in all the theologies of the past. I hav a piece of that silver rock, by the kindness of Mr. Thomas, and I shall keep it as long as I liv in remembrance of Granite.

I cannot put upon the list the names of all the friends I met at this place, for there is quite a company. With those already named are, Ben Bowling, M. Moore, Dan Calder, J. F. Duncan, D. L. Sutton, John O'Neill, E. Mitchell, August Wiltscho, etc. Granite numbers about three thousand. The majority of the people are Liberals. A half a dozen churches, however, confront the eye. Granite peak towers above all, and from its summit an immense view unfolds in dazzling magnificence.

I must thank all my friends here for their genial and generous support, and I am glad that I acted on Klein's suggestion and made this a point on my present trip. Amid these tremendous forms of nature and imperial forces of man, amid these people, alert, intelligent, of various nationality, workers with hand and brain, in these lofty regions, the highest almost where humanity has pitched its camps of fire and steam, here Freethought finds a splendid outlook. With the silver streams of wealth from these rocky chambers shines the genius of liberty.

From Granite I travel to Missoula, about the brightest and handsomest city in Montana, I guess. It claims about six thousand population. It has elegant business blocks and hotels, quite as commodious and elegant as in Chicago or New York. Almost all the wealth thus displayed has been made in this country itself. The city has not been built up by outside capital. The agricultural resources of Missoula county are extensiv. Fruits grow abundantly, and all kinds of grain. Bitter Root valley is seventy miles long and is the finest valley in the state. A branch railroad from Missoula runs up this valley fifty miles, and beautiful villages and farms are along its course. Frenchtown valley is toward the north, twenty-five miles in extent. Further north, touching upon the British line, is Flathead valley.

Missoula is on the bosom of a wide and lovely plain, through which flow and unite the Bitter Root and Missoula rivers. Around the plain and valleys is a vast circle of mountains of infinit beauty and grandeur in the gorgeous summer days. Nowhere in the world are there more delightful prospects.

There is a large Liberal element in Missoula. The lectures were given in the Opera House, and were generously supported by the leading citizens. On Sunday evening there was a splendid attendance. This is the first Freethought movement in the place and was made a pronounced success. Hereafter Missoula will be in the front rank. The workers here are stalwart Liberals. They are not afraid to be known and to do their level best. A. M. Stevens is the first with whom I became acquainted by correspondence. An article of his in THE TRUTH SEEKER attracted my attention and induced me to pitch my tents toward Missoula, and I am glad I obeyed the "call." Mr. Stevens had fifteen or twenty new subscribers to THE TRUTH SEEKER and has sold a large quantity of books. In a quiet but very effectiv manner he has made Freethought a power. His wife is the daughter of Hon. J. L. Wright, of Rochester, Minn., a well-known Freethinker and reformer, and who has stood frankly by his colors in the Minnesota legislature, an honest politician. So Mr. and Mrs. Stevens and the three bright children are for Freethought first, last, and all the time.

C. W. Berry is a veteran comrade from old New Hampshire, and we fraternize at once. He has been upon this coast since 1849, and wonderful experiences he has had and could many a tale unfold. Over thirty years ago he camped on the Missoula, and he has seen this country grow from a wilderness to a spacious city. He could hav been a millionaire if he had half tried; but he was too generous. No one ever wanted a dollar from Bill Berry but he got it. He was sheriff of Missoula county by a large majority. He is now assessor. It is no use for anybody to run against him. He is bound to be elected. "Honest Bill Berry, the packer," is the name by which he is known all over western Montana. His word is as good as his bond, and the people know it. He is absolutely impartial and just in all his official transactions, and a Liberal with every fiber of his being.

L. F. Keim is on our list. Mrs. Keim is a member of the Christian church, but I found her a genial friend and enjoyed the kindly hospitality of her home. Mr. Keim has been brave enough to tackle the clergyman and to bring him even into the courts of law and compel him to pay fines for his misbehavior. This is a good thing for the community. The clergyman must be a law-abiding citizen, even if he is the "Lord's embassador." Mr. Keim pursues the even tenor of his way as city police, while the minister is about to be put upon the "retired list."

Hon. J. T. Phillips, a Grand Army comrade, introduced me at the first lecture with ringing words, and he stands by the flag of Freedom as in the days of storm and battle.

John Copp, another New Hampshire boy, gave me a real Yankee welcome. He drove me over to Fort Missoula, four miles out, where I witnessed the retreat and guard mount and heard the martial strains, and the old war times came back with vivid remembrance. Lieutenant McMartin, officer of the day, gave us a handsome welcome and showed us over the fort, which has a beautiful location and is one of the finest posts in the country. Saturday Copp takes me over to Bonner, where is located one of the largest saw-mills in the state. About thirty-five million feet is the output per year. There is a large sash and door factory connected with the mill. Bonner is a busy little burg. We reach it from Missoula by Hell Gate canyon. It is seven miles distant. We pass by De Long's ranch, snugly located at the foot of Mount Jumbo. De Long is a Liberal. So is Bandman, after a fashion—the once world-famous actor, the brilliant Hamlet and Shylock, who has a ranch near Bonner. He is one of the most eccentric men on this Western continent. He is smart as chain lightning and fully as irregular in his flashes of genius. He is Radical to his heart's core, but he has a vein of misanthropy and the way he scores people sometimes is terrific. He is well worth knowing, however, for he is a brainy man with a remarkable career.

Dr. H. H. Hanson, one of the leading physicians of the city, is on our list with a generous contribution; also Mayor Higgins, Sheriff Huston, and E. W. Phillips. Hunt puts our banner on the outward walls. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Ferguson I am pleased to meet. Mr. Ferguson I knew twenty years ago when I was at North Platte, Neb., a Unitarian clergyman; J. H. B. Foster, Ed. Wilson, Wm. Neill, H. C. McLeod, Palmer of Flathead valley, and dozens of others I could name who hav joined in this campaign and liberally assisted.

Time has passed quickly among these hospitable people of Missoula. There is true Western enterprise here. Missoula has a promising future. It is in the center of some of the best farming lands in the state. The mineral resources of this country are yet to be developed, but undoubtedly they are great. I believe that Freethought will hold its own as wealth and population increase. I shall not forget Missoula, nor the host of friends I hav met amidst its beautiful surroundings.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

MRS. MATTIE KREKEL begins her fall lecturing tour in September, in Nebraska. She wishes to devote the months of September, October, and November to work in that state and in Kansas and Iowa, afterward going to Texas for the next three months. Those desiring to hear her may address her at 605 Maple street, Rockford, Ill.

Father Tom and the Pope;

OR, A NIGHT AT THE VATICAN.

By Rev. Francis Mahony (Father Prout),

As related by Mr. Michael Heffernan, Master of the National School at Tallymactaggart, in the county of Leitrim, to a friend, during his official visit to Dublin, for the purpose of studying political economy, in the spring of 1838.

[CONCLUDED.]

God be wid the time when I went to the classical seminary ov Firdramore! when I'd bring my sod o' turf undher my arm, and sit down on my shnug boss o' straw, wid my back to the masther and my shins to the fire, and score my sums in Dives' denominations or the double rule o' three, or play fox and geese wid purty Jane Cruise that sat next me, as plisantly as the day was long, widout anyone so much as saying, "Mikey Heffernan, what's that you're about?"—for ever since I was in the one lodge wid poor ould Mat I had my own way in his school as free as ever I had in my mother's shebeen. God be wid them days, I say again, for its althered times wid me, I judge, since I got under Carlisle and Whateley. Sich sthrictness! sich ordher! sich dhrilling, and lecthiring, and tuthoring as they do get on wid! I wisht to gracious the one-half of their rules and rigilations was sunk in the say. And they're getting so sthrict, too, about having fair play for the heretic childher! We're to hav no more schools in the chapels, nor masses in the schools. Oh, by this and by that it'll never do at all! The ould plan was twenty times betther; and, for my own part, if it wasn't that the clargy support them in a manner, and the grant's a thing not easily done widout these hard times, I'd see if I couldn't get a sheltered spot nigh-hand the chapel, and set up agin on the good ould principle: and faix, I think our metropolitan 'ud stand to me, for I know that his motto was ever and always, that "Ignorance is the true mother ov piety."

But I'm running away from my narrativ entirely, so I am. "You'll plase to ordher up the housekeeper," says Father Tom to the pope, "wid a pint ov sweet milk in a skillet, and the bulk ov her fist ov butther, along wid a dust ov soft sugar in a saucer, and I'll show you the way of producing a decoction that, I'll be bound, will hunt the thirst out ov every nook and corner in your holiness's blessed carcidge."

The pope ordhered up the ingredients, and they were brought in by the head butler.

"That'll not do at all," says his riv'rence; "the ingredients won't combine in true proportion unless ye do as I bid yez. Send up the housekeeper," says he, "for a faymale hand is ondispinsably necessary to produce the adaption ov the particles and the concurrence of the corpuscles, widout which you might boil till morning and never fetch the curds off ov it."

Well, the pope whispered to his head butler, and by and by up there comes an ould fagot ov a Caillean, that was enough to frighten a horse from his oats.

"Don't thry for to desave me," says his riv'rence, "for it's no use, I tell yez. Send up the housekeeper, I bid yez: I seen her presarving gooseberries in the panthry as I came up: she has eyes as black as a sloe," says he, "and cheeks like the rose in June; and sorra taste of this celestial mixthir shall cross the lips ov man or mortial this blessed night till she stirs the same up wid her own delicate little finger."

"Misther Maguire," says the pope, "it's very unproper to spake that way ov my housekeeper: I won't allow it."

"Honor bright, your holiness," says his riv'rence, laying his hand on his heart.

"Oh, by this and by that, Misther Maguire," says the pope, "I'll hav none of your insiniwations: I don't care who sees my whole household," says he; "I don't care if all the faymales undher my roof was paraded down the high street of Room," says he.

"Oh, it's plain to be seen how little you care who sees them," says his riv'rence. "You're afeared, now, if I war to see your housekeeper, that I'd say she was too handsome."

"No, I'm not!" says the pope; "I don't care who sees her," says he. "Anthony," says he to the head butler, "bid Eliza throw her apron over her head, and come up here." Wasn't that stout in the blessed man? Well, my dear, up she came, stepping like a three-year-old and blushing like the brake o' day; for though her apron was thrown over her head as she came forrid, till you could barely see the tip ov her chin—more be token there was a lovely dimple in it, as I've been tould—yet she let it shlip a bit to one side, by chance like, jist as she got fornenst the fire, and if she wouldn't hav given his riv'rence a shot if he hadn't been a priest, t's no matther.

"Now, my dear," says he, "you must take that skillet, and hould it over the fire till the milk comes to a blood-hate; and the way you'll know that will be by stirring it onst or twice wid the little finger ov your right hand, afore you put in the butther: not that I misdoubt," says he, "but that the same finger's fairer nor the whitest milk that ever came from the tit."

"None of your deludhering talk to the young woman, sir," says the pope, mighty stern. "Stir the posset as he bids you, Eliza, and then be off wid yourself," says he.

"I beg your holiness's pardon ten thousand times," says his riv'rence; "I'm sure I meant nothing onproper; I hope I'm uncapable of any sich dirilection of my duty," says he. "But, marciful Saver!" he cried out, jumping up on a suddent, "look behind you, your holiness—I'm blest but the room's on fire!"

Sure enough the candle fell down that minit and was near setting fire to the windy-curtains, and there was some bustle, as you may suppose, getting things to rights. And now I hav to tell you ov a raally onpleasant occurrence. If I was a Prodesan that was in it, I'd say that, while the pope's back was turned, Father Tom made free wid the two lips ov Miss Eliza; but, upon my conscience, I belave it was a mere mistake that his holiness fell into on account of his being an ould man, and not having aither his eyesight or his hearing very parfect. At any rate it can't be denied but that he had a shtrong imprission that sich was the case; for he wheeled about as quick as thought—it was jist as his riv'rence was sitting down—and charged him wid the offinse plain and plump. "Is it kissing my housekeeper before my face you are, you villain?" says he. "Go down out o' this," says he to Miss Eliza; "and do you be packing off wid you," he says to Father Tom, "for it's not safe to hav the likes ov you in a house where there's temptation in your way."

"Is it me?" says his riv'rence; "why what would your holiness be at, at all? Sure I wasn't doing no sich thing."

"Would you hav me doubt the evidence ov my sinses?" says the pope; "would you hav me doubt the testimony ov my eyes and ears?" says he.

"Indeed I would so," says his riv'rence, "if they pretend to hav informed your holiness ov any sich foolishness."

"Why," says the pope, "I seen you afther kissing Eliza as plain as I see the nose on your face; I heard the smack you gave her as plain as ever I heard thundher."

"And how do you know whether you see the nose on my face or not?" says his riv'rence; "and how do you know whether what you thought was thundher, was thundher at all? Them operations of the sinses," says he, "comprises only particular corporayal emotions, connected wid sartin confused perciptions called sinsations, and isn't to be depended upon at all. If we were to follow them blind guides, we might jist as well turn heretics at onst. 'Pon my secret word, your holiness, it's naither charitable nor orthodox ov you to set up the testimony ov your eyes and ears agin the characther ov a clergyman. And now, see how aisy it is to explain all them phwenomena that perplexed you. I ris and went over beside the young woman because the skillet was boiling over, to help her to save the dhrop ov liquor that was in it; and as for the noise you heard, my dear man, it was naither more nor less nor myself dhrawing the cork out ov this blissid bottle."

"Don't offer to thrape that upon me!" says the pope; "here's the cork in the bottle still, as tight as a wedge."

"I beg your pardon," says his riv'rence, "that's not the cork at all," says he; "I dhrew the cork a good two minits ago, and it's very purly spitted on the end ov this blessid cork-shcrew at this prisint moment; howandiver you can't see it, because it's only its raal prisence that's in it. But that outward appearance that you call cork," says he, "is nothing but the outward spacies and external qualities of the cortical nathur. Them's nothing but the accidents of the cork that you're looking at and handling; but, as I tould you afore, the real cork's dhrew, and is here prisint on the end ov this nate little insthrument, and it was the noise I made in dhrawing it that you mistook for the sound ov the pogue."

You know there was no conthravening what he said; and the pope couldn't openly deny it. Howandiver he thried to pick a hole in it in this way. "Granting," says he, "that there is the differ you say betwixt the reality ov the cork and them cortical accidents, and that it's quite possible as you allidge, that the thrue cork is really prisint on the end ov the shcrew, while the accidents keep the mouth ov the bottle stopped—still," says he, "I can't undherstand, though willing to acquit you, how the dhrawing ov the real cork, that's onpalpable and widout accidents, could produce the accident ov that sinsible explosion I heard jist now."

"All I can say," says his riv'rence, "is that I'm sinsible it was a real accident, anyhow."

"Ay," says the pope, "the kiss you gave Eliza, you mane."

"No," says his riv'rence, "but the report that I made."

"I don't doubt you," says the pope.

"No cork could be dhrew with less noise," says his riv'rence.

"It would be hard for anything to be less nor nothing, barring algebra," says the pope.

"I can prove to the conthrary," says his riv'rence. "This glass ov whisky is less nor that tumbler ov punch, and that tumbler of punch is nothing to this jug ov scaltheen."

"Do you judge by superficial misure or by the liquid contents?" says the pope.

"Don't stop me betwixt my premisses and my conclusion," says his riv'rence; "ergo, this glass ov whisky is less nor nothing; and for that raison I see no harm in life in adding it to the contents ov the jug, just by way ov a frostnail."

"Adding what's less nor nothing," says the pope, "is subtraction according to algebra; so here goes to make the rule good," says he, filling his tumbler wid the blessed stuff, and sitting down at the table, for the anger didn't stay two minits on him, the good-hearted ould sowl.

"Two minuses makes one plus," says his riv'rence, as ready as you plase, "and that'll account for the increased daycrement I mane to take the liberty of producing in the same mixed quantity," says he, follying his holiness's epistolical example.

"By all that's good," says the pope, "that's the best stuff I ever tasted; you call it a mixed quantity, but I say it's prime."

"Since it's ov the first ordher, then," says his riv'rence, "we'll hav the less deffeequilty in reducing it to a simple equation."

"You'll hav no fractions at my side anyhow," says the pope. "Faix, I'm afeard," says he, "it's only too aisy ov solution our sum is like to be."

"Never fear for that," says his riv'rence, "I've a good stock of surds here in the bottle; for I tell you it will take us a long time to exthract the root ov it, at the rate we're going on."

"What makes you call the blessid quart an irrational quantity?" says the pope.

"Because it's too much for one, and too little for two," says his riv'rence.

"Clear it ov its coefficient, and we'll thry," says the pope.

"Hand me over the exponent, then," says his riv'rence.

"What's that?" says the pope.

"The schrew, to be sure," says his riv'rence.

"What for?" says the pope.

"To dhraw the cork," says his riv'rence.

"Sure the cork's dhrew," says the pope.

"But the sperits can't get out on account of the accidents that's stuck in the neck ov the bottle," says his riv'rence.

"Accidents ought to be passable to sperit," says the pope, "and that makes me suspect that the reality ov the cork's in afther all."

"That's a barony-masia," says his riv'rence, "and I'm not bound to answer it. But the fact is, that it's the accidents ov the sperits too that's in it, and the reality's passed out through the cortical spacies as you say; for, you may hav observed, we've both been in rale good sperits ever since the cork was dhrawn, and where else would the real sperits come from if they wouldn't come out of the bottle?"

"Well, then," says the pope, "since we've got the reality, there's no use troubling ourselvs wid the accidents."

"Oh, begad," says his riv'rence, "the accidents is very essential too; for a man may be in the best ov good sperits, as far as his immaterial part goes, and yet need the accidental qualities ov good liquor to hunt the sinsible thirst out ov him." So he dhraws the cork in earnest, and sets about brewing the other skillet ov scaltheen; but faix, he had to get up the ingredients this time by the hands ov ould Molly; though devil a taste of her little finger he'd let widin a yard ov the same decoction.

But, my dear, here's the Freeman's Journal, and we'll see what's the news afore we finish the residuary proceedings ov their two holinesses.

Hurroo, my darlings!—didn't I tell you it 'ud never do? Success to bould John Tuam and the ould siminary ov Firdramore! Oh, more power to your grace every day you rise, 'tis you that has broken their boord into shivers under your feet! Sure, and isn't it a proud day for Ireland, this blessed feast ov the chair ov Saint Pether? Isn't Carlisle and Whately smashed to pieces, and their whole college of swaddling teachers knocked into smidhereens? John Tuam, your sowl, has tuck his pasthoral staff in his hand and beathen them out ov Connaught as fast as ever Pathrick druve the sarpints into Clew bay. Poor ould Mat Kavanagh, if he was alive this day, 'tis he would be the happy man. "My curse upon their g'ographies and Bibles," he used to say; "where's the use ov perplexing the poor childer wid what we don't undherstand ourselvs?" No use at all, in troth, and so I said from the first myself. Well, thank God and his grace, we'll hav no more thrigonomethry nor scripther in Connaught. We'll hould our lodges every Saturday night as we used to, wid our chairman behind the masther's desk, and we'll hear our mass every Sunday morning wid the blessed priest shtanding afore the same. Glory be to God! I've done wid their lecthirs—they may all go and be d——d wid their consuption and production. I'm off to Tallymactaggart before daylight in the morning, where I'll thry whether a sod or two o' turf can't consume a cartload ov heresy, and whether a weekly meeting ov the lodge can't produce a new thayory ov rints. But afore I take my lave ov you, I may as well finish my story about Father Tom that I hear is coming up to whale the heretics in Adam and Eve during the lint.

The pope—and indeed it ill becomes a good Catholic to say anything agin him—no more would I, only that his riv'rence was in it—but you see the fact ov it is that the pope was as envious as ever he could be, at seeing himself sacked right and left by Father Tom, and bate out ov the face, the way he was, on every science and subjec' that was started. So, not to be outdone altogether, he says to his riv'rence, "You're a man that's fond ov the brute crayation, I hear, Misther Maguire?"

"I don't deny it," says his riv'rence; "I've dogs that I'm willing to run agin any man's, ay, or to match them agin any other dogs in the world for genteel education and polite manners," says he.

"I'll hould you a pound," says the pope, "that I've a quadrhuped in my possession that's a wiser baste nor any dog in your kennel."

"Done," says his riv'rence, and they staked the money. "What can this larned quadrhuped of yours do?" says his riv'rence.

"It's my mule," says the pope, "and, if you were to offer her golden oats and clover off the meadows ov paradise, sorra taste ov aither she'd let pass her teeth till the first mass is over every Sunday or holiday in the year."

"Well, and what 'ud you say if I showed you a baste ov mine," says his riv'rence, "that, instead ov fasting till first mass is over only, fasts out the whole four-and-twenty hours ov every Wednesday and Friday in the week as reg'lar as a Christian?"

"Oh, be asy, Master Maguire," says the pope.

"You don't believe me, don't you?" says his riv'rence; "very well, I'll soon show you whether or no," and he put his knuckles in his mouth, and gev a whistle that made the pope stop his fingers in his ears. The aycho, my dear, was hardly done playing with the cobwebs in the cornish when the door flies. open, and in jumps Spring. The pope happened to be sitting next the door, betuxt him and his riv'rence, and, may I never die, if he didn't clear him, thriple crown and all, at one spang. "God's presence be about us!" says the pope, thinking it was an evil spirit come to fly away with him for the lie he had tould in regard ov his mule (for it was nothing more nor a trick that consisted in grazing the brute's teeth): but, seeing it was only one ov the grandest beauties ov a greyhound that he'd ever laid his epistolical eyes on, he soon recovered ov his fright, and began to pat him, while Father Tom riz and went to the sideboord, where he cut a slice ov pork, a slice ov beef, a slice ov mutton, and a slice ov salmon, and put them all on a plate thegither. "Here, Spring, my man," says he, sitting the plate down afore him on the hearthstone, "here's your supper for you this blessed Friday night." Not a word more he said nor what I tell you; and, you may believe it or not, but it's the blessed truth that the dog, afther jist tasting the salmon, and spitting it out agin, lifted his nose out ov the plate, and stood with his jaws wathering, and his tail wagging, looking up in his riv'rence's face, as much as to say, "Giv me your absolution, till I hide them temptations out ov my sight."

"There's a dog that knows his duty," says his riv'rence; "there's a baste that knows how to conduct himself aither in the parlor or the field. You think him a good dog, looking at him here; but I wisht you seen him on the side ov Slieve-an'-Eirin! Be my soul, you'd say the hill was running away from undher him. O I wisht you had been wid me," says he, never letting on to see the dog at all, "one day last Lint, that I was coming from mass. Spring was near a quarter of a mile behind me, for the childher was delaying him wid bread and butter at the chapel door; when a lump ov a hare ran across the road; so I gev the whilloo, and knowing that she'd take the rise ov the hill, I made over the ditch and up through Mullaghcashel as hard as I could pelt, still keeping her in view, but afore I had gone a perch, Spring seen her, and away the two went like the wind, up Drumrewy, and down Clooneen, and over the river, widout his being able onst to turn her. Well, I run on till I come to the Diffagher, and through it I went, for the wather was low and I didn't mind being wet shod, and out on the other side, where I got up on a ditch, and seen such a coorse as I'll be bound to say was never seen afore or since. If Spring turned that hare onst that day, he turned her fifty times, up and down, back and for'ard, throughout and about. At last he run her right into the big quarry hole in Mullaghbawn, and when I went up to look for her fud, there I found him shtretched on his side, not able to stir a foot, and the hare lying about an inch afore his nose as dead as a door-nail, and divil a mark of a tooth upon her. Eh, Spring, isn't that thrue?" says he. Jist at that minit the clock shtruck twelve, and, before you could say thrapsticks, Spring had the plateful of mate consaled. "Now," says his riv'rence, "hand me over my pound, for I've won my bet fairly."

"You'll excuse me," says the pope, pocketing his money, "for we put the clock half an hour back, out ov compliment to your riv'rince," says he, "and it was Sathurday morning afore he came up at all."

"Well, it's no matther," says his riv'rence, putting back his pound-note in his pocket-book, "only," says he, "it's hardly fair to expect a brute baste to be so well skilled in the science of chronology."

In troth his riv'rince was badly used in the same bet, for he won it clever; and, indeed, I'm afeared the shabby way he was thrated had some effect in putting it into his mind to do what he did. "Will your holiness take a blast ov the pipe?" says he, dhrawing out his dhudeen.

"I never smoke," says the pope, "but I havn't the least objection to the smell of the tobaccay."

"Oh, you had betther take a dhraw," says his riv'rince; "it'll relish the drink, that 'ud be too luscious entirely widout something to flavor it."

"I had thoughts," said the pope, wid the laste sign ov a hiccup on him, "ov getting up a broiled bone for the same purpose."

"Well," says his riv'rence, "a broiled bone 'ud do no manner ov harm at this prisint time; but a smoke," says he, "'ud flavor both the divil and the dhrink."

"What sort ov tobaccay is it that's in it?" says the pope.

"Raal nagur-hed," says his riv'rence; "a very mild and salubrious spacies of the philosophic weed."

"Then, I don't care if I do take a dhraw," says the pope. Then Father Tom held the coal himself till his holiness had the pipe lit; and they sat widout saying anything worth mentioning for about five minits.

At last the pope says to his riv'rence, "I dunna what gev me this plaguy hiccup," says he. "Dhrink about," says he. "Begorra," he says, "I think I'm getting merrier nor's good for me. Sing us a song, your riv'rence," says he.

Father Tom then sung him Monatagrenoge and the Bunch o' Rushes, and he was mighty well pleased wid both, keeping time wid his hands, and joining in in the choruses when his hiccup 'ud let him. At last, my dear, he opens the lower buttons ov his waistcoat, and the top one ov his waistband, and calls to Masther Anthony to lift up one ov the windys. "I dunna what's wrong wid me, at all, at all," says he; "I'm mortial sick."

"I thrust," says his riv'rence, "the pasthrey that you ate at dinner hasn't disagreed wid your holiness's stomach."

"Oh, my! oh!" says the pope, "what's this at all?" gasping for breath, and as pale as a sheet, wid a could sweat bursting out over his forehead, and the palms ov his hands spread out to catch the air. "Oh, my! oh, my!" says he, "fetch me a basin! Don't spake to me. Oh!—oh!—blood alive! Oh, my head, my head, hould my head!—oh!—ubh!—I'm poisoned—ach!"

"It was them plaguy pasthries," says his riv'rence. "Hould his head hard," says he, "and clap a wet cloth over his timples. If you could only thry another dhraw ov the pipe, your holiness, it 'ud set you to rights in no time."

"Carry me to bed," says the pope, "and never let me see that wild Irish priest ag'in. I'm poisoned by his manes—ubplsch!—ach!—ach! He dined wid Cardinal Wayld yesterday," says he, "and he's bribed him to take me off. Send for a confissor," says he, "for my latther end's approaching. My head's like to split—so it is! Oh, my! oh, my!—ubplsch!—ach!"

Well, his riv'rence never thought it worth his while to make him an answer; but, when he seen how ungratefully he was used, afther all his throuble in making the evening agreeable to the ould man, he called Spring, and put the butt-end ov the second bottle into his pocket, and left the house widout once wishing "Good-night, an' plaisant dhrames to you;" and, in troth, not one ov them axed him to lave them a lock ov his hair.

That's the story as I heard it tould; but myself doesn't b'lieve over one-half of it. Howandiver, when all's done, it's a shame, so it is, that he's not a bishop this blessed day and hour: for, next to the goiant of St. Jarlath's, he's out and out the cleverest fellow ov the whole jing-bang.

The Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence.

There was a meeting at Charlotte, Mecklenburg county, N. C., May 31, 1775, which passed twenty resolutions of a revolutionary character, but containing no language paralleling the Declaration of July 4, 1776. These resolutions were printed in the South Carolina Gazette of June 13, 1775. On the 30th of June Governor Martin transmitted a copy to the secretary of state of London, saying:

> The minutes of the council held at this place the other day will make the impotence of government here as apparent to your lordship as anything I can set before you. . . . The resolves of the committee of Mecklenburg, which your lordship will find in the inclosed newspaper, surpass all the horrid and treasonable publications that the inflammatory spirits of the continent hav yet produced. . . . A copy of these resolves was sent off, I am informed, by express to the congress at Philadelphia as soon as they were passed.

The governor was rightly informed that a copy of the resolves was sent by express to the Congress at Philadelphia. Furthermore, the resolutions of May 31, 1775, similar to those adopted in other colonies, were printed (in part at least) in several Northern newspapers of that period.

Whatever impression may hav been made upon Congressmen by these resolutions, it does not appear to hav been enduring. In June, 1819, John Adams was dumfounded to see in the Essex, Mass., Register an article entitled the "Raleigh Register Declaration of Independence," embodying five resolutions purporting to hav been adopted at Charlotte, N. C., May 20, 1775, the first three of which were as follows:

> Resolved, That whoever directly or indirectly in any way, form or manner countenanced the unchartered and dangerous invasion of our rights, as claimed by Great Britain, is an enemy to this country, to America, and to the inherent and inalienable rights of man.
>
> Resolved, That we, the citizens of Mecklenburg county, do hereby dissolve the political bands which hav connected us to the mother country, and hereby absolve ourselvs from all allegiance to the British Crown, and abjure all political connection, contract, or association with that nation, who hav wantonly trampled on our right and liberties and inhumanly shed the blood of American patriots at Lexington.
>
> Resolved, That we do hereby declare ourselvs a free and independent people; are, and of right ought to be a sovereign and self-governing association, under the control of no power, other than that of our God and the general government of the Congress; to the maintenance of which independence we solemnly pledge to each other our mutual coöperation, our lives, our fortunes, and our most sacred honor.

The italicised words reoccur in the Declaration of July 4, 1776. The word "inherent" was stricken out of the original draft of the Declaration. The words "British crown," and "are and of right ought to be," were inserted by amendment made in Congress, being taken from a resolution of June 7th, offered by Richard Henry Lee.

"How is it possible," said John Adams in his letter to Thomas Jefferson, "that this paper should hav been concealed from me to this day? Had it been communicated to me in the time of it, I know, if you do not, that it would hav been printed in every Whig newspaper upon this continent. You know that if I had possessed it I would hav made the hall of Congress echo and re-echo with it fifteen (fourteen) months before your Declaration of Independence."

Jefferson in reply, July 9, 1819, said:

> And you seem to think it genuin. I believe it spurious, I deem it to be a very unjustifiable quiz, like that of the volcano so minutely related to us as having broken out in North Carolina some half-dozen years ago. . . . It appeals to an original book, which is burnt, to Mr. Alexander, who is dead, to a joint letter from Caswell, Hughes and Hooper (members of the Congress of 1775) all dead, to a copy sent to the dead Caswell, and another sent to Dr. Williamson, now probably dead, whose memory did not recollect, in the history he has written of North Carolina (1812) this gigantic step of the County of Mecklenburg. Horry, too, is silent in his history of (Gen.) Marion, whose scene of action was the country bordering on Mecklenburg. Ramsay, Marshall, Jones, Girardin, Wirt, historians of the adjacent states, all silent. When Mr. (Patrick) Henry's resolutions, far short of independence, flew like lightning through every paper, and kindled both sides of the Atlantic, this flaming declaration of the same date, of the independence of Mecklenburg County of North Carolina, absolving it from British allegiance and abjuring all political connection with that nation, although sent to Congress, too, is never heard of. It is not known even a twelve month after, when a similar proposition is first made in that body. Armed with this bold example, would not you hav addressed our timid brethren in peals of thunder on their tardy fears? Would not every advocate of independence hav rung the glories of Mecklenburg County in North Carolina in the ears of the doubting Dickinson and others, who hung so heavily on us?

Six weeks later, August 21st, John Adams expressed his disbelief in the authenticity of the resolutions, saying, "Haud credo."

If Jefferson or Adams had ever known of the presentations to Congress of the resolution of May 31, 1775, the fact was forgotten in 1819. It was not till 1838 that an old newspaper was discovered by Peter Force, of Washington, containing a part of the resolutions. Afterward the complete records were procured by George Bancroft from the British archives, and were published in Wheeler's History of North Carolina in 1851.

I exploded the authenticity of the resolutions of May 20, 1775, in the New York Sun, July 4, 1882; and four years afterward I was pleased to find that President Welling of Columbian University, D. C., had made a more elaborate exposure of the fabrication in the North American Review for April, 1874.

For seventeen years past this mythical declaration of independence has been celebrated in North Carolina. Senators Bayard, Pendleton, and D. B. Hill hav made speeches at the anniversaries.

Historian Bancroft has dodged the question of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, but now Mr. Conway in his "Life of Thomas Paine" accep'ts it as probably genuin. A year ago, in the Open Court, he attempted to account for Jefferson's non-recognition of the paper in 1819 by his "feeble memory" and "jealousy concerning the paternity" of the Declaration of 1776. "Feeble memory" indeed! How about the memory of John Adams? And why should Jefferson feel jealous of the paternity of an instrument the authorship of which he had never yet claimed?

Mr Conway surmises that the resolutions of May 31, 1775, were the tempered expressions of the "absolute Declaration of Independence" after the "receipt of the tidings from Lexington." The bloodshed at Lexington is recited in the second resolution of May 20th. And when it is remembered that May 20th, Old Style, which was not yet obsolete in the colony of North Carolina, was May 31st, New Style, the mystery of the two dates is solved, and the testimony of Captain Jack in December, 1819, that he was the bearer of the proceedings of May, 1775, to the Congress at Philadelphia in June, 1775, is easily understood. He and all the other witnesses testified to a single meeting in May, 1775, when certain resolutions were adopted, which resolutions we now know were printed in the South Carolina Gazette of June 13th, were transmitted to London by Governor Martin and conveyed to the Congress at Philadelphia by Captain Jack.

But the people of North Carolina will doubtless continue to celebrate the mythical event, just as all Christendom celebrates the birth and death of Jesus, although it is quite certain that he was not born on the 25th of December, and could not hav been crucified on the great passover day of the Jews.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6, 1892. W. H. Burr.

The Paine Farm Something Worth Thinking About.

The Paine farm is for sale. The house in which Thomas Paine lived during his later years, and in which he died, and near which is the monument erected to his memory, can be secured by the Liberals of this country. Ought they not to do this? If they cannot purchase the whole farm, they might purchase that part of it upon which the buildings stand. The land is constantly increasing in value.

In order that the opportunity now presented may be thoroughly understood, I will make public the following communication from Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr.:

120 Lexington Ave., New York, June 22, 1892.

Dear Putnam: I hav a letter from Mr. See this morning which you may regard as important. As it is brief, I will communicate it word for word:

New Rochelle, N. Y., June 20, 1892.

Dr. E. B. Foote, Dear Sir: I now take the liberty to inform you as per request that the parties who held the option on my farm when you and your friend called, hav failed to take it, so I am now free to offer it to you or anyone else that may desire it. I remain, Thomas Paine Farm. Yours truly, Wesley See.

I wish you would talk with moneyed men in the Liberal ranks and see if we could not create a Thomas Paine Park Association with shares, say at $10 or $20 each, that might be taken by Liberals all over the country according to the means of each, and in this way raise a fund for purchasing the Paine farm. It would only be necessary to hav good, honest, clean hands associated in the management of such a movement to make it one that would eventually be profitable as well as satisfactory to the Liberal mind. You had an opportunity to see how inevitable it is that New York will erelong take in all of Westchester county, especially that part of it in the region of the Paine farm. You also know that the overflow from New York is filling up Westchester county, and that an acre of ground cannot be purchased there that will not rapidly increase in value.

Now, if a joint stock company, or a Liberal syndicate, or call it what you like, could by the issuance of shares secure this property, that portion of it in the immediate neighborhood of the old house could be reserved for permanent Liberal headquarters, and as a historical relic, and the balance of the farm could be cut into lots and sold for a sufficient sum to fully indemnify everyone holding the shares. I would pledge myself to take $100 worth of shares. Perhaps we might do better. I really think that, aside from any pecuniary advantage that might be derived from such an undertaking, it would be a grand thing with which to advance Liberalism throughout the United States. E. B. Foote, Sr.

The only way to carry out Dr. Foote's noble suggestion is to invite subscriptions to this Thomas Paine Association. As soon as $5,000 are subscribed a meeting will be called in New York city for organization. Dr. Foote, Sr., subscribes $100. I will subscribe $100. Who comes next?

Samuel P. Putnam.

Congress and The Fair.

The Chicago exhibition is generally admitted to deserve the aid recently voted by Congress. No other place of public instruction is considered worthy of such aid. No other place of instruction has so good a right to keep open every Sunday for the public good.

When Congress tries to tell people how they ought to spend Sunday, it assumes a great deal more power than is granted by the Constitution of the United States. That instrument limits the powers of our Federal government so closely to national concerns and secular interests, that whatever legislation on this subject is needed ought to be passed at Springfield, Ill. But is any really necessary? The American citizen is perfectly competent to decide for himself on what days he will visit the World's Fair; and no one else has any right to interfere. Those who do not choose to go on Sunday hav no more right to prevent other people from doing so than people who do not smoke hav a right to stop the use of cigarets, as was recently attempted in Massachusetts. The question is not whether smoking cigarets is a good habit; but whether it is so bad a one as to justify passing a law against it. The real question about the World's Fair is not whether it is the best place to visit on Sunday, but whether it is so very wicked a place as to justify laws and regulations against it. The people who hav the best right to be heard are those who want to go, and especially those mechanics, servants, and laborers who cannot go on other days. If there are as many people ready and anxious to go on Sunday, there is really just as much reason for opening it then as on Monday. If it is to be closed on Sunday, out of respect for religion, it ought to be closed on Saturday also; for the respect with which a religion is treated ought not to depend merely on the number of its adherents. If the Bible has any voice in the matter, it is in favor of Saturday rather than Sunday. Those who wish to hav Christianity remain loved and honored, cannot afford to hav her cause identified with that of merely arbitrary prohibitions, which many of our most religious people would gladly violate without the slightest scruple. No day can be sanctified by the sacrifice of innocent liberty. F. M. Holland.

Our London Letter.

The bishop of Lincoln's case has once more been settled, this time by the judicial committee of the privy council, who hav at length come to a decision on that most momentous question, as some of the religious newspapers are pleased to term it. I hav read two columns of the printed report of the judgment, and hav no doubt that it is a monument of profundity, but I cannot make out which side has gained the case, though I hav been informed that it is a victory for both parties, and therefore extremely satisfactory. To the unsophisticated unbeliever, however, it does not seem a matter of great importance whether a parson adds more water to the wine than is already there, or whether he drinks the rinsings of the chalice; it seems merely a matter of taste, or rather a want of taste; and although I understand to a true believer these apparently childish trivialities are matters of great mystical import, to an outsider it is more after the nature of a rather dull comedy.

It has been a fine harvest to the ecclesiastical lawyers, who must hav made some thousands of pounds out of the transaction, to their great joy and the glory of God. If the Christian deity is anything like what he is represented, he must hav had a very anxious time of it while the judgment was pending, and it would be interesting to know his opinion of the wind-up of the case. No doubt his friend Talmage could tell us, but he has been lately so mixed up with a much more important being in the autocrat of the Russias that it will be some considerable time before he will condescend to hav anything to do with either God or man. He was so well inflated with what is called spiritual pride before his visit to Russia that one would hav thought there was no room for anything more, but he has managed to take in such a stock of temporal pride in addition that it would not be suprising to hear that he had before long shared the fate of the frog in the fable. It will be as much as one steamer can carry to take him back to his admirers, and will be a good strain on that; his friends will need charter a whole fleet for him.

The Parliamentary elections hav come and gone. Many candidates hav been elected who scarcely expected it, and others who looked upon their election as a dead certainty hav been rejected. The state is on the verge of ruin and the church in imminent danger. We shall be insulted by every foreign nation, and be quickly wiped off the face of the earth. On the other hand, we shall be more prosperous than ever; the strength of the church will increase; we shall be feared and respected by all other powers, all poverty will cease out of the land, and we shall be speedily in the midst of the millennium. It is a beautiful arrangement and takes place at every general election, in print, and unfortunately stops the e, whichever party is in power. The only appreciable difference is to the parties who patriotically fleece the unfortunate taxpayers to the best of their ability, and it matters but little to the country who happens to be in office. I often wonder what the result would be if, say, fifty avowed Freethinkers were to become members. Certainly those who hav sat in the House hav not done much good for the cause, but perhaps there might be more strength in a greater number, and we might expect to see all religious or anti-religious opinion placed upon a fair basis. Unfortunately, avowed Freethought still meets with a greater or lesser amount of obloquy, and it is not always safe to openly proclaim one's opinion, but men whose positions are well assured surely need not be ashamed of what they believe to be right.

The centenary celebration of Shelley's birth at Horslau does not appear to hav been a great success, many of those invited to do honors to the memory of the poet making excuses for their absence. His time is not yet come, and he will, like Shakspere, be better appreciated by future generations than by those nearer to his own time. Those who admire the rhymesters of the present day can scarcely be expected to be great admirers of such a poet as Shelley, for they are quite incapable of comprehending his genius. J. D.

Items of Foreign News Interesting to Freethinkers.

The French Freethought journals call upon their subscribers to throw their votes at the coming elections for such candidates only as will represent Secularism.

Spanish-American Freethinkers to the number of 503 hav organized at Buenos Ayres and joined the Spanish Freethought Federation. Mr. Chies y Lozano was elected delegate to the International Convention.

The yearly Congress of Swedish Freethinkers will take place in the U. S. Hall, Sunday, August 14th. The Congress will be opened by an address by Mr. Lennstrand: "What does Freethought Offer in Place of Christianity?"

El Liberal, the leading Mexican Freethought paper, published at Zacatecas, has succeeded in waking up Mexican Liberals. Several local societies are formed, and delegates will be sent to the International Congress.

The orthodox party in Germany is jubilant. During the past year the number of baptisms performed has increased from ten per cent to fourteen per cent. Orthodoxy must hav entered its second childhood. It does not take much to make it laugh.

George Brandes, Ph.D., private dount at the University of Copenhagen, Denmark, an outspoken Atheist and the foremost litterateur of the present time, a man whose works hav been translated into all civilized languages, has been made to suffer again on account of his philosophical belief. The bigoted government's willing tool, the minister of education, Mr. Goos (ought to be Goose), has, contrary to the wishes of the University faculty and the students, nominated a dount Palludan as professor of ethics, a position he is not able to fill with credit to the University. But Mr. Palludan is an orthodox Christian, while our late teacher, Professor Brandes, is not.

Colonel Ingersoll's speech at Walt Whitman's funeral has been translated into several European secular papers. The first Freethought paper to reproduce same was Fritänkaren, edited by our friend, Victor E. Lennstrand, the Swedish Freethought martyr.

The Freethought association at Sundbyberg, Sweden, has ceased to exist. The reason, we suppose, is the usual one: internal disagreement owing to petty jealousies and personal hobbies. When will Freethinkers get common sense enough to see that union against our common foe is imperativly demanded?

Speaking of the World's Fair Sunday-closing clause our foreign contemporaries ask: "What are the American Freethinkers doing?" They are kicking, but they don't kick in concert. Friends, we must organize. Send your name and contribution to Mr. Samuel Putnam. The American Secular Union is dead; let us hav a Freethinkers' Union.

There is a Freethought hurricane passing across Spain. Society after society is formed, and every number of Las Dominicales contains at least half a column of new individual adherents. The latest adhesion worth special mention is that of the Republican Union of Central Spain, numbering over two thousand. Freethinkers of the United States, let us, too, organize.

According to the official statistics of the English government in India, there are in that country from forty to sixty million people who liv on the edge of the grave of famin, and during the last twelve years at least eighteen million people in the same country hav died from starvation. This is the way Mr. Jehovah answers the prayer for daily bread; this is the realization of 1 Pet. v, 7.

At the German Freethought Congress held at Hamburg, June 11th–13th, Professor Büchner was reëlected president, and Dr. Specht, Messrs. Bärenklan, Heberlein, and Sonn were elected as directors. The constitution was remodeled and a social plank put in the society's platform. Mrs. Henrich-Wilhelmi was elected to represent the German Freethinkers at the International Congress at Madrid.

According to the prison statistics of 1891 of the province of Ontario, British America, for the receipt of which we are indebted to a Canadian Freethinker, there were in the prisons of Ontario 10,433 persons. Of these 3,744 belonged to the Catholic church, 3,134 to the Church of England, 1,413 were Methodists, 1,368 Presbyterians, 770 divided among other Christian sects. Of Freethinkers there was none. Let us judge the tree by its fruit.

Mrs. Hedwig Henrich-Wilhelmi, the well-known German-American Freethought lecturer, who has been absent from this country three years, is about to return. As our readers remember, she has in that time been imprisoned in Germany for blasphemy. October 12th she will open her lecture travels in the United States by delivering the oration at the Columbus celebration held at Boston by the Boston Turner society. Mrs. Wilhelmi is an excellent speaker, and those of our friends who understand German we advise to attend her lectures whenever they hav a chance.

The great Vienna (Austria) Neue Freie Presse and the well-known author Adolf Wilbrandt, hav been indicted for blasphemy. Mr. Wilbrandt has written a novel, "Hermann Isinger," for the Neue Freie Presse, and it contains a poem setting forth the present naturalistic teachings and comparing them with those found in the Bible. Although the author did not draw any conclusions from the contrary teachings of these two systems but merely stated the facts, the effect of such an "Atheistic" examination of Bible truths was deemed dangerous by the minister of justice. Soon the time will arrive, no doubt, when Bible-reading will be prohibited on the same grounds.

In a recent issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER we mentioned that the Freethinkers of Belgium had had their annual Congress. Since then our friend Mr. Furnemont has sent us the minutes of the Congress. From these we gather the following information: During the last six years the number of societies has increased from 34 to 123. In 1886 there were 4,300 Freethinkers; now the number has increased to 11,800. (All these are activ Freethinkers.) The next Congress will be held at Liege. Messrs. Furnemont, Sons, Vandervelde, Sluys, Thirion, and Maes were elected delegates to the International Freethought Congress. Liberty of conscience, universal suffrage, Secularization of state institutions, and an activ propaganda are the main planks in the association's platform for this year.

The French Freethought Federation held its general Congress April 17, 1892, at rue de Jussieu, salle de l'Ermitage. April 19, 1891, the Federation consisted of 145 auxiliary societies and 130 individual members. April 17, 1892, it consisted of 196 auxiliary societies and 237 individual members. The receipts of the Federation amounted to 2,423.20 francs, the expenses (no salaries given to any office), to 1,951.90 francs. The "Pence fund" (Denier) amounted to 722.15 francs. (The Denier is the French literature fund.) Mr. Salva was elected president; Mr. Pasquier, general secretary. The meeting was closed with cheers for the Republic and Freethought. It was resolved to publish a new organ for the Federation, La France Anticléricale, Mr. Joanne Magdelaine to be its editor. We hope soon to see this new paper on our table.

Our Politicians as Theologians.

Our political schemers do not seem to be very well posted in theological matters. If they would study up a little before posing for the religious vote, they would not make such spectacles of themselvs. St. Matthew Quay, the immaculate, did not know whether the "Sabbath" was Saturday or Sunday; and now comes another one of the fine political bosses, "Me Too" Platt, and declares that he will "decline to talk politics on Sunday, for the reason that the seventh day ought to be reserved for something else." From which the natural inference is that the distinguished statesman thinks Sunday is the last instead of the first day of the week. I propose a fund for the "Religious Education of Politicians."

E. C. WALKER.

Olden Myths.

THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes a book called "Legends of the Patriarchs and Prophets," by the Rev. S. Baring-Gould. I think if THE TRUTH SEEKER readers knew how full of interest these legends are, the book would hav a great run.

These old tales are just as true as the Adam and Eve story, or that of the big fish, and many of them hav been just as earnestly believed. I will select some of the stories about David, the man after God's own heart. Some of the legends say David had no soul for fourteen years because he was uncircumcised, and others claim he was born circumcised.

He was very small, and Samuel poured oil on his head and anointed him and he soon grew as tall as Saul, who was head and shoulders over any man in Israel.

David was gifted with the evil eye, and was able to giv leprosy by turning a malignant glance upon any man. He cast one upon Joab—"Let there not fail from the house of Joab one that hath an issue or is a leper." Rather a dangerous gift for a passionate, red-headed man like David! The rabbis believed David was the first man to call down the rain, hail, and tempest upon his enemies by praying. He saw his son in hell and cried out, "O, my son Absalom! My son, my son Absalom! Would to God I had died for thee! O Absalom, my son, my son!" Thus calling Absalom by his name or relationship seven times, and as in hell there are seven mansions and each cry released him from one of these divisions, he escaped through the love of his father, which drew him up out of misery. David was desirous of building a temple to the Lord. God would not allow it because he was a man of blood. When young he pastured his father's sheep. He came one day upon a rhinoceros (unicorn) asleep and thought it was a mountain, so drove his sheep up its back and fed them on the grass which grew thereon. Presently the rhinoceros awoke and stood up, and then David's head touched the sky. He was filled with terror, and vowed that if God would save his life and bring him safely to the ground, he would build to the Lord a temple, the dimensions of the horn of the beast, a hundred cubits. The Lord sent a lion, and when the unicorn saw the lion, he lay down, and David and the sheep descended, and David took the lion by the beard and smote and slew him. Psalms says, "Save me from the lion's mouth; thou hast heard me also from among the horns of the unicorn." So you see we hav Bible proof of the story!

One day David was hunting, and Satan, in the form of a stag, came, and David shot an arrow at him, but could not kill him. This all the more astonished him because once in a fight with the Philistines he had transfixed eight hundred men with one arrow—a pretty long arrow that. Now, when Ishbibenob, who was of the sons of the giants, knew this, he said, "David has slain my brother Goliath, now he is in my power." So he came and chained him, cast him down, and laid a wine-press upon him, that he might crush him and squeeze all the blood out of him; but God softened the earth beneath him, so that it yielded to his body and he was uninjured. He says in Psalms, "Thou shalt make room enough under me for to go." As he lay under the press he saw a dove fly by, and said, "O that I had wings as a dove, that I might flee away and be at rest." This wine-press tale is not equal to the fiery furnace story of the Bible, so why call it impossible?

When David's life was run out, the angel of Death came to fetch his soul. But David spent all his time reading the law. The angel watched for his lips to cease moving, for he might not interrupt him in this sacred work.

David made no pause, so the angel went back of the house and shook one of the trees violently. David noticed no leaf stirred on any other tree, so he shut up his book and put up a ladder and climbed the tree to see what was there. The angel took away the ladder and David knew it not, so fell and broke his neck and died. His son Solomon knew not what to do, as it was the Sabbath, and the body of his father lay exposed to the sun and the dogs, and he dared not profane the Sabbath by removing it; so he sent to the rabbis, who said: "Cast the body of a beast before the dogs, and place bread or a boy upon thy father and bury him." The tale does not say if the boy was also buried—but we will hope not.

David had such a beautiful voice that when he sang the praise of God, the birds came from all quarters to listen, and the mountains and hills were moved at his notes. He could sing with a voice as loud as the most deafening peal of thunder, or warble as sweet as the most tuneful nightingale. David desired to be tempted, that he might prove how strong he could be under temptation, so he was shown Uriah's wife.

> Fair, too fair, pale, statue-like she stands,
> Veiled only by her golden hair,
> And by her marble hands.

David of course fell, tore off his purple robe, cast aside his golden crown, and wept forty days and nights. His tears fell so abundantly that every now and then he plunged a cup into them and drank it off. Finally Gabriel came and told him his adultery was pardoned. David lifted his tearful face and said: "What will Uriah say to me on the day of resurrection?" Gabriel answered, "The Lord will giv him so great an inheritance in paradise that he will not hav the heart to reproach thee." It is so even to this day. We are promised future bliss in lieu of wrongs done us here and now. And promises now avail no more than they did in David's time. All these old myths were once believed just as people now believe the Bible and the Koran.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

The Kansas Freethinkers' Association

Will hold their third annual convention at Ottawa, Kan., September 9th to 14th. John E. Remsburg and other good speakers will preach the gospel of truth.

All Freethinkers and Liberal societies are invited to attend and aid in the good work of teaching reason instead of faith. Clergy and Christians are especially invited to attend.

The Freethinkers will hav the use of Forest park, which has all the advantages of beauty, comfort, and convenience for the entertainment of visitors.

President, C. K. LEVERING,
Burlington, Kan.
Secretary, L. D. WHITE,
Halstead, Kan.

Authorship of Isis Unveiled.

My open letter to Dr. Alexander Wilder concerning "Isis Unveiled" was sent to him privately many weeks before it appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER. Dr. Wilder is silent, but if he should ever venture to speak I am quite sure that he would not say he believed the book was written by Madam Blavatsky.

W. H. BURR.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6, 1892.

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

Letters of Friends.

The Road of Peace and the Road of Hell and Blazes.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We got hold of your paper accidentally, and let us assure you that we are not a bit sorry for it. On the contrary, as soon as we commenced to peruse its pages, full of beautiful thoughts and words of wisdom, we were inspired by it, and we want to be taken into your army of Freethinkers by subscribing for your good, honest paper and help you to seek the truth—not for us, for we are confident that we hav already found the truth, but for those who are too near-sighted to distinguish the road of freedom and tranquillity from the road of hell and blazes.

With good wishes for Freethought and fraternity, we remain respectfully,

A. M. AND B.

Lectures Appreciated.

PALOUSE, WASH., July 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Having a few moments of leisure, I thought a good way to improve them was to drop a few lines to your valuable paper regarding the two late lectures held here by two worthy speakers on Liberality and Morality, Samuel P. Putnam and W. S. Bell, of Oakland, Cal. They both met with much success, and were greeted with a hearty welcome and a firm grasp from the hands of the Liberals of Palouse. Their speeches were filled with logic, wit, and humor. Their ability as speakers on Liberal questions grants them a high standing in the ranks of modern oratory. They both leave Palouse with the hearty grasp of friendship from friends and Infidels waiting their return. JOE BINNARD.

A Challenge.

NAUVOO, ILL., July 27, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Now, I want a favor—that is providing that you can understand my bad language and lack of grammar. What I want is about one J. R. Perry. He seems to know something about a world after this one. Now, I am an inquirer after truth. If Mr. Perry, or any other man, woman, or child will answer me four questions correctly, I will pay $100. The questions are: What was my mother's mother's name in full before marriage, and her husband's name? Also, when my father and mother died? I only want the month and year. Now, on my part, I will deposit with Mr. Charles Bolton, who is a Spiritualist and very responsible, or any other good man, the money and the answers in a sealed envelope, with power to compare the answers with the record. If correct, he gets the money; if not, I will be among the doubters.

I hav taken your paper now over seventeen years.

Yours for truth and knowledge,

W. H. FULTON.

A Thoroughgoing Old Freethinker.

DORCHESTER, NEB., July 30, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed is $1.52—$1 for the new Bible Picture Book, fifty-two cents for two or three copies of the "Secular Marriage and Funeral Ritual."

Keep the good work going, as it is needed. Freethinkers never needed to work together at any time more than they do at the present time. Keep the comic pictures and Watson Heston to help keep THE TRUTH SEEKER bright. I am over seventy years of age, and when I am dead and buried neither myself nor wife want to hav any of the church mummery over our remains. Oh, how it makes the gospel-pilots snort to hav me showing THE TRUTH SEEKER pictures when I get it out of the office. We were surprised a few days ago, and agreeably so, to receive a visit from J. Gilbert, of Friend, Neb., and his amiable wife, who also brought along a Freethinker from Geneva, Neb., James Bell. All the Freethinkers should unite and try and visit one another as often as possible. Mr. Gilbert's father is dead, and it makes the preachers and holy joss-keepers almost faint to read what is on the tombstone. Will try and hav Mr. Gilbert send it to THE TRUTH SEEKER, as I cannot now repeat it.

There are more churches in this part of the country than schools, and hundreds of schoolhouses are used every Sunday for churches, and we are taxed to keep them up. I hope to liv to see the day when school buildings are not used for church purposes.

Well, good day. JESSE R. JOHNSON.

Kansas Freethinkers.

HALSTEAD, KAN., Aug. 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: About a year ago an effort was made by a few earnest workers to form an organization of the Liberals of Kansas with the purpose of holding yearly or semi-annual meetings.

Two meetings of two days each hav been held—one in Topeka in March, 1891, and in Ottawa the following September. Good speeches and large, attentiv audiences gave evidence of the deep interest taken and promis of future success.

The object of this society is to oppose the power of the church which by its influence on legislation has established laws that encroach upon our sacred rights and threaten the safety of our boasted secular government by forming a union of church and state.

The objects and efforts of the society will also be to work to promote science, truth, and reason, and to eliminate the ignorance, superstition, and blind faith that now prevail, and to protect against legal interference with the rights of the individual to think, speak, write, and print whatever his conscience dictates.

The association will meet about the first week in September—either in Ottawa or Topeka. The expenses of the convention must be met by contributions from people who are interested in the growth of Freethought and Liberalism. Any person who believes in these principles can become a member by sending their name to the secretary, who earnestly solicits attention and correspondence in regard to the subject.

Due notice as to time and place of holding the next meeting will be given.

LILLIE D. WHITE, Secretary.

Talmage on Paine.

CHALENDER, ARIZ., July 3, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In Dr. Talmage's sermon dated July 12, 1892, I notice a statement about the writings of Thomas Paine that is false. These are the words: "Tom Paine worked against that book (the Bible) as though he received large wages and was inspired by the very powers of darkness, confessing that all the time he was writing he did not hav the Bible anywhere near him."

I hav read Dr. Talmage's sermons for many years and with much interest, and in many respects admire his teachings, and cannot think that he meant to lie about so good and great a man as Thomas Paine must hav been to write such books as "The Crisis," "Rights of Man," etc. I hav no copy of the "Age of Reason" by me now and may not be able to quote the exact words as given in the beginning of the second part of this book, but in substance it is this:

"You will see that I hav provided myself with a Bible." He also states that he regrets to say that he finds the Bible a much worse book than he thought it was when he wrote the former part of the "Age of Reason." There being many references to the Bible in both chapter and verse all through the second edition of this book, that would be almost conclusiv proof that he must hav had a Bible at hand. I am rather inclined to think that Dr. Talmage has not read the "Age of Reason." If so, it may hav been a long time since and he perhaps has forgotten. I wish he would read it again and not make false statements about and endanger the reputation of our honored dead whose deeds shine to-day from o'er the distant hilltops of enlightened reason no less brilliantly than do the later writings and dramatic speeches of our much-esteemed Dr. Talmage. C. A. NICHOLS.

From an English Freethinker.

PALO, IA., Aug. 2, 292.

MR. EDITOR: With your permission, I will say a few words to the friends of THE TRUTH SEEKER and about the cause it advocates. I will say that I take great pleasure in reading the letters from different parts of the world, such as Putnam's "News and Notes." Oh, how splendidly he writes and what descriptiv powers he has! I do wish him success in his labors. And his brothers I love to follow in their travels—especially my countryman, Standring. I hope he will see that his letters are read and appreciated by his fellow-countrymen in this country as well as in England. Although I hav been in this country over fifty years, I hav not forgotten my nativ land. Yes, it is a beautiful land if superstition was swept away from it. As it is in this country, so it is there. But I am so glad that many are getting their mental eyes opened there as well as here, and I do hope they will keep us well posted on the great work in which they are engaged.

Well, friends, I am still in Palo, and alone, almost—that is, in regard to fighting superstition. But I am not discouraged, for I can hold my own with any of them yet, if I am over seventy-one years. I wish that I could get some to take the paper. Then we could talk together and understand better what we are talking about. But when there is but one who takes a Freethought paper, how much do the other people know about it? And there are but a very few people that care very much about reading, anyway. They seem to think they know enough now, and it takes an effort to inform the mind and store it with knowledge, and but a very few will take the trouble to get it. I never spent one whole day in a common school in my life. But oh, what should I do if I could not read? But I was determined to learn, so I did.

I must close, hoping this will find the friends all well and prospering.

JOHN STRATFORD.

Columbus's Real Motiv.

CHAPIN HOME, N. Y., Aug. 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I was somewhat amused this morning in reading in the World newspaper the presumption of the old fool Leo XIII., pope, who assumes in his letter that Columbus discovered this continent by the grace of God. He says to call the Indian race to Christianity was without doubt the mission and the work of the church; and further says he prays to the queen of heaven to assist the enterprise and to direct his course. When the old hypocrit knows full well that it was ambition, gain, love of power, that led him on. That it was to bring Christianity to a people that he did not know to exist, is a lie of the old pope's invention and deception.

History asserts that Columbus was educated in science—geometry, astronomy. He entered upon a seafaring life at the age of fourteen. He married the daughter of an old Italian seaman, from whose journals and charts he received instructions which enabled him to conceive the grand design of finding India in the west. His proposal was rejected by the most learned men of his time in Spain. Finally Queen Isabella was persuaded to listen to his request, and finally an agreement was entered into that of all the countries which he should discover he was to receive one-tenth part of the profits. He sailed from Palos, in Spain, Friday, Aug. 3, 1492, which according to the superstition of the age was an unlucky day. When he was almost reduced to the necessity of abandoning the enterprise, early one morning, Friday, October 12th (another unlucky day), land was seen, which proved to be Guanahana, one of the Bahama islands. They landed. The shore was covered with people. This island Columbus named San Salvador. Now for the pope to say, and to deceive and hoodwink the people to believe, that it was to plant Christianity or the Christian religion, is the greatest humbug ever invented by Mother Church.

Yours truly, S. R. THORNE.

Chafes Under Sunday Restrictions.

NEW BRITAIN, CONN., Aug. 4, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been here but four months this time, having returned in April to my nativ state after an absence of twenty years, during which time I was in California and Oregon. And although I love the home of my birth, and many of the people, I think I see many things to criticise. There are no theaters open here on Sunday, or balloon ascensions. And when some young men went into the fields where no one need be troubled by their shouts while playing baseball, they were hunted out by secular officers instigated by the intolerance of the Christian religion. And yet, although all of these amusements were common in the summer-time on the Pacific coast, I could not perceive the people were a bit more immoral there than here.

I hav sent you only one order for books, and you discounted it on account of a mistake of mine. I did not expect or desire you to do that, and shall insist on your taking the full price of your books. They are all worth it, and some are worth many times the price, and although I work for what I get, I can afford to pay the regular price, because I do not go to church or help support the minister, except in an indirect way, because the churches are free from tax.

Of course I miss all of that freedom that allowed all kinds of harmless amusement on Sunday. They hav not stopped the Sunday paper here yet, but if they do I will buy my reading at wholesale of you and keep a stock of it on hand which has been printed in a more liberal state.

I would say that THE TRUTH SEEKER seems to be growing better all of the time, if that did not imply that it was not as good as it could be all of the time. I was very much pleased with the article from D. Priestly, about David. Priestly has many more just as good. Please send "Pushed by Unseen Hands" and "Strike of a Sex." GEO. F. ELLIOTT.

The Other Side.

CLINT, TEX., July 9, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am a subscriber to your paper and hav been trying to increase its circulation, believing that you were seeking to find and publish the truth in all things in your line. But when I read in the last copy received (July 2d, page 427) a communication without signature, dated Texas, February 22d, I was filled with disappointment, disgust, and indignation. I had long ago abandoned the idea of an orthodox hell, but when I meet with a piece of pure malice, falsehood, gangrened hatred, and cowardice like this, I hav to go back to orthodoxy to find a fitting place for the man who would write, and the man who (pretending to hav reached a high moral plane above the fogs of prejudice, bigotry, and hatred) would publish such things for decent people to read.

This cowardly, skulking reptil of a correspondent spews his venom out, not upon a few individuals, but upon a population of millions, the average of whose intelligence, virtue, courage, and patriotism will equal that of any other people on the globe. Hear the vile, lying wretch as he vents his devilish nature upon a whole population for, in all probability, having been kicked out of respectable society as a tramp and a dead-beat: "If the editor knew as much of the accursed people of this sunny Southland as the writer he would be surprised at any subscribers at all," and then, after writing several slanders—one of them too dirty for print—says: "I might go on ad infinitum multiplying cases of superstition, hypocrisy, intolerance, and duplicity indicating the low mental state of the mass of the Anglo-Saxons in this corner of the earth."

And you publish these vile wholesale slanders upon a vast population from an anonymous correspondent, contrary to newspaper usage, or, having his name and place of writing you withhold both in order to screen him from punishment, thereby indorsing and approving the whole thing.

And this is a specimen of your truth-seeking and your desire to supplant the old superstitions of Christianity with the more intelligent, elevating, humanizing influences of modern Liberalism!

Now, I should be glad if you would publish this letter in your next issue, and if you hav any defense to make for arrogating all virtue and intelligence to your New Yorks and Chicagos and classing the three million of Texas among the lowest and vilest of the vile, please let us hav it.

S. G. ETHERIDGE.

Death of a Noble Liberal Woman.

YORKSHIRE, N. Y., Aug. 2, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Some of your readers may remember a small band of Freethinkers in Yorkshire, N. Y. For ten years, more or less, they worked together in an effort to substitute more rational teachings in place of the popular theology; and from time to time eminent speakers from the Secularist and Spiritualist ranks hav been called, when quite large numbers would assemble and afterward discuss and many times approve.

One of the oldest and earliest in the work died nearly three years ago—the gifted and brilliant speaker of the group has been called to a wider field—and now we hav to announce the loss of another most valued member.

Mrs. D. H. Clough—the name has been for years on your subscription list—died in Fredonia, N. Y., on the morning of July 26th, aged fifty years. She had passed through a serious illness of several months at her home in Yorkshire; had seemed to somewhat recuperate, and under the advice of her physician was induced to try change of scene. She went to the home of a favorit sister, where after a stay of one month she most peacefully breathed her last.

She was a woman of marked character, of a vigorous physique, and activ mentality. She possessed executiv talent to a large degree, which insured success to whatever she undertook. A most thorough housewife and skilled in the art of cookery, she delighted, with her kind husband, to dispense generous hospitalities in their capacious home, which has been many times open for lectures, afterward supplemented by bountiful repasts and social entertainment. The keen rhetoric of Remsburg and the logic of Watts filled her with enthusiasm; and herself was always ready to defend any cause she might espouse, however unpopular, generally to the discomfiture of an opponent. No child ever called her mother, but she really gave of an abundant mother-nature to a number of children who in some way lacked for parental care. A foster-daughter for eight impressible years under her roof, in intimate and loving companionship, livs to pay tribute in a beautiful and growing womanhood. On the 27th of July the body of our friend in its burial casket, and followed by groups of friends, was borne from the railway station and placed in the flower-garlanded home. Loving hands had been at work and no traces of loneliness or neglect were visible. Open house for all was kept until after the hour, when, in the midst of a throng of sorrowful faces, a simple service of organ-music and reading was conducted by the friends, when we bore her to the grave.

Heartfelt sympathy is extended on every hand to the husband in his broken home, while her memory will long be fragrant among the many who knew and loved her.

OLIVE DALEY SHERMAN.

Rejected Communication.

PORT HURON, MICH., Aug. 2, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We hav a large number of Liberals, but they hesitate about telling their honest thoughts in regard to Christian hypocrisy, for the reason that the church is in the majority, hence it is popular to float with the current. A sky-pilot came here some days ago and stated in a public address that Infidels and the ungodly filled the prisons, jails, asylums, and penitentiaries, hence were a burden on Christian people. I at once denounced it as a falsehood, and wrote the inclosed letter to the common council, which it was unanimously voted by the solons should be thrown in the waste-basket, and this appears on the records of the city of Port Huron, Mich. Alderman Taylor, a bigot of the orthodox style, tried to prevent the letter from being read at all, but did not succeed.

The danger of this church business is that they profess to make people better, when in truth and in fact they are doing their best to make strife, trouble, and confusion. The moment any person asks to hav them prove their assertions, he is styled a crank; they will say, "The Lord never intended to hav such a record kept of the criminal class."

The church has made the laws, and pays a premium to breed thieves, prostitutes, blind, deaf, and dumb human creatures. Many who read this letter may not believe this to be true, but in this state we hav a state industrial school for girls, a reform school for boys, a blind school, and a deaf and dumb school for mutes, all supported by the taxpayers at large. Any parents who can prove their girl is a prostitute can hav her sent to this school and kept there until she is twenty-one years of age; taught the church creed, "Jesus paid it all;" and when the girls leave the institution they find they hav been deceived, at once break down and go to keeping fashionable houses of ill fame. The boys are kept until they are twenty-one years old, filled with church lies and slush, learned all the science of chemistry and the flexibility of all kinds of metals, and are warranted to go through a safe in four hours providing they are let alone. The reason is that when they go to anyone for employment and say that they are reform-school graduates, not one of the hypocrits in a hundred will giv them employment. Bread must be had, and they become gentlemanly burglars, while the sky-pilots bewail the crimes from the cowards' barricade, when they hav been the cause of all the woes. Now, it costs from $500 to $1,000 for each one of these victims to graduate from these schools. No one can get there unless they hav the record of the thief or prostitute, which is positiv proof of my position in this matter. The church is master of a show where rotten apples take the prize; sound ones are nowhere. I tried to get this letter published by the local papers here, but not one editor dare swing the article, and one of them declared no paper would dare to publish such an article in this free nation. He did not know there was one paper in this country that took no stock in sin, salvation, or blue beetles. Would they learn the victims of church deceit to be students of nature, which says that the whole Christian doctrin is a lie on its face, that each man and woman must pay for their own transgression, I would not complain; but that is not their game, te allow the truth to be told.

Hoping you will giv this a place in THE TRUTH SEEKER, with the inclosed letter, I remain, Your obedient servant,

W. E. LEONARD.

PORT HURON, July 9, 1891.

TO THE HON. JOHN MCILLAIN AND COMMON COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF PORT HURON, Gentlemen: It has been charged for the past one hundred years by every two-cent Prohibition preacher that Infidels and Freethinkers fill the jails, poorhouses, lunatic asylums, and prisons, and to test this matter I must respectfully ask that your honorable body instruct the police judge, H. J. Robeson, Esq., to ask every person who is charged with crime to state what church they belong to. A record is kept of where they come from, how much money they hav, whether married or single, but what church they were reared in is religiously omitted.

In all sincerity I would respectfully ask that you start the list with the arrest of the deacon of the Prohibition church on Lapeer avenue, and call it tally No. 1.

Yours with great respect, providing you grant my request, W. E. LEONARD.

P. S.—Jesus Christ was crucified betwixt two thieves, but the record does not state to what church they belonged in their day and generation; hence, the custom established then has been continued unto this date. I want it reversed. Yours, W. E. L.

Divorce.

LETCHER, CAL., June 25, 292.

MR. EDITOR: I hav seen the symposium on divorce in the San Francisco Examiner. I hav carefully read these sayings of the seven wise men of our time on this leading subject and factor of civilization, but no word was given by a woman on what really concerns her the most.

W. C. Morrow, author, givs the best view of the causes and tendencies of divorces, which is the striving of the heart and affections for their natural birthright of freedom, which woman more than man has been cheated out of for a mess of pottage—a subterfuge of laws and customs which hav intimidated and enslaved her body and soul. Women, from the strong love of home and children, hav done all they could under the despotisms of governments and the false teachings of the church to create ideal homes and foster filial affections. But what has been their reward? Governments hav taken their husbands and sons from them, compelling them to go to war and kill each other for mere difference of opinion or belief; and when rendered destitute thereby, and perhaps made widows, if not deprived of all their sons, they are left to struggle on as best they can, government only caring for the wives of officers in high rank.

I shall ever remember one such widow during the last war, who had returned to her two coffins and the emaciated form of her oldest son, who pointed at the coffins, saying: "Mother, here I am, but there are James and John!" Talk about patriotism to that mother! Even with the stoicism of the Grecian matron who told her son to bring back his shield or be borne home on it, it but shows the barbarism of governments not wise and humane enough to see and know that war of itself—the killing of one another—never did or can make a right. It only destroys life and property and weakens the ties of love and of home, and tramps are mostly made up of discharged and poorly paid soldiers.

Women are not rebelling so much against marriage, or true mating, as against raising large families that the state may take from them, under various pretenses, and punish and kill, without the mothers having the power of shielding them from penalties for crimes which they know are often the results of women having no voice in making the laws under which they must liv and abide.

No act, however good, is of moral value when done from coercion or from fear. No one is made better in his nature by restraint or punishment, though dangerous persons must be caged as are ferocious animals, but all true goodness must come from freedom of the mind and its voluntary acts and expressions, or progress is impossible. There needs to be a change in love-making more in accordance with nature. The female should lead in this law of attraction and selection, and no tie should ever bind only so long as they both shall love, not shall liv, for this has proved a failure and is a libel on human nature.

It is true that many who marry are often like the heathen in his blind devotion, and find they hav been bowing down, not to a divinity, but to stocks and stones; and when such realize their mistake—which they cannot retract—the best they can do is to get divorced and try to do better next time, or let that experience be enough in the matrimonial line. But separation should not be made in anger or in haste, but more deliberately than when uniting at first. It would be better if more reason and deep thought were bestowed before marriage than so much bitter repentance afterward.

But the true ideal life will only be attained by a state of perfect liberty between the sexes to choose their mates and to select them wisely as well as to love them dearly. As it takes several generations to outgrow antenatal conditions or wrongs inherited from birth, education must begin with the child in its infancy.

The hope and progress of the race lies in the power of the mind to idealize, as this is the faculty that most distinguishes man from the brute. Without this the world would possess neither loveliness nor poetic beauty. From the natural and loving union of the sexes flows the pure river of life, which should not be obstructed in its course so as to make it overflow into cesspools of iniquity and impurity.

Woman's work and testimony are needed in this matter of divorce and marriage relations. L. HUTCHINSON.

Reasons for Thinking the Soul Immortal.

MILES CITY, MONT., July 27, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We see the farmer go forth in the morning to plow, and after the ground is properly tilled, we see him sow the wheat, which, when ripe, is cut, threshed, and made into flour, from which are made bread, pies, and cakes for his (man's) use to sustain life. We see two trees in an orchard that yield two kinds of fruit, and man grafts a slip off one on the other and as a result a third kind of fruit is produced. Likewise, also, flowers' fragrance is pleasing to the nostrils. We notice that in their wild state a similarity of form and general make-up exists among horses and cows. Man uses horses to transport his burdens, to ease and facilitate his labor, and, on account of different requirements, has bred several styles of horses. He desires milk, butter, cheese, and beef, so he keeps cows, and as one kind produces richer milk but less beef than another, he has by breeding produced desirable variety. We take into consideration that unless man made use of these things they would be useless and their existence unreasonable. We notice that we liv in a progressiv age. New inventions are constantly being made. We call them new, while in reality there is nothing new upon which our eye for the first time rests. I think it unreasonable to suppose that an individual made the world, as we would naturally desire to know where he was when he made the world and of what it was made. Instead of that theory, we will say that what is, always was, and always will be. That change takes place, but total destruction never. Under a theory of that kind birth and death would not be. Our bodies are placed in the ground and go to form gases, liquids, and to sustain and continue vegetable life. But while we are considering reasonable things, let us stop and see what we are ourselvs. The Bible says God is everywhere. Man is, or has been, or will be, in every place; but what is man? Man is a power unseen but universal. Man's body is simply a mechanical principle used to assist—what? God! In my estimation the small voice that comes in with a warning when we do wrong, that causes us to contemplate our ill-advised deeds with misery, is a part of the unseen force that rules the universe.

I think the Bible is worthy of study, as it contains some logical features; while yet again we can by comparison see what education and science are doing for the human race.

I say all Christians are cowards, and in the face of the fact that my mother is a Christian. Many people get offended when I say they are cowards if Christians, and when I say five-tenths of the ministers are fools and the other five-tenths are liars. Dr. Talmage preaches because his sermons are cabled abroad and published far and wide. He loves notoriety, he desires publicity; he obtains both.

The Bible says: "Resist not evil." Why? If you were sure your neighbor would do you no injury, if your neighbor was sure you were not going to injure him, if mutual respect of the Golden Rule existed, there would be no necessity for a resistance of evil.

The Catholic doctrin has done more to retard civilization and insnare the ignorant than any other one thing on earth. It is religion that aids divorce suits, that corrupts politics, that helps the cause of rum, that retards education, that fills asylums, that assists crime, and sends money to the heathen while want, crime, misery, and ignorance are fostered before our eyes.

It is reasonable to suppose that all things are created for a purpose, useful, wise, complete. Although a person who faints knows nothing while in the faint, it seems unreasonable to suppose that this supreme power in man should perish with the departure of our breath. When we see a cow or horse dead, we would not suppose they were to hav future life, as their field of usefulness is done when they are unavailable.

It seems strange that God should sanction a defiled marital relation, should encourage drunkenness and debauchery, should attribute all sin to women, and should at all times place them in a questionable light.

I am not a believer in an individual God, in heaven, or in hell except we make it; but, while I am not able to define it, I believe our existence is as indestructible as the materials with which we are surrounded.

Do unto others as you would be done by, and by careful elimination of evil receive the commendation of your own judgment and the respect and admiration of your fellow-men. E. R. AVERILL.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight.
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Across the Atlantic.

From Glasgow to Edinburgh.—Scottish Scenery.—Stirling Castle.—Edinburgh and its Castles.—Ancient Abbeys.—Condition of Women.

We left the beautiful Central Hotel in Glasgow on the 12th of July, and the ride in the cars was through a charmingly picturesque country, past Dumbarton castle, built on a rock 560 feet high, where William Wallace was once a prisoner, and many fields arrayed in living green, in which we observed women hoeing and weeding. They also were working in the hay-field. We also passed through Ballach. You remember that song, "Braes o' Balloch"—well, we saw the very "braes" in the old Scottish town. At Balloch pier we embarked on the little steamer that plies the waters of Loch Lomond. The wooded knolls and rich valleys, the blue mists on the precipitous mountains, the rich, deep shades of green seen nowhere else as in Scotland, make a vivid and impressiv picture.

The mountain streams hav cut deep gorges as they coursed down the sides of the hills that the clouds kiss so lovingly, and the velvety green is spongy and mossy. Deep recesses, thick forests, and abrupt angles seem fitting abodes of sprites and wizards, and as we thought of the old stories as told by Scott in his novels, suddenly we come to the spot where Rob Roy was kept a prisoner.

At Rowardennan one may stop if he wishes and ascend the mountain, Ben Lomond, hight 3,192 feet. But we went on to Inversnaid. We ride six miles in coaches through the loveliest Highland scenery. Occasionally we pass the homes of the peasantry. Poor abodes they are. In some instances the stable is attached to the house, and the cows can put their heads through an opening and lick the faces of the human sleepers in the next apartment. Heather bells and other wild flowers adorn the mountain and wayside, and present a lovely effect in the mingling of their gay colors.

We dismount and sail on Loch Katrine, after a lunch at the little hotel on the shore.

The steamer that hurries us along through wild and striking scenes, that Scott has already made familiar to our eyes, is called Rob Roy—a fitting name, for we pass the spot where he lived, and also the birthplace of Helen McGregor.

High up in glorious majesty are the peaks of old Ben Venue and Ben A'an. In a short time we come to Ellen's isle, a sweet, romantic place, where one would like to tarry longer than an hour. It is a bower of green with pink heather and wild Scotch roses all over it. Again we land and ride through gorgeous scenery till we come to the Trossachs Hotel. After a brief rest we mount the coaches again, always by ladder, and away we go for a long ride through the Trossach country.

How can I describe the Trossachs? I cannot. Words are incomplete to show you the vivid picture presented all the way through that ten miles of mystic, magnificent scenery that Scott has immortalized in the "Lady of the Lake."

Yonder is the pass of Bealach-nam-bo, or Cattle pass, and over there the Goblin's cave, Ben Venu, Ben A'an, and Craigmore are in sight all along as we go. A little way on is the place where Fitz-James lost his "gallant gray" horse. Scron Armailite rises eleven hundred and fifty good feet in the air, and we ride over the brig o' Turk, where "the headmost horseman rode alone."

The remains of an old fort is pointed out, and just opposit is "Samson's pudding stone," a huge boulder, standing directly upon the tiptop of the hill. How came it there? Tradition says, Samson of Bible strength threw it there one morning before he had had his porridge! You can believe it or not, just as you fancy.

Landrick Mead, over there, this was the muster-place of the Clan Alpine, and an admirable place it is, too. Riding on a short distance, we see Coilantogle ford, the spot of the combat between Fitz-James and Roderick Dhu. How I wish I could go into detail here, but time and space fail me.

We reached the cleanly town of Callender a little after 3 P.M., quite chilled, for the wind blows free and chilly in the Trossachs.

From there we rode to Stirling, and stopped to see its famous castle, situated all the way up a steep hill. We saw the old church where John Knox once preached, the municipal building with a bronze statue of William Wallace in a niche in front, and then we were at

THE C STLE.

Behind its gloomy walls is the path down which old King James V. used to go when he visited his people disguised as an ordinary citizen. What fun he must hav had playing subject instead of king, and berating himself, as well as getting at the opinions of others! He was known on those occasions as "Ballangeich." He, as well as James II., was born in this time-worn, ivy-covered ruin.

A splendid view of the country below is afforded from the battlements of Stirling castle, and of the river Forth in its windings, three hundred feet below, the river of which the guide said, "If you follow it as the crow flies, it is five miles to the sea, but measured by its course, it is nineteen miles!" From this point of view one can look upon the scenes of twelve battlefields of the past, one of William Wallace's encounters, and Bannockburn, where the brave Bruce achieved Scotland's independence in 1314.

I shall never, never forget the panorama spread before my delighted eyes. Roderick Dhu's reply to James came forcibly to my mind as I stood there:

Saxon, from yonder mountain high,
I marked thee send delighted eye
Far to the south and east, where lay,
Extended in succession gay,
Deep, waving fields, and pastures green,
With gentle slopes and groves between.

All true, and it is a sweet picture, from which one hates to turn away.

I shuddered on entering the stone dungeon where Rob Roy was once confined, and the little room where Queen Mary was at one time held a prisoner. Stirling castle was her favorit home. I stepped into the Douglass room, as it is called, for here the earl of Douglass met James II., and under promis of safe-conduct, too, but in a passion of anger James stabbed him and his nobles finished the murder, and then threw his dead body to the ground below from the one small window in the room. The grounds are now filled with flowers and are called "the Douglass garden." Stirling castle is full of interest, but is now used as a barracks for soldiers. In the old churchyard of Grayfriars I found an epitaph on an old sun-dial, curiously appropriate. It said,

I mark time; dost thou?
I am a shadow; so art thou.

EDINBURGH.

At length we are "within a mile of Edinboro' town"—classic Edinboro'—and a few minutes brings us into the city itself, which stands out prominently, for a part of it is built upon a high and solid rock four hundred and forty-three feet above sea level.

We are at the Royal Hotel, Princess street, nearly opposit the imposing monument of Sir Walter Scott. The monument is a wonder of peaks and pinnacles, of Gothic architecture, and contains a life-like and life-size statue of Sir Walter and his faithful dog.

How lovely is this Princess street. Alexander Smith has written of it: "The puppets of the busy, many-colored hour move about on its pavement, while across the ravine time has piled up the old town, ridge upon ridge, gray as a rocky coast, washed and worn by the foam of centuries; peaked and jagged by gable and roof; windowed from basement to cope; the whole surmounted by St. Giles's airy crown. The new is there looking at the old. Two times are brought face to face and yet are separated by a thousand years. The castle, too, looks down upon the city, as if out of another world, stern, with all its peacefulness, its garniture of trees, its slopes of grass. How deep the shadow which it throws at noon over the garden at its feet where the children play! How grand when giant bulk and towery crown blacken against sunset!"

In the old part of the city are old, old houses, from six to eleven stories high, and the paths leading to them are very, very narrow, most of them. The old drawbridges are still here, though not much in use now, but it seems odd to see the "closes" and "wynds" that we hav read about. On the east of Grass market are the Salisbury crags, five hundred and forty-seven feet above the sea. Arthur's Seat, of which you hav read, rises clear and bold eight hundred and twenty-two feet in the air. A beautiful valley, part of it a park with flowers and shrubbery, lies between the old and new Edinburgh. The city is full of interest on every side, but the first place I visited was the old Edinburgh castle, the Castrum Puellarum of olden times, so called because the daughters of the Pictish kings lived there before marriage. How lofty it is, built on a high, precipitous rock, over four hundred feet high. Imagin a wonderful mass of gray, basaltic rock, crowned by a stone building, 300 feet wide and 350 feet long. It is thought to hav been founded about the year 617, and has been the scene of romance, diplomacy, captivities, sieges, love, and crime. It is not to be wondered at that Scott and others could write and poets sing amid such romantic surroundings. It has been held by the English and Scotch in various times in its strange history. Here is pointed out the place where Dundee climbed to hold a conference with the duke of Gordon one time, when he was going to raise the Highland laddies to help King James II. You remember the song "Bonnie Dundee:"

Dundee he is mounted, he rides up the street,
The bells they ring backward, the drums they are beat;
But the provost, deuce it! said, "Just e'en let him be,
For the town is well rid of that de'il o' Dundee."

But Dundee rode onward, with the words:

"If there's lords in the Southland, there's chiefs in the North;
There are wild, dunnie wassals, three thousand times three,
Will cry, "Hey for the bonnets o' Bonnie Dundee!"

I was much interested in the apartment called Queen Mary's room, where was born James II. In the old crown room is the crown she wore and the regalia of Scotland—a crown, scepter, and sword of state. These regalia were recovered by Walter Scott in 1818, after they had been lost for over a hundred years.

In the open court a company of soldiers were drilling, and the castle is now used for barracks.

We looked upon the house where Hume wrote the history of England, and near by is the house where Burns slept the first night he was in Edinburgh. We stopped a moment or two in St. Giles's church, and saw where Darnley sat when Knox preached a sermon against the rulers of the kingdom designating them as "women and boys;" and looked up at the old bell that tolled two hours when our Lincoln died, and two hours also when Garfield passed away.

Edinburgh is proud of its old castles, and no one should leave the city without a visit to them.

Old Holyrood is a wonderful pile with which are connected many stirring events of Scottish history. It was here that Queen Mary contracted that foolish marriage with Lord Darnley, and we were shown the stone staircase up which the conspirators went to murder Rizzio, and the room where he was murdered clinging to Mary for protection. Here Mary was later married to Bothwell, and here were held the stormy interviews with John Knox, who upbraided her for being a Catholic and made her cry by his rough speech.

I was greatly interested in Mary's apartments, whose walls are hung with faded tapestries of three hundred years ago, delineating the fall of Phaeton. There is a portrait of Mary at eighteen, and another of Queen Elizabeth, and Henry VIII. The old state bed upon which she slept, with its carvings, dusty, moldy, time-stained, tells its pitiful story.

Adjoining the once magnificent castle is the old abbey, founded in 1128. Darnley and Rizzio, besides other eminent persons, are buried here. The roof is gone and the glad sunlight pours its streaming gold in upon the old ruin, that in its decay is picturesque in the extreme. Yet the blur of superstition is over it, and one can almost hear and see the abject moans of submission and tears that bewailed its own subjection to idols unyielding and relentless as death.

We went from Edinburgh to Melrose. We slept in the little hotel next the abbey itself. I shall never forget my room overlooking the old ruin, with its cherry furnishings and pale-green hangings. In the night I looked out on the gray arches where the grass and flowers were growing, the roof of the old structure all gone, and where the jackdaws make their home. Almost under my window, which was open, were the old graves of the dead and gone. Bethia said, "Won't their ghosts come in at the window?" I wished they would, but never a ghost made its appearance. The next day we went inside the romantic old place, beautiful in its crumbling decay, with its arches and peaks, its vaulted chambers, tombs, and secret winding staircase. It has an arched Gothic aisle fifty feet long and sixty feet high. A white dove sat on one of the minarets as we entered and looked at us curiously. There is the spot where the heart of Robert Bruce was buried, and the earl of Douglass. There are statues of David I., and Matilda, his wife, and nobody knows whom else. There are quaint and curious carvings, legends written in stone that none can read. A great east window that must hav been a marvel of beauty in its day, still remains. The nave is 258 feet long by 79 feet in breadth. There are Freemasons' symbols here and there, as in other old abbeys, and what these mystic brethren had to do with Catholicism is more than I can tell, for these architectural ruins were built by Catholics in the days of their power.

The difference between an abbey and a cathedral, I should say, is that the one is occupied by monks and nuns, while the other is the place of worship simply.

Melrose abbey, when new, must hav been a splendid piece of work, whose builders and decorators knew their business well. Now time is busy with its destruction, and after seven hundred and more years it is time for it to die, with all its fading superstitions.

From Melrose we drove to Abbotsford, the home of Walter Scott, as you know. It is now a museum of relics and curiosities. It is owned by his great-granddaughter, who keeps some of the apartments as nearly as possible as the great novelist and poet left them. The library of twenty thousand volumes still remains, and I sat in the old chair that he used, but there was no time to gather inspiration, although I looked out upon the river Tweed from the same windows from which he looked.

From Abbotsford we drove to Dryburgh abbey, near the entrance of which we stopped and bought bread and cheese and milk of a Scotch woman who was baking "scones" by an open fire. She and four others, her family, all lived in the one room, with bare floor, and beds built in the side of the wall. But she was happy and did not wish to come to America. Sir Walter Scott is buried at the entrance of the abbey, or rather his body is, but he livs immortal in his works.

But that strange old stone abbey—what a place! arched, chiseled, with winding ways and Gothic peaks. We registered our names in the "chapter-house," a dim, damp place, partly underground, whose hollow echoes startle me even now as I recall them. Not far away is the dark, low dungeon, with the hole in the wall where refractory monks, as was told us, were punished by placing the hands in the cavity and having them kept there by an iron wedge. No doubt there were chambers of horrors in the old place aforetime where many a heretic has suffered tortures untold in history.

I am glad the roof in many places has disappeared and we can see the blue sky overhead.

The cemetery is old and curious, with many stone coffins here and there. The grass grows green over the old graves, the ivy creeps along the walls, flowers flourish, and an old yew tree, said to be seven hundred years of age, still is green and flourishing.

Oh, I must tell you of a beautiful drive to the new frith of Firth bridge before we left Edinburgh, that cost $12,000,000—the bridge I mean. We rode past Lord Rosenberry's estate, twenty-five miles one way by twelve the other. The contrast between the lofty and lowly is great. There is no chance for one to rise here. The soil is rich; the shades of the green earth are the most beautiful I hav ever seen; I never looked upon lovelier roses than those that grow in Scotland. But, amid the beauties and wealth that Nature has spread with lavish hand, there is poverty and distress amid these romantic crags and hills, these sloping fields and moors. Here I hav seen women working in the fields, in the hot sun, all day for a shilling; working in shops a week for seven shillings; working in hotels for $75 a year. I hav seen women here bearing burdens on their backs, fastened to their bodies and their foreheads by a leathern strap—aged women, whose wrinkled faces tell plaintivly of woes they do not utter.

It is said that fifteen men own nearly the whole of Scotland, and hence the poor must be always poor. It is not pleasant to note these conditions. I am sorry they exist. But I like the romantic and picturesque country. I like the hearty Scotch nature, their love of education; and the fact that they laid the foundation for a common-school system as early as 1695 should not be forgotten.

But, there is no place like America, even to the Scotch. And I shall always think of the expression of the old Scotchman, "America! ah, America is God's own country!" This was his highest compliment, and meant much; but he should hav said, "It is the people's country!"

SUSAN H. WIXON.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Life of Thomas Paine,

WITH A

History of His Literary, Political, and Religious Career in America, France, and England.

By MONCURE DANIEL CONWAY,

Author of "Omitted Chapters of History Disclosed in the Life and Papers of Edmund Randolph," "George Washington and Mount Vernon," "Washington's Rules of Civility," etc.

To Which is added a Sketch of Paine by William Cobbett.

No real biography of Paine has ever appeared. The so-called Lives of Paine have been mainly the controversial work of pamphleteers, turning chiefly on his religious heresies. Paine was in his fifty-eighth year before he published anything concerning religion, and before that time he had acted an important part in revolutionary movements in the United States, England, and France. But in the religious conflict initiated by him, his political services and military career hav been but inadequately considered. A certain historical ostracism has buried in the archives of various countries a large mass of documents containing records of paramount interest and importance. Mr. Conway has personally searched such records, in Europe and America, and has obtained from these fresh light, not only on Paine, but on various eminent figures in American and European history with whom he was associated. A large amount of unpublished correspondence has been included in the volumes.

Mr. Conway says in his Preface: "In the laborious work of searching out the real Paine I hav found a general appreciation of its importance, and it will be seen in the following pages that generous assistance has been rendered by English clergymen, by official persons in Europe and America, by persons of all beliefs and no beliefs. In no instance have I been impeded by any prejudice, religious or political. The curators of archives, private collectors, owners of important documents bearing on the subject, have welcomed my effort to bring the truth to light."

Two vols., royal oct., gilt top, portraits, $5.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

THE EVOLUTION OF

THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Books by Helen H. Gardene

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price. cloth. $1: paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents.

PUSHED BY UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.

Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full, index 446pp., $1.50.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Matcrialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Idea of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

News of the Week.

THE Homestead strike has been settled by the Carnegie Co. granting most of the men's demands.

ZOLA is collecting material for a novel on the pilgrimages to the miracle-working shrine of Lourdes.

THE Goodland Artificial Rain Co. made a failure of its attempt to produce rain at Council Grove, Kan.

VIOLENCE at a switchmen's strike at Buffalo, N. Y., has necessitated the presence of two militia regiments.

IN Iowa, Roman Catholic members of the Knights of Pythias are agitated over having received notice of excommunication if they do not quit that society.

BISHOP HEALY has sent the school board of Portland. Me., a letter, apropos of the erection of a parochial school, in which he says that "morality without religion is not to be expected."

A REPORT from Sing Sing prison, N. Y., says: "The convicts read novels or books on religion. It is rare that any one of them reads technical works which would be of benefit to him afterward."

IN Germany, those who testified against Buschoff, the Jew who was tried and acquitted on a charge of murdering Christian children to use their blood in religious sacrifices, will be prosecuted for perjury.

A LONDON dispatch says: "The British public is just now shuddering at the horrible shadow of cholera which is spreading over all Europe. Unless this disease is checked it means America in time."

AMONG the attendants at the Festival of St. Anne at her shrine in Canada are hundreds of diseased persons who hav journeyed thither, many from remote localities, to be cured by the relic of the Virgin Mary's mother.

AT Austrabad, Persia, Mohammedan priests hav been preaching that the cholera is due to liquor-drinking. Mobs gathered before the churches and proceeded to liquor-shops and wrecked them, until they were suppressed by troops.

THE minister of the Peruvian government at Washington has been asked by Missionary Penzotti, of the American Bible Society, for compensation to the extent of $530 for Bibles and other property destroyed by the Catholic populace of Ayacucho, Peru.

A MISSIONARY complains that the church at Mashoupa, Africa, has fallen to ruins, because the Kaffirs when asked to repair it waxed wroth and said that God might mend his own house. One old man who received a blanket for attending services said when the dole was stopped, "No more blanket, no more hallelujah."

AT Rome on the 7th Clerical associations marched in procession to the Pinciana gardens to place a wreath on a bust of Columbus. Liberals bearing national flags tried to place themselvs at their head. A fight ensued, in which the anti-clericals shouted for Garibaldi and Giordano Bruno, and the Clericals for their religion and pope. The bust was upset. Police quelled the affray.

HAROLD FREDERIC, the distinguished writer on international matters, says that the Protestant attack on the Catholic mission of Uganda was prearranged. "Bishop Tucker," he says, "returned to England solely and avowedly to raise money and men for the task of 'knocking out' the Catholic missions of Uganda. Bishop Tucker at a conference at Hatfield House, and at the foreign office and elsewhere, to those in authority talked of nothing but the necessity of combating the influence of the Catholics in the Nyanza region, and made clear to his hearers that he viewed the contingency of using force to this end with entire complacency."

THE cholera in Russia is increasing in violence. In the region of the Caucasus alone there hav been fifty thousand deaths in the last thirty days. Dead bodies lie unburied for days, spreading the disease. As there is such imperfect sanitation to check the cholera's progress, it is expected to kill vast multitudes before abating. Moscow is without sewers, each house having its own cesspool. That city has been deserted by those having means. Jarosslaff, on the Volga, gets its water from the river just below the discharge of a sewer from a hospital. Medical men once secretly ordered the remedy of this evil, but the government interposed and prevented them. St. Petersburg sanitary inspectors beginning their work are finding the interiors of palatial-looking houses to be in the condition of pigsties. The deaths from cholera throughout Russia on the 7th alone were reported at 2,177.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price. 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Send Twenty-five Cents
FOR
MADHOUSES AND ABUSE OF LUNATICS

And get the Plain Dealer—a Liberal weekly paper—free for six months.
Address ELMINA D. SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED. A Work proving Christianity a Fiction. Most Startling Revelations of the Nineteenth Century. Send Address for Prospectus to ORIENTAL PUBLISHING CO., P.O.Box 446, Philadelphia, Pa.

To Regulate the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABULES.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

DROPSY TREATED FREE Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases called hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. 10 DAYS TREATMENT FREE by mail. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, ATLANTA, GA.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the price named.

"The Moral Teachings of Science," by Arabella B. Buckley, is No. 169 of the Humboldt Library of Science. Price, 15 cents.

Those interested in "Delsartean Physical Culture," should send 25 cents for a new pamphlet by that title, written by Carrica Le Favre, published by Fowler & Wells. It states the principles of the Delsarte school of training and givs the method of applying them.

Watts & Co., of London, hav issued for the Agnostic Propagandist Press Committee the article contributed to the current Agnostic Annual by Professor Huxley. It deals with the "Possibilities and Impossibilities" of thaumaturgy, or miracle-working. Price, 10 cents.

The Warfare of Science papers, by Dr. Andrew D. White, are continued in the August Popular Science Monthly with a chapter on Geography, in which are given the various mythological and theological ideas concerning the form of the earth and the proper mode of representing it that hav prevailed in ancient and medieval times.

S. J. Matthews, of Pine Bluff, Ark., has published a 10-cent pamphlet with this title: "No Safety, but Dire Danger, in Being a Christian." It is a somewhat rugged but forcible refutation of the "safest side" argument of the Christian debaters, and ought to be dressed up and printed with fewer errors.

No. 9 of the Social Science Library is, "Horace Greeley, Farmer, Editor, Socialist," by Charles Sotheran. It is a gossipy attempt to make all the reformers of some forty years ago who hav since acquired eminence in the literary world to hav been Socialists. It ought to be interesting reading for Mr. Dana, of the Sun, and others of his Brook Farm confreres who still liv. Price, 35 cents.

The American Psychical Society now publish a quarterly called the Psychical Review, devoted to developing interest in and giving the outcome of the society's work, which bears about the same relation to Spiritualism that "Free Religion" once bore to Freethought—a sort of kid-glove and swallowtail investigation of Spiritualistic phenomena which results chiefly in amusing the investigators. Men who already believe in "souls" and "another life" will be apt to find evidence of them. Single numbers of the Review are $1; $3 per annum. Published in Boston.

Short Stories for September contains eighteen tales, and all of them good reading, though perhaps the most noteworthy are—"The Farm Girl," selected as the winner of a monthly prize offered by the Current Literature Publishing Company; "His First Case and Last," a dramatic story by Sidney Grundy; "Love in Niffon," by K. T. Takahashi, an extremely quaint and interesting love story by a Japanese author; "A Delicate Position," one of Halevy's graceful and pretty stories; "Short Creek Dave's Conversion," a Western dialect sketch by the well-known Dan Quin; and in the famous story series, a stirring old-fashioned tale called "The Floating Beacon." Price, 25 cents.

Those who want to dive deep into the abstract abstruseness of political economy should send a dollar for Clinton Roosevelt's book, "The Science of Government Founded on Natural Law." Mr. Roosevelt is a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, as well as a lawyer of attainments, and is one of the intellectual and heretical landmarks of New York, and also a thorn in the side of Trinity church trustees, who hold the lands which he says belong to the Jans heirs. In this work Mr. Roosevelt has laid down what he conceives to be right principles and developed a scheme of application. It also contains a diagram of political science similar in form to those Mr. Wakeman produces occasionally after Comte and Andrews.

"The Hygienic Treatment of Consumption," by M. L. Holbrook, is a useful book for all suffering from that terrible scourge. His main idea is for patients to gradually enlarge chest and lungs by living out of doors, under proper conditions, and pay due and intelligent attention to food and clothing. In our opinion, there is no question as to his being right on the out-of-doors prescription, however he may be as to the diet he recommends. On this latter subject he, like Dr. Buckley, who also wrote a valuable treatis on this subject, allows his prejudices and business prepossessions to influence him in decrying what others hav found to be exceedingly helpful. But notwithstanding this the book is one of much worth, and we recommend it to anyone suffering from lung troubles. The price ($2) is a little high, but one used to paying doctor's bills will in the end find it low.

The usual complement of good things, say the publishers, is to be found in the July number of Current Literature, in spite of the fact that the season drives most of the magazines into the realm of fiction. It will be seen that the scientific department has demanded more space than usual and offers an enticing array of interesting things for those who are practically inclined, among which are to be found articles upon the curiosities of the Depths of the Sea, the wonderful buildings of Chicago, The Little Men and Giants of the World as measured in inches, and so on. The sportsman will be delighted with the account of the Jew fish, a gamey monster of the Pacific coast, while lovers of art will note with pleasure the account of the discovery of the tomb of Aristotle. These are but a tithe of the articles of the month which appeal to the taste of the general reader, or the person who wishes to keep pace with the latest phases of research and thought.

"Bits of Inspiration from the Bible" is a pamphlet of sixteen pages, published by H. T. Knight, of Milan, Mo. The following letter tells all about it: "Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER: You remember I told you that I had agreed to pay to the church $15 when the preacher would read scripture forty-five minutes to his congregation—myself to select same. Well, the committee said nothing suited them better; so terms were agreed upon, and in order to make matters as convenient as possible for the reverend I got such verses printed in pamphlet form as I desired that his audience and himself should become familiar with. Yesterday one of that same soliciting committee told me they did not want that nasty book of mine. Guess he thought it was obscene, but it isn't; it would be barred from the mails if it were, and Tyner says it is admissible as mail matter. Every verse but the last one is from the Bible, see?"

"God's Image in Man," by Henry Wood, published by Lee & Shepard, Boston, is a book that probably few of our readers will care for. "It consists," we allow the publishers to tell us—for a glance shows it to be a work which our anti-metaphysical bias inclines us to consider of not sufficient value to read—"of graphic pictures of advanced religious thought in prose form, but of poetic quality. It is a series of visions through the intuition rather than an argument. It separates the external and dogmatic from what is internal and intrinsic. The different modes of divine revelation, the universality of law, race solidarity, evolution, and the present great transition from the old to the new in spiritual and metaphysical science are presented with a glow which is thoroughly unconventional." In other and plainer words it is the visionary guesswork of one inclined to mysticism and metaphysics, whose instincts hav been perverted by Christianity. Price, $1.

"The Infallibility of the Bible" was written and published by J. H. Pratt, of Spring Hill, Kan., for gratuitous distribution, but we would recommend those sending for it to inclose a stamp. Mr. Pratt thus explains his reasons—which are sound indeed—for printing it: "So long as man is made to believe that he has a word of God, he accepts its data, though opposed to reason and common sense; but the most benighted readily see that any witness giving contradictory testimony impeaches himself, and is, therefore, not to be relied upon. If this alleged word of God, upon cross-examination, is found to be plainly contradictory, what conclusion can a sane man arrive at, except that such alleged word is not the pure word of any infallible being? And this is why I issue this little pamphlet: To endeavor to show that the book known as the 'Protestant Bible'—King James' version—by its own internal evidence clearly impeaches itself; and that such Bible, therefore, is NOT 'the word' of an infallible God, by plenary inspiration or otherwise. And further, that such book is not reliable as a word of authority."

Those of our readers who recollect the weekly spirit communications from ancient worthies and unworthies which appeared in J. M. Roberts's Spiritualistic journal, Mind and Matter, possess a good idea of the contents of a book called "Antiquity Unveiled," published by the Oriental Publishing Company of Philadelphia. Mr. Roberts received them through medium James M. Bliss, if our memory fails not. The form is the purported introduction of himself by some spirit, Apollonius or Zoroaster, for instance, who describes himself in a style closely resembling the extant biographical dictionaries and cyclopedias, followed by comments by Mr. Roberts. There never was any need therefore of introducing spirits, and we notice the book as purely the work of human brains.

We agree with the statement in the prospectus of this work: "Christianity is either a great deception, deliberately practiced upon the unsuspecting mind, or a divinely inspired religion as is claimed by its teachers; that Jesus Christ is either what he is claimed to be, or a mythical character who is being held up before the world as the savior, but whose existence has no foundation in fact. If it is true, that Jesus Christ is a real entity, enough unquestionable evidence of his earthly life and teachings should be extant to dispel any doubts that might arise in the mind. If on the other hand, it can be shown that no such person lived at the time he was represented to hav lived, that the teachings brought down to us, claimed to be his, belonged to other times and related to other characters, that the rites, ceremonies, creeds, and doctrins pertaining to Christianity, were formulated by the priesthood for self-aggrandizement, what intelligent mind can longer doubt that Christianity is a monstrous delusion instead of a divinely inspired religion!" And if all the statements in the book are true (we hav not verified them) Mr. Roberts, with the help of Mr. Bliss, has made out a good case against the prevailing religion. The book is bristling with points, deals with a wide range of subjects, and quotes extensivly from well-known authors. It is a compilation of not a little value, and though lacking originality, will greatly aid the investigator into the origin of Christianity and show him where the early Christians found the myths and rites which they adopted and relabeled, and which the Western world now knows as Christianity. The price of the book is $1.50.

Our opinion of the chapters composing Mr. Thomas Ellwood Longshore's new work, "The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion," has been already expressed by the publication of many of them in THE TRUTH SEEKER at various times. They are scholarly and erudite articles, conveying a great deal of information, and are exceedingly well calculated for those Christians of an inquiring turn but who shrink from such strong meat as the "Age of Reason," or Heston's pictures. Mr. Longshore is an evoluted Quaker, possessing the traditional gentleness of that sect, of broad mind and studious bent. He has read extensivly the critical works of the Rational school of theology, thought deeply as to their bearing on current theology, and formulated his conclusions, as well as given the grounds for them, in this book. The full title, which is an index to its contents, is "The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion Contrasted with Ancient Myths and Miracles as Factors in Human Evolution." To which he has appended "Other Essays on Reform," and we hav published them in a handsome volume of over five hundred pages.

The subjects dealt with are: The Old Testament. The New Testament. The Revised New Testament. What Is Religion? Our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Salvation by Christ; "the Christ" Interpreted. Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Who Made God? Our Lord God. The Human Soul. Immortality of Man. What Shall We Do to Be Saved? What Is Spirit? Divine Revelations. Religious Faith. Our "Holy" Faith. Our Holy Religion. Origin of Our Religion. Ghostology. Christian Idolatry. Fear of the Gods. Philosophy and Superstition. A Christian's Creed. Morality, Religion, Ethics. Education. Prohibition vs. Anarchism. Peace and War. Sociology—Nationalism. Thoughts on Death.

It is unnecessary for us to describe the style or epitomize the matter, as our readers know these from their own reading. Mr. H. L. Green has termed the work "a storehouse of religious information, a perfect digest of past theology, of gods and saviors, of faiths and Christian idolatry, showing us clearly the difference between a reasonable philosophy and orthodox superstition. In fact," he adds, "there is to be found in this volume a short and valuable treatis upon nearly every question connected in the remotest degree with the superstitious religions of the present or past ages. Every Freethinker will welcome the volume as a bright harbinger of sound Freethought doctrins."

We should like to reprint a great deal from the book, as in its new form it strikes us with added force, but will restrain the desire to this characterization of the church:

"The church is as certainly corrupt as the world, but it is a corruption of a more refined and subtle order, which generates a pride and sense of self-righteousness that will not submit to criticism or disparagement. The church may help those who hav fallen very low up to its level; that is the best it can do.

"If you aspire to anything beyond, you are safer, better off, outside than you are in the church. Its whole tendency and teaching will be to check, to intercept, your efforts, and hold you to its own level, for its own benefit in keeping you in its service—using you for its own support, and in diverting you from any purpose or power of thwarting it in pursuing its established church work.

"The church is but a trap to inveigle, or a sponge to absorb, the moral force of the best people into its support, blind them to its faults and defects, and prevent them from discovering its designs of keeping the moral force of society as much as possible under its control—to prevent any further development or exercise of it than can be used for its own aggrandizement and the advancement of its own lower, selfish interest and designs.

"Keep aloof from the church. Turn your attention to science, to the advanced thoughts of thinkers outside of the church; the proscribed higher class of critics, students of ethics, of the social philosophy, the educators of the world, that are far in advance of the church theology.

"They are the class that hav led the world forward, compelling the church to reluctantly fall in line with the public sentiment which they create—not to promote, but to retard their beneficent work.

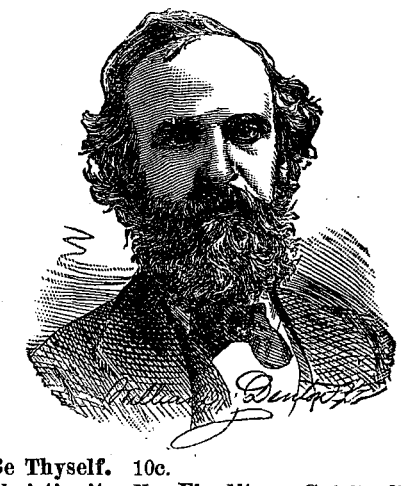
"Church organizations and morals hav always been a bulwark in the pathway of freethought; organized obstructionists and persistent opponents to any greater light or higher truth than it has seen proper to dole out to the people.

"This is true of all churches, all religious sects and organizations, let their theories or pretenses to the contrary be what they may. Eschew the church, if you hav aspirations to be anything more than the average church-member in your personal character or in usefulness to society."

As stated in our advertising columns, the price of this new book is $1 in cloth; paper, 50 cents.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.



BY CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.

Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.

Common-Sense Thoughts on the Bible. 10c.

Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.

Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.

Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.

Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.

God Proposed for Our National Constitution. 10c.

Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.

Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.

Is Spiritualism True? 10c.

Man's True Saviors. 10c.

Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.

Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.

Radical Discourses on Religious Subjects. $1 25.

Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.

Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.

Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.

What Is Right? 10c.

What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.

Who are Christians? 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

NINE-TENTHS of existing books are nonsense, and the clever books are the refutation of that nonsense.—D'Israeli.

No limits need be placed upon man's mental progress, nor need any barriers be raised to stop his researches.—Robt. C. Adams.

RELIGION has no necessary connection whatever with morality. A person may be moral without being religious, and the reverse is true that a person may be religious without being moral.—Modern Thought.

To promote the increase of natural knowledge and to forward the application of scientific methods of investigation to all the problems of life, in the conviction that there is no alleviation for the suffering of mankind, except veracity of thought and of action, and the resolute facing of the world as it is when the garment of make-believe, by which pious hands hav hidden its uglier features, is stripped off.—Huxley (Statement of his aims in life).

IN respect to religion and the healing art, all nations are still in a state of barbarism. In the most civilized countries the priest is still but a Powwow, and the physician a Great Medicin. Consider the deference which is everywhere paid to a doctor's opinion. Nothing more strikingly betrays the credulity of mankind than medicin. Quackery is a thing universal and universally successful. In this case it becomes literally true that no imposition is too great for the credulity of men. Priests and physicians should never look one another in the face. . . . When the one comes the other goes. They could not come together without laughter, or a significant silence.—Thoreau.

THE proof of the Christian religion taken from prophecy, has no foundation. Whoever will examin without prejudice the oracles pretended to be divine, will find only an ambiguous, unintelligible, absurd, and unconnected jargon, entirely unworthy of a God who intended to display his presciences, and to instruct his people with regard to future events. There does not exist in the Holy Scriptures a single prophecy sufficiently precise to be literally applied to Jesus Christ. To convince yourself of this truth, ask the most learned of our doctors, which are the formal prophecies, wherein they hav the happiness to discover the Messiah? You will then perceive, that it is only by the aid of forced explanations, figures, parables, and mystical interpretations, by which they are enabled to bring forward anything sensible and applicable to the God made man whom they tell us to adore.—D'Holbach.

WHEN we come to consider how short a period has been occupied by the development of the civilization of mankind, as compared with prehistoric periods, and to what a very small portion of the earth's surface this development extends; when we further bear in mind what vast horizons are being opened up on all sides by the advance of science, knowledge, and industry; when we remember how much we still retain in our refined life of the crude tendencies and instincts of our barbarous past, and how the savage "struggle for existence" handed down to us from animal life still rages as bad as ever, though in a modified shape, we feel compelled to admit that our civilization is still altogether in its infancy, and that we hav as yet traversed but a small portion of the path marked out for us.—Büchner.

THERE are professions which necessarily render the soul pitiless—that of the soldier, the butcher, the officer of justice, and the jailor; and all trades which are founded on the annoyance of others. The officer, the soldier, the jailor, for example, are only happy in making others miserable. It is true, they are necessary against malefactors, and so far useful to society, but of a thousand men of the kind, there is not one who acts from the motiv of the public good, or who even reflects that it is a public good. It is above all a curious thing to hear them speak of their prowess as they count the number of their victims; their snares to entrap them, the ills which they hav made them suffer, and the money which they hav got by it. Whoever has been able to descend to the subaltern detail of the bar—whoever has only heard lawyers reason familiarly among themselvs, and applaud themselvs for the miseries of their clients—must hav a very poor opinion of human nature. There are more frightful professions still, which are however canvassed for like a canonship. There are some [the clerical] which change an honest man into a rogue, and which accustom him to lie in spite of himself, to deceive almost without perceiving it, to put a blind before the eyes of others, to prostrate himself by the interest and vanity of his situation, and without remorse to plunge mankind into stupid blindness. —Voltaire.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by

DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR

LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, . . 40 cents.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,
Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BEST!

THE

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 3-ounce coin silver, $22; 4-ounce, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $31 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $15; 11 jewels, $16 50; 15 jewels, $23; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3.60, knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for $6. Solid silver spoons, $1.50 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Extra heavy teas, $3. Etched:
"The Time to be Happy is Now,"
50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2 75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.

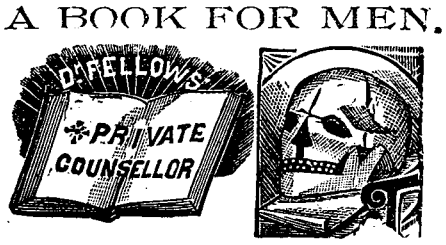
Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.



"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.

Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A MALODOROUS EXPERIMENT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50
21.	History of Religion. E. E. Evans	20

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth, $1.00.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 392pp., $1.50.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY and RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

THE

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON. WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
3	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
10	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
25	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible,

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 35. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, August 27, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

SOUND MINDS NEED NO SENSELESS TOYS.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

—o—

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A HISTORY OF RELIGIONS.

BEING

A Condensed Account of the Results of Scientific Research and Philosophical Research.

By Elizabeth B. Evans.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

WAS CHRIST - - - CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price. $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth. - - - - - - 50 cents

JUST PUBLISHED.

Life of Thomas Paine,

WITH A

History of His Literary, Political, and Religious Career in America, France, and England.

By MONCURE DANIEL CONWAY,

Author of "Omitted Chapters of History Disclosed in the Life and Papers of Edmund Randolph," "George Washington and Mount Vernon," "Washington's Rules of Civility," etc.

To Which is added a Sketch of Paine by William Cobbett.

No real biography of Paine has ever appeared. The so-called Lives of Paine have been mainly the controversial work of pamphleteers, turning chiefly on his religious heresies. Paine was in his fifty-eighth year before he published anything concerning religion, and before that time he had acted an important part in revolutionary movements in the United States, England, and France. But in the religious conflict initiated by him, his political services and military career have been but inadequately considered. A certain historical ostracism has buried in the archives of various countries a large mass of documents containing records of paramount interest and importance. Mr. Conway has personally searched such records, in Europe and America, and has obtained from these fresh light, not only on Paine, but on various eminent figures in American and European history with whom he was associated. A large amount of unpublished correspondence has been included in the volumes.

Mr. Conway says in his Preface: "In the laborious work of searching out the real Paine I have found a general appreciation of its importance, and it will be seen in the following pages that generous assistance has been rendered by English clergymen, by official persons in Europe and America, by persons of all beliefs and no beliefs. In no instance have I been impeded by any prejudice, religious or political. The curators of archives, private collectors, owners of important documents bearing on the subject, have welcomed my effort to bring the truth to light."

Two vols., royal oct., gilt top, portraits, $5.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco. gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX. M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price. 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c. 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp. clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6 50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 50 cents; cloth, $1

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Corgate. 10 cents

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Order of Creation.

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER, PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE, E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 35. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, August 27, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE. NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - AUGUST 27, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Christianity's Effects Upon Health and Medical Science.

We will conclude our account of the relations between the Christian religion and the health and life of the human race.

Early in the Middle Ages a dreadful outgrowth upon this doctrin of the supernatural production of disease made its appearance. This was the notion that Satan used human emissaries in his generation of disease, and that these emissaries were Jews and witches.

As to the Jews, it was believed that they accomplished their infernal designs by means of poisoning, and spreading pestilence. Throughout continental Europe there arose a furious persecution of these people. The putting of them to death was often accompanied with torture. Burning to death was common. At the time of the black death twelve thousand Jews were massacred in Bavaria. The rue Brulée in Strasburg remains as a monument to the burning of two thousand Jews in it on an accusation of poisoning the wells and causing the plague of 1348. At the royal castle of Chinon, near Tours, a great trench was dug and filled with blazing wood, and in a single day one hundred and sixty Jews were burnt therein.

The persecution of the witches for causing disease began about in the twelfth century. It gained growth during the thirteenth century, when persecution in general was quickened by Innocent III., who then instituted the Inquisition and issued the first appeal to princes to employ their power for the suppression of heresy. In 1484 the doctrin, and its resulting persecution, received a tremendous impetus from the great bull of Pope Innocent VIII. This bull irretrievably committed the church to the doctrin that witches are a great cause of disease, storms, and various ills which afflict mankind. This bull, like the other utterances of both churches afterward, based its declaration on the biblical text, "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to liv." The bull was followed by a frantic crusade against witches held to be guilty of producing ill weather or disease. Catholic and Protestant theologians and ecclesiastics raged equally in the work of detecting and executing the unfortunate suspects. Women were tortured and killed by the thousands, and with them occasionally men and children. "The bishops' palaces of south Germany became shambles." In Germany during one century alone there were executed victims to the number of over one hundred thousand.

Among the methods by which the witches produced their pestilences, the church presently discovered, was that of smearing city walls and pavements with a magic ointment that bred these diseases. A typical case of the detection and execution of doers of these deeds is one which occurred at Milan, Italy, and we will giv an account of it, for which we are indebted to the Popular Science Monthly:

"That city was then under the control of Spain, and its authorities having received from the Spanish government notice that certain persons suspected of witchcraft had recently left Madrid, and had perhaps gone to Milan to anoint the walls, this communication was dwelt upon in the pulpits as another evidence of that satanic malice which the church alone had the means of resisting, and the people were thus excited and put upon the alert. One morning, in the year 1630, an old woman, looking out of her window, saw a man walking along the street and wiping his fingers upon the wall; she immediately called the attention of another old woman, and they agreed that this man must be one of the diabolical anointers. It was perfectly evident to a person under ordinary conditions that this unfortunate man was simply trying to remove from his fingers the ink gathered while writing from the ink-horn which he carried in his girdle; but this explanation was too simple to satisfy those who first observed him or those who afterward tried him: a mob was raised and he was thrown into prison. Being tortured, he at first did not know what to confess; but, on inquiring from the jailor and others, he learned what the charge was, and on being again submitted to torture utterly beyond endurance, he confessed everything which was suggested to him; and on being tortured again and again to giv the names of his accomplices, he accused, at hazard, the first people of the city whom he thought of. These, being arrested and tortured beyond endurance, confessed and implicated a still greater number, until members of the foremost families were included in the charge. Again and again all these unfortunates were tortured beyond endurance. Under paganism the rule regarding torture had been that it should not be carried beyond endurance; and we therefore find Cicero ridiculing it as a means of detecting crime, because a stalwart criminal of strong nerves might resist it and go free, while a physically delicate man, though innocent, would be forced to confess. Hence it was that under paganism a limit was imposed to the torture which could be administered; but when Christianity had become predominant throughout Europe, torture was developed with a cruelty never before known. The theological doctrin of 'excepted cases' was evolved—these 'excepted cases' being heresy and witchcraft; for by a very simple and natural process of theological reasoning it was held that Satan would giv supernatural strength to his special devotees—that is, to heretics and witches; and therefore, that in dealing with them there should be no limits to the torture. The result was in this particular case, as in tens of thousands besides, that the accused confessed everything which could be suggested to them, and often in the delirium of their agony confessed far more than all that the zeal of the prosecutors could suggest. Finally, a great number of worthy people were sentenced to the most cruel death which could be invented. The records of their trials and deaths are frightful. The treatis which in recent years has first brought to light in connected form an authentic account of the proceedings in this affair, and which givs at the end engravings of the accused submitting to horrible tortures on their way to the stake and at the place of execution itself, is one of the most fearful monuments of theological reasoning and human folly.

"To cap the climax, after a poor apothecary had been tortured into a confession that he had made the magic ointment, and had been put to death with the most exquisit refinements of torture, his family were obliged to take another name, and were driven out from the city; his house was torn down, and on its site was erected 'The House of Infamy,' which remained on this spot until, toward the end of the eighteenth century, a party of young radicals, probably influenced by the reading of Beccaria, sallied forth one night and leveled this pious monument to the ground."

While such notions on the cause of disease prevailed, and medical men who would fain inquire into its true origin were persecuted by the ecclesiastics, either by genuin believers as dealers with Satan or by jealous ones as rivals for the people's patronage, it may easily be conceived how sweeping were the devastations that the unstayed plagues effected. In some regions nine out of ten perished, and in others the total population was exterminated.

This state of things prevailed for centuries. In Spain sanitary measures were considered both useless and impious till the invasion of the Freethinking Napoleon at the opening of this century. He suppressed the Inquisition and instituted hygienic customs, but at his expulsion the Inquisition was revived and sanitation resuppressed, and at this day health measures are in many districts but beginning to supplant superstitious supplications and ceremonies. "The most sober accounts of travelers in the Spanish peninsula until a recent period are sometimes irresistibly comic in their pictures of people insisting on maintaining arrangements more filthy than would be permitted in an American backwoods camp, while taking enormous pains to stop the pestilence by bell-ringings, processions, and new dresses bestowed upon the local Madonna."

In England as in the continental countries sanitation was totally ignored. The English dwelling was pervaded by a filthiness beyond description. The floor of the ordinary cottage was of earth; this was strewn with hay or rushes; into this layer dropped offal and all filth; from time to time fresh hay or rushes were overlaid, and the whole mass was allowed to ferment and generate miasma. Some physicians advised the reform of this and other deleterious practices; Caius, Mead, and Pringle made themselvs especially notable in urging it; but ecclesiastics still obstinately maintained the theological theories of disease in the place that should hav been occupied by the medical, and mummery continued the resource of the multitude. In 1665 the innumerable minor pestilences were succeeded by the great plague of London, which destroyed over a hundred thousand lives. This, like others, was considered a visitation of divine vengeance for "the prophaning of the Sabbath." To show that epidemics were used as agents of divine retribution passages were adduced from Numbers, Psalms, Zechariah, and Revelation. One of the most dismal incidents of the plague, and one that illustrates the way in which it was looked on, was that of a fanatic who paraded the streets naked with a pan of fiery coals on his head, proclaiming woe to the city and its destruction in forty days, after the manner of Jonah at Nineveh.

The jail-fever was among the most dreadful of the plagues in England. The jails were small; the occupants, in those days when crime was rampant and when imprisonment for debt was practiced, were myriad; there was no ventilation, sewerage, or disinfection. The result was that jail-fever was never idle among those confined, and a person imprisoned in those days stood a greater chance of actually losing his life than one condemned to execution by a court does now. This jail-fever at about every court session infected the judges and officials and spread abroad. At the Black Assize at Oxford in 1577 the chief baron, the sheriff, and three hundred men died within forty hours. A single Scotch regiment on being infected by some prisoners lost no fewer than two hundred men. The church dealt with this state of things by devising new forms of prayer for prisoners, particularly one to be placed in the Irish Prayer Book.

The same view of pestilence, says Prof. A. D. White, "had also its full course in Calvinistic Scotland—the only difference being that, while in Roman Catholic countries relief was sought by fetiches, gifts, processions, exorcisms, and works of expiation, promoted by priests; in Scotland, after the Reformation, it was sought in fast-days established by Presbyterian elders. Accounts of the filthiness of Scotch cities and villages, as well as of ordinary dwellings, down to a period well within this century, seem monstrous. All that in these days is swept into the sewers, was in those allowed to remain around the houses or thrown into the streets. The old theological theory that 'vain is the hand of man,' checked scientific thought and paralyzed sanitary endeavor. The result was natural: between the thirteenth and seventeenth centuries thirty notable epidemics swept the country, and some of them carried off multitudes; but as a rule these never suggested sanitary improvement; they were called 'visitations,' attributed to divine wrath against human sin, and the work of the authorities was to announce the particular sin concerned, and to declaim against it. Amazing theories were thus propounded—theories which led to spasms of severity; and, in some of these, offenses generally punished much less severely were visited with death. Every pulpit interpreted the ways of God to man in such seasons so as rather to increase than to diminish the pestilence. The effect of thus seeking supernatural causes rather than natural may be seen in such facts as the death by plague of one-fourth of the whole population of the city of Perth in a single year of the fifteenth century; other towns suffering similarly both then and afterward. Here and there, physicians more wisely inspired endeavored to push sanitary measures, and in 1585 attempts were made to clean the streets of Edinburgh, but the chroniclers tell us that 'magistrates and ministers gave no heed.' One sort of calamity, indeed, came in as a mercy—the great fires which swept through the cities, clearing and cleaning them. Though the town council of Edinburgh declared the noted fire of 1700 'a fearful rebuke of God,' it was observed that, after it had done its work, disease and death were greatly diminished."

In the Protestant colonies of America the same views on pestilence were held and the same remedies resorted to. The same discouragement of the medical art continued, and witches were executed for causing diseases as in the mother countries. The great Puritan divine, Increase Mather, tells us in his "Wonders of the Invisible World," published at Boston in 1693, that

"plagues are some of those woes, with which the Divil troubles us. It is said of the Israelites, in 1 Cor. 10. 10: They were destroyed of the destroyer. That is, they had the Plague among them. 'Tis the Destroyer, or the Divil, that scatters Plagues about the World: Pestilential and Contagious Diseases, 'tis the Divel, who do's oftentimes Invade us with them. 'Tis no uneasy thing, for the Divel, to impregnate the Air about us, with such Malignant Salts, as meeting with the Salt of our Microcosm, shall immediately cast us into that Fermentation and Putrefaction, which will utterly desolve All the Vital Tyes within us; Ev'n as an Aqua Fortis, made with a conjunction of Nitre and Vitriol, Corrodes what it seizes upon. And when the Divel has raised those Arsenical Fumes, which become Venomous Quivers full of Terrible Arrows, how easily can he shoot the deleterious Miasms into those Juices or Bowels of Mens Bodies, which will soon Enflame them with a Mortal Fire! Hence come such Plagues, as that Beesome of Destruction which within our memory swept away such a throng of people from one English City in one Visitation: and hence those Infectious Feavers, which are but so many Disguised Plagues among us, Causing Epidemical Desolations" (pp. 17 and 18).

On pages 134 and 135 he givs instances where "some long Bow'd down under such a spirit of Infirmity . . . Marvelously Recovered upon the Death of the Witches," and where "one patient was brought unto death's door and so remained until the witch was taken and carried away by the constable, when he began at once to recover and was soon well." It is amusing to find the Puritans, while attributing the plague among themselvs to devils and witches, ascribing the same affliction among the Indians to a quite different cause—a divine plan for clearing New England for the bearers of the true belief. Johnson's "History of New England," published in 1654, informs us that "by this means Christ . . . not only made room for His people to plant, but also tamed the hard and cruel hearts of those barbarous Indians, insomuch that half a handful of His people landing not long after in Plymouth Plantation, found little resistance."

Space fails us for the rehearsal even of a thousandth part of the grotesque, or tragic, or piteous aspects of the long reign of the church over the human belief as to disease. Perhaps the most pathetic side of it all is that on which we view the struggles, thwartings, bitter disappointments, and often torture and death, of the scores of thousands of investigators. In every age men appeared here and there who essayed to ascertain the truth in the matter, and would hav saved countless lives then, and incalculably advanced our state of health today. But their endeavors were harassed, their spirits broken, and their lives extinguished by Christianity, the Infamy of Infamies.

A Brilliant Misstater of Facts.

Speaking religio-politically, the New York Sun is making an ass of itself, as instance this, in reply to a query if it is true that the chairmen of both political parties are Catholics, board at the same hotel, and confess to the same priest:

"Whether Messrs. Carter and Harrity stop at the same hotel and confess to the same priest are questions that we cannot answer, because we do not know; but we believe they are both Catholics, and we are glad of it. We should be still more glad if we were perfectly sure that in all cases their religion would govern their acts, for then we should be certain that nothing improper or anti-American would be done by either of them in his management of the canvass."

Either the Sun has become converted to the idea of a union of church and state, or it willfully misstates facts. The Catholic church is plainly and avowedly working for such union, as industriously as are the God-in-the-Constitution party and the Sabbath Union, which latter organizations hav succeeded in partially accomplishing it, by inducing Congress to legislate in religious matters. Cardinal Gibbons helped them along. Whether or not a union of church and state is proper depends upon the point from which it is viewed. It certainly is anti-American according to the notions of the founders of this republic, though the Puritan colonists believed in it.

A particular anti-American scheme of the Catholics, a detail merely of the greater one, is the sectarianizing of the public schools. The church makes no secret of its intention here. And it is only three weeks ago that Archbishop Ireland told the Rev. L. H. Morey, a Presbyterian clergyman of Stillwater, Minn., that he considered the public schools as constituted to be godless, and said that religious elements should be introduced into them. This is a report of a part of the interview between the two ecclesiastics. The Rev. Mr. Morey is talking:

"I again suggested that committees of all religious denominations meet and formulate a ritual to be used as a text-book, containing religious instructions that would not be objectionable to any sect and that no persons of good morals could object to.

"He objected on the ground that I would not confess to the Catholic idea, admitting that what Catholics wanted was the teaching of the Catholic religion in the schools. He cited an instance in which the state legislated in a matter of religion, requiring the observance of the Sabbath, and remarked that the state did not do that for the sake of religion, but to require the observance of Sunday as a day of rest.

"He then said: 'Why not legislate immediately in that way in the matter of the public schools?' Claiming that by such a plan the state would immediately arrange religion, I objected to the Sabbath as not being a parallel, the Sabbath being common to both Catholics and Protestants, but that the Catholic religion which he was advancing in his plans was not common to both Catholics and Protestants.

"The archbishop frankly admitted that the Protestant's conscience had good reason to be offended when sisters of charity were introduced into the Central Public School buildings and placed over Protestant children. I asked if I might infer from that that the garb of the sisters of charity had a teaching force. This he practically admitted.

"The archbishop is an astute and plausible talker; but as I said to him, his plan involves the impossible condition of putting religious instruction by the state in schools, which is contrary to the laws and conditions of the state.

"I suggested that this plan was one that could stand only on its merits, and in the eye of the law this religious element robbed it of all merit. He seemed confident that some compromise would be arrived at by which the difficulties would be met. I gained from him the information that his efforts are by no means considered at an end."

If that scheme of Mr. Ireland's, as outlined by Mr. Morey, is not improper and anti-American, then we hav studied the Constitution, history, and traditions of this country for naught.

In saying these things, it is evident that the Sun is playing to the political galleries, filled with Catholics, as well as the advertising Catholic public—the reading Catholic public being too limited to consider—for in the same issue we find this:

"'It is not a small task to find out how the matter of the universe was made. The task is hard.'—President Prescott's Address before the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"Indeed it is. It is a task infinitly beyond the power of the human mind. Time spent at the task is wasted. Any man who undertakes the task endangers his reason. The task is not within the compass of science."

If the Sun were the orthodox journal it Mephistophileanly pretends to be it would hav said that science had no task at all before it in such a search, as the task is accomplished by just saying "God created it." The Presbyterians add, and they but voice the position of all orthodox Christians, "out of nothing." Evidently the Sun does not believe the Bible or the explanation of the church. In this it is closer in touch with the sentiment of the century than in maintaining that Catholicism is no foe of Americanism, as Americanism is exhibited in the existence and laws and spirit of the great North American republic.

But then, what won't politicians do and say, whatever they think!

The Chicago Meeting.

The meeting at Chicago for which Mr. Putnam has issued a call will be held at Madison Hall, 146 West Madison street, on Sunday, September 4th. All the Liberals in Chicago and the rest of the country are invited to attend. There will be conferences during the day and lectures in the evening.

The object of the meeting, as stated in the call, is to put Freethought work upon a practical basis and thereby do something. The Sabbath Union, commanding as it does the aid of the churches, is encroaching too much upon the liberties of the people. The cowardice of the politicians which induces them to vote against their own principles must be overcome by showing them that there is another side to these religious legislativ questions. From United States Senator to municipal officer they must be liberated from their bonds. The National Reform Association which is seeking direct religious legislation must be opposed vigorously and persistently. Whenever and wherever any sect or religious institution, or Christianity in general, seeks any favors from the government—money or land or laws—the Liberals should be on hand to fight for the American principle of separation of church and state practically as well as theoretically.

This is the defensiv work. The aggressiv work is to induce the repeal of Sunday laws, blasphemy laws, and laws exempting church property from taxation. These are the most important, but added to them the other demands of Liberalism can be worked upon. As the Investigator says, Mr. Putnam "voices the situation and strikes the keynote of reform in his call." There is danger real and near from ecclesiasticism. Something should be done to ward it off and redeem the nation from the disgrace of retrograding. The era of Puritanism, or ecclesiasticism in government, has once been passed by the nation, and it would be absurd and criminally foolish for the people to allow its revival. The sentiment of the nation is unquestionably opposed to it, and if some method can be devised by which the people can make themselvs heard in the matter politicians will quit "working the religious racket" and legislate with some common sense."

It is to accomplish some of these things that the "Freethought Federation of America" is proposed.

Proof Called For.

The Rev. J. M. Buckley, of the Christian Advocate, attributes these words to Benjamin Franklin as "said" to Thomas Paine: "I would advise you not to attempt to unchain the tiger, but to burn this piece before it is seen by any other person. If men are so wicked with religion, what would they be without it?" If Mr. Buckley desires to retain what reputation he has as a student he will now prove his assertion.

In the same editorial, on "Benjamin Franklin's Religion," Mr. Buckley makes strenuous effort to be fair and makes some statements worth recording outside of a Methodist paper. Observing that one of his brethren publishes the statement that "in the earlier part of his life Dr. Franklin acknowledged himself to be skeptical in religion, but later in life he became a firm believer in divine revelation," he says: "It would be a delight to confirm rather than invalidate these words, but if by divine revelation is meant the divine origin by a special revelation of the Old and New Testament, we are certain that they will not bear investigation. Benjamin Franklin became a deeply religious man and a believer in a personal God, a devout Deist, and a man of prayer, but not a believer in the supernatural origin of Christianity. Through the greater part of his life he was 'latitudinarian.' On March 9, 1790, a few weeks before his death, he wrote to Dr. Stiles his opinion upon this subject: 'As to Jesus of Nazareth, my opinion of whom you particularly desire, I think the system of morals and his religion as he left them to us the best the world ever saw, or is likely to see; but I apprehend it has received various corrupting changes; and I hav, with most of the present Dissenters in England, some doubts as to his divinity. There is no sufficient reason to believe that he ever went any further."

Of the phrase "sacred writings," meaning the Bible, used by Franklin in a speech, Mr. Buckley says that "his opinion was that they were the result of the blended wisdom and spiritual meditations of devout men," and not a supernatural revelation. Mr. Buckley adds: "Let him be placed, then, where he can be maintained. Christianity does not need even the massiv intellect of a Franklin."

And along with these statements he prints as true a tale not only improbable but which has over and over again been shown to be absolutely false! But let him try to prove his assertion.

An Attractiv Proposal.

We hav received the following communication and proposition from a valued friend of Freethought:

"EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER: The engraving on first page in your issue of July 30th, 'Consternation Among the Reptils,' is very suggestiv and impressiv. Would it not be a good idea to hav a chromo, or some other kind of picture, taken, size not less than 20 x 24 inches, of this, and, if a success, perhaps several other pictures of equally striking subjects?

"The time has come when all Freethinkers, and all those opposed to bigotry and superstition, should be proud to show their hands, and champion this 'Real Rock of Ages,' and I know no better way than by adorning our walls with works of art indicativ of the trend of our mind. Such pictures, whether of Bacchus or of Bruno, become object-lessons to all thinking persons, and if got up at a reasonable figure, would make fitting presents, at any time, for our friends, and be living examples of truth to bequeath to our children and posterity.

"This giant, this unconquerable 'rock of ages,' the result of an age of science, might be made a companion picture to the defenseless infantil representation of the unscientific, and hence superstitious and bigoted, past. 'Wide Awake' and 'Fast Asleep' are similar representations of two subjects I happen to hav.

"I hav no idea what the cost of carrying out such a suggestion would be, but to show that I am in earnest and would like to become possessed of at least one enlarged picture of the above, I hereby agree to contribute fifty dollars ($50) if a sufficient number of others are equally interested in carrying out the above suggestion; and if you, Mr. Editor, will please state this matter to your subscribers, with any suggestion that from your practical standpoint you may deem best, I think enough subscribers for the above object can be secured to fully guarantee the work and all the expense connected therewith. Yours truly, HENRY BIRD,
"144 Belleville ave., Newark, N. J."

If we could sell a thousand copies of this picture at fifty cents each, we could get a return of the cost of the work, tubing, and postage. The picture would be twenty-four inches in hight, and proportionately wide, printed in five colors.

But if there are enough friends wanting the work to subscribe two hundred dollars we will get the chromo made, and depend upon sales for the balance. Mr. Bird heads the list with fifty and we shall acknowledge other subscriptions with pleasure. These pictures are great educators, and the wider their distribution in varied and attractiv forms the better for Freethought.

What Time Does.

The Christian church has for some decades possessed quite a reputation for stealing the fame of dead great men and trying to gain credit to itself therefor, but who would suppose that it could make so bold a burglarious effort as to appropriate Percy Bysshe Shelley! If a young man who knew Shelley only by reputation as a wondrous poet should walk into the parish church of Horsham, England, and look upon the memorial tablet just placed therein, he would at once conclude that the poet was in his life a devout believer in that church's dogmas. And the preacher would never undeceive him.

The colossal impudence of putting this tablet in the church so astonishes the New York Sun that it says: "It is not worth while to make any comment upon the news from England that a memorial tablet has been placed upon the wall of a grand old church, the parish church of Horsham, in honor of the poet Shelley, who was denounced all through his life as a godless enemy of the faith, and who was deprived of the custody of his own children by the court of chancery because of the alleged wickedness of his religious opinions. In view of Shelley's memorial tablet in the parish church of Horsham, what may not Col. Robert G. Ingersoll look forward to?"

We should say that with Darwin in Westminster abbey, and Shelley memorialized in a grand old church in Horsham, Colonel Ingersoll can confidently look forward to being sainted.

A Chicago correspondent of the World of this city reports that Vice-President Higginbotham said that if Congress did not repeal the Sunday-closing act, the gates would be kept open on Sunday anyhow. We hope this is true. There is one thing certain, that the managers of the Fair are not going to lose the three millions of dollars an open Fair would bring them if they can help it. This time, as we hav previously remarked, Mammon is on the side of Righteousness—and may both win!

The Banner of Light thus describes our new Bible Picture Book: "Commencing with Genesis, all the leading events, commands, and teachings capable of having their inconsistencies shown by the artist's skill, are made the subjects of pen and pencil. A glance at any one of them will convey more impressiv and enduring views of the ridiculousness of supposing the crudities therein contained entitled to the worship and reverence of mankind than scores of pages of argument. There are two hundred full-page engravings, and the same number of letter-press."

Rev. T. Hanlon, D.D., of Pennington Seminary, made the following frank admission in addressing the great world's triennial conference of Methodists recently held at Omaha: "The laboring classes are drifting away from the church. Our church is made up of women to a large extent. The men are drifting away from it." The laboring classes are finding out that the church is their worst enemy, that it is a vampire sucking their blood and at the same time refusing them needed recreation and enjoyment on the only day of the week at their disposal. The closing of the World's Fair through the church's influence will "drift" or drive a hundred thousand more workingmen out of the "fold." The church is digging its own grave as fast as it can.

It is reported that the following slightly sarcastic report was made by a committee of the municipal council of Milwaukee on a petition to hav the theaters of the city closed on Sunday: "Your standing committee on ordinances, to whom was referred an ordinance to close Sunday theaters, respectfully report that they hav given the matter careful consideration and find that some people work seven days in the week, some six days and rest one. Some work one day and rest six. Your committee regard it as a self-evident proposition that those who merit the greatest consideration from the state are those who work the most, other things being equal. Your committee further finds that 'one man esteemeth one day above another; another man esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind.' And again: 'He that regardeth the day regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day to the Lord doth not regard it.' Your committee respectfully recommends that said petition be laid on the table."

This is the latest "ghost story" which the people of the nineteenth century, who are supposed to know something, are asked to believe: A little girl of ten years was painfully and helplessly paralyzed. One day, nearly two years ago, she asked her mother to read from the Bible, and the reading converted her. A few days ago she said she was going to die, and her little sister took up the Bible to read to her, opening at Matthew ninth chapter, fourth to sixth verses: "And Jesus knowing their thoughts said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts? For whether it is easier to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee: or to say, Arise and walk? But that ye may know that the son of man hath power on earth to forgiv sins (then saith he to the sick of the palsy), Arise, take up thy bed and go unto thine house." Then she felt a strange sensation creeping over her, and she straightway got out of bed, and is now almost well. The little girl's name is Mertenia A. Underhill, the location is at Redding. She was treated by Dr. Ernest Smith, of Redding Centre, and the story is sent to the Sun by a Danbury correspondent—all but the Sun being in Connecticut. Dangerous occupations command high wages, and the reporter who stretched his imagination to the extent required in writing up this story ought to receive great money. The churches of Redding and Danbury might well pass the contribution-box for his benefit.

When the shocks of earthquake were felt in California some time ago the inhabitants of a few places naturally became frightened. A daily paper thus describes one scene occurring at a hotel: Last evening the women of the hotel declined to sleep in the third story and demanded quarters on the second floor. This gave Ira Doolittle, the proprietor, a chance to make a little speech. Addressing his wife, who led the rebellion, Mr. Doolittle said: "Why, I hav known you forty-five years, and you hav always professed to be and hav always been, as far as I know, a Christian, like myself. If you ever did a wrong act, you hav more than atoned for it by living with me all these years, and yet you are afraid of a blanked earthquake. And you, girls! You go to church three or four times a day, and say the Lord is yours, and that you are his, and that he will look after you, and all that, but here you are a-crying because you are afraid of a double blanked, little measly earthquake. Now, I hav been a Christian all my life, and I hav been in this blank community a quarter of a century, trying to make men better. If the Lord wants to kill me off with a blanked earthquake, why, let him do it. Now, then, you can take the blanked second floor, including my room. I'll go up stairs and sleep, and the blanked earthquake may come or stay as it double blanked pleases." Then Mr. Doolittle climbed the stairs, and, as he said this morning, "slept the sleep of the righteous."

Finance.

"Money is a medium of exchange." It is not necessary that it should hav an intrinsic value or a value within itself. The less it has the better. And it should also be irredeemable. Every time it buys a bushel of wheat, potatoes, or beans it redeems itself, and this is all the redemption it needs. Anything that has a value becomes a commodity, and all commodities fluctuate in price, therefore money should be made out of a material that has the least value possible. When gold was discovered in Australia and California, Austria and most of the German states demonetized it, and it was not until the Comstock lode and other silver mines were discovered that it was remonetized, and then silver became "the victim." It has been argued that gold was the best material on which to base the value of money, because it was less liable to fluctuate than any other. Such is not the fact, as the above citation from history proves. While paper possesses this quality, if not based on a metallic money, it is clearly shown that the discovery of more gold has a tendency to cause it to decrease in value, while becoming scarce causes it to increase in value, and then it must be remembered that the very fact that it is being used as money givs it a fictitious value or it becomes more valuable on that account than it would otherwise be.

Now, paper is free from all of these objections because it takes so little of it comparativly for the purpose of money, and the resources are boundless, so it is the least liable to fluctuate of anything imaginable. Money should hav no market value. It should always be at par, then there would be no such thing as speculating on the money market. Cattle, slaves, shells, beads, wampum, sticks, gold, silver, iron, copper, paper, and leather hav all been used as money. This government uses five of the above-mentioned materials as money, viz., paper, copper, nickel, silver, and gold. The Hudson Bay Company used sticks as money in their trading with the Indians. One stick represented an otter skin, one a deer skin, and one a skunk skin, and so on. And the Hudson Bay Company would receive the same sticks back for guns, ammunition, and supplies; and it was only where the Hudson Bay Company was not known that their sticks did not answer all the purposes of money or a medium of exchange. In the year 1850 the Fire Marine Insurance bank of Milwaukee had in circulation in the Western country $3,000,000 of their own issue, "and its credit really rested upon George Smith, of Chicago, and Alexander Mitchell, of Milwaukee," and it was considered the best of money in that Western country, notwithstanding there were grave doubts whether it had a right to exist. Why, at one time Missouri state paper and Louisiana state paper were five per cent above par. Now, this goes to prove a precedent, and it will not do to cite this country or any other at a time when the very existence of this country was threatened.

Paper is the best material of which to make money, because it is cheapest and most convenient and less liable to fluctuate, but some object on account of trading with foreign nations. We hav always been an exporting nation since the foundation of our government and always expect to be. We export more and more each year and import less and less, so the balance of trade is greatly in our favor. And besides, if you wish to travel in a foreign country you exchange our money for the money of the government you wish to travel in. If it be silver or gold the exchange is made according to the weight and their measure of value, while if it be paper it is made at par. Nations hav no way of measuring paper money and as long as the stability of the government that is under consideration is secure it passes at par with the exchanges of other nations.

It is the fiat of government that makes a piece of anything money. You would not be obliged to take ten pounds of gold for a debt of $1, but you would be obliged to take 412½ grains of silver with the American "buzzard," or government stamp, on it, notwithstanding it has only eighty cents' worth of silver in it; the balance is fiat; and if the government can make you take the least bit of fiat in "your'n," why can it not make you take it all in fiat? And why need you object as long as it passes "dollar for dollar?" Venice issued paper money that was never redeemed for over six hundred years. Queen Catherine of Russia was reduced to such straits that she called her counselors together to devise means to raise more money. They advised her to borrow it of her nobles. She said, "No, I will not do it. If I do, I and my people become their slaves; but if I issue my own money, they become my slaves."

Here is an apt illustration in regard to our own situation. This government and its people hav become slaves to the money power, or plutocrats, and our would-be statesmen would do well to take a lesson from the ancient Catherine of Russia.

France, in the Franco-Prussian war, agreed to pay Germany $1,000,000,000, and she immediately issued $500,000,000 in irredeemable paper currency, which enabled her to set her thirty million inhabitants to work; and as labor is wealth, she was enabled to pay Germany the $1,000,000,000 indemnity money before it was due and come to the rescue of the Barrings of England, which prevented a panic throughout the civilized world, and which also caused her to retain her supremacy as the most prosperous nation in the world. It is said the threatened failure of the Barring Brothers sunk values about $26,000,000 in this country, while it is also said that it only took $4,000,000 to prevent that failure. Yet the government of England was powerless, the same as our government was in 1873, and would be again if a panic should occur, unless she changes her financial system. Some may dispute but that this government controls its financial policy; it ought to, but the facts are, it does not. Several years ago, when the greenback issue was so prominently before our national legislature, the bankers of this country and England combined, and succeeded in taking the control of the currency out of the hands of the government, and placing it in their own, and hence this government is powerless to come to the rescue in a panic, if one was imminent. The Hazzard circular of England to the bankers of this country said, "Oppose the issue of a legal-tender paper money, because we cannot control it." Echo answered through Beuell, secretary of the National Bankers' Association of this country, "Try and induce the agricultural and religious press especially to oppose the issue of an irredeemable paper money, and also see your member of Congress and enlist his sympathies; it will never do to allow such to become a law, because we cannot control it." Such, in substance, is what they said, and now the question is, hav the bankers been running money matters in the interest of the people or themselvs? Let the mortgaged homes both in the cities and country answer. Over nine million of the same, it seems to us, answer loud enough so anyone that cannot hear that could not hear Gabriel's horn toot.

The capitalists h v boasted that there are five men in this country who, if they were to act in concert, could paralyze business between two suns. If government has lost control of the commercial business of this country to that extent, is it not time to wind up her affairs, and turn it over foot and dragoons to an oligarchy—which she has done in fact but not in name?

Any government that does not provide enough of a circulating medium to do the business of its people, in the language of our forefathers, ought not to exist. Think of it leaving its citizens to the mercy of the bankers and capitalists who control the finances of their country, and who thrive on "the misery and grow fat on the despair" of its people. This government is growing poorer at the rate of $9,000,000 a day, or for the three hundred and thirteen working days in a year, $2,817,000,000. Figures will not lie; and all you hav to do to prove it, is to take the three million workingmen that are out of employment and allow them $1.50 per day and board themselvs, and their employer the same as profit ($1.50 per day) on their labor, and you hav the enormous amount above stated, which would make enough to pay the appropriations of the $1,000,000,000 Congress, the national debt, and leave it so those three million families could liv in comfort and ease besides, without taxing the rest of the people a cent. It is a shame that a free sovereign people will be ruled by prejudice, hatred, and animosity to the extent that they will aid and abet such a nefarious scheme as making dear money, which is in favor of the rich, instead of aiding and helping by their vote to make a cheap money, which is in the interest of the poor and well-deserving. It should be borne in mind labor is wealth; and would it not be well for us to follow the example of France? Issue enough money, irredeemable, to set our sixty odd million people to work, and then all would be prosperous and happy. J. W. Abbott.

W. S. Bell Coming Eastward.

At Palouse I had an excellent time. The Freethinkers of that city are numerous and liberal in word and deed. I was met at the cars by a group of them who gave me a healthy welcome to the city. Mr. Robert Pfaendtner took me to his home, where I enjoyed the generous hospitality of his family for three days. I made the acquaintance of many good Freethinkers, viz., Messrs. R. J. Anderson, W. L. Farnsworth, M. Foster, H. D. Harkness, et al. My audiences were large and enthusiastic. Palouse will always remain a green spot in my memory.

My next engagement was a long way off in Idaho and I was almost a day and night getting there. But a twenty-four hours' ride on the cars is not as unpleasant as a twenty-four miles' ride on an alkali desert. The monotony of alkali dust and heat was greatly modified by the cheerful company of Mr. E. C. Blanchard, his wife and her father. And it requires a great deal of cheerfulness to overcome such unpleasant manifestations of divine providence. They are the mysterious ways and means instituted by the inscrutable to purify us. I cannot say how far the divine economy was a success in my case. I can, however, say with a good conscience that I was both tried and fried, and almost melted, by the fervent heat. However, we all reached Emmett after our twenty-four miles' ride in safety. After some cooling drinks the long ride was a thing of the past. My three lectures were well received by large audiences. Mr. S. P. Putnam has been here some years ago. Mr. James Wardwell was the pioneer of Freethought in this place. His death, which occurred a year and a half ago, was a hard blow to our cause here. His daughter, Miss Elsie Wardwell Hays, a young lady of more than ordinary talents and tastes, is one of the mainstays of the cause now. Mr. E. C. Blanchard is a worker of no common character. He holds Freethought dear, and is willing to take hold and do what he can. I am under great obligations to him for his hearty coöperation. Every town can hav Liberal lecturers if they hav only one such a worker as E. C. Blanchard.

My next ride was a long one, namely from Emmett to Caldwell over the same twenty-four miles of alkali dust and heat, and then an eighteen hours' ride to Morgan, Utah. I stop only one night here. The weather was hot, and the evening moonlight, hence I had few to hear me. Some who call themselvs Liberal did not turn out. The next day an hour's ride brought me to Echo and at a time when the people—mostly Freethinkers—were having a picnic in the grove. I was soon conveyed thither, and among the cheerful greetings was the sight of a large barrel full of water, and thirty-five pounds of sugar, and a half a box of lemons well squeezed, and a huge piece of ice. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon the barrel was empty.

At 1 o'clock we had a spread—and it was a spread of good things. Fried spring chicken, roast goose, and ice cream are among the most memorable delicacies that I freely ventured to hide. The day was spent in sports, and as the pleasure-seekers were too tired at night to attend a lecture, it was postponed till next night, when we had a good audience. The heat was, however, against us. It is hard to get people into a hall in the evening during the "heated term." We hav some splendid Liberals here: Mr. Wm. Hazelton, Mr. Wm. Fay, Mr. E. C. Mosse, Mr. Alexander Fife, and others who do not show up when the roll is called.

My next lectures were at Scofield, Utah. The Mormons did not turn out in great numbers to hear me. More of them ventured into the schoolhouse the second night.

I met a number of out-and-out Freethinkers here, namely—Messrs. M. P. Braffett, T. Lloyd, J. M. Morris, D. Wright, S. J. Harkner, T. J. Lewis, and Mr. McDougal. The schoolhouse was full, and great interest was manifested, but I could not get the subscribers I was after.

At Salida my effort was almost a failure. The people of the town are not interested in Freethought, or in fact in any kind of thought; they are digging for the dollar, and find it pretty hard to dig it up. Even some of those who sail under the banner of Freethought do not think it necessary or important to hav Liberal lectures. I found Mr. Otis White, Mr. H. Murray, and Mr. R. Wheeler genuin Liberals and gentlemen of generous hearts.

I gave one lecture at Canyon City, Col., which came very near being a failure. The cares of this world, the People's party, and general indifference combined against me. Even the Salvation Army in the street close by had a larger crowd. I could not hear the felicitous verse of their songs, but in Kansas I heard them sing, "There are no flies on Jesus." Of course this is consolatory to those whose lives are made wretched by the pestiferous attachment of this piece of the handiwork of God.

There are a few good Freethinkers at Canyon City. The most marked are Mr. John Locke, Mr. G. T. Conway, Mr. Geo. Towers, Mr. J. C. Agard, and Mr. Orange Smith. There are others whose names I did not take, whose Liberality is well known.

I shall remain in Denver, Col., until late in September. Those wishing to make arrangements for lectures can address me in care of J. C. Dana, librarian. W. S. Bell.

Funeral Address.

Delivered by John R. Charlesworth at the funeral of William F. Schade on behalf of the Pittsburgh Secular Society, June 20, 1892.

My Friends: We meet here to-day with heavy hearts, with hearts heavy with sympathy for those whose sorrows we now reverently share.

We meet here to take the last look upon the face of our friend who now lies wrapped in quiet sleep.

We meet here to pay the last tribute of affection and to perform the last act of love to the remains of him who soon must mingle with the dust.

The life of man seems but the shadow of a cloud passing before the noonday sun, and every hour misspent therein is forever lost. Therefore we should ever strive to perform deeds of kindness as we are passing along toward the sunset of our lives, that it may be said by those who come after us that the world has been made brighter, better, and happier for our having lived in it.

Our life seems but a swallow's flight across a lighted hall. The swallow flieth in from the darkness, tarrieth awhile in the light, and thereafter flieth out again into the darkness beyond. And so for a moment seems the life of man in our sight, for out of the darkness of the womb, into the darkness of the grave, man passes across his narrow strip of life. Two vast eternities stretch, ocean-like, upon either side of the island of his individual existence, and through the darkness that enshrouds them no human eye has ever pierced.

What went before us and what will come after us can only be regarded as two black and impenetrable curtains that hang down at the two extremities of human life, curtains which no living hand has ever yet drawn aside. Hundreds of generations hav stood before them anxiously peering into the darkness. But at best, they could only giv a vague guess as to what lies behind. Poets and philosophers hav painted these curtains with their dreams, but as beautiful as the pictures may seem when viewed from a distance, we find them to be nothing but a mirage as we more closely approach them, which sinks and dwindles into nothingness before our earnest and scrutinizing gaze.

Religions hav claimed to cast light upon this mystery, but the darkness has only served as a screen upon which the magic-lantern of faith hath thrown strange figures, fanciful resemblances of human life upon earth.

We encounter superstition at the very dawn of our existence, even in soft childhood's unsuspecting hour, ere we hav learned to lisp our mother's sacred name. We meet it, and are influenced by it, more or less, all along the uncertain path of our lives to the grave.

The present is a mystery, the past a dream, and the future a doubt; but in a few short years we ourselvs shall hav unraveled the enigma of death, and shall join the endless procession to the shores of that great ocean of eternity, o'er whose dark waters no voyager's bark is ever seen returning, and where they who hav crossed, even if they do exist, are forbidden by backward look or sign to divulge the secrets of the grave.

Various faiths hav been presented to man, but the best and truest faith that has ever been known upon our globe is that faith represented by a little child holding its father by the hand; and we may only know the measure of our parent's love for us by the love we bear our children.

Beyond nature we cannot see, above nature we cannot rise, and below nature we cannot fall.

All nature is tending toward a final doom. The great clock of time, whose seconds tick centuries, whose minutes are ages, and whose hours are eternities, is slowly running down. Each second its pendulum stops nearer the center of eternal rest, until the whole of nature shall be returned to the primeval state from whence it has emerged.

One by one our friends are lying down to sleep, to sleep the last long sleep of death. This kind father, loving husband, devoted and generous friend, has gone.

Let us not think of him as we see him now, but think of him as we used to know him. Let us forget his faults, for none of us are faultless, while the best, the most fitting tribute we can pay to his memory is to try to emulate his virtues.

True to his convictions in life, he remained steadfast to them until death. He was a lover of all humanity, and showed his love for them by according to all men the same rights and privileges he demanded for himself. He used reason for his guide wherever knowledge had not found the path.

He ever strove to leave the record of some kind action upon the various mile-posts of his life, and it is these deeds we should cherish in our hearts in order to perpetuate his memory. In this sense only may it be said that our dead shall liv again, and his life shall be measured by the services he has rendered to the world.

Thought does not die, though one brain be shattered; music does not die, though one instrument be broken; love does not die, though one's heartstrings be rent, and no great thinker dies so long as his thought reëchoes down the ages. This is the only immortality of which our friend ever dreamed. He had no hope, no thoughts, for the future, but lived only for the present. His chief interests were for the concerns of this life; and living without hypocrisy, he could die without fear. It would be useless for me to attempt to speak of his life, as that will be performed by those who knew him better. I hav known him but a short time, though in that brief period I hav learned to love him. I loved him while living, and I shall love his memory now that he is dead.

And now, into the arms of nature, our universal mother and our final home, we are about to consign him, forever past the trials of life, forever free from the tears of sorrow and of pain.

Rest, friend, forever in thy windowless tomb, under the blue canopy of sky, beneath the sunlight, the moonlight, and the starlight. Sleep forever amid the warbling of birds, amid the grass and flowers. Sleep, in summer's golden dawn, in autumn's chilling frost, and winter's shroud of snow.

Sleep, sweet sleep; rest, eternal rest, where dust knows no awaking and where repose dreams of no future. Again, peace, quiet, rest, and a long, forever farewell.

An Antique Experiment.

Draper, in his "Conflict," etc., states that science had made great advances in a century or two before Christ, and that many great discoveries had been made or were on the eve of being made when that mysterious eclipse of the human intellect, called "Dark Ages," intervened, and much was lost and all postponed. A small steam-engin had been made by Hero, a hundred years before Christ, such as we now call a reaction engin. "That a piece of amber, when rubbed, will attract and then repel light bodies, was a fact known six hundred years before Christ. It remained an isolated, uncultivated fact, a mere trifle, until six hundred years after Christ," says Draper. Seeing that so many wonderful discoveries had been made, it is assuming much for us to assert that nothing more was known of electricity and magnetism. All the learning of ages was lost in the destruction of a few ancient libraries, with a few accidental but happy exceptions. There is a reference in Philo, who wrote about A.D. 1, to the magnet, which has been generally overlooked by learned authors. It is exceedingly curious.

In volume 3, Bohn's edition, page 470, he says: "Just as they say that the wire is attracted by the magnet." In volume i, page 42, is another reference made to illustrate his subject. He says: "For imitations always fall short of the originals. And these works fashioned from models must be inferior, as being more removed from the original. And the stone which is called magnet is subject to a like deterioration. For any iron ring which touches it is held by it as firmly as possible; but another, which only touches that ring, is held less firmly. And the third ring hangs from the second, and the fourth from the third, and the fifth from the fourth, and so one from another in a long chain, being all held together by one attractiv power, but still not all in the same degree," etc., etc.

Here, then, is proof positiv that so much was known about magnetism to the general public at that early day. The reference is a mere obiter dictum. The publication now of the extract will, it is to be hoped, relieve it from the obscurity it has reposed in.

Clarke Irvine.

Oregon, Mo.

Mother's Bible.

If Christianity is a fraud and the Bible a fable burn your Bibles. Turn your churches into dance-houses. Do away with Christianity's products. Bear in mind that all hospitals must go. There are none save those built by Christianity. Bear in mind all orphans' homes must go. All elevating associations must go; all asylums for the blind and the insane; all reformatories must go. Christianity built them. Are you ready to burn your mother's Bible, or do you believe in it?—Moody.

Mr. Moody, we will accommodate you in as far as we are able, but we would not burn our own Bible though we esteem it in the main fabulous, for it contains many truths and high moral precepts, and all truth is precious in the eyes of truth seekers; besides, it is very interesting as forming a part of the evolutionary history of humanity in its emergence from barbarism and its progress toward that high and glorious civilization which so-called religion retards but cannot stay.

Nor would we turn our churches (we say our churches advisedly, as we are taxed to support them) into dance-houses, but into lecture-halls, where love, not fear, would be held forth as the highest incentiv to honorable and virtuous conduct.

Nor must hospitals go. Hospitals, even for animals, were built, even in "heathen" lands, before the churches had gathered fagots wherewith to burn dissentients from their creeds. Nor dare to assert, reverend sir, that all of these were built by Christianity. They were built and are supported by men and women of every shade of belief and disbelief from Catholic to Atheist, and all are taxed for their maintenance. And permit me to inquire whether, when the contribution box is passed in the churches and religious charities are solicited in the street, store, and dwelling, the Infidel is "skipped," or his alms refused?

Nor can we "bear in mind that all orphans' homes must go."

What of Girard College and its noble founder—a college reared and endowed by an Infidel and stolen by the Christian churches?

Nor must all elevating associations go, unless, indeed, to hold truth above price and sacrifice for it wealth, social position, and, if needs be, life itself, indicates so groveling a disposition as to disqualify for association with pure and lofty souls. Does it become Christianity, with its blood-stained hands, to point the finger of scorn at such?

You ask, "Are you ready to burn your mother's Bible, or do you believe in it?" No, we will not burn it. We cherish all the truth it contains as dearly as any—we fear, more than most Christians. But we know it is full of errors, moral, scientific, and historical, and we cannot indorse error or falsehood even when found in "mother's Bible."

B. W. L.

Heaven and Hell.

1.—Heaven.—Where is it?

The ancients believed that the heavens consisted of crystalline, icy, or glassy vaults, and that the fixed stars were luminous wafers riveted upon these crystalline vaults.

"The idea of a crystalline vault of heaven was handed down to the Middle Ages by the fathers of the church, who believed the firmament to consist of from seven to ten glassy strata incasing one another like the different coatings of an onion" (Humboldt's Cosmos, vol. iii, page 125).

Here is an explanation of the heavens, the third heaven, and the seventh heaven spoken of in the Bible.

Now science has dissolved these icy vaults and turned the so-called fixed stars loose and set them revolving in space around each other and around common centers of gravity, and holding them in place with the force of gravitation instead of the theological rivets.

Where is heaven now? Echo answers, Where?

2.—Hell.—What is it?

The hell idea had its origin in the hot springs, the volcanoes, and the internal heat of the earth.

The hot springs in the environs of Carthage led Bishop Patricius to the correct view of the cause of the higher or lower temperature of the bubbling waters. When on trial before the proconsul Julius, Patricius set forth his theory of the central heat "which causes the fiery eruptions of Etna and Vesuvius and communicates more and more heat to the springs in proportion as they hav a deeper origin."

With the learned bishop, Plato's Pyriphlegethon was the hell of sinners (Humboldt's Cosmos, vol. v, pages 188, 189).

The word hell means hidden, concealed, covered up; so that hell-fire is a reality, a scientific fact. And priestcraft has used it as a scarecrow to frighten money out of the weak-minded, credulous, and superstitious class of humanity, and made it a grand success.

P. F. Shumaker.

Flat Creek, La.

A Scientific Definition of the Human Soul.

Dedicated to Judge I. T. Richardson, president of the Liberal Association of Texas.

The soul is an idealistic scin laeca of oriental origin, that haunts the human mind by reflex hallucination. And at that peculiar change called death, the soul returns to the mysterious realm of phantasmagoria as the physical body returns to the material regions of nitrogen, hydrogen, oxygen, and carbon. The undeveloped mind of man through fancy sees the human soul beyond the malignant mountains of mundane misery, in the eternal skies of infinit hope, creep from the curious crucible of immortal desire, in the transcendental workshop of design, where liv the supernatural gods and ghosts of cause and effect, who sit on the incomprehensible throne of superstition, playing high dice with chance and fate for the possession of the magic lever of the imaginary engin that propels by atropine faith the miraculous machinery of the religio-metaphysical world. R. M. Tench.

In the West.

News and Notes.

After two days' and two nights' travel through the shining valleys of Montana, the Bad Lands of Dakota, with their wondrous desolations—through the broad fields, the golden grain tumbling into innumerable billows—the twin cities of Minnesota in the sunny air extend their glittering palaces of industry.

From Minneapolis my journey extends southward to Albert Lea, a city of about four thousand inhabitants, and the luminous harvest about it is glassed with brilliant lakes. It is a lovely country. The eye wanders over varied prospects, entirely different from the vast plains and mountains of the farther West. Mingling with the golden expanses of wheat are the magnificent cornfields, acre after acre, rolling like a verdant ocean. Thick green groves checker the level scenes. Minnesota is in its glory. The land seems to be alive with wealth; every inch is bursting into bloom of some kind. There are no desolate places. There is continuous animation. The sky is clear as a diamond, and the earth responds with a thousand contrasting beauties. It is like a bridal procession—the march of the jubilant hours—and the jingling of the machines is like the merry music of a holiday.

Capt. E. K. Pickett and his son, Victor G. Pickett, meet me at the train, and drive to their charming home, about two miles from the city, where I find a happy repose. The trees, the green grass, the waters, the gorgeous fields, the beautiful sky, make the world a paradise, and the storm of battle is forgotten.

Capt. E. K. Pickett is a war-horse indeed. He has kept up the conflict for over thirty years. He was a born Freethinker, although his father was of the straitest sect of the Baptists, and would fain make his son a follower of the lamb, by the foreordination of God. But Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason" was too much for the orthodox faith. At an early day the latter disappeared.

Freeborn county was a wild country when Captain Pickett first immigrated, about the beginning of the war. He has witnessed a wonderful transformation. He was a comrade in the Grand Army of the Union, and he means to keep our flag the flag of the free always! His experience has been a varied and interesting one in the history of this great Northwest.

Victor G. Pickett, his son, who is about to enter the State University, has inherited his father's independence, and is an earnest defender and supporter of Freethought. I enjoyed this Secular home, in the bosom of nature, where one could enjoy the flowing hours amid the sunshine, and with the recollections of the past kindle hope for the future.

Milton Pickett, whose tragic fate in the burning of the Tribune building at Minneapolis created a thrill of grief and sympathy throughout the entire community, in which he was well known and beloved, was the son of Captain Pickett. Milton was a child of brightest promis. He possessed a rare literary capacity, and was rising to eminence in his profession. His young life went out amid scenes of terrific suffering, but his memory is cherished. With the noble ardor of genius he devoted himself to human progress.

In the darkness shines

> The light
> That never was on sea or shore,
> The consecration and the poet's dream.

Albert Lea is quite an orthodox place, at least in appearance, for there are eighteen churches here, besides the Presbyterian college, which is quite an imposing structure, but has not a large number of students. The churches are not generally well filled. As a matter of fact, there is a large proportion of Freethinkers in and about Albert Lea. I happened to strike it in the busy season, and this was not favorable to a numerous attendance. The farmers must do their work while the sun shines whatever happens. But some of them came, and from a distance of twelve and fifteen miles. The audiences I addressed were most appreciativ, and the interest aroused was of so general a nature that it was determined to continue the work—to organize—and at the earliest possible moment I hope to renew the campaign. I am sure that Freethought could be triumphant here, notwithstanding the somber array of churches.

One of the divines here, president of the college, advised the young men to let the Infidel books alone. "Don't read them, boys," said he. "Don't read them. Why, I read Thomas Paine when I was a young man, and I havn't got over its influence yet." That is it. Thomas Paine goes marching on even in the mind of a Presbyterian clergyman. He hasn't "got over it yet," and I guess he never will so long as he has a grain of sense. If Paine has such an effect in that stubborn head, think what power he must possess in the universal world.

I lectured on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon and evening. I find many new friends. Mr. Allen Johnson is one of our stanch supporters. A serious accident, the breaking of his leg, prevented his attendance, but he does not haul down his flag. I visited him at his home, an ample farm about four miles from Albert Lea. A pleasant hour was passed with this sturdy comrade and the hospitable table was spread by Mrs. Johnson with Liberal heart and hand. Mr. Johnson's brother, Samuel J. Johnson, is also a veteran Freethinker and aids the work. H. G. Day, editor of the county Standard, is a vigorous reformer, independent in politics and religion. H. Loomis, A. H. McMillan, A. Crouch, Dr. Street, Mr. Ashe and family, Henry Paine, J. C. Frost, F. A. Barlow, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Dill, C. W. Wilkerson, ex-mayor; J. H. Slocum, Henry Nelson, and others are among the Freethinkers of this place and vicinity.

Monday afternoon I move on to Mapleton, about twenty miles from Albert Lea. I giv three lectures here and meet with a favorable reception. On the first evening, however, there was a bit of disturbance. Some valiant young Christian flung a rotten egg and then "scooted." No doubt he has won a harp and will sing with heavenly fervor, "I am a soldier of the cross." After this escapade, however, all was perfectly quiet.

I had good audiences at Mapleton and the campaign will be continued. Many could not be present on account of the rush of work. "After harvest" is the time for this country. The woods are full of Liberals, as they say, and when all are present the churches would seem to be in the minority.

M. A. Gilmore is our chief support at this point. He owns about eight hundred acres of land here, and the Christians cannot boycott him very well. He can afford to exercise the privilege of saying what he thinks. He would do it anyway, for he believes in Freethought with every fiber of his being. He has been a "rustler" ever since he was a boy. He went to Pike's peak when he was about sixteen, roughed it among the mines; then he made his way to Montana, Nevada, and Utah, and won his "stake." He has been in this state about twenty-two years. His wife came from the bosom of the Mormon church—a Liberal by the light of nature itself. Twelve children hav been born of this happy marriage, ten of whom are now living. Mr. Gilmore is already a grandfather, although he is not quite so elderly as myself. How we are sweeping into old age. I don't like it. I am having a jolly time in this numerous family circle. I am welcomed with the genuin hospitality of the border. I am made to feel at home, and the days pass pleasantly, while the bloom and glory of summer stretches far as eye can see, and the glorious winds are sweeping through the trees and bring luxurious coolness.

A hundred horses are browsing over these broad lands—bronchos from the far West, mainly from Idaho. They are pretty wild. I witnessed the lassoing of a couple of these and taming to the halter. They rush furiously at first and you would think they never would be caught, but they finally succumb to man's superior intelligence and bend their proud heads to the yoke. Mr. Gilmore kindly invited me to mount a newly broken broncho, but I declined. I did not care for any ground and lofty tumbling. It is a pleasure, however, to watch these splendid animals in wild freedom sweeping along like the untamed billows of the sea.

I hav met strenuous allies here who hav kept our flag floating for many a year. Mr. O. P. Smith, of Mankato, is pretty well known for his sturdy resistance to the church. He formerly lived at Janesville, Minn., and at Alma City. It was at the latter place that the church forced the fight upon him, and he had to stand by his colors. The church began with eighty members. Mr. Smith was almost alone, but when he left Alma City the church had only eight members left, and Mr. Smith did the largest business of anyone in the place. Mr. Smith does not propose to giv up the contest, for he realizes the enormous power of the church, especially in politics, and that it is a lifelong battle against its pretensions. Mrs. Smith, like myself, was born in the bosom of the Congregational church of New England and became a Liberal almost without knowing. She taught the Bible class in the orthodox Sunday-school, but she was so true to the Bible and expounded it in such a common-sense way that the deacons declared her a heretic. Thus by natural evolution she reached the philosophy of Freethought.

Mr. James Geddes, of Delavan, is another of our stanch Liberals in this part of the country. He has done a great deal to advance Liberalism. At Delavan he has secured the services of Jamieson, Mrs. Freeman, Mrs. Krekel, and through these advocates of our cause a great gain has been made. Mr. and Mrs. Geddes were present at all the lectures at Mapleton and aided materially in their success. J. H. Hussey, Mr. and Mrs. Scott, Byron Mitchell, who introduced me at the lectures, Chas. Lateaurell, the McGregors, Mr. Haskins, George Phelps, Charles E. Williams, Ed. Gilmore, and George Gilmore, and all the Gilmores, even to the smallest—a host of them—and baby Williams, who attended all the lectures, grandchild of M. A. Gilmore, who will certainly take the front rank when we hav burnt the last campfire—all these, youth and age, happy children and gray-haired men, hav made our campaign at Mapleton a lively and a brilliant one, with morning's promis amid the harvest lights and shades.

I shall come back again to these fields of bright and cheerful labors. Minnesota does not make any halt in the line of progress. Samuel P. Putnam.

Notice.

Samuel P. Putnam will lecture at Madison Hall, Chicago, on Sunday, September 4th, on "Liberal-Political Organization;" addresses also by John R. Charlesworth, "Organization of Freethought Federation." All who wish to coöperate will please send their names to Samuel P. Putnam, Chicago, Ill.; general delivery.

A Political Suggestion.

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker, Sir: I hope you will pardon me for a few lines of political suggestion. I hav been a Republican ever since the rebels fired upon Fort Sumter in April, 1861, and was one of the boys who marched under the orders of General Grant southward in an effort to put down the late Rebellion, and was made a cripple for life by a gunshot wound at Fort Donelson; so you see it must be no light or trifling reason I hav for changing party affiliations.

During the past few years I hav been gradually growing disgusted with some things that now go under the name of Republicanism, and think it time to call a halt as to some things that hav been done, and as to other things that are likely to be done in the same line of procedure.

A Presbyterian elder for president; another zealous churchman, a Sunday-school superintendent, for postmaster-general, who put $100,000 into the campaign fund, and who is using all his influence with church people and politicians toward increasing his power and authority over the press of the country so as to giv him authority to throw out of the mails any Freethought or so-called Infidel paper he may choose, without hearing or trial or notice—a censorship of the press equal in tyranny to the empire of Russia; the prosecution and imprisonment of good men for the publication, in proper language, of important facts, and the expression of honest opinions; a churchman for secretary of the navy, and another for secretary of war, and the more frequent than usual appointments of chaplains in the army and navy, and in legislativ assemblies and political conventions; and the fact that the secretaries of war and the navy hav an understanding, as I am informed, whereby a board of a certain church must approve recommendations for chaplaincies in the army and navy; the annual appropriations of public money for sectarian schools among the Indians and elsewhere; the recent amendment to the World's Fair appropriation bill requiring that great national enterprise to be closed on Sunday, to please church people and pander to prejudice—that same amendment having been offered by a notoriously corrupt politician of the Republican party, and adopted by a Republican Senate; the Sunday legislation in almost every state where that G. O. P. of God and morality (?) has power; the frequent proclamations of the president fixing days of thanksgiving and prayer and praise; the pandering by the Republicans in my own state to the German Lutherans on the question of compulsory education, going back on what they had previously done and known was right when they did it—all go to show a steady and gradual drifting toward a union of church and state, which is forbidden by our Constitution, and declared against in the Declaration of Independence.

I therefore suggest that we do not again vote the Republican ticket until such time as that party sees fit to again return to original principles of equal rights to all; equal justice to all and special privileges to none; free speech and absolute free press. These rights are all guaranteed by the Constitution, and should be enforced for the people, instead of being abridged or prohibited. JOHN S. GRUM.

Vienna, Ill.

Chestnuts.

Mr. H. L. Hastings has issued a little pamphlet entitled "Nuts for Skeptics to Crack." The last one is that old chestnut with an eggshell on it, "Where did the first hen come from?" According to his story, two young girls in Montreal were ridiculed for reading the Bible by a young man who had just returned from Paris, where he had graduated and become skeptical. The girls asked him which was first, the first chicken or the first egg. If he said the hen was first, they wanted to know how there could be a hen that was not hatched from an egg, and if he said the egg was first, they were anxious to ascertain how there could be a hen-egg that was not laid by a hen. When, at last, this young man gave it up, these little girls, out of the plenitude of their wisdom and knowledge, told him solemnly that God produced the first hen or the first egg. Apparently this young man, without stopping to inquire how these little girls came to know so much, went away instructed and satisfied. "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings," etc. It is a wonder some of these smart little girls do not hav theological professorships in our universities.

Let us see. I am asked this question, and I tell these wise little girls that the egg was first. Then they tell me that God produced that first egg. I say, All right, God has laid an egg. Then this is not a hen-egg; it is a God-egg. Now, understand, we do not accept evolution. "Like produces like." A God-egg, when incubated, ought to produce a God or at least an angel.

That will never do. The original first hen-egg must hav been laid by a hen. That is why we call it a hen-egg, because it came from a hen. If it came from a God or a goose, it would be a God or a goose egg. So I concluded to stay by the proposition that the first hen laid the first egg. Then, when I am asked what produced the first hen, I say, You hav no right to ask that question. When I say the first I mean the first. The first hen is invisible, omnipotent, omnipresent, uncreated, without body or parts, and the first rooster crew to awaken the slumbering universe before the morning stars commenced their synchronous anthems. But the little girls may speak blasphemously against my hen and say it is merely a creature of my imagination. All right, my dears; you draw on your or your parson's imagination for your Gods. I draw on mine for the original spring chickens. But my theory has the advantage. The existence of a hen accounts for the existence of eggs. The existence of a God does not.

The learned Dr. John Barclay, who wrote before some of the most striking discoveries in paleontology had been made, said: "It will not be easy on any principles exclusiv of the vital to answer these questions. What was the origin of the first egg, or what was the origin of the first bird? For where is the egg that came not from a bird, and where is the bird that came not from an egg? To the mere Materialist who excludes every species of vitality but that of the organism, this problem is nearly as embarrassing as that of the origin of the universe itself."

It is now known that birds were preceded by numerous species of ornithosaurs or bird-reptils, some of them with so many bird characteristics and with so many reptil characteristics that naturalists are unable to classify them as either bird or reptil. We know that feathers are modified scales and birds are modified reptils and there never was a first bird. How beautifully theology accounts for the origin of that which never existed!

The pursuit of ghosts and Gods is a weary chase. Mrs. Waisbrooker published an inspirational pamphlet some years ago in which her spirit control appealed to embodied people to help the spirits to eliminate the God idea from the world. Think of it! Little spooks chasing the big one! Why should we join in the chase any more than we should be anxious to help Don Quixote fight the windmill? D. PRIESTLY.

Milwaukee, Ore.

Death of Mrs. Rose.

J. M. Wheeler writes in the London Freethinker: Mrs. Ernestine Louise Rose, who expired at Brighton on August 4th (Shelley's centenary), had far exceeded the common lot of years; yet her death will be felt with a pang by many an old Freethinker both here and in America. She was no common woman. The daughter of a Jewish rabbi, born at Pierterkof, Poland, Jan. 13, 1810, she early in life evinced her independence by questioning her father on points of religion he found difficult to answer. At the age of seventeen she went to Berlin and interviewed the king of Prussia on the right of Jews to remain in the city. She was in Paris during the revolution of 1830, and throughout life was a strong republican. She came to London as a teacher of languages, embraced the views of Robert Owen, and was encouraged by him to propagate them in public. In 1834 she presided at the formation of a society of Owenite reformers called the Association of All Classes of All Nations, without distinction of sect, sex, party, condition, or color. She was a life-long advocate of woman's emancipation. During her residence in England she married Mr. W. E. Rose, a Freethinking follower of Owen. In May, 1836, they went to the United States, where Mrs. Rose devoted herself to the propaganda of Freethought, woman's rights, and the abolition of slavery. She lectured gratuitously in all parts, even in the Southern states, where she was once threatened with tar and feathers. "Your divine institution of slavery," she said to her threateners, "makes you so lazy—a task like that will do you good; set to work and do it." In 1838 she sent the first petition to the New York legislature to giv married women the right to hold real estate in their own names. Her eloquence and courage made her known throughout the states. With her friend, Mrs. Staunton, she inaugurated the Woman's Rights movement. About 1870, owing to declining health, she returned to London, where she but occasionally spoke, as at Owen's centenary, May, 1871, and at the conference of Liberal thinkers at South place in 1876, where she urged the necessity of a bold attack on religion. Mrs. Rose lived and died an Atheist. She was never afraid of the name. Only about six weeks ago she gave me a copy of her "Defense of Atheism," and said she had nothing to alter. She passed away quite unconsciously. In accordance with her wish she was buried beside her husband at Highgate cemetery, close to the graves of Austin Holyoake, James Thomson, Mrs. Waynham, and Mrs. J. Martineau. Mr. Holyoake officiated, reading a special notice of Mrs. Rose written for the occasion. Mrs. Allinson, wife of Dr. Allinson and niece of Mrs. Rose; Mrs. Bonner, Mr. Truelove, Mrs. Foote, Mrs. and Mr. Wheeler, Mr. and Miss Trevillion, Mrs. Robertson, Mr. Marsh, Miss E. Holyoake, and other Freethinkers were present.

A Proposed Children's Journal.

MY DEAR TRUTH SEEKER FRIENDS: I hav been urged for years and years to start a Liberal paper for the young, and of late many hav insisted I should do so, and promised to help in the way of getting subscribers and furnishing communications for it.

It seems a daring venture to attempt such a work on no means at all. But we—Mr. Graves and I—hav concluded to try it, as we hav a press and a little type and, we hope, lots of friends.

Now, I trust that all who can will send at least twenty-five cents for six months' subscription. We must begin with the children if we hope to Liberalize the world. It is easier to teach truth at first than to unlearn errors and then do it.

The Little Freethinker was born August 9th, and, I think, only needs to be seen to be appreciated and loved. ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

Snowville, Va.

The Great Demands of the Age.

Some things which the church needs to show up to save the faith and perpetuate her power:

1. A God who will answer prayer.
2. A man whose prayers some God will answer.
3. A living God who has been killed.
4. A living soul which once animated a body now dead.
5. A believer of the gospel of Jesus. (See Matt. xvii, 20; Luke xvii, 6; Mark xvi, 17–20.)
6. A man who can answer Colonel Ingersoll.
7. A man who can tell who wrote the sacred scriptures.
8. A man who knows what the scriptures mean.
9. A man who can so interpret the scriptures as to make the Bible harmonize with itself.
10. A man who can explain how a virgin can be a mother.
11. A man who can explain how a son can be his own father.
12. An ordained minister who can preach a sermon without telling a lie.
13. An ordained minister who can tell a truth about Infidelity.
14. A preacher who knows what Infidelity is.

Or the alternativ of the above requirements is an educated God with a good memory to inspire a new Bible. P. F. SHUMAKER.

The Kansas Freethinkers' Association

Will hold their third annual convention at Ottawa, Kan., September 9th to 14th. John E. Remsburg and other good speakers will preach the gospel of truth.

All Freethinkers and Liberal societies are invited to attend and aid in the good work of teaching reason instead of faith. Clergy and Christians are especially invited to attend.

The Freethinkers will hav the use of Forest park, which has all the advantages of beauty, comfort, and convenience for the entertainment of visitors.

President, C. K. LEVERING,
Burlington, Kan.
Secretary, L. D. WHITE,
Halstead, Kan.

The Paine Park.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20, 1892.

I will take $100 of stock in Paine park.

W. H. BURR.

JOBSTOWN, N. J., Aug. 20, 1892.

I will take one if not more shares of stock in the purchase of the Paine farm at New Rochelle, N. Y. I think it a grand movement, and should be pushed along so as to make sure of it. Yours,

S. R. WETHERILL.

Our Children's Editor Welcomed to London.

Saladin in the Agnostic Journal.

Miss Susan H. Wixon, of "The Children's Corner" of the New York TRUTH SEEKER, and author of "All in a Lifetime," is at present in this country. We had, the other evening, a pleasing and interesting interview with her. She has the shrewdness and wide-awakeness of her countrywomen, but undefaced by the "tall" manners which we hav more than once observed among the Janets of the New World. She is no frivolous flâneur, but has earnestness and soul in her; and we were glad to meet her and receive her gratulations from our Freethought brother, E. M. Macdonald, of New York.

One of Helen Gardener's New Books.

From the Baltimore American.

The Commonwealth Company, of New York, hav just published Helen H. Gardener's new book of short stories called "Pushed by Unseen Hands." As a writer of such stories, the author has already achieved quite an enviable reputation, and there is every indication of a wealth of material from which the field of fiction is to be enriched by many charming results of her genius. The terseness of expression, the delicacy of humor, and clever dramatic ability that hav characterized some of her earlier efforts, are equally striking in this later work, which quickens the reader's thoughts toward a channel of science yearly receiving more and more attention.

From the Kansas City, Mo., Times.

"Pushed By Unseen Hands" is a collection of stories by Helen H. Gardener, and serves to again bring that popular writer into prominence as a writer of the short story. The only subordination of her reputation in this class of literature was the remarkable success of her novel, "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" Another long story is in preparation, and if it should meet with the success won by this, it is probable that this author will be more lastingly remembered by her vigorous long stories than by her really more finished and more satisfactory short ones. The collection under consideration includes ten stories, all tending to show the power behind the dramatic throne of modern conventional domestic and public life. Helen Gardener is the most fearless motiv fictionist of these times and has given time, thought, and revelation to some phases of society hitherto clothed. If she could point out the remedies as effectivly as she can diagnose the various cases her work would reform the social world. But all her writings are wholesome and profitable reading for advanced thinkers and workers. Inasmuch as the characters, scenes, and plots are all secondary to her motivs a better idea may be obtained from her own words than from several reviews.

Letters of Friends.

A Sister Freethinker.

ST. PAUL, MINN., June 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed is $1, for which my husband would like you to send the Bible Picture Book. He says he wants that to read in, instead of going to church on Sunday. He has made a Liberal of me. I am sure I do not regret it. THE TRUTH SEEKER is a very interesting paper. I always read it, and enjoy it. MRS. GRUE.

Believes in Devils.

NEWARK, N. J., July 31, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: A reverend sky-pilot of Newark thinks the Rev. Mr. Crow is dangerous because he preaches that the God he worships is not in partnership with the old fellow called sometimes the Christian devil. Well, I will admit that there is danger, for if Mr. Crow succeeds in convincing the Rev. Mr. Brady's congregation that there is no devil, then the gentleman would hav to look around for another job. Perhaps he could get on the Pinkerton force. He says that any man who does not believe in a devil is ignorant. Yes, I agree with the gentleman, for I know there are a great many Christian devils who are mean enough to rob hen-roosts.

Respectfully, W. W. MORRIS.

A First-Class Way to Spread Freethought and Help The Truth Seeker.

OAKLAND, CAL., Aug. 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been trying for a long time to get some subscribers to THE TRUTH SEEKER, but so far hav failed. However, I got one man to promis to take one a week if I could get a newsdealer to keep them, so last Sunday I went to the nearest dealer and told him to get two copies, and the other man would take one at ten cents a week and to keep the other in plain view so that the pictures could be seen, and at the end of a week if it was not sold I would take it and pay ten cents for it. He agreed to the proposition. Hoping it will be of some help to you and the cause of Freethought, I remain,

Yours for truth, FRANK BUTLER.

Pleasant.

BIG FLAT, ARK., June 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $7, for which renew my subscription, and send the Bible Picture Book and others named.

I was looking for another subscriber but will wait no longer. I hope by another year to be able to enlarge THE TRUTH SEEKER list on this range; also that I will be able to meet THE TRUTH SEEKER friends at the Fair at Chicago in 1893. Thanking you for the prompt and regular manner THE TRUTH SEEKER has come to me for the last four years nearly, and for the improvements you hav bestowed on the paper; hoping to remain a subscriber till I pass over to see old baldhead "Eliger," I remain,

One of THE TRUTH SEEKER boys,

E. E. ADAMS, M.D.

Organize or Be Conquered.

PITTSBURGH, PA., Aug. 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I saw your picture on the first page of THE TRUTH SEEKER August 13th, and that shows plainly where we are drifting. The priest has his knife at our throat and is only waiting for a little more power from our pious Congress when the blood will begin to run again. Is it not time that we Freethinkers of this country would organize so that we could defend our rights at the ballot-box? We will hav no rights in this country if we do not wake up soon; they will all be gone. The priest and preacher are taking a heavy hand in our politics, and now is the time to put a stopper on them, or the battle of freedom will hav to be fought over again in this priest-ridden country soon. I think the churches hav gone quite far enough now, and without organization we cannot stop them. DELMONT JONES.

Wants a Statement in Finance Substantiated.

CASTANA, IA., Aug. 10, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: While I like to read the clashing of opinions in your "Letters of Friends," the clashing of facts is not so much to my liking. Perhaps if we could only agree as to the facts, there would be little need of argument. For instance, in THE TRUTH SEEKER of July 16th Mr. F. H. Marsh makes a brief statement of the history of the Bank of Venice. If his facts are correct we must believe that the ancient bank did business "for more than five hundred years" without any other capital than a printing-press and a supply of fiat paper! All that may be true, though it scarcely seems credible and it is not according to my knowledge and belief. Will Mr. Marsh be so kind as to furnish us through THE TRUTH SEEKER with a bill of particulars, together with his authority for the same? I would take pleasure in being convinced as to his facts. P. D.

Why People Murder.

ASTORIA, ORE., July 31, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The books received, and am well pleased with them. The "Old Testament Stories Illustrated" is rich. Long liv Heston, and may his shadow never grow less.

I had a narrow escape from conversion to Christianity. It was in this wise: I went to hear the exercises at the Methodist church on children's day. They had some nice things, and some good things, and otherwise. One little girl (the one that came so near converting me) spoke of the attempt to kill Russell Sage, and said the would-be assassin was a Freethinker, and that was the reason he did that, as he had nothing to fear in the next world. She cited this as an awful example for all to keep clear of all Freethought and Freethinkers. Awful, was it not? But she failed to tell us what caused Wilson, a Methodist, to kill Mamie Walsh at Milwaukee, Ore., and then talk of going to heaven. If he goes there, I do not want to. I want to go to some place else, if there is any place to go after death except as everything else goes. There is birth, life, death, and decay in all things alike.

Yours for liberty, W. D. MCCURDY.

Secret Societies.

MIDDLEFIELD, ILL., Aug. 11, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I will send you a duplicate letter of one I just sent to the editor of the Christian Conservator (United Brethren in Christ) in regard to the churches exterminating all secret organizations. M. H. WILLFONG.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CONSERVATOR, Dayton, O., Mr. Editor: I see in your paper of August 3d you condemn all secret orders and class them with the Knights of Labor, Mafia, and all alike. That shows what prejudice can do. Now, I belong to no secret order, and never did, except to one and I always regretted belonging to it. It was the Good Templars. But I think I can giv unbiased judgment between all. I hav read the by-laws and constitutions of most of the secret orders. Some I condemn and some I sanction. One I know is as far ahead of any church in its charity to its widows and orphans as day is of night. That is the Order of United Workmen.

Now be honest and tell me what church givs at the death of the husband and father the sum of $2,000 to the widow and orphans. If you are not a fanatic you surely can giv credit where credit is due.

As I hav said, I belong to no secret order, and I never expect to, for I am sixty years old. Now, if I would say, as you hav, I condemn all churches because I do not like one or two churches, you would say I was an Infidel, and ought to be burnt at the stake, as thousands hav been because they did not believe as you do.

As for the Knights of Labor, Mafia, Anarchists, and all such murdering cutthroats, I am eternally down on them. But I can giv justice where it is due. You say all secret orders should be exterminated, and I think that if you had the power you would say the same of all religions—"Exterminate all except my religion."

Where did you get any better right to your belief than I or any other to our belief? M. H. WILLFONG.

Hav Lectures.

MISSOULA, MONT., Aug. 4, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We at Missoula hav had Mr. S. P. Putnam with us for a week. Most of the time has been spent visiting and seeing some of our pleasant valley. He gave three lectures—one on Saturday night, one Sunday afternoon, and one Sunday evening. Mr. Putnam is a very forcible speaker and handles his subject well. The one on the "Demands of Liberalism" ought to be delivered in every town in America, especially in these times when the church is so activ in ingrafting church laws on this already too much lawed country. Justice is choked to death with too much law. Mr. Putnam's lecture on "Freethought and Morality" could be delivered in the most orthodox community without causing a ripple. We had out a large audience, about equally divided between ladies and gentlemen, a large number of whom were believers of some Christian creed. He was able to hold the house so you could scarcely hear a ruffle, only when they were so well pleased there was an encore. Mr. Putnam has done a fine thing for us here—has put many a one thinking; has sold a good many Freethought books and brought our papers to the notice of many more. Liberals all along the line could do a grand work in coming out and raising a little money for a good lecture to open people's eyes and stave off the coupling of church and state a few more years and make this a much smoother world to liv in than it was in the day of John Calvin. And if you do think of having a lecture, let me recommend Mr. Putnam's "Demands of Liberalism," and "Freethought and Morality." A. M. STEVENS.

The Truth on Sunday.

Aug. 10, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: A few thoughts struck me in relation to closing the gates on Sunday at the World's Fair. To call it Sunday is to set our wisdom before the wisdom of God, and to giv that glory to a pagan idol. The ancient Saxons called it Sunday because upon it they worshiped the sun. As the Sabbath of the Jews is of divine institution according to the Bible, where does the Sunday come in? I find no record of it in the New Testament, but find in history that the emperor of Rome, Constantine, in the year 306 ordered that the heathen worship to the sun should be observed by Christians, and called the first day of the week Sunday. What reasonable man can justify Constantine for keeping that day as a holy day? What right had he to order the day to be observed as holy? The clergy of the present day know full well that it is a humbug and that there is no divine authority for it. The superstition among the ministers and people is astonishing. But there is great advancement in knowledge. People begin to reason, and THE TRUTH SEEKER, with other papers of the same truths, are "turning the world upside down."

The other evening a young man said to me: "I was brought up a Catholic, but I don't believe as Catholics do—that the priests must not marry, and that there is a hell to punish a body. My reason teaches me different. It is all superstition. The whole family jumped on me at once. If I had been a wild beast they could not hav been more ferocious." He said: "I believe in Robert Ingersoll. He suits me. My opinion and his agree." So you see, THE TRUTH SEEKER and kindred spirits are doing a mighty sight of good in the cause of reason and common sense.

I see it is stated in the books that an "Infidel" is an unbeliever in Christianity, one with want of faith, etc. Well, on the same standpoint, are there not Infidels who believe the contrary? It appears that Infidelity is nothing but a belief of a thing, which every man has a right to express and exercise for himself without being stigmatized as a miscreant.

When the last stain of paganism is removed the world will see a Christianity which will be primally a life of purity rather than a creed embodying speculations about the unknowable.

S. R. THORNE.

God an Adulterer.

DENVER, COL., July 21, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav often wondered that you or some of your writers had not elaborated the doctrin of the nativity of Jesus, for I hav often thought it curious that God should say to the Jews, "Thou shalt not commit adultery," and then do it himself: for nothing is clearer than that he perpetrated that when he begat Jesus, by Joseph's wife, making the whole Christian church hang upon an act and fact of begetting an illegitimate child. And thus it depends upon bastardy for its validity. When the angel, the messenger of God, went to Mary and made his proposition to her, she seemed to hesitate about taking what he proposed. She said to him: "How can this be?" and then he said, "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee," etc. Then he went farther to bribe her by specious promises in saying, "Thy son shall be heir of the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and to his kingdom there shall be no end." Who ever heard of Jesus inheriting the throne of David or being a king among the Jews or reigning over the house of Jacob for an hour? By these specious promises Mary was influenced to consent to the proposition, and said unto him, "Be it unto me as thou hast said" (Luke i, 28). The whole resulted in the birth, if the Testament be true, of a bastard God and a bastard man. And this child was put to death, as the Jews thought, for the crime of assuming to be God, as directed by God himself in Deut. xiii, as follows: "If there arise among you a prophet [do not all the churches hold that Jesus was a prophet?], a worker of wonders [do not all hold him to hav been such?], and" if what he said should prove true, and yet if he shall say, Come, let us worship some God near at hand, or afar off, that did not bring thee up out of the land of Egypt, thou shalt surely kill him. Thus the Jews put the man to death for claiming to be God in saying, "Ye shall honor me even as ye honor the father, for I and the father are one, for I am in the father and the father in me." The Jews say, he, being a man, claimed to be God and for this reason they crucified him, according to John, who says the Jews said, We hav a law, and by that law he ought to die. This was the only law for such a case in the Old Testament, and everybody reading the New Testament knows that he was born out of wedlock and therefore was illegitimate, and yet he was taken up and made an offering for the sin of the whole world. As I am so blind as not to be able to write myself, I hope some of your writers will take up this subject and giv it a thorough ventilation. A. B. RICKARD.

Jehovah Assaulteth One of His Churches.

ATLANTA, GA., Aug. 10, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The following question was suggested by a little incident that occurred in this pious city lately: Is the Christian iconoclastic deity turning Atheistical?

On Sunday evening, July 31st, a cloud arose in the west and came directly toward this city. Its approach was watched with much interest, as summer showers are among our chief delights. As it approached it gathered reinforcements from every quarter. It soon became apparent that the heavenly hosts were prepared for an engagement. General Jehovah in command, the bombardment was squarely commenced on this pious city of seventy-four churches. The destruction of property, the booming of heavy guns and many of them, and rattle of heaven's flying artillery, would hav brought the blush of shame to the cheeks of a Sherman, Johnson, or McPherson. The combat deepened, the heavens darkened. The contest between darkness and erratic flashes to a close observer was about an even thing.

This city, like all well-regulated cities, has several theaters. The unequaled artists for several months past had drawn largely upon the public. This caused a diminution in the churches and aroused the jealousy and indignation of the priesthood to such an extent that they opened a tirade against these vestibules of perdition, but failed to close them, or reduce their patronage to any perceptible degree. They next invoked aid of the authorities, and had special police, and secret spies to watch for some overt act by which they might close down on them with the strong arm of law. The plays were in keeping with those who patronized them—cultured and refined—and no star kicked above the mark prescribed by law.

The storm king raged on this eventful night. Not a theater was disturbed, not a saloon interfered with, not a gambling hell or diving hole molested. A Baptist church with its assembled crowd, heads bowed in solemn reverence and adoration to him who

Rides upon the stormy skies
And calms the roaring seas,

had its tall spire knocked into kindling, and a dozen or more of its devoted inmates knocked unconscious in one round. The Bible-pounder who failed to get enough of the electric fluid to make him sensible, not being educated in the law of cause and effect, could only console his superstitious admirers by the old-time saying, "His ways are mysterious, and past finding out." W. S. D.

A Reverie at the Grave of My Brother.

LORDSBURG, CAL., Aug. 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Another wrinkle has been written on the brow of time. Scarce hav the echoes ceased those exulting strains which ushered our brother's advent when the air grows heavy with the sounds of lamentation. In the springtime of his infancy he sported joyously amid the gush of song-birds and the fulness of flowers; in the golden summertime of his youth he may hav dallied with delusiv doctrins and dreams; but the autumn of manhood and frost of age stole upon him with stern vicissitudes, and long and faithfully he buffeted the billows of fanaticism, until at last, after reaching his seventy-ninth milepost, the winter of old age with many sorrows pierced his tired heart and bade it cease to throb forevermore.

Prone in his windowless tomb we lay our brother to sleep his last sleep, while the low, measured moan of the Pacific and the wild wailing of the northern blast blend with the voice of the night to chant his requiem. Clenched in his pulseless grasp he bears away what none can summon back—a severed cycle of the life, the mind, the deeds, the destinies of all the living. Forth from their cerements start specters of the bygone years to greet him at his coming within that dread domain where he has gone. They stand like sentinels to guard its secrets till the day of doom. Not wisely said the moralist, "The past is but a point," for what seems thus to the gross sense of man is a vast land of shadowless stillness. Unfathomable wonders (may) lie concealed behind its dusky veil waiting forever the grand event of nature's dissolution. No mortal eye can penetrate its mysteries, no mortal tongue evoke the spirit from its vasty deep. With Titan grasp thought ventures to essay it, but in vain. With vacillating splendor fancy gilds its vestibule, yet pierces not beyond. There the wrecks of empire float sullenly along the stream of time. There the crumbling raiments that human hands hav planned lie moldering in dim and dread magnificence.

There the designs and undertakings, the struggles and achievements, of unnumbered generations are scattered far and wide in broken fragments. There the mean and the mighty, the oppressed and the oppressor, sleep together. There congregate those giant souls beneath whose tread the globe still rings, whose exodus from earth convulsed the nation with a grand funeral wail, and the myriad multitudes who died and left no sign. There dwell the countless millions of the buried dead, from those who trod this orb when first it sprang from evolution, and those who filled the intervening vastness of the ages, even to those who yester-eve gazed with dying eyes on the setting sun. There Ruin broods mournfully above the faded grandeur of Assyria, the pomp of Pericles, the scepter of Seleucus, and the broken law of the Mithridates. There the shade of Cæsar grimly stalks along, and the Corsican stands forevermore aloof in the tremendous solitude of his incommunicable soul.

No music floats from David's tuneless lyre. No song escapes from the sealed lips of Miriam (or our brother). No timbrels ring athwart the somber sea of Egypt. All is the hush of dense, impenetrable silence. Yet not alone to earth and man is limited the abstruse abyss.

Through the long sweep of ages and vast reach of space uncounted systems hav sprung forth and flourished and decayed. With all their teeming life and high intelligence, some loftier, some lower than the race of man, they hav departed. Comets hav flamed through their appointed paths and meteors hav blazed, then sunk in the immeasurable void extinct and rayless. And so may we.

A cosmoplastic Atheist, MELL.

General Review of the Outlook of the Times.

Aug. 16, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: There are many ways by which we can judge of the public sentiment and views of those with whom we come in contact, but there is no better way than by personal interviews and conversation by which we get the real belief or opinions of anyone we may chance to engage in conversation. If straws show which way the wind blows, I am sure that the breezes of education and general literature are fast driving from our midst the belief in a Mosaic monstrosity or personal deity of such attributes and innate qualities as described in the Bible. I feel free to say, that in my journey over the states, I find but a small proportion of the business men who believe in the Bible as a divine book, or in the vital teaching there written, although many of them rather favor the church and Sunday-schools for wife and children, believing them to be of good moral teachings. Yet they take but little stock in Genesis as teaching the creation of all things—Mother Eve's unhappy interview with the devil, the fall of man, salvation of the soul, hell, heaven, or the need of a savior, or prayer to deity to remind him of his duty to man. The prevailing opinion seems to be that we were forced into this world without any wish of our own, are being forced through it regardless of anything that we can do, and will finally be forced out of it without our advice or desire in the matter. They seem to think the laws of force and effect are the same in all cases, and bring the same results. The prevailing religion seems to be that the better we do while here, the better will be the result both here and hereafter. But few seem to dread the future, and most can see no tracks of a "cloven foot" imprinted in their pathway.

Free education, to my mind, is the arch stone that holds together the great structure of all moral worth, for when man is educated the mind is elevated and the animal is generally subdued. Intelligence does not wish to kill or wound the person of another, and as we gather instruction from the leaves of human knowledge, our enmity, revenge, malice, and other real enemies of natural man, depart from us and the better attributes of our nature take their place.

While I am but fifty-five years of age, yet I cannot help but see the great advance in society since I was a youth. No longer is it considered cowardly not to resent an insult, but rather the insulter is the one lowered in the estimation of his companions. With the more enlightened wars and individual quarrels are in disfavor, and looked upon as relics of barbarism.

It is a misnomer to call ourselvs civilized when we hav not yet passed the quaternary stake of human civility. Religions of all kinds hav held the world fast to dogmatical beliefs in such manner that those of an investigating mind were driven to silence. Skepticism and disbelief, the only causes that can secure a higher intelligence, hav been stifled by priestly hands.

We hav nothing as Liberals or Freethinkers to fear, as the sky of advancement is cloudless before us: but the forebodings of clerical storms can be seen in the desire to destroy the public schools. The wily prelates of superstition well know that intelligence cannot be enslaved and brought under control of a few usurpers of human rights, and therefore the teachers of truth and evidence must be destroyed, that ignorance may continue to hold sway over the land, and that the people may be made to pay tribute to priest and king.

The eyes of the public are getting opened and their voices cry out for free education. Our public schools hav come to stay, and must not be sectarianized or made to teach anything but known truths, such as can be demonstrated by science. Let each parent stuff the cavities of the brains of their children with such myths as they may themselvs believe, but let the schools be kept pure and under the protection of the state. Such is the prevailing opinion of the great majority of the citizens of this state, and only for the constant labor of the churches, who are in the minority, to use the school to foster their damnable creeds would we need fear the destiny of a future age.

A. D. SWAN.

David.

YPSILANTI, MICH., June 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: You hav so many able correspondents that it seems superfluous for me to try to add anything that would be either useful or interesting to the readers of your valuable paper. Still, such circumstances sometimes overtake us that it seems almost impossible to hold our peace. A few days ago a gospel windmill, who also was a Sunday-school superintendent, was urging his hearers to a closer study of the Bible, a more thorough examination of its men and women, and he selected as especially worthy of this consideration David of the Old, and Paul of the New, Testament. It seems to me that a man who would invite or provoke an examination should be very careful of the material he selected for such purpose, especially if he wished to improve either the head or the heart, but "God's ways are mysterious," and so are the ways of some men, and we ought to be thankful that "we are not as other men are."

Having been born of Christian orthodox parents, and obliged not only to study the Bible, but also the Westminster Confession of Faith, together with its catechisms, a church-member for twenty-five years and occupying also the place of Sunday-school superintendent, I was not entirely ignorant of the characters of the above-named worthies. I thought it would be a good thing to take his advice, so taking David for a starter, I very soon found myself—I am sorry to say—in bad company. In 1 Sam. xx, 2, we find him and his band of vagabonds that he had collected hovering around Nabal's sheepyard, and finally demanding that he and his men be allowed to feed upon their carcasses, claiming as a reason that instead of molesting either the shepherds or their flocks, he had faithfully guarded them. Now, so far as I can learn, Nabal had not solicited his help to guard either his men or his flocks, no doubt thinking himself fully competent to manage his own affairs in that regard, consequently he refused to comply with the request either to feed him or his men with the best of his flocks. This refusal seemed to raise the ire of the favorit son of the most high, and he immediately prepared to wipe out of existence this churlish Nabal. (Read the account in 1 Sam. xxv.) But this was not so to be. It so happened that this same Nabal had a beautiful wife (of course David knew nothing of this), who in the mean time had been informed of the noble warrior's threat. Womanlike, she took measures to ward off the blow, ordering the servants to bring out the mules, while she loaded them down with the best the house afforded, and started off for his offended majesty. Of course she succeeded in finding him, made ample apology, and presented her gifts. Read the reply of this noble man (1 Sam xxv, 32-35). Whether it was the presents or the beautiful Abigail herself that caused his wrath to subside is a question. At all events, in a few days "God smote Nabal that he died," and she became his wife. Colonel Ingersoll says it was a case that should hav been examined by the grand jury. It was the same Lord that smote both Nabal and later on Uriah, and for precisely the same purpose—viz., that the man after his own heart could get the beautiful Bathsheba as he had Nabal's wife. (See 2 Sam. xi.)

Following this wonderful character, we find him encamped in front of Jerusalem (2 Sam. v, 8). And David said, "Whosoever getteth up to the gutter and smiteth the Jebusites and the lame and the blind, that are hated of David's soul, shall be made chief and captain." It was not enough that these unfortunates were lame and blind, which ought to hav insured their safety, but he must offer a premium to hav their throats cut, for they were hated of David's soul. What a soul he must hav had. Again we find this same wonderful character delivering up to be hanged seven of Saul's sons, which must hav been his own brothers-in-law, as an offering to the Lord. (See 2 Sam. xxi.) It seems to hav been a very common diversion of David's God to visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children, and he was just the man to do it. He enjoyed it. This man of God could say, "I hav been young and am now old, yet hav never seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." If he had spent less time in watching after other men's wives, even when bathing, the results might hav been different.

As we "swing around the circle"—as President Johnson used to say—we come to another beautiful woman, Bathsheba, the wife of Uriah the Hittite. It seems to hav been as natural for this man of God to gravitate toward other men's beautiful wives, as it was for the two spies to gravitate toward the house of Rahab the harlot (Josh. ii, 1). This beautiful woman he first debauched, and then murdered her husband that he might add to his already overstocked harem. As no other house would fill the bill for the spies, so nothing but other men's wives would satisfy our divine hero. Is it at all strange that such a man could compose and write Psalm cix, which for fiendishness has never been equaled, neither could it be excelled by the foulest fiend of hell? Yet this same man's sayings are oftener quoted upon funeral occasions than almost all others, which I regard as an insult to all concerned. Christians tell us that he repented. Suppose he did, he ought to. But that did not restore the life of Nabal or Uriah. It did not restore the life of the seven sons of Saul, which he had sacrificed to the Lord, who accepted them. It did not make him a clean man, by his own acknowledgment in Psalm xxxviii. It did not deter him from taking the beautiful Abishag to wife. Such as he should hav taken a back seat by himself, and forever held his peace, but instead of this his acts seem to hav rendered him immortal, for one of his biographers says, "David did right in the sight of the Lord all his days, except in the matter of Uriah the Hittite." Then he did right in putting his prisoners taken in battle under "saws and harrows of iron," and cremating them in brick-kilns, etc. He did right in murdering "men, women, and children, lest they tell on us" (1 Sam. xxiii, 11). He did right in sacrificing the seven sons of Saul to the Lord, who were the natural aspirants to the throne he had usurped; of course he did, for the Lord accepted, and stayed the famins. He did right in penning Psalm cix. He did right in cutting the throats of the lame and blind Jebusites, because his soul hated them. Nevertheless he could sometimes tell the truth. He acknowledged that he was conceived in sin, and brought forth in iniquity, that he went astray as soon as born—he might hav added that he held his own in that respect through life. He could dance before the Lord in a semi-nude state, and meekly receive the sarcastic rebuke of his wife Michal, but she, not knowing the mind of the spirit, was doomed to die childless—but being a shrewd woman, managed afterward to hav children all the same. She had probably taken lessons from her liege lord in that respect. God forbid that we should find fault with this man of God for dancing in a nude state before the Lord, lest we should receive the rebuke of some of our D.D.'s who for the glory of God think it incumbent upon them to witness similar scenes by the opposit sex. Were we inclined to think that a morbid desire had anything to do in inspiring these gentlemen to behold beauty unadorned, as she first came from the hand of her creator before she thought proper to utilize the leaves of the fig-trees, we should "lay our hand upon our mouth, and our mouth in the dust, and cry, Guilty and unclean, God be merciful to us, miserable sinners." In the former case the Lord's anointed danced before the women, in the latter case the women danced before the men of God, making honors easy. Let us be thankful that as it was in the former case, so it was in the latter, all in the interest of morality and the greater glory of God. While we reverently bow our heads that it was the will of the creator to land this wonderful character upon the shores of time, let us hope that it will never be necessary to duplicate him.

JAS. P. DICKINSON.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight.
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Across the Atlantic.

"Merrie England."—York Minster.—Sights and Sounds in Antwerp.—Brussells.—The Wiertz Museum.

York, in England, is a fine old city, with massiv Roman walls, for it was once a great Roman station with an imperial palace and a Roman tribunal. You remember your school histories and about the wars of the Roses, the house of York and house of Lancaster. Well, here is the very ground of York, and here hav tramped the Roman legions. You remember, too, Isaac of York in the story of "Ivanhoe," and how the Jews in this place were killed in 1490 - two thousand massacred at one time. For what cause? Ah, yonder old cathedral might tell a bloody story. It took two hundred years to build this majestic pile of stone and mortar, with its arches and towers. Indeed, it is a wonderful piece of architecture, founded in 1171 and finished in 1400. Its great pillars and windows of stained glass—one window being seventy-five feet in hight and thirty feet broad—are impressiv to most people. I admire their beauty, especially the Rose window and the one known as the "Five Sisters," whose history, or the history of the five, is told by Dickens in "Nicholas Nickleby" (if you recollect the sixth chapter). This window is six hundred years old. Stories of Bible people—angels, saints, etc.—are told in the windows whose mellow light is very beautiful.

It would take too much time to describe this monster minster, but I was silly enough to go there on Sunday to a religious service, and caught a cold that stays by me yet, which I shall take as a warning to keep out of such places in the future. In different parts of the old building are statues of various church dignitaries finely sculptured in marble, some in recumbent positions, with clasped hands and solemn visage; one especially I noted with two little marble angels at the head and three at his feet. Another effigy of an admiral took my attention, an excellent man in his time, I judge, who died loved and lamented, for there were two young and winged cherubs at his feet, in marble, with handkerchiefs applied to their eyes. It was so ludicrous that I laughed till the tears fell from my own eyes, but I did not wipe them with a marble mouchoir, however.

The chapter-house of this magnificent cathedral is said to be the most perfect of Gothic architecture in the world. It is octagon in shape, and there is no exact knowledge as to its designers. It is thought to hav been built in the year 1200, but the carvings upon the columns are rather singular, not to say absurd and unchaste. There are carved monks making grimaces, repulsiv old monks embracing beautiful girls, while nuns and others are represented grinning and giggling at them. Seven squares of this octagon-shaped apartment are ornamented with elegant stained glass, while the eighth octagon forms the entrance, the vestibule to it being in the form of a Freemason's square. In the basement are remains of Roman and Norman workmanship, gloomy recesses that may hav been dungeons, and probably were, where honest men hav wasted away and died of starvation. We were told that our company was the only one in twenty years permitted to go all over the sacred edifice on the "holy Sabbath." The fee did it. Did the church ever refuse one?

Among the relics that stand for superstition we noted the solid silver crosier that Queen Catharine, widow of Charles II., gave to her confessor. It is wrought in priestly designs and is seven feet long. We saw an old communion-plate five hundred years old, and the great chair in which the Saxon kings were crowned. Richard III. sat in this chair, and so did James I. The great Saxon drinking horn of Ulphus is here. Old Ulphus drank wine from it, and gave all his vast estates to the church, and presented the horn as the title-deed. That is one of the ways by which the church gets a hold of property.

Another strange old place is the ruin of St. Leonard's, not far from the minster, interesting as having been founded by Athelstane the Saxon. Here are vaults and stone coffins and themes for many meditations. St. Mary's abbey, with its tumbling walls and its old Norman arch, still shows what a power was Catholicism in the other time when the church held its awful sway over the minds of men.

I walked on the old walls of the town, and was happy in the thought of the progress of the race.

We visited the remains of the old palace where once dwelt Mary of England. The foundations and some of the walls are intact, but the place is used at present as an asylum and school for deaf mutes. It being Sunday, the pupils were out for a holiday, so we missed seeing them, but we walked through the building and saw some of their handiwork. A handsome statue of Wilberforce at the entrance seemed to say it was a good use for a palace, but the inmates are not creditable to the inhabitants who produce these sorrowful results of error and ignorance.

Here in York we had candles to light us to bed. They keep the doors of the public parlors closed in the public hotels here. We innocently asked if there was no other public parlor than the small reception room. The housekeeper replied by saying to a servant, "George, open the royal drawing-room," whereupon "George" produced a key nearly as large as the key of the Bastile, and throwing open a door waved us into the room. A maid that looked for all the world like the "Little Marchioness" in Dickens, scrambled upon the table and lighted the chandelier, the globes of which were as big as buckets. She and "George" evidently expected we would be dazed by the magnificence, and pointed to the picture of the prince of Wales on the wall, but as we saw nothing superior to American drawing-rooms, we were silent. York is known as the first place in England where Christmas was kept by King Arthur, in the year 500. New York in America was named for Old York in England.

From York we journeyed to Lincoln, and there was another old cathedral to visit, but as we were about tired of such old concerns, with the smell of age upon them, we strolled about town for a couple of hours, bought a lunch of fruit and cake, and then went on to Harwich, a quaint old town, where we wandered along the railroad track and the shore, gathering fossil shells and curious flint nodules.

At Parkeston we had a sumptuous repast, finely served, and then we went on board the Colchester, a packet ship, and embarked for Antwerp. The next morning we woke on the Scheldt river. Officials came on board and examined our luggage, and then our party took a drive around town. Our carriages numbered thirty-seven in line, and of course the nativs were agape at the unusual spectacle. One of our number carried an American flag fastened to a cane.

Occasionally the old flag was recognized, and one man took off his hat, and told his fellows in good English that it was the "Fourth of July," and that "Mr. July was a bigger man than St. Patrick!" Antwerp is a fine old city, with parks and public squares, beautiful statues and fountains. Our carriages were somewhat the worse for wear, the horses rickety, and the drivers all talked Flemish. Nevertheless, the parade was imposing.

The docks of the city are fine, and include the two docks built by Napoleon I. when he made the place one of his naval arsenals, and the piles of merchandise here show that Antwerp is still doing a large commercial business.

There are two big cathedrals in Antwerp and others of lesser size. One has a garden at its entrance, where the Calvary is represented. Here, in life-size marble images, is represented the life of Christ, striking events in religious history, etc. Here are Jesuses, Marys, donkeys, Judas, and the other Apostles, including Peter and a barnyard fowl, a babe in a manger, Joseph, and all the rest. The whole is picturesque, but I do not think I appreciate the holy part of it—but I remember there was a fee attached to the exhibition.

The other cathedral contains Rubens's splendid pictures of the Elevation and the Descent from the Cross, and also the Annunciation. Before these paintings could be unveiled for us, there was, of course, the usual fee, but then we heard the musical chimes of the bells in the tower, we heard the priests chant a Latin prayer, saw the tall candles lighted, and then the pictures.

I confess I was more interested in the fact that the great painter employed his own family as models for the "holy family"—his beautiful first wife representing Mary, the mother of Jesus; his second wife, children, and his mother all coming into the pictures. In the "Place Verte" there is a fine statue of Rubens, and the street where he died bears his name.

The dogs of Antwerp are utilized by being put in harness and made to draw carts. It was a funny sight to see them drawing their carts as orderly as if they were little horses. Big dogs and little ones, black, yellow, and spotted, all are made to work in Antwerp. I did not like to see some of them pulling quite too heavy burdens and panting for weariness, and I thought our American dogs are aristocrats compared with them.

I saw, too, women harnessed to carts along with dogs, and women trundling wheelbarrows. Their hard, stolid faces, rough, peaked shoes and coarse clothes betokened a hard lot indeed. I saw only a few women wearing bonnets, but nearly all went bareheaded. We saw the same sights in Brussells, women with the brand of toil and degradation upon them. Here the social evil is licensed, woman is debased, resorting to the most revolting practices to earn the bread she eats; manhood is lowered, and—Catholicism reigns. Splendid cathedrals and abject poverty, wealth and licentiousness, religion, ignorance, and poverty—they walk here side by side.

There was a funeral going on in the cathedral of St. Gudule in Brussells, when we went there. An officer had died, and the hearse was profusely decorated with bright flowers, while inside the church priests chanted, and many candles lighted the dim old building. Old, grizzled women sat about the corners telling their beads, while the sun struggled in faintly through the rich stained glass. But the invisible writer had marked the columns, sculptures, and carvings all over with the words, "pain, privation, submission, superstition, bigotry, intolerance, and ignorance." He who sees can read.

We saw the palace of the king, but did not see the king. Plenty of soldiers marching to and fro reminded us of the old field of Waterloo, not far away, and we repeated,

"There was a sound of revelry by night,
When Belgium's capital had gathered there
Her beauty and her chivalry."

Later, we stood in the hall of the Hotel de Ville, where the ball is said to hav been held the night of the battle—a beautiful room that I wish I had time to describe, as well as the lovely old Gobelin tapestries of the other rooms in the building.

If you ever go to Brussells do not miss seeing the Wiertz gallery of paintings. Wiertz hated Bonaparte, and he has shown his hatred in the most horrible pictures of that wonderful hero, who believed in himself rather than in gods and demons, and who said, "I shall liv up to my destiny and cannot go beyond it."

SUSAN H. WIXON.

Roaring Lion on the Track.
By M. BABCOCK.
Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Pocket Theology.
By VOLTAIRE.
Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

THE SABBATH.
By M. FARRINGTON.
A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.
Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Sunday Question.
A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW.
WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.
By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.
Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

Materialism:
Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.
By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.
Translated from the German.
Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.
—LIQUOR DRINKING—
Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.
By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament.
THE GOSPELS,
Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not Included in the New Testament.
Price, - - - - - - - - - $1.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.
By FRANCES WRIGHT.
Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.
Price, - - - - - - 75 cents.

BIBLE IN INDIA.
—HINDOO ORIGIN—
Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.
By LOUIS JACOLLIOT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.
A HISTORY OF ALL
The Women Who Figure in the Bible.
—BY—
AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
Cloth, - - - - - - - 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY
—AND—
Her Awful Disclosures
AS TO [illegible] HALL CONVENT.
And a Few Words on Auricular Confession
Price - - - - - 10 cent

The Agnostic Annual
FOR 1892. Price, 25 cents.
Possibilities and Impossibilities, T. H. HUXLEY, M.A., LL.D.
The Growth of Agnosticism, R. BITHELL, B.S., Ph.D.
Early Verses, The Late CONSTANCE NADEN.
Sundays and Holydays, SAMUEL LAING.
Ecclesiasticism, ALFRED MOMERIE, M.A., LL.D.
Christ a Religious Creation, F. J. GOULD.
After Many Years: A Poem, W. B. MCTAGGART.
The Activities of Agnosticism, AMOS WATERS.
Religion Without Superstition, CHARLES WATTS.
Mr. Gladstone and Supernaturalism, H. J. HARDWICKE, F.R.C.S.
The Land of Death: A Poem, SALADIN (W. STEWART ROSS).
The Triumph of Rationalism, FREDERICK MILLER.
An Agnostic Homily, HON. C. K. TUCKERMAN.
Eternal Life: A Poem, GEORGE HENRY MARTIN.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.
Radical Romance.
By WM. MCDONNELL. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

Essay on Miracles.
By DAVID HUME.
Price, - - - - - 10 cents.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

The Modern Science Essayist

Popular Evolution Essays and Lectures.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life and personal characteristics; his views on education; his religious opinions. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His ancestry, life, and personal characteristics. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. Did the material universe ever have a beginning? By GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology; How the world grew. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETABLE LIFE; How does life begin; The problem of spontaneous generation. By WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE; The evidences from geology, geographical distribution, and comparative zoology. By ROSSITER RAYMOND, Ph.D.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: Relation of man to the brute creation; his ancestral line; duration of human life on the planet. By E. D. COPE, Ph.D.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: The mind and the nervous system: the nature of mind. By ROBT. G. ECCLES, M.D.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. Primitive man; growth of the family, city, and state: development of the domestic relations; marriage. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. Origin of religious beliefs; ideas of primitive man. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. How altruism grows out of egoism; the proper balance. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION—a, from geology; b, from morphology; c, from embryology; d, from metamorphosis; e, from rudimentary organs; f, from geographical distribution; g, from discovered links; h, from artificial breeding; i, from reversion; k, from mimicry. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By REV. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. Relation of the doctrine to prevailing philosophical systems. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. Plans for social regeneration as tested by evolution. By REV. MINOT J. SAVAGE.
16. THE SCOPE AND PRINCIPLES OF THE EVOLUTION PHILOSOPHY. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
17. THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF HERBERT SPENCER'S PHILOSOPHY. By SYLVAN DREY.
18. THE RELATIVITY OF KNOWLEDGE. The nature of sense-perception; sight, sound, taste, smell, feeling; the doctrine of the Unknowable. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
19. A STUDY OF MATTER AND MOTION. An excellent digest of a much vexed question, with quotations from many authorities. By HON. A. N. ADAMS.
20. PRIMITIVE MAN. Man as revealed by archeological studies; evidences of man's antiquity; geological periods; man's appearance in the pliocene; paleolithic and neolithic races; the ages of bronze and iron; cave men and lake-dwellers; dolmen and mound builders; primitive implements and tools; proofs of man's natural evolution. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
21. GROWTH OF THE MARRIAGE RELATION. Marriage a primitive institution; its earlier forms; no evidence of original promiscuity; exogamy and endogamy; group-marriage; polygyny, polyandry, and monogamy; marriage by capture; monogamy the highest form of the relation; divorce and divorce laws; marriage a contract; its regulation by the state. By C. STANILAND WAKE.
22. EVOLUTION OF THE STATE. The growth of political institutions; the patriarchal family; the tribe and clan. By JOHN A. TAYLOR.
23. EVOLUTION OF LAW. How law begins; statute law and judge-made law; the conversion of customs into law. By PROF. RUFUS SHELDON.
24. EVOLUTION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE. Supernatural ideas of disease; fetichism in medicine; the beginnings of medical science. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
25. EVOLUTION OF ARMS AND ARMOR. The necessity for arms and armor under the struggle for existence. By JOHN C. KIMBALL.
26. EVOLUTION OF THE MECHANIC ARTS, development of the human hand; the earliest use of implements and tools. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
27. EVOLUTION OF THE WAGES SYSTEM. The definition of wages; economic characteristics of the wage system; wages the outgrowth of slavery; origin and development of the wages system. By PROF. GEO. GUNTON.
28. EDUCATION AS A FACTOR IN CIVILIZATION. The beginnings of education; early methods in Egypt, Persia, China, Greece, and Rome; early Christian ideas of education; Catholic and Protestant views; the common school system. By MISS CAROLINE B. LE ROW.
29. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. I. The Theological Method. By REV. JOHN CHADWICK.
30. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. II. The Socialistic Method. By WILLIAM POTTS.
31. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. III. The Anarchistic Method. By HUGH O. PENTECOST.
32. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. IV. The Scientific Method. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
33. ASA GRAY: His Life and Work. By MRS. MARY TREAT.
34. EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUMANS. The Man and his Work. By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

☞ Each Number, Ten Cents. ☜

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Books by Helen H. Gardene

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1: paper, 50 cents

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents.

PUSHED BY UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler Hou Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents: cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full, index 446pp., $1.50.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Idea of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

News of the Week.

A SWITCHMEN'S strike at Buffalo, N. Y., accompanied by burning of cars and other violence, has necessitated the presence there of three thousand militia.

THE Homestead, Pa., strike, which was once thought ended by a compromise, is still on, and friction between the strikers and the soldiers occurs continually.

AT Constantinople five hundred deaths from cholera occur daily. Mohammedan zealots are aiding in the spread of the pestilence by the strict observance of their funeral rites.

TALMAGE is in England preaching to monster audiences. At a meeting in the Birmingham town hall eight thousand were present and three thousand rose and asked for prayers.

FOR several weeks the farmers of Prince Edward Island prayed for rain. Their prayers hav been answered by the falling of ruinous floods of rain for the last four days. Now they are praying for it to stop.

IN Tennessee, miners who struck against convict labor and used violence were attacked by troops. The strikers captured Colonel Anderson and held him as a hostage under threat of death. Fresh troops arrived and made captiv one hundred citizens as hostages, and threatened to fire on the houses, whereupon the strikers released Anderson. Some lives hav been lost.

IN Russia the daily average of new cases of cholera is over eight thousand, and of deaths over four thousand. Military measures hav been found necessary in many cases to suppress popular outbreaks due to the superstition against sanitation. Thirty persons hav been arrested for the murder of Dr. Moltchanoff, whose body was beaten into an unrecognizable form.

CATHOLICS are circulating the story that while Father Mollinger, of Pittsburgh, Pa., was in the sanctuary two days before his death it was flooded with supernatural light and a white-robed figure appeared and announced itself as St. Anthony, informing Mollinger that he would die in two days. Though well at the time, the priest prepared for his death, which occurred as predicted.

ON the 16th a terrible storm fell upon Nijni Novgorod, Russia, wrecking the crowded cholera hospital and many other buildings. The inhabitants were completely disheartened by this after their preceding disasters. Some fled, and those who remain hav thronged about the shrines and churches praying for the mercy of heaven. The storm is said by them to show the determination of the Lord to destroy their city for its wickedness.

PLACARDS against Christian missionaries continue to be posted in China. One reads: "Let us unite together and forbid the establishment of the Jesus religion church, and prohibit the foreign devil from entering our territory. Now let us apprehend all strangers among us who do not worship our gods, for they are kidnappers, and when so apprehended let us punish them ourselvs, and not send them to the authorities. We, the people of the city and of the surrounding country, do hereby with one heart and voice resolve that we will seek out the members of the 'Heavenly Home religion' and the 'Jesus' religion. If any be found to say that the foreign religions are good, let us bind him up, beat him, and push him into the deep water."

IN the New York state supreme court on the 9th a wealthy man of New York city named Robt. Moses was tried on an appeal from the decision of Justice Wisner, of Warwick, N. Y., by which he was fined $5 for fishing in a private pond on Sunday. Justice Cullen decided: "That the lake where the defendant fished was private property and that he had the privilege of fishing in it is conceded. It is not shown that he created any commotion or disorder or that his acts attracted or were witnessed by any person other than the complainant or disturbed the peace. On these facts the defendant contends that he was guilty of no offense; that under the authority of The People vs. Denin, 35 Hun., 327, to constitute the crime the act must disturb the repose of this community. We think not. Section 265 of the penal code prohibits 'all shooting, hunting, or fishing, playing, horse-racing, gambling, or other public sports, exercises, pastimes, or shows.' It will thus be seen that while not only public sports, exercises, and pastimes are forbidden, all shooting, hunting, and fishing, etc., are inhibited. The validity of such legislation cannot be questioned in this state. The question of how far these restrictions should be carried is for the legislature, not for the courts. Judgment and conviction appealed from affirmed."

EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents, MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Small fees; valid patents with broad claims; letters of inquiry promptly answered.

For FREE pamphlet, PATENT LAWS, address Commissioner of Patents, Washington, D. C.

We hav been informed by o'd inventors and experienced patentees, who employ this solicitor, that he is skilful.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents: cloth, 75 cents.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED.

A Work proving Christianity a Fiction. Most Startling Revelations of the Nineteenth Century Send Address for Prospectus to ORIENTAL PUBLISHING CO., P.O.Box 446, Philadelphia, Pa.

To Regulate the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABULES.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.
Loeb & Loeb, Montgomery.

Arizona.
J. S. Mansfield, Tucson.

California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 117 W. 1st, Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 102 N. Main, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Thos. W. Baker, Selma.
L. R. Titus, 237 South 4th st., San Jose.

Canada.
P. C. Allen, 35 King st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
John McKenna, 80 Yonge st., Toronto.
R. J. Moffat, Sea Island, Tulu Island, B.C.

Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.
C. Smith & Son, 385 Larimer st., Denver.
Stanchfield & Co., 200 Union ave., Pueblo.
Harbottle & Co., Salida.

Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.
A. J. Gardner, Kissimmee.

Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.
Post-Office News Co., 93 Adams, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., 204 Wabash ave., Chicago.
Chas. W. Curry, 183 Madison st., Chicago.
Chas. Macdonald, 55 Washington, Chicago.

Indiana.
H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.
A. C. Katt, Fort Wayne.

Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne, New Orleans.

Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.
Johnson Bros, 5 N. Main st., Fall River.

Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Baker & Holton, 87 Woodward av., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Minnesota.
E. P. Parcher, 8 3rd st., So. Minneapolis.

Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

Nebraska.
J. M. Wiley, P. O. News Depot, York.

New York.
Brentano Bros., 5th ave. & 18th st., N. Y.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
Abramowitz Bros., 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., N.Y.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.
E. J. Nieuwland, 10th ave. and 157th st.
Anderson & Co., 704 8th ave.
S. M. Bernhard, 119 E. 104th st.
Harlem Book Co., Boulevard Hotel, 124th st. and Lexington ave.

Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 342 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
B. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Day & Co., 259 Superior, Clevel'd.
Alf. Warren Co, 217 Central ave, Cincinnati.
Thos. Goddard, Box 235, Huron.
Standard News Co., 14 W. Tusc st, Canton.

Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 291 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.
G. Thornton, Palace Hotel Block, Heppner

Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden, Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
R. Staley, Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.
Fulton Bros., McKeesport.

Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.
W. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry, Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.
Rich Bros. & Mills, 229 N. Cherry, Nashville

Texas.
H. Hover, Denison.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 346½ Main st., Dallas.
G. W. Baldwin, Houston.
E. L. Merrill, Independent Pulpit, Waco.

Utah.
C. H. Parsons, 164 S. Main, Salt Lake City.
Margetts Bros., 76 Main st., Salt Lake City.

Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
J. C. Nathan, 104 S. 2nd st., Seattle.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

West Virginia.
News Store, 123 3rd st., Parkersburg.

England. [London.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st.,
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture: Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents: bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD"

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged

The passages unfit for family reading

Paper, 30 cents: cloth, 50 cents.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

ALE AND BEEF

"PEPTONIZED"

For { INVALIDS, CONVALESCENTS, NURSING MOTHERS.

Supplies complete nutrition. Agreeable to the most delicate palate. The only liquid pre-digested Food Tonic on the market.

Physicians Prescribe it. Your Druggist Sells it.

ALE & BEEF CO., 267 W. 17th St., New York.

Gems of Thought.

THERE are many who believe not only that religion is not necessary to morality, but that it has been and is a positiv hindrance to it.—Modern Thought.

IN my short experience of human life, the outward obstacles, if there were any such, hav not been living men, but the institutions of the dead.—Thoreau.

PEOPLE who are eager for reforms are apt to develop unpleasant traits, but it is only because they hav to fight against opposition and ignorance. When they are dead and the world is reaping the reward of their bravery and constancy, it no longer laughs, but makes statues of them, and praises them, and thanks them in every way it can.—Sarah Jewett.

THE Agnostic takes the ground that human experience is the basis of morality. Consequently, it is of no importance who wrote the gospels, or who vouched or vouches for the genuinness of the miracles. In his scheme of life these things are utterly unimportant. He is satisfied that "the miraculous" is the impossible. He knows that the witnesses were wholly incapable of examining the questions involved, that credulity had possession of their minds, that "the miraculous" was expected, that it was their daily food.—Ingersoll.

IN these equivocal oracles, whose meaning it is impossible to penetrate, we find nothing but the language of intoxication, fanaticism, and delirium. When we fancy we hav found something intelligible, it is easy to perceive that the prophets intended to speak of events that took place in their own age, or of personages who had preceded them. It is thus that our doctors apply gratuitously to Christ prophecies, or narratives of what happened, respecting David, Solomon, Cyrus, etc. Jesus himself has not been more happy in his predictions than his predecessors. In the gospel he announces to his disciples in the most formal manner, the destruction of the world and the last judgment as events that were at hand, and which must take place before the existing generation had passed away. Yet the world still endures, and appears in no danger of finishing.—D'Holbach.

IT is considered a waste of words to attack the Calvinistic doctrin of endless punishment, for it may fairly be claimed that no intelligent person now believes it. True, many profess to believe it, and some even think they believe it; but, judged by accepted rules of evidence, their belief is disproved. . . . Genuin belief is evidenced not only by action, but also by a consistent application of the theory espoused. But the doctrin of eternal damnation is never applied within the circle of the believer's acquaintance; it only does for strangers and heathen, or possibly, like Artemas Ward, for one's wife's relations. In all cases where sympathy is aroused, it is denied or evaded. A lady, brought up in this creed, professedly held to it, until a favorit son, a wild, wayward boy, swam across a stream to rob an orchard, and, being chased by the owner, was drowned in mid-stream, with profane curses on his lips. Her creed sent him to hell; but the loving mother's heart abolished the creed, and she ceased to be a Calvinist.—Robt. C. Adams.

EVEN when an authentic miracle is performed, it in fact proves nothing; for scripture tells you, in a great variety of places, that impostors may perform miracles, and that if any man, after having performed them, should proclaim another God than that of the Jews, he ought to be stoned to death. It is requisit therefore, that the doctrin should be confirmed by the miracles, and the miracles by the doctrin. Even this however is not sufficient. As impostors may preach a very correct and pure morality, the better to deceive, and it is admitted that impostors, like the magicians of Pharaoh, may perform miracles; it is in addition necessary, that these miracles should hav been announced by prophecies. In order to be convinced of the truth of these prophecies, it is necessary that they should hav been heard clearly announced, and seen really accomplished. It is necessary to possess perfectly the language in which they are preserved. It is not sufficient even, that you are a witness of their miraculous fulfillment; for you may be deceived by false appearances. It is necessary that the miracle and prophecy should be verified on oath by the heads of the nation; and even after all this there will be doubters. For it is possible for a nation to be interested in the forgery of a prophecy or a miracle; and when interest mixes with the transaction, you may consider the whole affair as worth nothing. If a predicted miracle be not as public and as well verified as an eclipse that is announced in the almanac, be assured that it is nothing better than a juggler's trick or an old woman's tale.—Voltaire.

Valuable Books on Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1 50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞ Catalogues Free. ☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25
Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA. Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,
Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League
Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,
Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,
Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,
Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore
Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.
By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial to Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 523 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by
DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, - - 40 cents.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,
Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE BEST!

THE

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 3-ounce coin silver, $22; 4-ounce, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $31 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7 50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $15; 11 jewels, $16 50; 15 jewels, $23; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3 60, knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for $6. Solid silver spoons, $1.50 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Extra heavy teas, $3. Etched:
"The Time to be Happy is Now,"
50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.

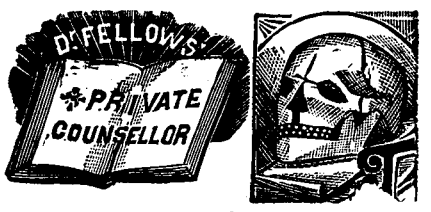
Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

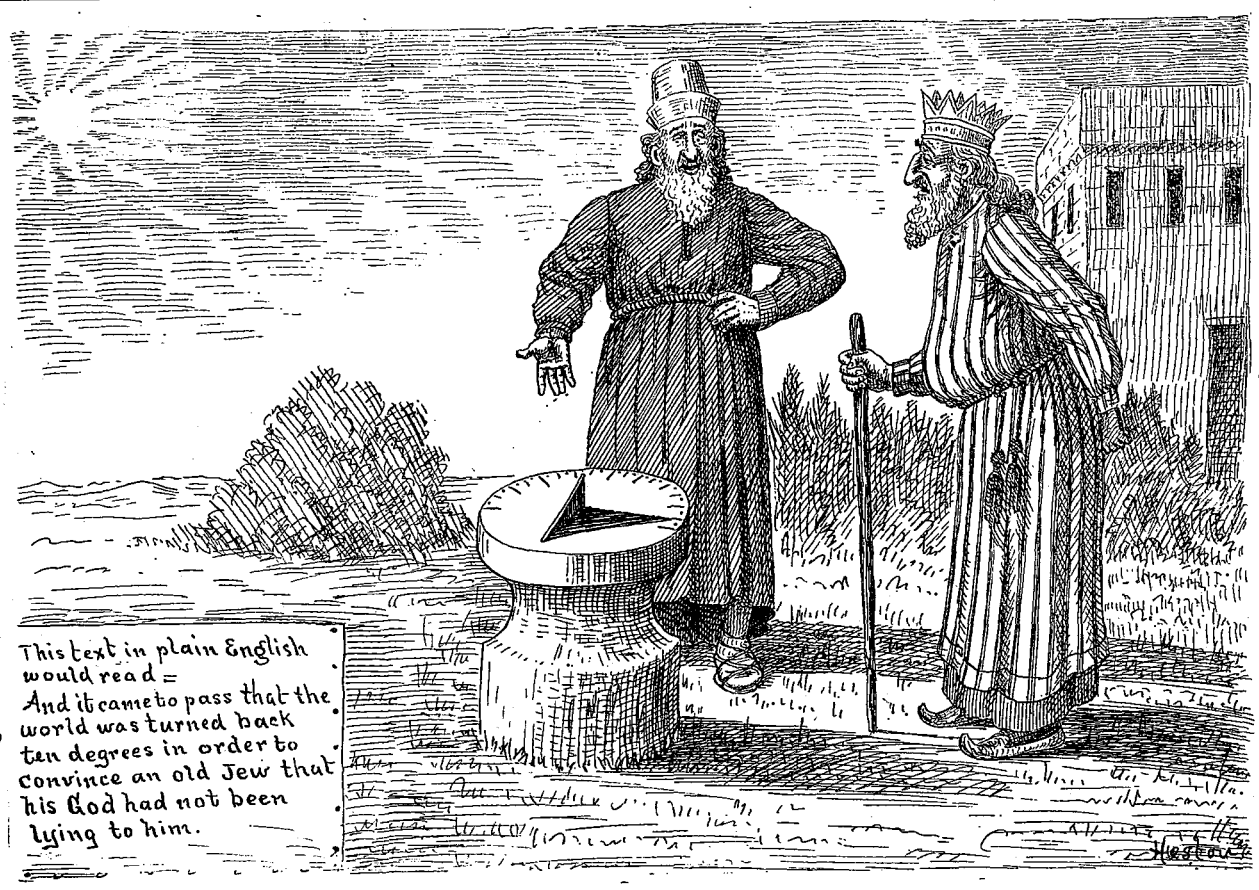


"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.



A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.

Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

ANOTHER CASE OF EVANGELICAL LYING.

And this shall be a sign unto thee from the Lord, that the Lord will do this thing that he hath spoken: Behold, I will bring again the shadow of the degrees, which is gone down in the sun dial of Ahaz, ten degrees backward. So the sun returned ten degrees, by which degrees it was gone down.—Isa. xxxviii, 7, 8.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? AustinBierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50
21.	History of Religion. E. E. Evans	20

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth, $1 00.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY AND RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION.

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

THE

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON. WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
3	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
20	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
5	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker

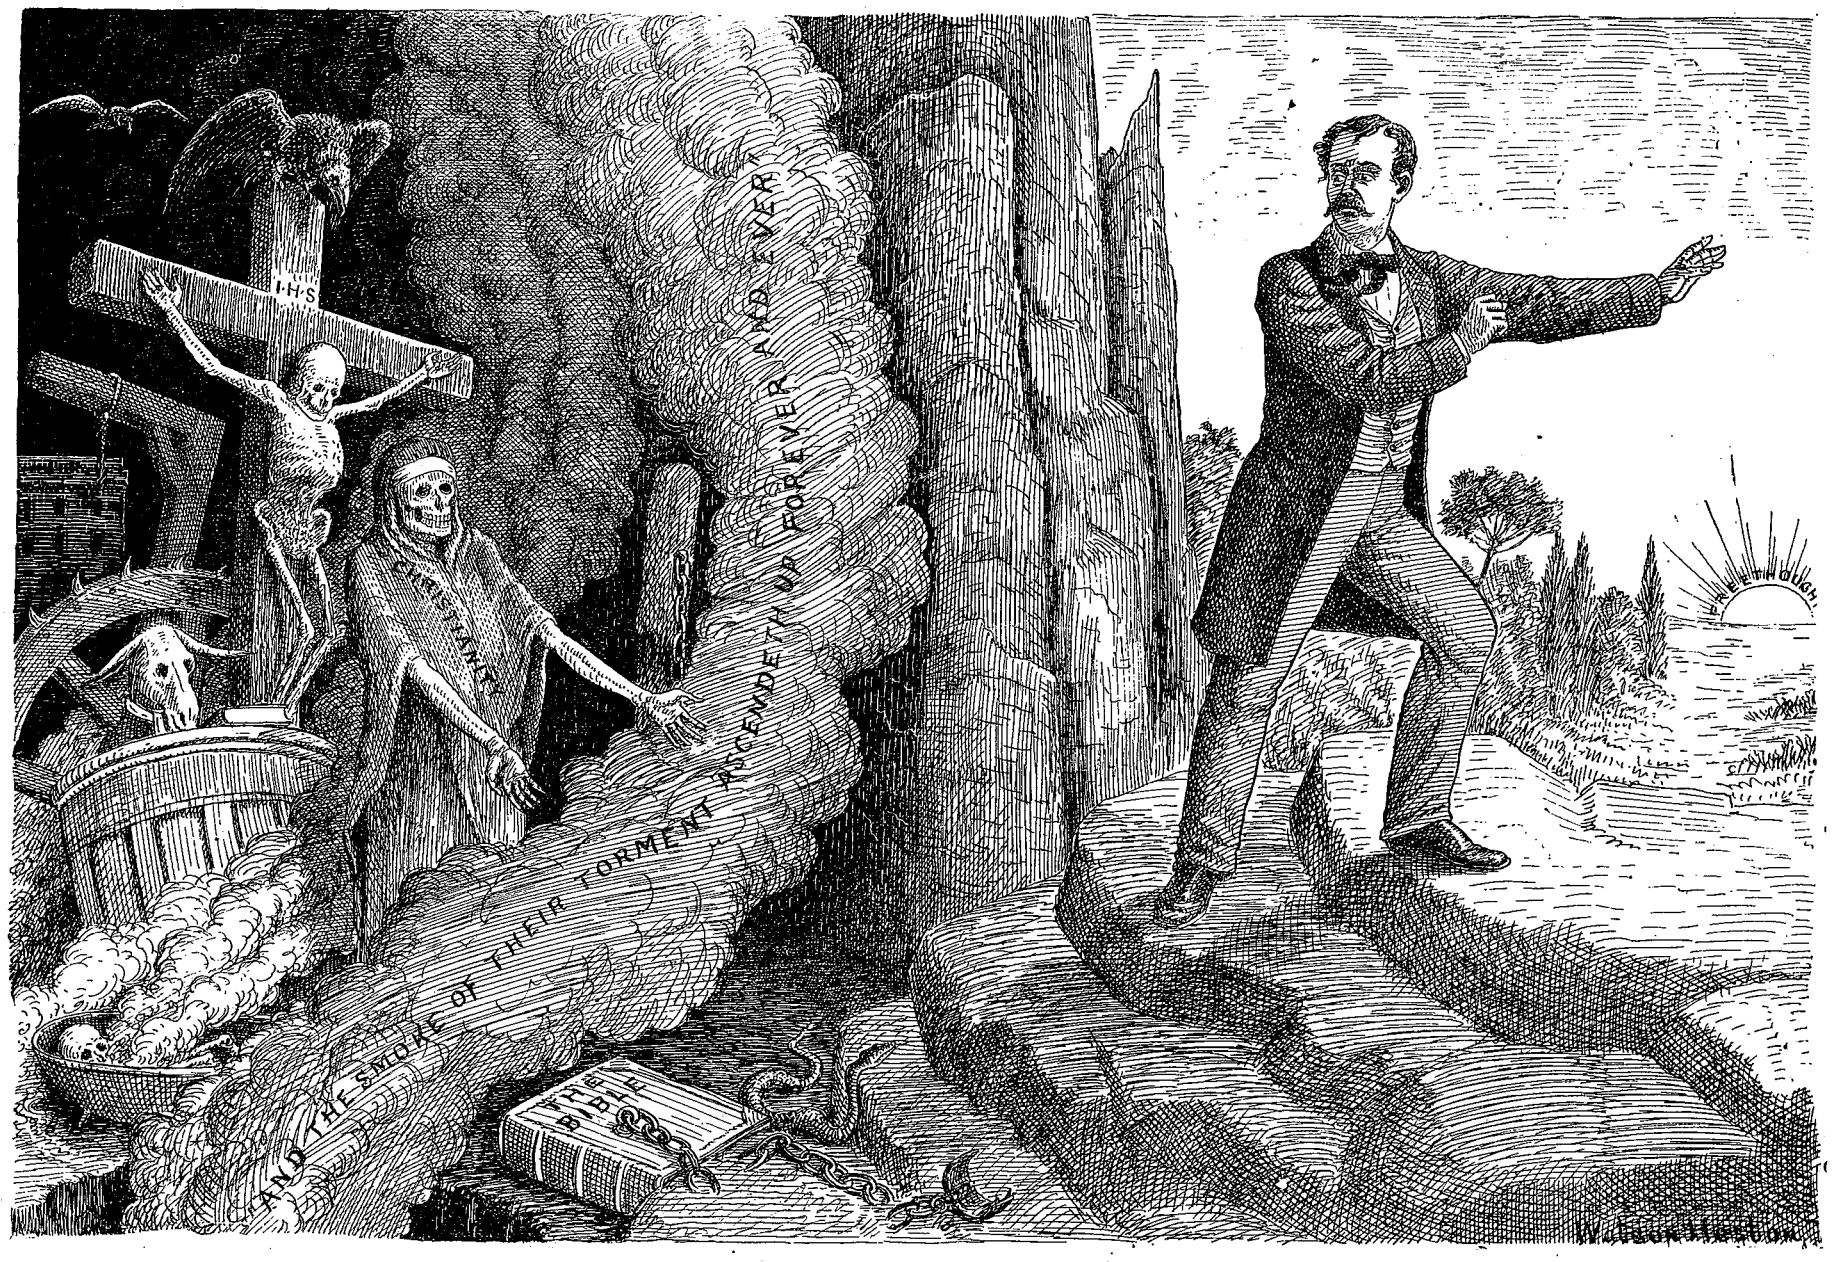
"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible,

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology

By EDGAR C. BEALL.



Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 36. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, September 3, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE NIGHTMARE OF THE AGES—WHY THE "INFIDEL" NEVER GOES BACK TO CHRISTIANITY.

A SHORT
HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A
HISTORY OF RELIGIONS.

BEING

A Condensed Account of the Results of Scientific Research and Philosophical Research.

By Elizabeth B. Evans.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,
Immortality of Matter,
Immortality of Force,
Infinity of Matter,
Value of Matter,
Motion,
Form,
Immutability of Natural Laws,
Universality of Natural Laws,
The Heavens,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,
Original Generation,
Secular Generation,
The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Man,
Brain and Mind,
Thought,
Consciousness,
Seat of the Soul,
Innate Ideas,
The Idea of God,
Personal Continuance,
Vital Force,
The Soul of Brutes
Free Will,
Morality,
Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth - - - - - 50 cents

JUST PUBLISHED.

Life of Thomas Paine,

WITH A

History of His Literary, Political, and Religious Career in America, France, and England.

By MONCURE DANIEL CONWAY,

Author of "Omitted Chapters of History Disclosed in the Life and Papers of Edmund Randolph," "George Washington and Mount Vernon," "Washington's Rules of Civility," etc.

To Which Is added a Sketch of Paine by William Cobbett.

No real biography of Paine has ever appeared. The so-called Lives of Paine have been mainly the controversial work of pamphleteers, turning chiefly on his religious heresies. Paine was in his fifty-eighth year before he published anything concerning religion, and before that time he had acted an important part in revolutionary movements in the United States, England, and France. But in the religious conflict initiated by him, his political services and military career hav been but inadequately considered. A certain historical ostracism has buried in the archives of various countries a large mass of documents containing records of paramount interest and importance. Mr. Conway has personally searched such records, in Europe and America, and has obtained from these fresh light, not only on Paine, but on various eminent figures in American and European history with whom he was associated. A large amount of unpublished correspondence has been included in the volumes.

Mr. Conway says in his Preface: "In the laborious work of searching out the real Paine I hav found a general appreciation of its importance, and it will be seen in the following pages that generous assistance has been rendered by English clergymen, by official persons in Europe and America, by persons of all beliefs and no beliefs. In no instance have I been impeded by any prejudice, religious or political. The curators of archives, private collectors, owners of important documents bearing on the subject, have welcomed my effort to bring the truth to light."

Two vols., royal oct., gilt top, portraits, $5.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.

Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.

Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $2; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.

Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.

Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.

Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.

Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.

Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.

Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.

Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.

Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.

Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Corgate. 10 cents

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Order of Creation,

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE

HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MÜLLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 36. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, September 3, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - SEPTEMBER 3, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

About That Sunday Closing of the Fair.

With the exception of the regular Protestant religious press and people and a few unintelligent sheets and fanatics like the Mail and Express and its editor, Congress finds few to commend its hypocritical vote. The general sentiment of the country is that the Fair should be open every Sunday of the six months of its continuance, and it is by no means certain that the directors will not keep it open, either through a repeal of the closing clause in the law making the appropriation, or in defiance of it. On this point, the Herald of this city advises Chicago to "mandamus herself," and the Morning Advertiser says:

"It is proposed by some of the people in Chicago who are interested in the World's Fair to go to the courts and secure a perpetual right to keep the Fair open on Sundays. This is a proper procedure—one which will put an end, we hope, to the annoying controversy. Of course the Fair should be kept open on Sunday. And it will be."

It is too early yet to say that the Fair will be kept open, but the Christians are somewhat afraid of it, as the Christian Herald, Detroit, Mich., a paper in touch with the Sabbatarian fanatics and the God-in-the-Constitution party, makes this significant confession:

"There is much reason to believe that the World's Fair commission will seek the repeal of the Sunday-closing amendment just passed by Congress. There is not much danger that such effort will be successful, as the majority in both houses was a substantial one. But after the presidential election is over, and the fate of members settled as to their seats in the succeeding Congress, there may be less care in voting, and a repeal might be carried."

The last sentence in this paragraph is, says the Advent Herald, a frank acknowledgment that the Sunday zealots "know that what has been done by Congressmen has been prompted by the basest motivs—fear that they may lose their positions, if they acted differently; and when that question is settled, they will vote with less care."

The Sabbath Recorder, a Seventh-Day Baptist paper, sees clearly the iniquity of religious legislation by Congress and condemns it in these words:

"Now that Congress has passed the bill appropriating a large sum of money to the Columbian Exposition on condition that the gates be closed on Sunday, we hav admitted into our national government the principle of legislation in religious matters, and the principle of religious freedom is set back more than four hundred years. We need not now be surprised at anything in this line."

And, notwithstanding Cardinal Gibbons approves a Sunday law, some of the Catholic journals condemn the proposed closing. The Catholic Mirror says:

"To close the art and non-mechanical departments on Sunday, which is the only day on which so many thousands will hav an opportunity to visit them, would be an injustice and shame.

"Sabbatarian bigotry, however, is as blind as bigotry in the other forms. Surprising is it that those who are thus acting with the idea of keeping the Sabbath holy, do not see that the course they insist upon will be the very one to embitter thousands against Christianity and religion. Deprived of their rights in this way, they will see in the system which forces this wrong upon them, something odious and intolerable.

"Sunday closing, as we hav already pointed out, will do infinit moral harm to many visitors to Chicago; for, not being permitted to go to the Fair, they will visit worse places. The saloons and evil resorts will be crowded with persons in search of amusement, and in the low dives of the city a saturnalia of wickedness will reign.

"The blunder on the part of Congress is to be regretted, and all the more, since it was not made from the impulse of principle. The members simply had not the courage to resist the pressure of the fanatical element which urged the Sunday closing, and in yielding must hav done so with a secret feeling of shame for their own want of moral fortitude."

The Washington Post, through one of its editorial writers, deals with the matter in these sensible words:

"The recent Senatorial phase of the irrepressible conflict over the Sunday question, while it did not solve the great problem of this country, is nevertheless valuable. It not only shows how incongruously a religious rider may be placed upon a purely worldly appropriation bill, but is fresh evidence of the fact that seldom may a discussion of the Sunday question be had without some of the participants showing a lamentable lack of preparation, without issues of the most diverse kind being interjected into the debate, and without somebody evincing a spirit which several centuries of Sunday observance should in all reason hav eliminated from his personality.

"There certainly ought to be some means evolved of solving the rather un-American situation enunciated in the question, Shall 63,000,000 people be compelled to do any particular thing merely because 10,000,000 or 20,000,000 say they think it ought to be done? If I was not one of those 10,000,000 inclined to the orthodox observance of Sunday, perhaps I might not generalize in this way. But that I favor such an observance, though perhaps in no iron-clad way, even with a backing of 9,999,999 others, is no more reason for interfering with the rights and opinions of the other 53,000,000 inhabitants of the United States, than that I should endeavor to compel everybody else to smoke a pipe because nicotine has a pleasant effect upon my nerves. Nobody's opinion was ever really changed by an appeal to fear or prejudice; the stake, no matter by whom employed, was never a very efficacious means of increasing church-membership.

"Would it not be practicable to hold in this country a convention on the Sunday question? The Senate of the United States is hardly qualified to decide a religious controversy, and the country must look elsewhere for a settlement. Why not hav a body representing every phase of thought on the subject, where the voice of labor, of the employers, of the pulpit, of the congregation, of the press, of the reading public; in fact, of every class in the community, may be heard on equal terms and with equal patience? The subjects to be discussed might include such questions as these: How did orthodoxy of the years 33-50 regard the position of Jesus Christ and his apostles on the Sabbath question? Was the first Sunday legislation a partnership of organized Christianity with paganism? Why should American citizens of the nineteenth century be bound by politico-religious legislation of the seventeenth century in England? Has the insistence on an adherence to practices two hundred years old resulted in a consistent observance of the spirit or the letter of Sunday laws by those who would hav government interfere in matters of conscience? Is there any material difference between the man of means drinking ice-water on Sunday after his return from church, and the ice-man visiting a museum after he has delivered the ice?

"The brewers and saloon men are delighted at the action of Congress in requiring the Exposition to be closed on Sunday, and if necessary they would raise a big amount of cash to hav that pernicious piece of legislation enacted. They know that the hordes of people, if debarred from the inspection of exhibits, would seek solace and amusement in the bar-rooms—which will not be closed on Sundays—and augment the revenues of the proprietors by many thousands of dollars. The sporting fraternity, also, advocates the proposition from the same spirit of self-interest that actuates whisky men."

The Spiritualists, as might be expected, are on the side of liberty. The Banner of Light and the Progressiv Thinker hav vigorously condemned the principle of Sabbatarianism, and the Better Way now adds:

"Congress has given the World's Fair $2,500,000 to pay for keeping its gates closed on Sunday. This is done to favor orthodox Christianity, the controling element in this country at present, but by no means in the majority as Sabbatarians. Scientists, Liberals, Freethinkers, and other progressiv people are ignored in the matter, not to mention the demand of the entire laboring classes who create the capital which enables Congress to make this appropriation. The church and state are apparently in very close communion at present."

Speaking for the laboring men, and against the Pennsylvania Senator who urged the Sunday-closing clause of the appropriation bill upon Congress, the Indianapolis News speaks most sharply of all:

"The moralist has food for thought in the amendment to the World's Fair bill offered by Senator Quay, closing the Fair on Sundays. The whole labor world has asked and is asking that the Fair be open on Sundays. Organized labor everywhere in concert has adopted resolutions urging it; everywhere it is signing petitions asking it. The labor world is made up of those who are confined at their task from early morning till late at night. They hav no opportunity to visit a picture gallery, to use a reading-room, except Sunday, when such use becomes to them the truest rest, the greatest help. Their earnings at the best are not so great as to permit large savings. Those of them who shall be able to amass sufficient means to see the Fair, cannot make the sight a long one; they must crowd into a few days what the more fortunate may giv weeks to. To deprive those people of an opportunity to see this vast museum, this great art gallery and educational institution on Sunday; to shut them up to the city of Chicago to crowd its hot streets and to find diversion in hot theaters and saloons,—with the hundreds of acres of the world's wonder in Jackson park walled in, and they walled out, a sin and wickedness for them to look at and enjoy on that day,—is a refinement of cruelty, a sublimity of idiocy, a lunacy of judgment—morals run mad.

"The man who proposes this is Matthew Stanley Quay; a man leprous with political corruption; a freebooter in public affairs, whose soiled palms hav directed the debauchery of the people's business; a man whose occupancy of the once august place of United States Senator will be written on the page of history as the sign of the triumph of the modern and altogether rotten system of 'bossism,' which, in these days of the American republic, arose to beslime its methods and degrade its aims; a man, who, in intellect, character, and views of life, would not hav been considered worthy to be doorkeeper in the house that held Clay and Webster, that held Chase and Sumner. The moralist has, indeed, food for thought in the spectacle of this figure rising to protect the Sabbath!

"And against what is he protecting it? The liberty of men and women to see the world's epitome of progress, and to be made better and broader by the sight; to behold a world's assembly of the beautiful, the useful, the ingenious; to be educated and enlightened. And upon what ground does he do it? Upon his own innate purity, it must be assumed. The fundamental law of this land prohibits, and rightly prohibits, the establishment of any religion, as well that which keeps Friday as a holy day as that which keeps Saturday or Sunday. So it is difficult to see upon what this proposition is based, or why it is sound. The World's Fair stands upon precisely the same ground that the reading-room of a public library stands, or a public art gallery. All over the land bigotry has been finally driven from its guard of the doors of these places, and they are now open and recognized as giving to the cause of good morals and right living, a valuable adjunct to the labor of the church in this behalf. We protest against the Senate's action in the name of the toiling millions of this land, in the name of justice, enlightenment, and progress, and urge all who oppose it to continue their protest. It is a protest for liberty."

The News forgets, when it speaks of the museums as adjuncts to the labor of the church in behalf of morality, that the evangelical church has always opposed the Sunday opening of these institutions, and that it is the church that has done the very thing against which the News directs its philippic. The Sabbatarian fanatics are legitimate children of the church, that church which an Adventist journal truthfully charges with "making unjust laws to attain its purposes," and of which it says: "It does not hesitate to use moral compulsion to obtain legal action to effect injustice and to obtain the enactment of more extended statutes in the same line. It does not hesitate to use the illegal and unchristian boycott to further its purposes. It does not hesitate to influence Congress by fraudulent and repeated petitions, and to attempt to intimidate the representativs of the people." How can such a church labor effectivly in behalf of morality!

The American Sentinel, always sound on the question of church and state separation, says sarcastically:

"Now that the churches and the saloons hav united in the support of the Sunday institution, as they hav done in securing the Sunday closing of the World's Fair, we may expect to see its sacredness(?), such as it is, increased at a tremendous pace. Of course Sunday has only such sacredness as man has given it, but what it lacks in quality its friends hav always endeavored to make up in quantity, and now reënforced by the Chicago saloonkeepers they ought to be able to whitewash the ancient pagan holiday more effectivly than ever."

To which it adds, seriously:

"Now that the government of the United States has invaded the domain of religious controversy it will dominate it; inasmuch as it has assumed jurisdiction to settle religious questions by act of Congress and by supreme court decision it will surely never yield that jurisdiction. When Constantine had made Rome 'Christian' it was only natural that he should seek an authoritativ definition of Christianity; and when the council of Nicea had given that definition in the shape of the creed which it adopted, nothing was more natural than that the emperor should require his subjects to subscribe to it. The government of the United States has entered upon the same evil course. The Supreme Court has declared the nation to be Christian. Congress has already taken sides in a religious controversy, and to be consistent must not the government use all the power at its command to enforce that decision and to uphold the Sunday-Sabbath cause which it has espoused? A United States Senator has well said, 'The domain which government invades it dominates; the jurisdiction it takes it keeps.' This is true whatever the domain or the jurisdiction; and it always has been true."

To these protests and condemnations we are glad to add that of the officers of the American Secular Union, even though unofficially expressed, and of a large body of the workingmen of Chicago. The Chicago Times of the 17th ult. has this report among its local news items:

"An organized movement against the closing of the World's Fair on Sunday assumed definit shape at a largely attended meeting held last night at Aurora Turn Halle, 364 Milwaukee avenue. It was the first of a series of meetings to be held in various parts of the city on the same subject, intended to inaugurate a wide-spread movement throughout the country in favor of permitting the working classes to enjoy the pleasures and benefits of the Exposition on the only day of the week when such a privilege is possible for them. The following resolutions, drawn up and read by Judge Charles B. Waite, president of the American Secular Union, were unanimously adopted amid great applause:

"'WHEREAS, The late action of Congress relativ to closing the gates of the World's Fair on Sunday is inconsistent with the principle of individual liberty of conscience upon which our government was founded, and may be looked upon as a direct movement in favor of the union of church and state; therefore be it

"'Resolved, That it is the duty of every good citizen to do everything in his power to hav the late action of Congress in reference to Sunday closing reversed.

"'Resolved, That the people are requested to hold meetings all over the country and pass resolutions requesting and instructing their representativs in Congress to vote for the repeal of the Sunday-closing condition in the World's Fair appropriation.'

"In addition to the adoption of the resolutions steps were taken to circulate petitions throughout the country praying Congress to revoke the Sunday-closing conditions attached to the recent appropriation of $2,500,000."

"The meeting was presided over by Henry Schurz and J. W. Herman was selected as secretary. Speeches were made by Attorney John F. Geeting, Judge C. B. Waite, A. F. Ballenger, secretary of the National Religious Liberty Association, and others. Mr. Geeting, who is vice-president of the Secular Union, made an address dealing with the legal aspects of the question. He declared that the action of Congress in assuming to change a World's Fair to a Sabbatarian Fair was in conflict with the Constitution, which declared that Congress should pass no act either sanctioning or abridging the exercise of any form of worship. This view had always been sustained in our treaties with foreign powers, notably those with Tripoli, Algiers, Japan, and China. All these treaties expressly stipulate that this government would not interfere with any form of worship consistent with personal liberty. A few clergymen, illiberal and misinformed, had taken it upon themselvs to close the gates of the Fair on Sunday and to deny the best kind of education to the children of the poor. This was the first time that religious bigotry had prevailed against the Constitution. The people owed it to themselvs to awake and protest against this great wrong committed in the name of the church.

"Judge Waite said that until now the fanatics had failed to obtain recognition in Congress. The church had been content to rely upon its own merits, but now the wiseacres of the church had come forward and said: 'We want a little religious legislation.'

"About sixty years ago the fanatics had a bill introduced in Congress prohibiting the carrying of the mails on Sunday. Judge Story, the greatest jurist of the time, said that such an act would be a gross violation of the Constitution, which did not recognize any specific day as Sunday. The bill was promptly pigeonholed in the committee room. The present action of Congress was equally unconstitutional. Judge Waite took especial pleasure in 'roasting' editor Shepard, of New York, and was loudly applauded at the close.

"The chairman read a note of regret from Washington Hesing, who was unable to be present. J. W. Herman made an address in German, and was followed by A. F. Ballenger, who is a church-member, and argued against Sunday closing from a Christian standpoint. He said that different creeds and religions observed different days of rest and Congress had no right to discriminate between them. If the World's Fair was closed Sunday it would drive the crowds to the saloons and other sinful resorts. The World's Fair would be the greatest moral and religious instructor ever enjoyed in Chicago. To close it on Sunday would be a crime against God and humanity."

There is no argument necessary as to the rightfulness of an open Sunday for the Fair. The question has resolved itself into one solely of which shall win—the American people or the church. There are about twenty million direct church supporters in the country, of whom, perhaps, one-half desire the Puritan Sunday revived. About fifty-five millions do not want it. Owing to compact organizations and aggressiv influence the church party is victorious in the first skirmish through the cowardly hypocrisy of our legislators. Whether that victory can be reversed is now the question. The Liberals of the country can do a great deal in the matter, and the way will presently be pointed out. When Congress meets in December it must be made to feel the real sentiment of the people.

It has been reported from Rome that the congregation of rites has decided not to make a saint out of Columbus, because it has been satisfactorily shown to them that he kept a mistress. But didn't Columbus hav divine guidance in his life? Certainly the Catholics hav been telling us so.

The Christian Advocate prints this idiotic sentence, written by Dr. Buckley: "The only antidote to credulity and superstition is faith." It occurs to us that the most foolishly credulous persons in the world are those superstitious ones who hav "faith" that religious dogmas are based on facts.

The Buffalo Evening Times reports: "A minister in New Jersey has refused to preach any more until the balance due on his salary has been paid him. He offers salvation for revenue only." Deprive all the ministers of this country of their salaries—let them earn their living and do preaching overtime—and see how long Christianity would be taught!

Mrs. Isabella Beecher Hooker, one of the lady managers of the World's Fair, recently addressed the Spiritualists at Cassadaga in favor of opening it on Sunday. In closing she said: "The full strength of the orthodox churches has been brought to bear in favor of closing, and it is time that the Spiritualists and Liberalists show what they can do."

The Catholic Review says, "Better is ignorance than Infidelity," and warns parents against sending their children to schools where Catholicism is not taught. Just the kind of school the Review desires may be learned from this: "'The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom,' says the Bible, and the system of education that is based on that axiom is approved by the Catholic church."

Our readers will put us under obligations if they will kindly send us the names and addresses of all the Freethinkers they know, that we may send out sample copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER with a view to inducing new subscriptions. And if present subscribers will speak a good word for us occasionally to their friends we will thank them heartily. Our list needs extending, and the people need the paper.

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, the eminent English divine, says that, "as soon as a man loses his religion, he wants to know who Cain's wife was." That is a pertinent query truly, and one not yet satisfactorily answered. A somewhat less eminent person, however, says that the difference between the man losing and getting religion is that the latter, as soon as he is converted, wants to know who Cain's wife is, and whether she is visiting the camp-meeting.

A fellow-townsman of Mr. Bird's, Mr. W. W. Morris, writes regarding the proposed chromos: "I think Brother Bird is right about 'The Rock of Ages,' and I will take a few dollars' worth of them to giv to my friends. Bird is a trump, and I do hope Freethinkers of means will subscribe." The matter is left with our readers; if a sufficient part of the money to pay the cost of making and mailing the colored pictures is subscribed we will complete the work as suggested by Mr. Bird.

We hope that all our readers will study A. B. Bradford's "Plea for Organization" in this issue. He givs his reasons for his conclusions compactly and with force. Freethinkers ought to do a great deal more than they are doing to spread their views and help the cause of freedom, and we are convinced of their willingness to do it when they find some practical way. Mr. Bradford's views are worthy of careful consideration; and if anyone else has anything to say on the same subject our columns are open. If he is wrong, he says, he wishes to be set right; and if right, he hopes to see the Freethinkers work in a manner worthy of their cause.

The Buffalo Christian Advocate observes that the "Catholic Review thinks at the present rate at which converts are coming in the church it will be a hundred thousand years before America becomes Catholic," and the Buffalo Catholic Union and Times unkindly but truthfully adds this: "But how about America becoming Protestant? If things keep on as they are and the spirit of unbelief continues to honeycomb the sects, it won't be long before there will be nothing left of Protestantism to take in anything." With all of which we agree, except that the Review placed the limit too low. Rationalism, instead of any one sectarianism, is bound finally to win in this country.

Our good friend Colby, of the Banner of Light, is on the warpath, his tomahawk drawn for gore of the reddest kind. Read: "The man and woman who dips his and her pen in the gall of bitterness and voices a wail because of the rapid advance of modern Spiritualism and the credence given to mediums among all classes of people, will find their earthly lives curtailed sooner than they expected, as the sword of the spirit is sharper than ever. We aver that the medical instruments of the spirit-world will be sustained in spite of the antagonism of certain people who profess to be Spiritualists." It seems to us, however, that there is a good deal of the theological spirit about this utterance. "God will kill our enemies." "The spirits will kill our enemies." Pretty much alike, these sentences sound.

Massachusetts is at present enjoying a revival of Puritan Sabbatarianism, and the blessing of having such laws by which to wreak vengeance on the neighbor who displeases you is again shown. A Lake Pleasant correspondent writes to the Banner of Light that "on account of complaint being made through spite of a few on the grounds, to the authorities of the town of Montague, that the state Sunday law was not being complied with at the camp, a deputy sheriff and constable served a notice on every medium not to hold a séance or giv private sittings on Sunday, the 21st ult., under the penalty of arrest and fine!" It is to the credit of some of the mediums and storekeepers that they again broke the law, though not as yet molested for it. The Banner of Light calls upon Judge Dailey, who has just been elected president of the Lake Pleasant Association, to "attend to their high-handed usurpation at once."

Lieutenant Totten, of prophetic fame, is still hanging around New Haven presaging dire calamities. He claims now to hav found the key to the book of Daniel, and still insists that this world has just entered upon the last seven years of its existence. He declines, however, to appoint "a day or an hour" for the millennium. With respect to the pestilence of cholera now raging, the lieutenant advises extreme vigilance. His warning is: "Enter into thy parts and close thy gates about thee until the indignation is past." He says that the most severe part of the "troublous times" in the future concerns non-Anglo-Saxon peoples, and particularly whatsoever was included in the geographical limits of the four ancient empires, Babylon, Persia, Greece, and Rome. Nevertheless he expects that Israel, meaning England and America especially, will be punished in some measure and chastened for past blindness. The lieutenant is only another good man gone wrong through taking too seriously a volume which was evidently written as a joke.

The Tacoma Daily Ledger of the 16th ult. reports the offering of a graceful tribute to C. B. Reynolds, who reached his sixtieth birthday on August 9th. The members of the Tacoma Secular Union, knowing his habits, bought a fine silver water service and had this written upon it: "Presented to C. B. Reynolds on his sixtieth birthday by the Tacoma Secular Union. Reason, Right, and Truth." The presentation speech was made by Dr. D. M. Angus. A visitor to the Union, who writes the report, adds: "Mr. Reynolds—the old man eloquent, as I call him—who is never at a loss for words to express himself, was upon this occasion speechless, but the tears that filled his eyes, the trembling of his hands, spoke more eloquently of deep feeling than any words could hav done. He was also the recipient of many flowers, his fondness for them being well known. After an evening of poetry and song, and with the best wishes from one and all, the meeting adjourned to a convenient ice cream parlor, one enthusiastic member thinking the event had not yet had full justice done it, and insisting on furnishing refreshments for all present." It must hav been a great occasion.

In the West.

News and Notes.

St. Paul and Minneapolis, the twin cities of the Northwest, in this glowing summer weather present a magnificent spectacle to the wandering eye of the Secular Pilgrim, and he has no desire for any celestial region. The days are simply gorgeous, with now and then vast panoplies of cloud, splendid depths of sky, glittering pavilions of sunset, and jubilant dawns over measureless fields of harvest. The rivers flow along, the lakes gleam like jewels, the cataracts foam and thunder, and the mighty mills day and night mingle their song with nature's carnival. There is life on every side. Summer and autumn seem to meet with rival glories.

It is not, however, quite so good for Freethought meetings, for people at this season of the year do not like to be hedged in with four walls, not even the walls of a church. They like to go out into the country, ramble in the fields and woods, skim over the waters with boat or ship, or even ride in the horse-cars, which roll along multitudinously from point to point, and so great are the crowds that they even climb into the windows or mount the roof in order to secure a transit. Everybody wants to be out of doors on Sunday. The church bells hav a melancholy sound even for the pious Christian. He had rather hie away to pastures new than listen to the "old, old story."

I did not hav so large a crowd as I wished or expected, but it was enthusiastic, and there was quite a sprinkling of church people there. The subject of the lecture was "Shall the World's Fair Be Open on Sundays?" There was evidently a good deal of interest in the matter pro and con. At the close of the lecture a breezy discussion of half an hour sprang up. One gentleman—a minister, I guess, and somewhat Liberal in his theology, for he admitted that the Fair ought to be open on Sunday, and that the Christian religion was simply love to God and love to man—still declared that I had cast slurs on Christians and "blasphemed" God. He said that no one dared to aver himself an Atheist. Upon this about half the audience arose and affirmed the awful name as belonging to themselvs. I did not raise the question in my lecture. I merely affirmed that if God existed he had no authority in this government merely as God. It is citizenship that givs one the right to vote, not divinity. There is no recognition of divinity in the Constitution.

I am proud to aver that I am an Atheist, and I believe that Atheism is the only logical outcome of human thought and investigation. Science excludes God as thoroughly as it excludes the supernatural. In fact, I do not see how any man of common sense can be anything else but an Atheist. I am just as positiv of Atheism as I am of my own existence. I hav no doubts whatever. However, I do not quarrel with any man about a belief in God. It is a luxury, like a taste for limburger cheese or macaroni. Let one make the most of it, and chew the cud of sweet and bitter fancy. To me it is nothing but dry husks, a relic of the savagery of mankind. Another gentleman who admitted that I was correct in saying that the word God was not in the Constitution affirmed positivly that the words "divine providence" were in the preamble. I denied this, but not having the Constitution with me I could not convince him of his error. He affirmed that in the preamble were the words, "to secure the blessings of divine providence." The fathers of the republic were not fools enough to make any such assertions. The words are, "to secure the blessings of liberty," almost the exact opposit. "Divine providence" does not mean liberty; it means slavery. If our forefathers had trusted in "divine providence" we never should hav had this republic.

Only five minutes was allowed each speaker and the debate took quite a lively turn. Leroy Berrier, who was chairman of the meeting, kept the Christians as much as possible to the real issue. The matter at issue was not one's individual idea of Christianity, but organized Christianity, defined by human history, and a power committed to the destruction of human liberty. I did not make any issue with spiritual Christianity, whatever that may be, but with political Christianity, the curse of the ages. Mr. Maddock, Mr. Macomber, and Mr. Edwards sharply sustained our side of the question. The audience was quite responsiv to the points made on both sides. But when I made the closing reply some of the Christians took to their heels. Why could they not stay and hear both sides?

Good reports of the lecture were published in the Minneapolis papers and the agitation of this question will go on. There will be something red-hot before the World's Fair is over. The church has won a costly victory. With its own bigotry it has inflicted upon itself a deadly wound. As an enemy of the church I could not ask it to giv a greater vantage-point of fight. It has forced the issue. It will find that it has made a terrific mistake. The feeling aroused against the churches is intense, and outside of Congress Liberalism is twice as strong as it was before that stupid and cowardly restriction was made. A sword has been put into our hands and we'll use it. To win its point the church has allied itself with the lowest elements of human society and it must bear the shame.

I find many friends at Minneapolis and St. Paul and the time passes pleasantly by. John Monroe, of St. Paul, always ready to do his level best and make things agreeable, introduced me to a "new sensation," for which I am thankful. St. Paul is ahead of the world in one thing at least and that is the "toboggan"—not the ice toboggan, but the water toboggan. It is hugely exhilarating. It is better than a pair of angel's wings for fun. I don't think I should hav dared venture it if Monroe had not taken me under his muscular guidance. He was used to it and I passed the ordeal safely. You see, you mount about a hundred feet in air on a wooden tower. Here the toboggan is fixed in a rolling slide. You mount the toboggan for the first time, as I did, with a trembling heart. You plant your feet firmly against the front, grasp the rope, and press inward, so as not to fall or burn your hands in the swift descent. An almost perpendicular tumble is right before you. It seems like a plunge into eternity. I hold my breath and wait for coming events, poised in mid-air. It moves, it starts. I feel the thrill of life. Off I go, like the bound of a wild horse, and down I sweep, swifter than the wind, down, down, and then I strike the water and shoot like a dolphin a hundred feet away over its sparkling surface and then roll off into the glorious bosom of the waters without any regard to appearances. It is absolutely delightful. Everybody enjoys it. Men and women, boys and girls, take the plunge, and there is constant excitement. And this on Sunday, too. Think of that. It would be a good thing if the clergymen would "toboggan." They would preach better sermons after such a "slide from grace." Crowds of people are here at White Bear lake and all sorts of amusements are going on, but without anything disorderly. The theaters are open in St. Paul on Sunday, but alas, the churches hav forbid baseball playing in Minneapolis on the "holy day."

The battle goes on with alternating victory, but in the end the churches will be swept from the deck. These magnificent excursions of tens of thousands of people on the "Lord's day" into the beautiful country, with music and sports, are a potent factor in the destruction of the hell and damnation of the old theologies.

I also visited the famous Minnehaha falls. No wonder that poets hav sung about this musical and majestic cataract. It is simply entrancing. The waters flow over in one effulgent mass, without break, a white wave of melodious brilliance from crest to base, leaping from lake to glen. A gentle and beautiful mist flows forth, radiating among the embowering trees, and falling upon the gray rocks, and gemming them with verdant spray of flower and moss. From the foot of the cataract the waters roll in winding rapidity through green and golden shadows into the abysses of the forest.

Thus this brief summer's pageant passes, with man and nature to make it a season of delight. My old friend, Chas. Lownd, is still ready as ever to aid the cause of Freethought. He is a generous comrade. I was pleased to meet with Mr. and Mrs. C. Cox, of Vancouver, B. C., who are for the present residing in Minneapolis. They are genuin Liberals. Mrs. Cox was secretary of the Liberal society of Vancouver, which has done such grand work since its formation, and of which Mr. and Mrs. Cox are efficient members, and wherever they go these friends are ready to help with heart and hand. Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Bennett I must thank for their kind hospitality while in Minneapolis. Mr. Bennett is a pioneer, and a stalwart Liberal. Mr. Leroy Berrier, whose communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER and other papers are well known, I must congratulate, for he has married since I was here a beautiful and intelligent Liberal woman, a daughter of our good friend and comrade of Nekomo, Ill.

Mr. Chas. Ostrom, who has been in the front ranks of Liberalism for years, and Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Bennett gave me also a welcome to their Freethought fireside. John Maddock is the same bright philosopher whose belief in fate only makes him work the harder for human progress; for is it not fate that makes progress, and is it not fate that foreordains we must help make that progress; and, in the profound words of the poet, are we not "fated to be free?" Silas G. Cooper is a royal worker. He givs both money and time to aid the lecture. Much of its success is due to his strenuous efforts. These are the kind of Liberals that will make victory for our cause. S. C. Todd is another soldier in activ service. A. S. Edwards is a true-blue reformer, and Louis Nash, editor of St. Paul Trades and Labor Bulletin; James McElvey; Wm. Rodger, oldtime friends and allies, of St. Paul. John Monroe is always ready to be counted. Frank Greaves; McGregor; Macomber, who watches the stars and is as radical as nature herself, and many others I could count upon the roll. Forty-six names were signed to the call for the Freethought Federation. Jos. A. Greenhill, of Clinton, Ia., sends me forty-four names. Albert Lea and Mapleton giv thirty-five names. This shows that the Freethought Federation is just what is needed at the present juncture. Stalwart Liberals are ready for political action.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

Mr. Conway on Junius.

A long foot-note in Mr. Conway's "Life of Thomas Paine" concerning myself and the Junius question requires my notice. Every point of argument in the note has been repeatedly refuted and now I proceed to demolish them once more. He says:

Mr. W. H. Burr maintains that Paine wrote in the English Crisis (1775) under the name of "Casca." As Casca's articles bear intrinsic evidence of being written in London, the theory supposes Paine to have visited England in that year. But besides the facts that Rush had an interview with Paine near the middle of March, and Franklin in October, the accounts of Aikin, preserved in Philadelphia, show payments to Paine in May, July, and August, 1775. As Mr. Burr's further theory, that Paine wrote the letters of Junius, rests largely on the identification with Casca, it might be left to fall with disproof of the latter.

Answer: Paine was undoubtedly in Philadelphia in March, and had an interview with Dr. Rush; but there is no proof that he met Franklin in October. What Paine said in Crisis, No. III, is this: "In October, 1775, Dr. Franklin proposed giving me such materials as were in his hands toward completing a history of the present transactions." That proposal I claim was not made at an "interview." The two men were in continual correspondence, most of the time being separated by the ocean. On March 4, 1775, Paine wrote from Philadelphia to Franklin in London as follows:

Your countenancing me has obtained for me many friends and much reputation, for which please accept my sincere thanks. I have been applied to by several gentlemen to instruct their sons on very advantageous terms to myself, and a printer and bookseller, a man of reputation and property, Robert Aikin, has lately attempted a magazine, but having little or no turn that way himself, he has applied to me for assistance. He had not above six hundred subscribers when I first assisted him. We now have upward of fifteen hundred and daily increasing. I have not entered into terms with him. This is only the second number. The first I was not concerned in.

The first number of the Pennsylvania Magazine was January. Paine tells Franklin that he was not concerned in that. And yet in the first number there appeared several anonymous contributions which were undoubtedly written by Paine—to wit: one on surveying, signed "P," another on a new electric machine, signed "Atlanticus," a third on the utility of magazines, without signature; and it is supposed that he may have written a brief "Introduction to the Pennsylvania Magazine," dated January 24th.

The February number, which Paine says he was concerned in, has three articles believed to have been written by him, one signed "Atlanticus," another "Esop," and a third an unsigned poem.

The March number has three articles signed "Atlanticus," two of them being poems.

In the April number I find but one probable contribution by Paine, namely "Cupid and Hymen," by "Esop."

During all the rest of the year I discover only two contributions by Paine, both poems, by "Atlanticus," and both in the July number.

None of these anonymous contributions after the March number required the presence of the writer in Philadelphia. And the same is true of any other communication that Mr. Conway or anyone else can identify as the production of Paine.

The theory that Paine was the paid editor of the Pennsylvania Magazine is untenable for the following reasons:

1. The work of editing was next to nothing, the only article of an editorial nature being a brief introduction to the first number, which Paine says he was not concerned in.

2. What, then, was the "assistance" he began to render after the first number? Was it not probably canvassing for subscribers? With that kind of assistance the number was increased more than nine hundred in one month. For that work Paine would be entitled to commission, even before entering into terms with Aikin; and as late as March 4th, when he sends to Franklin the second number, and the time has come for printing the third, he has not yet entered into terms for the assistance he has begun to render.

3. The entries in Aikin's account book of payments to Paine in May, July, and August do not prove that Paine was present to receive them.

4. That his contributions were gratuitous was in keeping with all his other literary performances, it being an unswerving principle with him to take no pay for and make no profit from his literary work.

5. Whatever engagement he may have made with Aikin after March 4th, his sudden departure from this country before the middle of April was a thing he would strive to keep as secret as possible, and if, as was quite likely, Robert Aikin was a Scotch tory, Paine would have had the strongest motive to hoodwink him with the understanding that he would soon return and attend to his work in person.

The identity of Casca with Paine was discovered by me in October, 1880, when I first saw an American reprint of the Crisis of 1775. Four days later, as I was examining Sherwin's "Life of Paine" in the Congressional Library, I came to a note concerning an edition of Paine's Political Works published in England in 1796 in which the first number of Paine's Crisis was a reprint of "A Crisis Extraordinary," signed "American C. S." (Common Sense), the first publication of which was in London, August 9, 1775, signed "Casca." The biographer Sherwin was puzzled, saying: "It could not have been written by Paine, and its insertion in the edition published by Eaton can only be attributed to the ignorance of the person who furnished him the copy."

But I was still more astonished to find penciled on the margin of the same page this note: "It is by Paine, but does not belong to the Crisis."

That penciled note I soon discovered was made by Librarian Spofford. He had no doubt that Casca was Paine, though he had never thought of identifying either writer with Junius. This identification by the learned librarian of Congress, who was yet unwilling to believe that Paine was Junius, ought to have weight with those who rely more on authority than on their own judgment.

Paine's departure from America in March or April, 1775, I apprehend, was not to write articles for the (English) Crisis, but to procure saltpeter, gunpowder, and munitions of war for the impending revolution. In October, 1775, General Washington's army, near Boston, had not five rounds of powder, and dared not advance one step against General Howe. In December, Franklin sent a letter to M. Dumas, in France, by a Mr. Storey, inclosing £100 to defray expenses in procuring a shipment of small arms, ammunition, and saltpeter. Previously, Charles Biddle was sent to France to procure munitions of war, and in January, 1776, he returned with a cargo of saltpeter. Hence I infer that Paine, first of all, went on a like mission in March or April, 1775, and returned about the end of the year, having secured a supply of war materials, and ready to put to press his "Common Sense." And I now challenge the discovery of evidence that he was in America during the greater part of the year 1775.

Junius, in his "Dedication to the English Nation," said: "The remedy will soon be in your power. If Junius lives you shall often be reminded of it." Did he not fulfill that promise three years later, when, as "Casca," he fomented revolution in both England and America; and when again, from 1776 to 1782, as "Common Sense," he helped to achieve the independence of this country? All three writers were anonymous, all three did their literary work avowedly without pay or profit.

The internal evidence of the identity of Casca with Junius is even stronger than that of Paine with Junius. Their style was varied to suit the circumstances. Junius wielded a Damascus blade; Casca a butcher's cleaver; Common Sense a broadsword. There is no fact to be found incompatible with the identity of the three.

Another of Mr. Conway's objections to the Paine-Junius theory is as follows:

During the period of Junius's Letters (Jan. 21, 1769, to Jan. 21, 1772) Paine was occupied with his laborious duties as exciseman at Lewes, and with the tobacco mill from which he vainly tried to extort a living for himself and wife, and her mother. Before that period there was no time at which Paine could have commanded the leisure or opportunities necessary to master the political and official details known to Junius.

Answer: For two years before the date of the first Junius letter, as now appears from his secret letter to ex-Premier Grenville, Oct. 20, 1768, the same writer, under various other signatures, had been agitating the public. The "Letters of Junius" aggregate about three hundred book pages; his "Miscellaneous Letters" not so much. The period covered is more than five years. Only a few of the letters were elaborated and the average work was about one hundred and thirty pages a year.

Paine had nothing to do with the tobacco mill before 1770, or more likely 1771, when he married the daughter of the deceased tobacconist Ollive, and helped the widow and daughter carry on the business, which was presumably small.

His duties as exciseman did not occupy half his time, and from the time of his first discharge as exciseman at Alford in 1765 until he reëntered the service at Lewes in 1768 his only employment seems to have been as assistant teacher in London. And Paine himself says: "I seldom passed five minutes of my life, however circumstanced, in which I did not acquire some knowledge."

Though stationed at Lewes he spent much of his time in London. He passed the whole winter of 1772–1773, says Mr. Conway, trying to influence members of Parliament in favor of the cause of the excisemen. And in a letter to his superior officer, dated March 24, 1774, he says: "I was in London almost all last winter" (1773–1774). Furthermore, we have evidence of his being much of the time in London in 1769 and subsequently. In 1813, Mrs. Olivia Wilmot Serres attempted to prove that her pious uncle, Dr. Wilmot, was Junius. She says that in 1769 he frequently resided at the house of his brother-in-law Captain Payne, with whom an American named Fretland was on terms of intimacy. Fretland had concerns in the West Indies and frequently sent to Dr. Wilmot various productions of that climate. Her uncle Wilmot had a servant named Middleton, and Captain Payne had a wife spoken of indifferently by the name of Olivia and Olive, suggestive of Miss Olive, who was married to Paine in 1771.

Now, the private letters of Junius to his publisher Woodfall, first published in 1812, disclosed to Mrs. Serres two names by which the printer was directed to address his unknown correspondent, to wit: "Mr. William Middleton" (Priv. Let. No. 3, July 15, 1769), and "Mr. John Fretley, at the same coffee-house, where it is absolutely impossible I should be known" (Nos. 3 and 27). This coincidence of names, together with some mysterious entries in her uncle's notebook in which the word "Ju—s" occurs several times, caused her to believe that Dr. Wilmot was Junius. But now the evidence points to Thomas Paine, the meagerness of whose biographies prior to his coming to America render the gaps more important than the facts. How long Paine was a privateersman we do not know; and the fact that he was an expert seaman and was called "commodore" implies that much of the unknown gaps in his life was spent on the ocean, whereby he may have acquired a "moderate independence," without which, says Junius in a private letter to Woodfall, "no man can be happy nor even honest." I myself have not the least doubt that such was Paine's condition from the time he quit the sea. Hence his ability to write without pay or profit.

Mr. Conway further argues that Paine could not have been Junius, because:

He declares that he had no interest in politics, which he regarded as a species of "jockey-ship."

Answer: The "Political Works" of Paine, incomplete, make two large volumes; the "Theological," one small one. The "Letters of Junius" are political. But both writers were avowed non-partisan, and what Paine stigmatized as "jockey-ship" was partisan politics.

The next objection of Mr. Conway is as follows:

How any one can read a page of Junius and then one of Paine, and suppose them from the same pen, appears to me inconceivable.

Answer: Which one of all the writers suspected to be Junius approaches him so nearly in style as Thomas Paine? Said Lord Brougham in 1839 or 1840, never dreaming that Paine was Junius: "His style was a model of terseness and force. In this respect he comes nearer to our own remarkable Junius, than any known writer in the English tongue." And Dr. Denslow in his "Modern Thinkers," 1880, speaking of Paine's letter to Washington, 1796, says: "It is so identical in style with portions of Junius that we cite parallel passages for comparison, though the unhesitating conviction that Paine wrote Junius will better result from the use of hundreds of passages than of two or three."

Did Mr. Conway expect to find in Paine's writings a literal repetition of the language of Junius, who had promised, if he lived, to come again, and yet that his secret should die with him? In "Junius Unmasked," 1872, a multitude of passages from Junius and Paine are paralleled, to show similarity of style, sentiment, opinion, conduct, and character. These parallels number more than three hundred, and in the two or three instances where a difference in opinion appears, we have happily from Paine himself the proof of a change of views after 1772.

Twice only do I find any allusion by Paine to Junius. In Casca's "Epistle to Lord Mansfield," 1775, he uses the expression, "galling Junius;" and in an anonymous tract entitled "Prospects on the War," 1787, detected five years later to be by Paine, he speaks of "the brilliant pen of Junius," which "in the plenitude of its rage, might be said to give elegance to bitterness." "The generous rage of Junius" is an expression found in that writer's private note to his publisher, first brought to light in 1812.

And now Mr. Conway has discovered and published in his book a letter from Paine to an apostate friend in 1795, never intended for another's eye, in which scathing epistle "the generous rage of Junius" reappears "giving elegance to bitterness."

Lastly, to prove that Paine was not Junius, Mr. Conway says:

The reader need only refer to the facts of his life before coming to America to acquit him of untruth in saying that he had published nothing in England, and that the cause of America made him an author.

Answer: Did Junius publish his own letters? Woodfall and others who printed them never knew the author. And Junius says: "I did not expect more than the life of a newspaper." Nor did Paine himself publish "The Case of the Officers of Excise." This is admitted by Mr. Conway, who naively tells us that the printing of four thousand copies by William Lee of Lewes in 1772 was not a publication (!) because "it was a document submitted to Parliament but never sold." Furthermore, Mr. Conway says that "the song on Wolfe and other poetical pieces, though known to the Headstrong Club in Lewes, were first printed in Philadelphia." The fact is that Paine's Ode on General Wolfe was composed in 1775 at Sandwich, and was soon after published in the Gentleman's Magazine set to music, and became a popular song.

In regard to the cause of America making Paine an author, that cause crops out from first to last in the Junius letters, even in the earliest of the miscellaneous ones, and is the principal theme of Casca.

I have skipped and reserved for a finale Macaulay's summary of the facts discoverable concerning the personality of Junius, quoted by Mr. Conway. Only three of the five alleged facts need notice, to wit: That he was acquainted with the technical forms of the secretary of state's office; also with the business of the war office; and that he attended the debates in the House of Lords and took notes of speeches.

Answer: Whatever Junius may have known of the business of the departments of government, it is a common error that he was so intimately associated or connected therewith as to be able to acquire much knowledge of state affairs. Junius in his seventh letter said, "I am a plain unlettered man," but nobody believed him. A little later, in a private letter to the printer, which was published by mistake, he speaks of his "rank and fortune," manifestly ironical. A year later he opened a secret correspondence with John Wilkes. From these letters, first published in 1812, it appears how difficult it was for Junius to get information. He says:

I speak from a recess which no human curiosity can penetrate. No man writes under so many disadvantages as I do. I cannot consult the learned; I cannot directly ask the opinions of my acquaintance, and in the newspapers I am never assisted.

No wonder that the late James Parton, in gathering material for a life of Franklin and becoming familiar with the lives of the men whom Junius descanted upon, "discovered that he knew them not; that he was not within the circle of the well informed." Mr. Parton might have learned as much from the private letters of Junius to John Wilkes; and the fact is further confirmed by the more recent discovery of secret letters of Junius to ex-Premier Grenville, in one of which he says: "Until you are a minister, I must not permit myself to think of the honor of being known to you;" and begs him "to make allowances for a man who writes absolutely without materials or instruction." This was three months before the signature Junius appeared. And when the Junius series was completed he wrote to Lord Chatham, "most secret," saying, "Retired and unknown, I live in the shade and have only a speculative ambition."

But now I hear the objector say: "How is it possible that the lowly exciseman of Lewes could have attended debates in Parliament?" I answer: "We have his own word for it that he did." In Crisis, No. VII, "Common Sense" says:

I remember the late Admiral Saunders declaring in the House of Commons, and that in the time of peace, that the city of Madrid laid in ashes was not a sufficient atonement for the Spaniards taking off the rudder of an English sloop-of-war.

Turn to Junius's private letter No. 29, dated Jan. 31, 1771, and you read:

We hear that the ministry intend to move for opening both Houses of Parliament on Tuesday next, in the usual manner, being desirous that the nation should be exactly informed of their whole conduct in the business of Falkland island.

Again, in a postscript to same letter, written "next day:"

We hear that the ministry intend to move that no gentleman may be refused admittance into either House on Tuesday next. . . . If they were to do otherwise it would raise and justify suspicions very disadvantageous to their own reputation and to the king's honor.

What was the cause of that tremendous agitation? It was "the Spaniards taking off the rudder of an English sloop-of-war" in Port Egmont, West Falkland island, between Keppel and Saunders islands.

Turn now to Junius's public letter No. 42, dated Jan. 30, 1771, and you will find the whole affair discussed in the same spirit that it is treated by "Common Sense" seven years later. The two passages are paralleled in "Junius Unmasked," and in reverting to the subject I have unexpectedly found in the private letter of Junius to his publisher strong presumptive evidence that on Tuesday, Feb. 5, 1771, Junius heard Alderman Saunders speak in the House of Commons the words quoted by Common Sense in Crisis, No. VII.

The affair at Port Egmont is further discussed by Junius in two letters signed "Vindex," a part of the first one being suppressed by the publisher as too violent; but the suppressed portion has recently been brought to light in manuscript. It reflects severely upon the king, characterizing his surrender of the rights and honor of the crown of England as "magnitudo infamiæ," and the king himself as a "stigmatized coward."

And here also I find that Woodfall apologized to "Vindex" for the suppression, directing his letter to "Mr. John Fretley" (Priv. Let. No. 33, Feb. 21, 1771, note by Woodfall).

The Spanish outrage was discussed by Junius under five or six other signatures, namely "Domitian," "Philo-Junius," "Vindex," et al.

The House of Lords had excluded the public, apparently in consequence of a ludicrous report in the Public Advertiser, Dec. 7, 1770, of Lord North's loose and droll style of oratory, by Domitian. (See Misc. Let. 79, 80, and 81, all by the same writer, who was Junius.)

Thanks to Mr. Conway for causing me to discover the important fact that on Feb. 5, 1771, the speech of Admiral Saunders was listened to by Junius, who reappeared in America as "Common Sense."

W. H. BURR.

Washington, D. C.

Twelve Commandments.

(SUBJECT TO REVISION AS MAN ADVANCES.)

1. Reward not hypocrisy. Encourage not the dishonest. Turn from your society those who are able to help suffering humanity and refuse to do so. Vote for no man for any office who has knowingly wronged the living or the dead.

2. When you are in church ask the minister any question that you do not understand. If he cannot solve the mysteries of the unknown, then you will see that the knowledge of the finite is almost infinitly limited, and that after all there is a doubt as to his having a supernatural call to preach.

3. That every religion that is fearful of examination shall be regarded as an unsafe guide. All doctrins shall be carefully examined; the good shall be preserved and that which shocks the brain and heart shall be thrown away.

4. Never try to cross a river till you come to it. One world at a time has proved to be all that man can attend to, and while your Christian friends talk of what the church has done, advise them to hold in sweet recollection the burning of Servetus, the sentence of Galileo, the horrible death of Bruno, and the terrible outrage perpetrated on the Quakers by the Puritans by cutting their tongues out for God's sake in 1600, etc.

5. Try the efficacy of prayer by breaking for one moment the chain of cause and effect in order to prove that nature has a master, and a God will appear, that you may beg of him to liberate those poor little infants placed in hell by John Calvin, and insist that he may show us where Ingersoll and Paine are wrong.

6. Believe about God only what God says to you, and if you ever see God, ask him why he allowed Ingersoll to intellectually swamp all of his ministers.

7. That a man shall be rated at his true worth not by what he believes, or by the clothes he wears, or by what he claims to be, but by what he does.

8. That to drive the devil out of any man into your neighbor's hogs, is an injustice to your neighbor, and a damage and cruelty to dumb brutes.

9. Be temperate in all things; do not get the delirium tremens and fancy that you see a beast rise up out of the sea with seven heads and ten horns, as John claimed to hav seen.

10. If you ever see a man in hell calling for a drop of water, giv him a barrelful no matter how many times he has not been born again.

11. Do not put a witch to death, because the idea of immortality was born there, and you do not know how soon you may be one.

12. As it seems to be the nature of man to do unto others as others do unto him, if you hav the first pull set a good example; then if one smite you on the right cheek, you may be liable to convince him that you are some kin to John L. Sullivan.

Lawrence, Kan. ALEXANDER ROSE.

A Plea For Organization.

I hav never had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Charlesworth since his advent among us, but I hav followed him, with much interest, in his lecturing tours as they hav been reported in the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER. He seems to be the only one of our admirable corps of lecturers who has the correct view on the question of organizing the Freethought sentiment in every locality where there are enough intelligent people to keep up a weekly or monthly meeting.

Among the Freethinkers, and also among the Spiritualists, who are all Freethinkers, are many people who were once members of the church, and who, before they could be called "brother," and take the sacrament of allegiance to Jesus and the priesthood, had to lie down upon the bed of Procrustes and hav themselvs fitted to the creed. After that, they were allowed to think as much as they pleased, provided they did not go beyond the prescribed limits. The etymologists tell us that the word "kirk," or church, is derived from the Greek word kuklos, which means a circle, and indicates the orbit, or track, upon which the thoughts of the preacher and the people on the subject of religion must move, and not fly off, like a tangent, into space. Persons who had minds capable of expanding at all, and which did expand, felt the pressure of the environment, and, driven by a sense of self-respect, revolted, broke away from their surroundings; and the consciousness of freedom and of growth was so delightful, that they resolved they never would allow the weight of a feather to be placed upon their intellects again. When they graduate out of the A B C's of Liberalism and become independent Radicals—that is, men who are not satisfied with surface appearances, but think down to the roots of questions, so that they can giv reasons for their opinions—the remembrance of the old bondage of the church makes them afraid of joining any Freethought society lest they suffer their individuality of character to be invaded, and in some shape or other to be bound.

As to the means of advancing the Freethought cause, there are three kinds, answering to the three degrees of comparison—good, better, best.

(a) The first is lecturing, where the speaker meets his audience and delivers one or two addresses, and the next day takes the train to fulfill another engagement of the same kind. He sows a handful or two of good seed on the ground, but he has no time to stay and harrow it in, and so it is in danger of being picked up by the blackbirds, crows, and sparrows which everywhere abound. It is always the case, however, that more or less seed falls on good ground and takes root, grows, and yields some kind of a harvest. Lecturing, therefore, like prospecting in a new country, is an indispensable and a most excellent thing.

(b) The press. This is comparativly a cheaper and much more powerful agent for the diffusion of knowledge on any subject of reform than the lecture. But it presupposes both the ability and desire of the people to read what the press has to communicate. These two requisits being present, the press has found a fulcrum for its lever and increases its power of disseminating thought a thousandfold. The press has this great advantage over the lecturer: the latter, by attacking the religion of a hearer, may provoke him into oppugnancy and commital; while the former lays the same argument in print before its reader, who, if he does get angry and throw down the paper or the tract, will, when he cools off, take it up again and read it, because his pride of consistency is not touched. I remember a Southern slaveholder and postmaster, in 1838, who by accident met with a stray copy of Garrison's Liberator in the mail he was opening, and, on reading it from curiosity and finding himself condemned by the editor as a manstealer, threw the paper on the floor and stamped on it with holy indignation—for he was a devout Christian. He picked it up and read it again, and his wrath boiled over a second time. But such was the force of the eternal truth with which Garrison sharpened his arrow that in a day or two this man became convinced, and ultimately brought all his slaves to the North and emancipated them. The press, therefore, does a bigger business in the work of enlightenment than the living speaker.

(c) But he who organizes a permanent society of wise and zealous Freethinkers does more to help the cause than either or both the other agents combined. Let me giv some reasons for saying so:

In making an effort to change a wrong public sentiment in a country like ours, where the will of the people is the law of the land, the very first thing to be done is to raise money. A reformer cannot budge out of his tracks without money. He cannot write a letter, or print a tract, or get candles for a night meeting in a schoolhouse without more or less money; and there is no other way under heaven, and among men, whereby money can be raised statedly and in sufficient quantities, except by organization. This was proved and illustrated in the great struggle to abolish the system of American slavery. That movement began about 1830, when the entire church, except a handful of Quakers, Covenanters, and Seceders; all the colleges; the two political parties; the president of the United States; the two Houses of Congress; and the national and state judiciary, were all the servil tools of the slave power, and deadly opposed to emancipation. The fundamental doctrin of the laws of the slave states, acquiesced in by all the rest in the Union, was that the slave was an article of property, not a person at all, but a thing, a chattel, destitute of all right either to himself, his labor, or his wife and children. This colossal crime against humanity and the republic was pronounced to be a Bible institution, and the church was its bulwark of defense.

The Abolitionists, all of whom, in 1830, could hav been put into a common-sized meeting-house, with plenty of room to spare, issued a declaration of moral war against this system as a stupendous crime, as well as a blunder, and demanded the immediate and unconditional emancipation of the slaves. This doctrin and sentiment they organized into a society of living men and women, and pledged themselvs never to giv up the struggle until the slaves and the nation both became free, and the national flag had restored to it the original meaning which the founders of the republic gave to it when it was first unfurled. Endowed with so much common sense as to see that an end, a purpose, could not be reached by devoutly waiting for a miracle to be performed in its behalf, but only by the activ use of means, the first thing the Abolitionists did after their declaration of war was to choose a committee of ways and means to provide the funds for a long campaign. To send out lecturers to arouse the public attention; to support a press, in order to expound and defend their views; to organize local societies, and hold regular meetings, wherever there was a prospect of finding listeners—these were their program; and to carry it out required money. This money had to come out of their own pockets, and it found its way into the treasuries of the local societies in the shape of small contributions; but it came weekly or monthly, and therefore it was steady in its supply, and a fund to be relied on. These men and women, without resentment, suffered personal indignities and outrages innumerable, for thirty years. By this time they had so increased in numbers, and so permeated the mind and conscience of the people with light upon the subject, that when our insane brethren of the South fired upon Fort Sumter, the loyal people of the North flew to their arms, defeated the armies of the rebellion, and President Lincoln, in 1863, signed the proclamation which abolished slavery, and saved the Union and the republic.

But the antislavery struggle, colossal as it was in its proportions, and far-reaching in its results, was a mere trifle when compared to the movement now on foot all over the civilized world to deliver mankind from the bondage of religious superstition. The slave, when he became astronomer enough to know that the constellation called the Dipper which revolved every twenty-four hours round the north star, hung, like a chandelier, over a land of freedom, from which, if he could only set his foot upon it, our fugitiv slave law could not drag him back into bondage, needed no one to arouse within him the latent love of liberty. It was constantly burning on the altar of his heart, either as a dangerous flame, or only smouldering in its ashes; and all the Abolitionists had to do was to giv him a map, and make him understand that if, traveling at night, he would keep his eye fixed upon that star, it would not be long before he would find his chains dropping from his limbs and himself feeling that at last, and forever, he was a free man.

But in the case of the slaves of superstition whom we now wish to free, the bondage is one of the mind, and not of the person. They hug the chains of this most degrading bondage to their bosoms, and spurn, with reproachful epithets, those who would enlighten and redeem them. It is our object and herculean task to create within them a desire to be free; and this can only be done by that electric spark which is produced by the friction of mind with mind when the contact is made, either through the medium of the ear, listening to the living speaker, or of the eye, reading a printed argument.

Now, the best service we can render our enslaved religious brethren must take this form of organizing societies, running up beacon-lights and keeping them blazing, trusting to the force of truth for ultimate results. An organization undertaking to accomplish a great work which will consume a long period of time and effort, cannot depend on the spasmodic liberality produced by eloquent speeches at great conventions, nor on the occasional gifts of a few hundred dollars by rich men here and there. As deep and navigable rivers are formed, not by the summer freshets which sometimes overflow the country and soon disappear, but from the rills and streamlets which constantly run down the sides of mountains whose tops drain the clouds of their moisture, and combine and form the river, so it is the dimes and quarters, and even the pennies, which are regularly and constantly being contributed that must fill our treasury with dollars. A wealthy man often gets himself gazetted as a benevolent Christian by the gift of a thousand dollars to send missionaries to the heathens, but his gift is a mere drop in the bucket when compared to the millions of money annually contributed all over the land for that purpose in the shape of dimes, quarters, and half dollars that never would, or could, be collected except by local organizations. It would be a waste of time for an agent to go around personally in a neighborhood gathering up such small contributions. They must be brought by the contributors themselvs to the regular meetings of the society and placed in the treasury.

The Catholic church in this country is the poorest of all our sects for its numbers. Its great success in building churches in a country where the state in its Constitution and laws ignores the very existence of any church or religion was a new revelation to the pope and propaganda at Rome, where the belief had always been that the main business of the state was to support the church by money. This has been, and still is, the European doctrin and practice. The American idea adopted by the Catholics by necessity shows that more money can be raised for church purposes through voluntary contributions from the common people by systematic giving than by depending on grants from the public treasury; and that the very habit of weekly and statedly giving creates an interest, and even an enthusiasm, in the giver that can be relied upon. The other sects, in number more than a hundred, are all organized bodies; and by the same methods raise their millions of money every year; and but for their organization would soon disintegrate and disappear altogether.

The Freethinkers hav wealth, a deep faith in what they believe, and plenty of intelligence. So hav the Spiritualists. They hav numbers too. But each body is an unorganized mob, hamstrung, imbecil, and the contempt of the church, because their excessiv and ridiculous individualism will not allow them to coöperate by organization and thus enable them to raise money. Every project we Freethinkers hav ever undertaken has stalled in the mud, or breaks down like an overloaded wagon, because the idea never seems to hav entered our heads that the horses need oats to giv them strength to pull, and that the screeching of the wheel is the cry of the axles for grease.

The only exception to this criticism that I remember is the Pittsburgh Society of Radicals. They show what can be done by organization. Many years ago they struck up a light in one of the darkest caves of superstition to be found in the whole country, and hav never let it go out for a single hour. There is not what you may call a rich man among them; but their rostrum is kept occupied; they hav no debts to pay, and their treasury is never empty. By their earnestness in supporting the cause they hav made Freethought to be respectable and respected in that city remarkable for its bigotry and its crimes.

The same may be said of the Pittsburgh Spiritualists. They keep up their weekly meetings through the season, and by the perennial flow of dimes and dollars into their treasury, secured to them by organization, their platform is occupied by the ablest lecturers, who never lack interested and interesting audiences.

The wisdom of the ancients gave the world a military maxim which is equally good in the moral warfare between right and wrong, and the intellectual warfare between truth and error. It was Fas est ab hoste do ceri—that is, it is right and lawful to take hints and learn good methods of attack and defense from the enemy. Thus, when one nation invented arms of precision all the rest followed the example. Now we are at war with the church, not with the persons composing it, but with it as an incorporated body. It is an army of occupation, completely organized, and has plenty of money, which is the sinews of war. It is officered by able men who hav their rank and file completely drilled and disciplined. But the Radicals, by the course they pursue, seem to hav stricken out the word fas from the maxim I hav quoted and substituted nefas, thus making it read that it is not right to learn anything from the enemy. They seem so afraid if we organize upon a platform for the free discussion of the questions at issue between us and the church that it will be the first step toward a creed, and so they prefer the unorganized way of attempting to do what only an organization can accomplish, and therefore they do nothing effectivly.

Our annual meetings hav no representativ character, and, therefore, but little force, because they hav no constituency, being made up mainly of those who hav purchased life memberships; and we hav no constituency and no money to do anything with because we hav no organization.

I digress a moment to say that the power of a constituency was shown by the vote of Congress in the closing hours of its late session in giving two millions and a half of money to the Chicago Exposition on the condition that its doors should be shut on Sunday. A more irreligious set of men, as the chaplains of both houses will testify, never sat in the Capitol, but they know how wide-spread the Sabbatarian doctrin of the church is, and as they are nearly all (of the House of Representativs) asking their constituencies to reëlect them to the next Congress, they propitiate the church and indorse the fundamental doctrin by which it either stands or falls, by requiring as a condition of their grant that the doors of the World's Fair shall be closed against the world's people on Sunday.

But, returning from this digression, suppose the Freethinkers had a thousand local societies scattered over the country, all ably womaned and manned, the secretary of each sending up beforehand to the national secretary its report of work done during the past year in its local sphere, and its delegate bearing its regular contributions to the national treasury. And suppose at the annual meeting the national secretary would read his report, made up in part of the cullings of interest taken from the local reports and giving the general condition and prospects of the movement, to be followed by addresses and discussions pertinent to the occasion, our yearly meetings would awaken interest, rouse enthusiasm, and become more consequential to our purposes. It would marshal our forces before the world; for the fact is visible to everyone who has eyes that in the theater of human affairs where stubborn realities are to be dealt with, nothing can be done, either in the way of business or benevolence, from the building and working of a railroad or iron factory down to religious tract distribution in a village, without organization and coöperation. The church in this country to-day is shaken from center to circumference by Freethought, which is incarnated in the persons of thousands upon thousands who are known as Radicals or Spiritualists. Yet the census-takers could not get either of these classes to stand up long enough to be counted; and hence their ignoble place in the census of 1890, at the very tail-end of all the big and little sects that hav any opinions on the subject of religion. While I blush with shame and indignation in writing this sentence I feel that the Freethinking classes are themselvs to blame. If in their disintegrated condition they exert such influence upon the church, how that influence would be increased a hundredfold if they would organize their forces.

Then consider another advantage which organization would giv. There are many business men who in their secret convictions are real Freethinkers, having no faith in the church as a soul-saving machine, but they are Freethinkers after the order of Saint Nicodemus, who, it will be remembered, came to Jesus by night, because he was afraid or ashamed to recognize him in the daytime and before the world. When such a man has a private interview with one of our kind, it is interesting to see how clear-cut and positiv his opinions are and how flaming is his zeal. I hav not fingers enough on both hands if multiplied by two to number within the circle of my acquaintance such persons as these. But they never giv a cent to the cause of Radicalism, nor take a paper which advocates it. They would not patronize even a wishy-washy, goody-goody "Liberal" paper; and as for THE TRUTH SEEKER, and its illustrations of scriptural texts and scenes, they would as soon introduce an open-mouthed rattlesnake into their houses as it. Neither do they know, except by hearsay, what is going on in the world of reform. They take a religious paper, pay pew-rent in the leading fashionable church, and their children go to the Sunday-school, and take part in all festivals for raising money for church purposes. The reason for all this astounding inconsistency is that they are business men, and hav families to support, and the best way of doing this is by milking the church cow; and the competition among the merchants for patronage is so great, they are afraid that, if the abovesaid cow finds out they are not orthodox, and don't go to church, she will get angry and kick over the pail, and their children will get no milk.

That they are mistaken in this cowardly policy I am sure; for I know merchants who, while respectful to the opinions of others, are outspoken in their own Freethought sentiments and convictions and yet hav more and better customers than those who sell their principles and their manhood with their dry-goods and groceries. The reason is, they are single-hearted men, and who do not try to serve two masters at the same time. They are honest, quid pro quo men, and sell good articles at a fair price, and are known to do so. We may set it down as a maxim in the world of trade that, unless prevented by unnatural and unjust tariff laws, every man will buy where he can buy cheapest, and sell where he can do so to the best advantage. No one will patronize a merchant and pay a higher price for his goods than he can get them for elsewhere of the same quality because the merchant is his or his wife's uncle or cousin and goes every Sunday to the same church. The law of nature which creates and regulates trade, or the exchange of commodities between nations, and individual producers, will compel men to trade on business principles alone, irrespectiv of religious opinions.

Now, if a Freethought organization were established in a given town, it would in due time attract attention as a place where questions on religion could be asked, and free speech allowed to all comers. After a while a business man would step in, and seeing and hearing nothing to disgust, and everything to attract, might accept the invitation to join in the discussion of the religious subject. When he comes again he may bring his wife and daughters; and then the other fearful Nicodemuses, seeing that no one by attending such meetings loses caste in society and the confidence of the public, would become courageous enough to contribute to the cause which has delivered them from bondage and made them self-respecting freemen.

It is said, in a bitterly reproachful way, by the enemies of our movement, that Freethinkers are a cold-blooded, selfish set, and hav no real sentiment of pity in their hearts for those they affect to call the miserable victims of the church superstition, and will do no persistent labor and practice no self-denial for their enlightenment; that it is this hard and icy indifference which prevents them from organizing and coöperating, as all other benevolent people do who believe there is a large class of their fellow-men actually suffering and needing relief. It is charged that in our papers and on our platforms we simply delight in showing up the shortcomings of the clergy and the ridiculousness of their creeds, but hav no intents and purposes to do anything practically to open the eyes of their honest and ignorant dupes, in the only way a large number of people can do anything specific and of importance.

Although this may not be a fair criticism, appearances seem to justify it when we compare the magnitude of the work to be done with the poor methods we hav heretofore used in carrying out our purposes. Or am I mistaken? Are the Freethinkers a class of people who gained their title to the name only after a long, secret, and terrible struggle with the church superstition, and who are so glad at their victory that they hav never entertained the thought of putting themselvs to any trouble in inciting and then helping others in the church to do the same thing, but hav adopted the policy of cowardice and selfishness expressed in the cry, "Sauve qui peut!" which, being paraphrased, means, Every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost? Is it true that the clergy are all hypocrits, and the church people such imbecils that they cannot discern the difference between truth and error, but are beyond the reach of our endeavors, and can only be redeemed by the slow process of evolution, which, in the wideness and generality of its sweep, excuses all individual effort?

I tell such persons that while there are a large number of skeptics in the church, because the loaves and fishes of office and position in society are there, you may find thousands more in the rural districts and villages who honestly believe what they preach and profess, and consider such belief necessary to salvation. All men know that they must die, and around that inevitable event, and jumping-off place into the dark future, the hopes and fears engendered by the religious sentiment continually circle, making it to all thinking people one of the most serious and interesting subjects in the world. Every Freethinker who left the church, especially if he had been a clergyman, parted with personal friends who would almost go crazy with grief if they did not believe that before he died, in answer to their earnest prayers, he would be brought back again to the fold as a lost sheep. One could not see the tears of affection filling the eyes of such people without secretly cursing the insidious serpent of superstition which has coiled itself around their souls, and from which it is impossible to deliver them except by establishing near them beacon-lights that will flash their rays upon the darkness of their minds, and peradventure enlighten and deliver them from bondage.

Now, as Mr. Charlesworth has made a favorable beginning at the capital of one of the best states in the Union, intersected with railroads and other facilities of travel and intercourse, and whose people are intelligent, I would like, and I do expect, to see him prove the possibility of a state and county organization of Freethinkers raising money plentifully and spending it wisely in concentrating their efforts upon a limited space of territory, so that they amount to something, instead of spreading them so thinly over the whole United States that they result in the summing up to little or nothing. A farmer who spreads a wagon-load of manure over a whole acre of ground will see no results in harvest time, even if he looks for them with a microscope. But if he puts the fertilizer in one corner of his acre, and keeps the harrow and the hoe vigorously a-going among the plants all summer, he will see and rejoice in the consequences of such sound common sense. A. B. BRADFORD.

Enon Valley, Pa., Aug. 1, 1892.

Freedom.

Oh! where is that land of Freedom
I've oft heard sung by men?
I saw it once in my dreaming,
And sought it oft since then;
But steered my bark to every shore
And found them still in slavery sore.

Methought I saw a golden shore
Where all are just and free;
Where right is might and goodness reigns,
And the weak can fearless be.
But everywhere I've turned my eye
I hear the fettered nations cry.

On many a strand the people stand
And sing of Liberty.
But I see the chains about their necks,
Their blind eyes cannot see;
And I see th' outstretched sword above,
But see not freedom, right, or love.

For I seek the shore where comes not war,
And ne'er a cannon's heard;
And all are unrestrained and free
In action, thought, and word,
Where man can think each his own way,
And all he thinks in freedom say.

. . . . . .

Methought I heard a whispered word:
"Your search will futil be,
For there's no nation on the earth
Has yet true liberty.
But in th' near future men will stand
In Freedom, true, and pure, and grand!"

H. KIRKE SWANN.

Sixteenth Annual Congress of The American Secular Union.

The sixteenth annual congress of the American Secular Union will be held at Chicago, October 23d, 24th, and 25th.

This society was organized in Philadelphia, July 4, 1876, to oppose the encroachments of the National Reform Association upon religious liberty.

The action of Congress in closing the World's Fair on Sundays, at the dictation of a Christian minority, demonstrates that the existence of an activ Secular society is a necessity. It also shows how much may be done by thorough organization.

That the Exposition has been ordered closed in accordance with the demand of the people no one pretends. It has been done by an inferior faction in spite of the people's protest.

It is a legend in this republic that government derives its just powers from the consent of the governed.

This principle underlies the very existence of the republic.

Through its practical acceptance the United States of America has become the ideal of the world. It represents no king, no priest, no religion, but the people only.

The National Reform Association, the American Sabbath Association, and the Prohibition party, combining with other less prominent organizations, hav ignored the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States by declaring that God, and not the people, is the immediate source of all political power, thus indorsing the fundamental principle of a theocracy. In accordance with this claim they hav succeeded in securing governmental recognition of what they claim as "God's day."

Not only hav they captured the executiv, but the judiciary. The Supreme Court has been induced to decide in favor of the proposed theocracy by declaring that "this is a Christian nation."

Accordingly, the people who are not acting in accordance with the Christianity which is recognized by the authorities, are fined and imprisoned, their property confiscated, and although the vast majority believe in freedom of speech and press, and in religious liberty, yet so undisciplined are the loyal forces that no combined resistance is made to this unconstitutional invasion of individual rights.

We hope that every Secularist who can do so, whether Liberal or Christian, will attend the congress, October 23d. We desire especially that the lecturers should be present.

At the coming convention the advisability of holding an International Congress in 1893 will be considered. The board is merely representativ and can go no farther than the members of the organization enable it to go. It is the members, then, and not the board that must decide that question.

As the dedication of the Columbian Exposition immediately precedes the congress, the reduced rates on the railroads at that time will enable Liberals throughout the country to attend. Trusting that advantage will be taken of this opportunity, we extend to you, one and all, a cordial invitation to be present, and aid us with your wisdom and advice in outlining the future work and policy of the organization.

CHARLES B. WAITE,
President Am. Secular Union.

Chicago, Aug. 22, 1892.

The Kansas Freethinkers' Association

Will hold their third annual convention at Ottawa, Kan., September 9th to 14th. John E. Remsburg and other good speakers will preach the gospel of truth.

All Freethinkers and Liberal societies are invited to attend and aid in the good work of teaching reason instead of faith. Clergy and Christians are especially invited to attend.

The Freethinkers will hav the use of Forest park, which has all the advantages of beauty, comfort, and convenience for the entertainment of visitors.

President, C. K. LEVERING,
Burlington, Kan.
Secretary, L. D. WHITE,
Halstead, Kan.

Lectures and Meetings.

THE Annual Convention of the Canadian Secular Union will be held on Saturday and Sunday, September 10 and 11, 1892, when it is hoped that a full attendance of delegates will be present.

ON Sunday evening, September 4th, the Chicago Secular Union will open its free Sunday evening lecture course at Lincoln Hall, 68 Adams street (near State street). Subject of the evening, "Is This a Secular or a Christian Government?" H. C. Bennett and others will speak. The public is invited.

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments for October and November:

Boston, Mass.....Oct.	2	Scofield, Utah....Nov.	1, 2
Cincinnati, O..... "	9	Reno, Nev..... "	6, 7
Golden Pond, Ky. "	14–17	Bishop Creek and
Chicago, Ill..... "	23	Round Valley, Cal "	9–14
Bartley, Neb..... "	26, 27	Independence, Cal "	17–20
Denver, Col..... "	30	Stockton, Cal..... "	27

"Pushed By Unseen Hands."

From the Arena.

Like everything written by this gifted lady's pen these stories will stimulate thought, enlarge sympathy, and make the reader more tolerant and charitable.

From the Carrier Dove.

From the translucent pen of Helen Gardener. We predict for it an immense sale. Helen Gardener is an advanced thinker, and the secret of her power is that she comes in touch with the "soul of things," and plays upon those subtle chords that find a responsiv echo in human hearts. Humanity, in its struggle for "universal mental liberty," hails this author as a Harbinger of the New Dispensation, and her pen will be mightier than the sword in solving the momentous problems that agitate the nations at the present time.

The Deacon's Hat.

For twenty odd years the deacon had worn
That sugar-loaf hat, and the lining was torn
From picking out pennies after going the rounds;
It was suffering now from a dozen sore wounds.
But the deacon swore—as deacons do—
With an "I do vum!" and "I tell yew!"
"That rim is too good to be thrown away.
Who knows?—I may want a halo some fine day."

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

Letters of Friends.

From the City of Churches.

OMAHA, NEB., Aug. 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: J. E. Remsburg lectured two nights last week in the orthodox and pious city of Omaha, Neb. "Sunday and the World's Fair" was the subject of his lecture August 11th, and "False Claims" August 12th. The Liberals in "the City of Churches" who heard "False Claims" were very much pleased, many pronouncing it as good as anything of Ingersoll's.

F. J. GRIFFEN.

An Appreciator.

CHAPIN HOME, N. Y., Aug. 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: It is not for me to touch upon any passage of scripture to make anything more plain than you do so well in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The idea of Heston in his caricatures is admirable. He hits the nail square on the head every time. It must kill prejudice and superstition if people will but think and let reason take possession of the mind.

I am inclined to praise some good things. That article on "Worship," by Mrs. Charlotte Robinson, is capital. I read it over twice. It is food for those who are hungry for the truth as it is in nature.

S. R. THORNE.

Down With Christ and Other Bigots.

TACOMA, WASH., Aug. 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3 for back numbers of the hit-'em-from-the-shoulder TRUTH SEEKER.

I am one of the Freethought subscribers, and sometimes indulge in the luxury of seeking the truth—that is why I take THE TRUTH SEEKER.

There is quite a Liberal element here in Tacoma. Our organization is about one hundred strong and still a-coming, and Mr. Reynolds (bless his little heart) is ever working for justice and reason.

Yours to down old Christ and all other bigots, JOHN BRANNAN.

Those Who Won't Learn Cannot Improve.

MOUNT PLEASANT, UTAH, Aug. 9, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I want you to giv thanks to Watson Heston for his good Bible pictures. They speak the real truth of the Bible God. I delight in showing them to all people. But I find that real, true priest-ridden Christians do not care to look at them but once. It seems to me that most Christians resemble a man who has made a bad bargain—he sticks to it all the closer, because he is too proud to own up to a bad bargain. In fact, he does not want to learn, and consequently cannot improve. N. P. NEILSON.

A Minister and One of Our Pictures.

WORCESTER, MASS., July 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose an account of a sermon preached by a young man, Walter Vrooman, brother of the regular minister in one of our largest orthodox churches. In his discourse he called attention to the picture in THE TRUTH SEEKER of May 21st. He described the picture fully, and said that it was the truth. He advertised it largely, and I was glad I had a lot of the papers to giv the congregation. He said many better things than were reported. It was a better discourse than I ever expected to hear from an orthodox pulpit. I hav talked with this young man, and I think he will be one of us in the future, if he is not already. W. B. CLARK.

An Indelicate Practice of the Church.

LORDSBURG, CAL., Aug. 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: At a church fair in the city of Buffalo, N. Y., six beautiful young ladies were used as a medium of making money. When the curtain rose these six young ladies stood in line, and placarded "You may kiss me for a quarter of a dollar." Now, what I want is to get the name of the church and the name of the pastor. I want to fire it at my psalm-singing friends. Will you please send me the information?

How would six ladies at a church fair do for a frontispiece for your paper, with a saloon bummer or two slobbering over their faces?

If there is any difference between that and the harlot, I cannot tell where the difference comes in. JOHN STEVENS.

[Will some reader in or by Buffalo oblige?—ED. T. S.]

Showing the Need of Abolishing Heaven as Well as Hell.

NATIONAL SOLDIERS' HOME, WIS., Aug. 1, 292.

If heaven is such a "dead sure thing"
And everlasting peace can bring
To any murderer's breast,
Why should he not in glory sing:
"I'm here at last, O heavenly king!
To hell with all the rest!"
What monster would not acquiesce?
Why make his vicious pleasures less
Before his time to swing?
He's sure of Jesus's kind caress,
Believes in him who'll sinners bless;
For him 'tis just the thing.
Let all who st ive to quench God's hell
Arise, and storm God's heaven as well,
And then we'll hav a rest.
But while their Gods bar reason out,
A future life remains in doubt,
Though Science strives its best.

NELSON HUNT.

Freethinkers Can Get No Hall.

SARCOXIE, MO., Aug. 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We are pretty badly priest-ridden in Sarcoxie. We hav about eighteen hundred of a population here and we hav five churches. Yet we hav quite a number of Freethought people among these churches. But they meet with no encouragement. They hav been reading Freethought works of mine. I let one man hav my TRUTH SEEKER to read, who was a very strong Presbyterian. Afterward we had a controversy on slavery being a command of God. He said he never knew that was in the Bible before. We want to get a Freethought lecturer here. But the trouble will be to get a hall. They will not let us into any house. If you hav any plan to suggest please let us know.

As you proposed to send sample copies, I hav twenty-six names here on the next page for you to send them to.

J. W. RICHARDSON.

Opening of a Liberal Hall.

HAMBURG, IA., Aug. 13, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: This evening, John E. Remsburg, of Atchison, Kan., had the honor of delivering the first lecture in the new, magnificent Lyceum Liberal Hall. His subject was "Thomas Paine," which he handled in his characteristic masterly and eloquent manner. We hope to hav him with us often. A. S. Bailey, one of the earnest Liberal workers of Shenandoah, Pa., introduced the speaker of the evening in a few well-chosen words, and spoke in glowing terms of the liberality of Mr. Fred. W. Toedt, who has erected the hall for the advancement of Liberalism and Spiritualism in this part of Iowa. Charles Cowles is always ready to contribute to the pleasure of occasions of this kind by furnishing music free. Liberals are always ready to accord a hearty welcome to lecturers who hav left the sinking ship of orthodoxy. Among them are Wm. S. Golden, S. D. Thompson, Wade Sperry, D. R. Thompson, John Molchoir, Chas. Sproul, and Gus Wagner.

Yours for Liberalism, E. T. DALBEY.

Why Priests Wanted Gold Images.

LONGFORD, KAN., Aug. 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I know you can explain matters very well to ignorant people, therefore I will ask you for some information. If I understand the Bible right, Moses was ordered by God to tell the children of Israel to get all the jewels of the Egyptians, with which they ran off. But whether he (the God) ordered him also to get a calf made by Aaron is not quite clear to me; but I think it was made to get all the gold in one lump. I see God got angry—but whether because the calf was made, or was not big enough, I do not understand. If you know, please let us know it through your paper.

R. BERGER.

[It is uncertain what was the motiv of Aaron in directing the making of a golden calf. Certainly we know that desire to appropriate the valuables to their own private use has often been the end of priests in ordering idols and their paraphernalia of gold and jewels. In this case the record is imperfect, and written by the priests themselvs. Indeed, we do not know that any such event happened at all. The matter is treated in our book, "Old Testament Stories Comically Illustrated," as well as circumstances permit.—ED. T. S.]

An Industrious Missionary.

DETROIT, MICH., Aug. 14, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your TRUTH SEEKER of August 13th you ask for names of Freethinkers that you may send them sample TRUTH SEEKERS. Well, I do your bidding for a few, and will say that I use my TRUTH SEEKERS as fast as they come for missionary work, carrying them with me every week when I start out on Monday. I show them to my customers, et al. Also I leave them at the hotels and depots, and often put them in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union wall-baskets for the perusal of any who chance to "read as they fly." I hav given the name and address of THE TRUTH SEEKER to many who wish a copy, and I suppose you hav already received the names of some of them as subscribers. For a truth, you know not what vast numbers there are in Michigan who are now thinking for themselvs and are really full-fledged Freethinkers, but are rather careful about expressing themselvs unless to others of Liberal views.

I let my light shine wherever I go, and rather seek the opportunity of talking on the subject, and that in a way to please and not to antagonize my listeners.

Respectfully yours, A. D. SWAN.

God and His Vagaries.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 7, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. Serviss's lecture on "A Trip to the Moon" caused me to reflect and ask the question, Why did not God inform his children about the planets, their distance from each other, their rotations, and each planet's diameter; and place us en rapport with the inhabitants of those worlds instead of placing us so distant? When I look up and see those beautiful stars, it makes me feel lonely and despondent to think I cannot take a trip to some of them while I am in the flesh.

The Christians tell us, God is everywhere, and nowhere in particular. If that is so, he never stops long in one place, and he can't be very large or he would fill up all spare room.

God might hav told us when he made Adam out of mud whether he covered the mudhill up in sand and then took to the water as crocodiles do and waited till the sun hatched the old rascal out.

Christians tell us God is the father of everything. That includes the jackass. And as there is no cause without effect, the father of two-legged asses could not hav been created without a father, so the father is Nature. But the Christian asks, Who created Nature? Scientists answer, Nitrogen, hydrogen, carbon, and oxygen are the source of all life.

Respectfully, W. W. MORRIS.

A Man Who Was Pounced On.

CHARLEVOIX, July 10, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The grand old TRUTH SEEKER has been my companion for these many years, and I hope it will continue to be so for the balance of my days. It may be but a notion of mine, but I think the paper has continued to improve ever since I first began to read it. One of the greatest improvements has been the pictures. They touch a spot in the gray matter of the brain that could never be reached by words. No other paper that it has ever been my lot to read treats so many different subjects from so many different standpoints. The problem of life both here and hereafter; the system of government and the system of no government; the single tax, the graduated tax, the tax for revenue only, and the tax for the protection of American industries; the value and the no value of money—the different sides of these, and many other subjects, hav been made quite clear to the different writers, but to the many readers of the common herd they seem but fine theories that will not in all cases stand their common-sense, everyday, practical tests.

But I must stop. For what little I said in my last I was pounced upon by the political economists in various letters, and I must say that I "never suffered so much from a daddy auld" as I did from them. The principal object they seemed to hav in view was to hav me acknowledge them smarter than Robert Ingersoll. I could not see it in that light, though I enjoyed their letters, and I now heartily wish them long life and prosperity; and may the grand old TRUTH SEEKER long outliv us all and still grow in popularity and influence. Yours for true freedom,

ROBERT MILLER.

Christianity vs. Spiritualism.

NEWARK VALLEY, N. Y., Aug. 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Christians of all denominations believe in and teach the existence of disembodied spirits, conscious, living, immaterial spirits; capable of enjoying happiness, suffering misery and torture. They also believe in angels created from the foundation of the world, capable of visiting the earth, flying through space. And many, if not the majority, of Christians believe in guardian angels, that accompany and guard each individual. They also believe and teach that a part of God, or God's spirit, when we are converted from sin unto righteousness, or from total depravity to be one of God's elect, enters into our hearts, indeed pervades our whole system. The Christian Bible teaches spiritual phenomena from Genesis to Revelation, and yet they will deride modern Spiritualism and say all manner of evil things about it, call it the works of the devil, and witchcraft, and everything that is bad. When, in fact, modern Spiritism when looked upon from an unbiased standpoint seems more reasonable and consistent, less objectionable in many points. It is progressiv in its theory. Its leaders, and indeed a great majority of Spiritualists, recognize the law of evolution, while Christian Spiritualists seem to be iron-clad—no progress after death. If one is so unfortunate as to go to hell, hell is his doom. Nothing left him but to sizzle and fry, groan and gnash his teeth. And on the other hand, if one is so lucky as to get his little soul into heaven, nothing to do but just shuffle up and down before the great white throne and make polite bows to him that sitteth thereon, and sing Sunday-school Psalms, and amid the din and clatter, if one can get a chance, tell God what a nice fellow he is that he didn't send us all to the other place. So far as I am concerned, I would get homesick in a week. If I may be allowed to choose between the two, giv me modern Spiritualism every time. E. W. COUNCILMAN.

Bible Blunders.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 2, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $1 for the best and the cheapest brain-food in the world, that is, the tree of knowledge, THE TRUTH SEEKER. I am a Hebrew, like Jesus the son of God, but not such a liar as he was. I am thirty-five years of age, and up to last year my brain-food was only the Bible and the Talmud. But I find out that it was only poison. The self-contradictions from Jesus himself will prove the falseness of it. In Matt. v, 16, 18, he said: "Think not that I come to destroy the law or the prophets. I am not come to destroy but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law till all be fulfilled." He said (x, 34, 35): "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth. I am not come to send peace but a sword. For I come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law." Eph. vi, 2: "Honor thy father and mother, which is the first commandment, with promis that it may be well with thee and thou mayest be long on the earth." Heb. iv, 9: "There remained, therefore, a rest to the people of God." Chapter x: "For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own work as God did from his." Matt. xxvii, 46: "And about the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli; lama sabacthani; that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" St.

John xvii, 1: "These words spake Jesus and lifted up his eyes to heaven and said, Father, the hour is come. Glorify thy son that thy son also may glorify thee." Verse 5: "And now, O father, glorify thou me with thine own self and with the glory which I had with thee before the world was."

So from these five contradictions we can see that Jesus was a big liar. And about the unabridged lies in Moses's Bible—you can see them in the first five words: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." How did he come? From where did he come? How did he make a world from nothing? Are there any witnesses that it is true? No, sir, nothing of the kind. Who is that gentleman, God? What had he done before? Who is his father? Who is his mother? How old is he? What is he—male or female? married or single? Nobody knows.

What interest hav we when we deny the existence of a deity? what benefit hav we poor mortals when we deny God so? is the question from all the orthodox. But are not the tyrannies exercised in his name, and the slavery of men who groan under priests, enough cause to speak?

CHAS. ENOWITZ.

A Noble Character Depicted.

DODGEVILLE, WIS., Aug. 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: My father being a subscriber to, and enthusiastic upholder and believer in the work of, your paper, since its first issue or nearly so, and knowing that he would appreciate having a notice in your columns, I write you the facts as regards his death on Aug. 12, 1892.

F. J. Schell was born in Baden, county Eberbach, town Balybach, Germany, Aug. 19, 1827. Being early imbued with the love of liberty and freedom, he joined in the 1848 revolution, at the conclusion of which he was court-martialed and sentenced to be shot. The sentence was finally commuted to life imprisonment, five years of which he served in solitary confinement. He was reprieved in 1854; came to America, locating in Wisconsin, when he married and set up his home at Prairie du Chien. Mr. Schell was a born patriot, and lover of liberty, moral, mental, and physical; and when the life of his adopted country was endangered he was early found among its most brave and willing defenders, enlisting in Company D, 33d Wisconsin Infantry, in 1862. Discharged in 1863 on account of illness, he again enlisted in 1864, and served until the close of the war. He was an enthusiastic I. O. O. F. and G. A. R. member, always activ in behalf of temperance, morality, and education. He was an exemplary husband and father. His happy, joyous nature made this life to him worth living. His love of children, flowers, and nature's works was intense. Seemingly he had within him a spring of gladness, peace, and good will for all the brotherhood of man. His love of truth, and fearlessness to say and do what his conscience told him was right, and his irreproachable character, are well known to all who knew him. This originality of thought and activ mind, with his constant reading of all classes of literature, made him the best-informed man I ever had the pleasure to meet. During his long illness, the nature of which (stricture of pyloric orifice) caused him to die of starvation, knowing that it meant death, he was ever cheerful, seeking to comfort his family, often saying that death is as natural as life—"Though I would like to liv, my time has come, and I desire you all to bear it as I do." His last requests were given as unconcernedly as though he were going on a short journey to return again. Death held no terrors for him. His last words were of comfort for his family, saying: "Don't worry or grieve. Everything is all right, all right." Dying as he lived, free from all superstitions, an honorable and respected man. His remains were laid away with the honors of the G. A. R. and I. O. O. F. lodges, not only by his sorrowing family but by the whole community. The business houses of the city all were closed during the ceremonies. F. W. SCHELL.

What Theosophy Is.

SCHUYLER, NEB., July 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Being one of your subscribers, I take the liberty of asking you to kindly giv the readers of your valuable paper an idea of what Theosophy is. I am partly in the dark myself as to the dogmas or creeds or what not that Theosophy teaches, and I hav asked some of the learned theologians in this city for an explanation of it, and they also seem to be behind the age as to the meaning of this new religion.

I am just tickled to death with the reading and pictures in THE TRUTH SEEKER. Watson Heston's name should be written with a red-hot poker on every church door and schoolhouse from Maine to Oregon as one of the greatest reformers of the nineteenth century.

This is a pretty Liberal city. One can sell goods, hold a prize-fight, or go to church on Sunday, just as he chooses. The churches hav a very slim attendance on the Lord's day, and when the contribution-box is passed around it looks sick with the few nickels scattered here and there on its bottom.

The time is not far distant when the clergy of this locality will hav to hoe corn or do something more honorable to win bread than distributing those old fables of the Bible.

How is it that your lecturing bureau has never sent a man to stir up Freethought in Nebraska? I presume that you hav heard that Freethought is a settled fact here and you think it more important to send your anti-pulpiteers into darkest Africa or where they still liv and think in "dug-outs."

I hav been a Freethinker now for five years, and cannot see any reason why I should turn back and believe those old stories about Christ dying to save sinners, etc. Respectfully yours, J. A. R.

[The word "Theosophist" means, by its etymology, "wise in respect to God." It has until late years been vaguely applied to religious teachers and writers who hav professed by meditation and divine illumination te hav arrived at unusual knowledge of divine things. The term is nearly synonymous with "mystic." Recently, however, the term has been brought into prominence as the designation of a class of the above-described persons who hav adopted many of the leading tenets of Buddhism with little change. The Buddhistic creed, contained in many of the books that we publish, will afford you a fair idea of the Theosophic. Or we can send "What Is Theosophy?" by W. R. Old, for 35 cents. We may append here a summary of certain Theosophic points by Alex. Old, F. T. S.:

The conventional view is that life began with birth;
The Theosophic view is that life is a continuance of a preceding career.
The conventional view is that life is a probation determining the quality of eternity;
The Theosophic view is that life is a stage in an evolutionary career.
The conventional view is that life has the character deity decreed to it;
The Theosophic view is that life is the strict result of prior conduct.
The conventional view is that life is the scene mainly of action;
The Theosophic view is that life is the scene also of retribution.
The conventional view is that life is never to be repeated;
The Theosophic view is that life is to be repeated indefinitly.—ED. T. S.]

Reasons for Fighting Christianity.

LIBERTY, ILL., Aug. 21, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I will giv the following reasons for increasing Freethought:

1. There are millions of dollars annually donated to maintain religion. This is mostly paid by the middle and poor class of people, and many of them do, or will, need the same to buy necessary food.

These people no doubt feel it their duty to donate, in order to procure a home in heaven after they hav died.

2. To rid many of the horrible feeling that is caused by believing their loved ones are, or will be, in eternal torture.

According to the Bible a majority of its believers will be lost.

A believer's argument is, if they do right they will not be lost. But such is not logic, when we daily witness that the majority violate the Bible's commandments.

Further, when a Christian man's children are born he feels but little assured that they are going to be saved in preference to somebody else's.

Where is there an intelligent human that is happy when he or she knows that the most of their neighbors are going to an eternal hell? It would daily grieve me if I knew my old hound was going there.

3. There are many that suffer death more than a dozen times with various afflictions and diseases, and were such unfortunate people all Freethinkers many would then no doubt shorten their misery by a quadruple dose of morphine or chloroform. But a believer of the Bible is by that book strictly forbidden this privilege.

4. As Freethinkers are in the minority, they suffer under partial laws passed by the religious power.

5. All fears of bloodshed through religion would cease.

But first we should determin whether the Bible is God's word or simply the work of human beings. Any unprejudiced, competent reasoner can easily determin this by reading Paine's "Age of Reason." There are many men of great intellect who no doubt are sincere in their belief that the Bible is God's word, but they cannot fairly reason on the subject. They are taught to believe this from childhood, and as a rule what is taught a child as to religion it will believe, no matter how absurd.

Now, when we read the truth to a believer, he cannot look at it as the truth for fear he commits a sin while considering such the truth, therefore the so-called Christian has his mind, as a rule, fully made up that all that can be said against the Bible is a pack of lies. I know this from experience. I hav been a Christian, and hav attended church and prayer-meeting regularly. I was then glad to tell my experience to the brothers and sisters, and I was happy because Christ loved me and I him, and I would see him in heaven, because the Bible read to that effect. I even thought that God was my guide through life. As I am totally blind I put great trust in him. I well remember when Rev. B. K. Thrower, of Eureka Springs, Ark., about seven years ago said to me: "Brother Loomiller, how is it that you can navigate among these hills alone without any eyes?" I said: "I do what little I can and trust in God to do the balance, and he never fails." I was sincere, but since I hav become a Freethinker I trust only in my skill and long cane, and I now get along just as well as when trusting in God.

Is it not strange that believers charge the unbelievers with misconstruing the scriptures? When you look at the Baptists, Catholics, and Universalists, how strangely they contradict one another and charge one another with misconstruing the Bible. Certainly some one is misconstruing.

Not long ago I heard a Christian say, "The Bible means just what it says." I called his attention to a passage in the Bible which I knew would not read to suit him. He said then, "Oh, that means something else." It is strange that that which reads to suit a believer means what it says, and that which does not read to suit him means different from what it says. This is evidently according to each believer's doctrin. J. C. LOOMILLER.

Interesting Miscellany.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am a traveling salesman (jewelry) and generally go South. I endeavor to take advantage of the unjust law throughout the South which imposes a heavy tax in almost every town on peddlers, drummers, and salesmen. At some places it is $50 a day for a license to sell. Naturally, such an enormous tax frightens away all salesmen. I take the risk, however, of paying no fee—make some money, but occasionally am arrested and put in jail. At one place I was obliged to sweep and repair the public streets for thirty days. Think over it, ye rabid Republicans, forced to work under arrest for one whole month for simply selling jewelry where the license (tariff) amounted to absolute "protection" for the local merchants, but was prohibitory for me. Freedom to trade as well as freedom to think, without any restrictions, is my belief. (If Mr. Ingersoll can, I would like him to explain how I might consistently belong to the Republican party.)

My early training was as a Roman Catholic, but traveling, observation, and Freethought conversations with Mr. George M. Davenport and other Materialists hav changed my early belief in the supernatural. The confessional I detest. Ecclesiastical forms, rituals, and genuflexions are now meaningless to me. Fear of purgatory, hell, of the devil, or an imaginary God, no longer haunts my waking hours. Oh, the glory of my freedom from those base delusions! How happy I am now! To lead a useful life, doing no harm to anybody, but elevating self and others, is my daily endeavor.

While walking along Twelfth street in Philadelphia I stumbled into the large hall of the Sunday Breakfast Association. Their plan of Christian charity is to collect several hundred tramps in the hall. The clergy and "rescuers" then dole out coffee and rolls to the unfortunates, and preach "at" them, telling the rich Christians up in the galleries of the great good they are doing. To my mind, such charity is outrageous—a crime, a blasphemy of their God!

From practical experience I hav found that the Young Men's Christian Association is simply a mercenary institution. Everything in the way of "advantages," even "salvation," has to be paid for by the misled youths.

The great Century Dictionary has something in our favor. The word "morality" is thus defined: "The practice of moral duties, regarded as apart from and not based upon vital religious principle." Religion is being very rapidly discarded as "elegant, costly, and useless," and not moral. Even children now put Santa Claus and God in the same hole—one being as "holy" as the other.

Rev. Dr. Talmage says (page 209), "If you want to destroy a young man's morals, take away his Bible." The definition in the Century Dictionary overthrows the assertion of Talmage, and with reason, too. This reverend ranter advises the extirpation of Mormonism by a military expedition. "Anything shorter than bayonets and anything softer than bullets will never do the work," he says (page 25). He thinks such barbarous means are just, so long as the ends are reached. In the recent political conventions of the two antiquated parties the Mormon delegates had the same standing as the gentile delegates (one-half vote for each), showing that the Mormon persecution has ended at last. Talmage says (page 201) the Infidels' banners are inscribed: "No God! No Christ! No punishment [after death, of course]! No restraints [against morality, of course]! Down with the Bible! Do as you please [provided others are unharmed, of course]!" And very proper banners they are. Where are better?

A relativ of mine is a student at the Manhattan College. It is a Catholic seminary, presided over by semi-priests who wear a Mother Hubbard black gown, high hat, "white wings" around the neck, lead a monastic life, and call themselvs "brothers." These zealous scarecrows are completely under the thumb of their superior, the bishop, but hav at least one privilege—that of using snuff. One day the teacher of mathematics in this school inadvertently reminded the young men that mathematical problems must be solved and the results absolutely proved to be correct, unlike matters in theology, which are "swallowed whole."

I obtained a copy of "The Holy Bible Abridged," through THE TRUTH SEEKER office, and read it through, although some of the filthy chapters almost took my breath away. Catholics, you know, are advised by their clergymen not to read the Bible, lest incorrect interpretations be made; but the obscenity of the scriptures is shockingly plain, and a child could not misunderstand the indecent parts. Upon comparing a Catholic with a Protestant Bible I find them substantially the same. But I hav no use for either, except as relics of superstition. R. Y. BACH.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight.
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Across the Atlantic.

Paris.—Palace of St. Cloud, Versailles.—The Hippodrome.—The Morgue.—The French People.—Fees.—The Social Evil.—Wine-Drinking.

We were a gay party leaving Brussells, full of fun and frolic, by the night train. Laughter, jest, and repartée filled the moments as we sped on to Paris. But by and by the anecdote died away, the smiles grew dim, and the seven in our compartment car hung their heads with drooping eyelids, and presently a short, snappish snore was the only sound that broke the stillness of the air aside from the rattling, bumping car.

Along toward midnight the welcome words by one of our number, "We are almost there," roused the company, who gathered themselvs and their gripsacks speedily together.

A strange place at midnight! Were you ever there? Then you know how it is yourself. But a friend was at the station to meet us, and soon we were being whirled away to the Hotel Central. It was odd to see the streets of Paris brilliantly lighted at midnight: shops open, people sauntering leisurely along, or seated at little tables on the sidewalks sipping wine with the utmost nonchalance. Flowers, carriages, music, pleasure, all mingling lightly together.

Gay, volatil, beautiful, delightful Paris! Historical, bloody, tragic Paris! How many stories are woven in the tapestries of your records!

So much has been told of Paris that nothing new can be said of it. But it was charming to be riding down the Champs Elysées, of which we had heard so much, to see that great square, the place de la Concorde, and the old palace of the Bourbons. In the middle of the square are magnificent fountains, with round basins, fifty feet in diameter. The great central fountain stands upon the very spot where once stood the guillotine, marking such scenes of blood and destruction as make us recoil in horror. Twenty-eight hundred victims fell here beneath the bloody ax. Louis XVI., Marie Antoinette, Charlotte Corday, and all who incurred the displeasure of Robespierre, and finally Robespierre himself.

Think of sixty poor creatures murdered in this way in a single day! Will these lovely fountains, flowing, glistening in the sunlight ever wash away the rivers of blood that hav run here? No, there is not water enough in the whole world to do it.

The pacha of Egypt sent a present of an obelisk to Louis Philippe, and that stands here near the fountain. They say it weighed five hundred thousand pounds, and it cost $40,000 to get it in its present position. The fearful transactions of the past connected with French history rise constantly before the mind.

Here is the site of the famous prison, the Bastille, the key of which was sent to George Washington by Thomas Paine, and now hangs in a glass case in the home at Mount Vernon. The old place of cruelties and horrors, whose history has chilled our blood, is gone, and in the wide square there now stands the figure of Liberty, and the stones that composed the dungeons of the prison were used in the construction of the bridge De la Concorde. The last historical act in this place was the burning of the throne of Louis Philippe in 1848. Would that every throne could be thus destroyed. We paused in the place Vendome to note the statue of the great Napoleon on the top of an immense column. The railing around it was hung with wreaths of flowers, placed there by relativs and friends of the old soldiers of the Grand Army.

The Tuilleries, and the Louvre—but how can I describe the beautiful Louvre? Such a collection of statuary, spacious galleries, anterooms, every niche and corner filled and crowded with splendid specimens of the finest art.

The "grand gallery," as it is called, is said to be a quarter of a mile long, and here you can look upon the works of Titian, Rembrandt, Raphael, Quintin Matsys, Murillo, Vandyke, Albert Durer, and a host of other famous artists. Here you can see the original Venus of Milo in all its beauty and simplicity. One can but feel that he is in a sort of painter's paradise in the galleries of the Louvre.

Nobody visiting Paris will fail to visit the tomb of the first Napoleon. It is a magnificent mausoleum, the grandeur of which must be seen to be realized. In his will he desired to be buried on the banks of the river Seine, in the midst of the French people he loved so well, and the wish was fulfilled. There his remains rest in state, at the church of the Invalides, though little he cared for churches and their paraphernalia. The light falls from the cupola in a peculiar manner through the colored glass, so as to giv the effect of a wonderfully mellow flash of glory.

The crypt containing the body of the great hero is twenty feet below a marble railing, and the sarcophagus is a block of red porphyry that came from Finland. The marble work, the carving and decorations of the tomb, cost $1,800,000 in gold. The glass of the windows is of a pale, bluish color, and givs the effect of twilight.

One day we rode out to the palace of St. Cloud, the palace identified with the history of the great Napoleon. Our way out was through that extensiv park, the Bois de Boulogne, comprising three thousand seven hundred acres. Such a lovely place!—woods, walks, shaded footpaths, winding streams, and rustic bridges.

It was once frequented by footpads, robbers, assassins, and the like, and was the place where duels were fought. Our driver informed us that only the week before a duel was fought there, and one of the duelists, an instructor in the school of Technology, was killed. So foolish, at times, will some men be. We drove past one of the residences of the great money king, Baron Rothschild, a man affected with the ailment of too much wealth—a disease not contagious, however.

The old part of the palace is in a state of ruin (St. Cloud), and few will ever look upon it again, for its total demolition is to be accomplished in a few days. In this palace Napoleon was married to Maria Louise in 1810, and here, too, he had lived with Josephine when she was his beloved wife. We were shown through beautiful saloons, still splendid in decorativ art, paintings, and carvings.

The Council of Five Hundred that held meetings here in 1799 was dispersed by Napoleon. Louis XIV. and Louis XVI. lived occasionally in this palace, and it was here that Henry III. was assassinated by the monk. Beautifully frescoed are the ceilings with pictures of the gods and goddesses of heathen mythology, and rare inlaid tables, cabinets, mirrors, and bronzes are displayed in the different apartments.

Our party made a group for a picture at the request of an itinerant photographer, who "took us" at the entrance to the garden in the rear of the palace.

Talk about palaces! The one at Versailles in magnificence certainly exceeds all others, and it is not to be wondered at that Louis XIV. was called the "extravagant monarch." Prodigality and lavish expenditure shows on every side.

Why, the exhibition of fine statuary and rare paintings is something marvelous, room upon room opening into each other, all supplied with the most lavish abundance of art and decorativ ingenuity. Each hall has a name, as the saloon of Mars, Mercury, Venus, Apollo, etc. The grandest one of all is the Great Gallery of Louis XIV., gorgeous in its regal magnificence. Then there is a great hall two hundred and thirty feet long, one side completely formed of mirrors, and the arched ceilings representing allegory and realities in colors by the most celebrated artists.

Another grand room is the bedchamber of Louis XIV.—whose portrait, by the way, is in nearly every room in the palace. There stands his massiv bedstead—but "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown," and many a humble cottager has had far sweeter sleep than he whose head once pressed the downy pillows of that gilded bedstead. Everything is lovely in this palace. Here, also, is the king's gambling-room, and also the king's chapel, and here Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette were married a hundred and twenty-two years ago. In the center of the court is shown the window from which this unfortunate queen came and addressed the mob, imploring the people to wait and be patient. Her apartments are still preserved, and the little staircase by which she descended to make her escape with trembling limbs and beating heart.

I should tell you about the statuary in the great halls and corridors. Among the effigies of dead kings and queens, princes and bishops, I noticed a small cast of the head of Mirabeau, and another of Rousseau, and stopped a moment to think of them and their now inanimate dust.

The gardens of the palace, or parks, are on a scale of grandeur in keeping with the rest. The large park is forty miles in extent, the smaller one twelve miles, and both containing fountains, flowers, walks, groves, and lakelets, more princely than my pen can tell.

Of course we inspected Napoleon's state carriages—everybody does. They are as grand as gold and art can make them, but they did remind me of circus chariots more than aught else. I fear me it is true that I hav no great respect for royalty as it was, or royalty as it is.

The day I went to Versailles I was so unfortunate as to lose my little notebook, with all my dates and memoranda. A courier came riding furiously to our carriage to say in French that a book had been found and would be returned by the police.

Did I see Paris by gaslight? Oh, yes, and only in that way can one obtain an idea of its extent. It is a beautiful and fascinating sight. And did I go into the great churches? Oh, yes; and noted in the "jewel church" the foolish expenditure of money in the stained glass of the fourteenth century, the art of making which is lost to modern times.

The pictured old Apostles had real gems in the hems of their garments, but I noted outside hungry-looking men with hooks pulling over the refuse heaps and carefully preserving every bit of bread and meat.

They wouldn't let me or anyone else walk on the tesselated pavement of their old church for fear we would wear it out.

In the Notre Dame church, the little niches near the outer door were all worn smooth by the beggars who sit there to solicit alms. Inside, an old woman had a dish of "holy water" to touch which she charged a penny. I prefer clean water to the dirty "holy aqua," so I only laughed as I passed by, and the old lady muttered an anathema, but it did not hurt me. Dim old corridors, stained-glass windows, statuary, impossible monuments, Gothic arches and carvings, musty smells, marble floors, deluded creatures here and there crossing themselvs and repeating prayers; transepts, pictured saints and holy virgins, beggars, and unholy visitors tramping about, and a marble man with his head in his hand, and that is the church of the Notre Dame.

Sunday morning I visited the Louvre gallery, and in the evening the hippodrome. The performance was pleasing, and was witnessed by about ten thousand people. Sunday is a holiday in Paris. Most of the stores are open and everyone enjoys himself as he pleases. Everything is quiet and orderly, no rowdyism, no disorder, no disturbances. I am quite charmed with the Paris Sunday.

I looked in at the morgue one day. I almost wish I hadn't, for the dead faces there haunt me. There were eight dead bodies awaiting identification—five men and three women. A curious gathering of men, women, and children were peering through the plate glass windows that separated the dead from the living. The dead had met death in some violent manner, and are usually kept three days for identification; if no one claims them, then they are buried. One was the face of an aged lady with gray curls clustering about her face; another was that of a young man in the bloom of youth. The look upon the faces of all was that of peace, except one that appeared at war with bimself and everybody.

Not a day passes, I was told, that a body was not brought in—the result of suicide or murder, or from some natural unknown cause.

The French people are gay, good-natured, happy, and seem to take life easily. The business of the day begins about noon and continues late. When Parisians sleep I know not. They are lovers of art, music, poetry, painting, and evidences of this are on every hand.

But you should not come to Paris unless you come with a pocket full of francs and centimes to pass out in fees. If you are assisted from a carriage the hand is held out for a few centimes. Children will follow a carriage in the suburbs for miles begging for pennies. It is fees in hotels for the slightest service. Fees, fees, everywhere! For every little act of politeness you are expected to pay. In America, it would be regarded as an insult to offer pay for an answer to a question. Not so in France. There is the greatest wealth and the extreme of poverty.

The social evil is licensed, and women bear the marks of its degradation. The condition of woman is not to be envied in any country where she is regarded as a chattel to be bought and sold.

Everybody drinks wine, and the excuse is that the water of the Seine is polluted; but the wine is not palatable, at least it was not to me. Although wine is drank as freely as water, strange to say, I saw no one the worse for liquor.

SUSAN H. WIXON.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.
Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.
Common-Sense Thonghts on the Bible. 10c.
Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.
Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.
Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.
Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.
God Proposed for Our National Constitution. 10c.
Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.
Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.
Is Spiritualism True? 10c.
Man's True Saviors. 10c.
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.
Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.
Radical Discourses on Religious Subjects. $1.25.
Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.
Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.
Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.
What Is Right? 10c.
What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.
Who are Christians? 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

The Modern Science Essayist

Popular Evolution Essays and Lectures.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life and personal characteristics; his views on education; his religious opinions. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His ancestry, life, and personal characteristics. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. Did the material universe ever have a beginning? By GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology; How the world grew. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETABLE LIFE; How does life begin; The problem of spontaneous generation. By WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE; The evidences from geology, geographical distribution, and comparative zoology. By ROSSITER RAYMOND, Ph.D.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: Relation of man to the brute creation; his ancestral line; duration of human life on the planet. By E. D. COPE, Ph.D.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: The mind and the nervous system: the nature of mind. By ROBT. G. ECCLES, M.D.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. Primitive man; growth of the family, city, and state: development of the domestic relations; marriage. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. Origin of religious beliefs; ideas of primitive man. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. How altruism grows out of egoism; the proper balance. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION—a, from geology; b, from morphology; c, from embryology; d, from metamorphosis; e, from rudimentary organs; f, from geographical distribution; g, from discovered links; h, from artificial breeding; i, from reversion; k, from mimicry. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By REV. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. Relation of the doctrine to prevailing philosophical systems. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. Plans for social regeneration as tested by evolution. By REV. MINOT J. SAVAGE.
16. THE SCOPE AND PRINCIPLES OF THE EVOLUTION PHILOSOPHY. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
17. THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF HERBERT SPENCER'S PHILOSOPHY. By SYLVAN DREY.
18. THE RELATIVITY OF KNOWLEDGE. The nature of sense-perception; sight, sound, taste, smell, feeling; the doctrine of the Unknowable. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
19. A STUDY OF MATTER AND MOTION. An excellent digest of a much vexed question, with quotations from many authorities. By HON. A. N. ADAMS.
20. PRIMITIVE MAN. Man as revealed by archeological studies; evidences of man's antiquity; geological periods; man's appearance in the pliocene; paleolithic and neolithic races; the ages of bronze and iron; cave men and lake-dwellers; dolmen and mound builders; primitive implements and tools; proofs of man's natural evolution. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
21. GROWTH OF THE MARRIAGE RELATION. Marriage a primitive institution; its earlier forms; no evidence of original promiscuity; exogamy and endogamy; group-marriage; polygyny, polyandry, and monogamy; marriage by capture; monogamy the highest form of the relation; divorce and divorce laws; marriage a contract; its regulation by the state. By C. STANILAND WAKE.
22. EVOLUTION OF THE STATE. The growth of political institutions; the patriarchal family; the tribe and clan. By JOHN A. TAYLOR.
23. EVOLUTION OF LAW. How law begins; statute law and judge-made law; the conversion of customs into law. By PROF. RUFUS SHELDON.
24. EVOLUTION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE. Supernatural ideas of disease; fetichism in medicine; the beginnings of medical science. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
25. EVOLUTION OF ARMS AND ARMOR. The necessity for arms and armor under the struggle for existence. By JOHN C. KIMBALL.
26. EVOLUTION OF THE MECHANIC ARTS, development of the human hand; the earliest use of implements and tools. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
27. EVOLUTION OF THE WAGES SYSTEM. The definition of wages; economic characteristics of the wage system; wages the outgrowth of slavery; origin and development of the wages system. By PROF. GEO. GUNTON.
28. EDUCATION AS A FACTOR IN CIVILIZATION. The beginnings of education; early methods in Egypt, Persia, China, Greece, and Rome; early Christian ideas of education; Catholic and Protestant views; the common school system. By MISS CAROLINE B. LE ROW.
29. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. I. The Theological Method. By REV. JOHN CHADWICK.
30. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. II. The Socialistic Method. By WILLIAM POTTS.
31. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. III. The Anarchistic Method. By HUGH O. PENTECOST.
32. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. IV. The Scientific Method. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
33. ASA GRAY: His Life and Work. By MRS. MARY TREAT.
34. EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUMANS. The Man and his Work. By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

☞ Each Number, Ten Cents. ☜

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by
ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.
The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.
Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents.

PUSHED BY UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents: cloth, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full, index 446pp., $1.50.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization; Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialisti Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will th Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Idea of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civiliza tion. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place o Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning an Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Stand point. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

News of the Week.

THE Vatican has asked the British government to punish Captain Legard, the leader of the Protestant forces who massacred the Catholics in Uganda, Africa.

MORMONS are proselyting actively in England. Dissenters are trying to stop them. The London county council has refused the dissenters' petition to forbid the Mormons' open-air meetings.

LAST Sunday at Mayo, Fla., Bee Dixon and Thos. Calhoun met on their way to church and talked on an old quarrel, and it was settled by Dixon shooting Calhoun dead as they were entering the church door.

GERMANY has been infected by the cholera from Russia. There are thousands of cases, and the plague is spreading despite all endeavors. It has also entered France and Belgium. Two cases hav got into England.

IN England the struggle over the boy Harry Gossage, who although of Catholic parentage was placed in a Protestant institution and disposed of to a Protestant farmer, is still going on. It has already cost £50,000 in legal expenses.

THE authorities of the United States, and of many of the states, are taking measures to exclude the cholera, and to combat it if it enters. Its entrance would inflict a crushing blow to trade, cost a vast amount of money, and half ruin the World's Fair.

IN England prayer is about to be tried for what is perhaps a new purpose, the influencing of elections. The constituents of John Morley are to hold a prayer-meeting to pray for his reëlection to Parliament. As Morley is well known to be an Agnostic, the opposing party, the Tories, are making fun of the affair.

WITH the Catholic exhibit at the World's Fair, the holding of a Catholic congress at Chicago at the time of the Fair, and the assemblage at the same time of many conventions of Catholic organizations, "the Catholic element of this country," says a Catholic paper, "is very apt to make an impression in the Lake City."

THE Tennessee and Homestead strikes are still on. The Buffalo strike has failed and the troops hav withdrawn. The rising with violence by workingmen, and necessity for troops, in three places simultaneously, is occasioning remarks among observers of labor history, some of whom predict a general uprising and war.

IT is expected that the cholera will take in Canada in the spring, owing to the French Canadians' adherence to superstitious ceremonies as a means of combating plagues, and aversion to sanitation. The French Canadians' portion of Montreal has wretched drainage, and they resent advice to improve it. When the smallpox was there last eight of them died to one Englishman.

LITTLE James McSweeney, of Detroit, had had a diseased hip seven years and could scarcely walk even with crutches. A physician pronounced an operation necessary to save his life. He was taken to the shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre, in Canada, and blessed three times with her relic. At the third blessing, Catholic papers report, his leg, which had always been crooked, straightened out, and he walked unaided.

THE health authorities of New York city are making frequent raids on the venders' wagons of the Russian and Polish Jews on the east side. These Jews are very particular that their meat is killed in the kosher manner—i. e., the manner prescribed by their religion—but take the rest of their food in a condition that is extremely unhealthy. They eat green or decayed fruit and rotten eggs. Their practices if unchecked would breed an epidemic that would spread over the city.

IN Russia the reported new cases of cholera on the 21st numbered 6,891; deaths, 3,313. On the 24th the cases were 5,679; deaths about half. On the 25th, cases 6,322; deaths half. The cases reported are but a fraction of those that actually occur. At Manapol a superstitious prejudice against medical remedies caused a mob to destroy a hospital pharmacy. Soldiers were called. Two hundred rioters and twenty soldiers were disabled. The troops were overpowered, and the mob burnt a village and killed several Jews, whose heterodoxy they accused of causing the plague. The riot spread, and on the third day was put down only by a large military force. Such disorders are becoming common over large areas. The country is tending toward lawlessness and savagery. At midnight on a recent date six maidens, led by two widows, dragged a plow around the village of Uili, while a third widow bore the Holy Image before them. The line thus drawn cannot, it is believed, be crossed by cholera or cattle plague.

EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents, MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Small fees; valid patents with broad claims; letters of inquiry promptly answered.

For FREE pamphlet, PATENT LAWS address Commissioner of Patents, Washington, D. C.

We hav been informed by old inventors and experienced patentees, who employ this solicitor, that he is skilful.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By B. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED.

A Work proving Christianity a Fiction. Most Startling Revelations of the Nineteenth Century. Send Address for Prospectus to

ORIENTAL PUBLISHING CO., P.O. Box 446, Philadelphia, Pa.

RI-PANS TABULES

To Regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABULES.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS
I. B. SEELEY & CO.
WARRANTED.

SEELEY'S HARD-RUBBER TRUSSES

Will retain the most difficult forms of HERNIA or RUPTURE with comfort and safety, thereby completing a radical cure of all curable cases. Impervious to moisture, may be used in bathing; and fitting perfectly to the form of body, are worn without inconvenience by the youngest child, most delicate lady, or the laboring man, avoiding all sour, sweaty, padded unpleasantness, being Light, Cool, Cleanly, and always, reliable. The correct and skillful mechanical treatment of

HERNIA OR RUPTURE A SPECIALTY. EITHER IN PERSON OR BY MAIL.

25 YEARS REFERENCES:—Profs. S. D. Gross, D. Hayes Agnew, Willard Parker, W. H. Pancoast, Dr. Thomas G. Morton, and Surgeon-Generals of the U. S. Army and Navy. Our "Mechanical Treatment of Hernia or Rupture and Price List," with illustrations and directions for self-measurement, mailed on application. I. B. SEELEY & CO., 25 South 11th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.
Loeb & Loeb, Montgomery.

Arizona.
J. S. Mansfield, Tucson.

California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 117 W. 1st, Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 102 N. Main, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Thos. W. Baker, Selma.
L. R. Titus, 237 South 4th st., San Jose.

Canada.
P. C. Allen, 35 King st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
John McKenna, 80 Yonge st., Toronto.
R. J. Moffat, Sea Island, Tulu Island, B.C.

Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.
C. Smith & Son, 385 Larimer st., Denver.
Stanchfield & Co., 200 Union ave., Pueblo.
Harbottle & Co., Salida.

Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.
A. J. Gardner, Kissimmee.

Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.

Illinois.
Post-Office News Co., 93 Adams, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., 204 Wabash ave., Chicago.
Chas. W. Curry, 183 Madison st., Chicago.
Chas. Macdonald, 55 Washington, Chicago.

Indiana.
H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.
A. C. Katt, Fort Wayne.

Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne, New Orleans.

Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.

Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Baker & Holton, 87 Woodward av., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.

Minnesota.
E. P. Parcher, 8 3rd st., So. Minneapolis.

Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

Nebraska.
J. M. Wiley, P. O. News Depot, York.

New York.
Brentano Bros., 5th ave. & 18th st., N. Y.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
Abramowitz Bros., 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., N.Y.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.
E. J. Nieuwland, 10th ave. and 157th st.
Anderson & Co., 704 8th ave.
S. M. Bernhard, 119 E. 104th st.
Harlem Book Co., Boulevard Hotel, 124th st. and Lexington ave.

Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 342 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
B. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Day & Co., 259 Superior, Clevel'd.
Alf. Warren Co, 217 Central ave, Cincinnati.
Thos. Goddard, Box 235, Huron.
Standard News Co., 14 W. Tusc st, Canton.

Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 291 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.
G. Thornton, Palace Hotel Block, Heppner

Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden, Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
R. Staley, Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.
Fulton Bros., McKeesport.

Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

Tennessee.
W. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry, Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.
Rich Bros. & Mills, 229 N. Cherry, Nashville

Texas.
H. Hover, Denison.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 346½ Main st., Dallas.
G. W. Baldwin, Houston.
E. L. Merrill, Independent Pulpit, Waco.

Utah.
C. H. Parsons, 164 S. Main, Salt Lake City.
Margetts Bros., 76 Main st., Salt Lake City.

Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
J. C. Nathan, 104 S. 2nd st., Seattle.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.

West Virginia.
News Store, 123 3rd st., Parkersburg.

England. [London.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st.,
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

Australia.
W Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.

New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated.

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

ORTHODOXY in science is almost as much a matter of authority as it is in religion.—Prof. Wm. James.

NEVER has there been a more universal empire than that of the devil. What has dethroned him?—Reason.—Voltaire.

WE do not take possession of our ideas but are possessed by them.
They master us and force us into the arena,
Where, like gladiators, we must fight for them.—Heine.

THERE is no occasion for alarm lest changes should come before the way is prepared for them. Conservativs may console themselvs with Carlyle's wise remark: "The old skin never falls off till a new one has formed under it."—Lydia Maria Child.

EVERY schoolboy knows to-day that the heaven is no blue vault suspended over the earth, with holes in it through which the fiery sphere of the universe gleams in the shape of sun and stars, but that, in looking at it we are gazing into an incommensurable and almost empty space without end, the vast desert of which is interrupted only by single stars or groups of stars, few in number and infinitly far between, and in which e. g. our own solar system, despite its gigantic extent, appears as a mere dot in the infinitude of space. Therefore, if the religious theory of the universe teaches us that after the conclusion of our earthly career we are destined to "go to heaven," astronomical science informs us on the contrary that we are already in this dreamed-of heaven, surrounded in the far distance by countless worlds and world-systems similar to our earth or our solar system.—Büchner.

I WAS impressed by the quiet religious atmosphere of the place [a church]. It was a great cave in the midst of a city; and what were the altars and the tinsel but the sparkling stalactites, into which you entered in a moment, and where the still atmosphere and the somber light disposed to serious and profitable thought. Such a cave at hand, which you can enter any day, is worth a thousand of our churches which are open only Sundays,—hardly long enough for an airing,—and then filled with a bustling congregation,—a church where the priest is the least part, where you do your own preaching, where the universe preaches to you and can be heard. I am not sure but this Catholic religion would be an admirable one if the priest were quite omitted. I think that I might go to church myself sometimes some Monday, if I lived in a city where there was such a one to go to. In Concord, to be sure, we do not need such. Our forests are such a church, far grander and more sacred. . . . I think of its value not only to religion, but to philosophy and to poetry; besides a reading-room, to hav a thinking-room in every city! Perchance the time will come when every house even will hav not only its sleeping-rooms, and dining-room, and talking-room or parlor, but its thinking-room also, and the architects will put it into their plans. Let it be furnished and ornamented with whatever conduces to serious and creativ thought.—Thoreau.

FOR a century or two, Gospel-forging seems to hav been a flourishing branch of industry. The world of pious credulity was flooded with vast numbers of Gospels and Epistles, to one of the latter of which was actually forged the name of Christ himself! This mass of literature became, by and by, rather bulky and unwieldy; so about the year 327 A.D. a council of 318 bishops was convened at Nice to determin, inter alia, which among the host of Gospels and Epistles should be declared canonical and which should be rejected as spurious—to decide which books were divine and which of human origin; and, as far as I hav been able to look into what remains of the Apocryphal New Testament, they seem to hav set down the maddest and wildest tracts as the work of Almighty God and the sanest and most meritorious as the work of Man. That imperial saint, the Emperor Constantine, presided over the council, and the first thing, of course, which the bishops did was to engage in a general, bitter, and recriminatory quarrel among themselvs, just by way of showing that they were the disciples of the meek and lowly Jesus. It was proposed that the tracts having the greatest number of votes recorded in their favor should be considered canonical. So, from this, it appears that the way to decide whether a book is written by God Almighty or only by Mr. J. Smith is to vote upon it, just as you would upon a candidate for admission to the Junior Garrick Club. The Chairman, by his casting vote, could decide, by a majority of one, whether a certain work were from the pen of God, "the Almighty Maker of heaven and earth," or from the pen of Man, "a poor worm of the dust."—Saladin in God and His Book.

Valuable Books on Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young.

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞ Catalogues Free. ☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market at., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J. A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,

Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,

Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore

Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price. 15 cts.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial to Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2 00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by

DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, . . . 40 cents.

J. D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,
Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BEST!

THE

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 3-ounce coin silver, $22; 4-ounce, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $31 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7 50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $15; 11 jewels, $16 50; 15 jewels, $23; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3 60, knives, $1 75; forks, $1 75; all for $6 Solid silver spoons, $1.50 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1. $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Extra heavy teas, $3. Etched:
"The Time to be Happy is Now,"
50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2 75, and $3 50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.

Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1. and returned free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

WATER OF LIFE

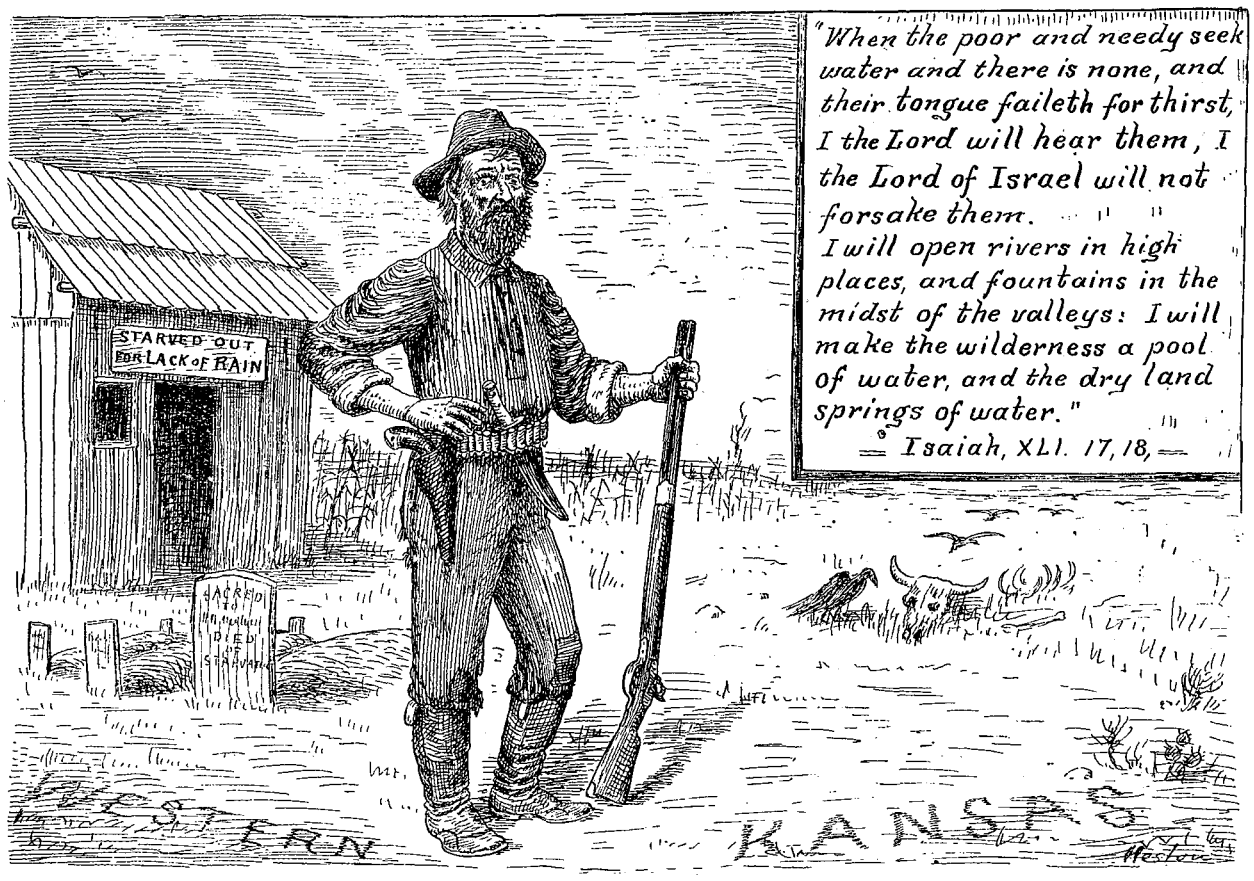
Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.



ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.
Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

AN INDIVIDUAL WHO WOULD MAKE IT WARM FOR THE AUTHOR OF THE ABOVE TEXT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? AustinBierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50
21.	History of Religion. E. E. Evans	20

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth. $1 00.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY and RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

THE

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON. WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
3	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Result
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
10	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
75	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 37. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, September 10, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE DOOM OF PRIESTCRAFT.

A SHORT
HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

—o—

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A
HISTORY OF RELIGIONS.

BEING

A Condensed Account of the Results of Scientific Research and Philosophical Research.

By Elizabeth B. Evans.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

WAS CHRIST - - - CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth - - - - - 50 cents

JUST PUBLISHED.

Life of Thomas Paine,

WITH A

History of His Literary, Political, and Religious Career in America, France, and England.

By MONCURE DANIEL CONWAY,

Author of "Omitted Chapters of History Disclosed in the Life and Papers of Edmund Randolph," "George Washington and Mount Vernon," "Washington's Rules of Civility," etc.

To Which is added a Sketch of Paine by William Cobbett.

No real biography of Paine has ever appeared. The so-called Lives of Paine have been mainly the controversial work of pamphleteers, turning chiefly on his religious heresies. Paine was in his fifty-eighth year before he published anything concerning religion, and before that time he had acted an important part in revolutionary movements in the United States, England, and France. But in the religious conflict initiated by him, his political services and military career have been but inadequately considered. A certain historical ostracism has buried in the archives of various countries a large mass of documents containing records of paramount interest and importance. Mr. Conway has personally searched such records, in Europe and America, and has obtained from these fresh light, not only on Paine, but on various eminent figures in American and European history with whom he was associated. A large amount of unpublished correspondence has been included in the volumes.

Mr. Conway says in his Preface: "In the laborious work of searching out the real Paine I have found a general appreciation of its importance, and it will be seen in the following pages that generous assistance has been rendered by English clergymen, by official persons in Europe and America, by persons of all beliefs and no beliefs. In no instance have I been impeded by any prejudice, religious or political. The curators of archives, private collectors, owners of important documents bearing on the subject, have welcomed my effort to bring the truth to light."

Two vols., royal oct., gilt top, portraits, $5.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins.
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price. 25 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price. 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c. 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth. 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Corgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Order of Creation,

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE

HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER, PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE, E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments,

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 37. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, September 10, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - SEPTEMBER 10, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Sabbatarianism Rampant.

The importance of having a purely secular organization which can and will take practical steps to oppose the Sabbatarians is emphasized by the movement now begun in Chicago by the Young Men's Christian Association to close the theaters on Sunday evenings. The fight has been begun in Englewood, a suburban part of Chicago, and a popular summer resort, and the theater attacked is the Marlowe. The Englewood Call says that "from the agitation of the question of opening this theater will spring a movement for the suppression of Sunday theatrical performances all over the city. The plans are already laid and many prominent people are enlisted in the cause. It will be inaugurated by the emphatically expressed sentiment of all the churches, and a united and systematic movement will then be carried on." And the Englewood Eye, the organ of the closing faction, says "the movement is being entered into by the churches and Young Men's Christian Association all over the city to close every Sunday theater in Chicago. Six days in the week is enough for business and playhouse employees and actors ought to hav a rest one day in seven the same as other folks."

It seems that the bigots hav been emboldened by their temporary victory in the World's Fair matter and are going on from bad to worse. The leader in this movement is a sect which boasts that it never persecutes, and that it has always been in favor of separation of church and state—the Baptists! So far their only opponents are the Seventh Day Adventists, through their organization known as the National Religious Liberty Association. Sunday before last both parties held meetings, the anti-closers using the condemned Marlowe Opera House. Fifteen hundred people attended. The presiding officer was Dr. Champlain, who, after a few preliminary remarks, read the following resolutions:

"WHEREAS, The Marlowe Theater built, opened and operated after the annexation of Lake to Chicago and before the erection of the church adjoining it on the north, has always been managed in a decent and orderly manner and has never conflicted with any church service, although performances and services hav frequently been concurrent; and

"WHEREAS, Certain persons who are eager and anxious to advance sectarian interests and to destroy the liberty of the citizens by wresting the laws to sectarian advantages hav succeeded in procuring the authorities to make a violent and unlawful raid on the Marlowe Theater; therefore, be it

"Resolved, By the citizens of Englewood in mass meeting assembled, under the auspices of the National Religious Liberty Association, while neither approving nor disapproving the policy or impolicy of keeping the theater open on Sunday or any other day, that we unanimously condemn any effort to unite church and state by the enforcing of laws that tend to deprive any citizen of his liberty in order to advance the interest of any sect or denomination, and we earnestly protest against the action of the authorities of the city in closing the Marlowe Theatre or any other lawful enterprise at the dictates and behest of any religious or unreligious body, believing, as we do, that such action is in violation of every principle upon which the republic is founded and is a grave danger to the people's rights."

When these had been vociferously adopted, he read another, with which the audience also agreed:

"A mass meeting of the citizens of Englewood bearing in mind the policy of the American republic that there shall be a perpetual separation of church and state look with alarm upon the tendency of the times in seeking legislation to advance merely religious interests; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we protest against the act of Congress providing for the closing of the World's Fair on Sunday and we urge that such act in so far as it relates to Sunday be repealed."

Then, says the Chicago Times, "there was music in the air for two hours, and had Mayor Washburne and Chief of Police McClaughry been present they would hav learned that the people of Englewood are not in favor of the city administration propping up the Baptist or any other church with clubs."

The speakers of the evening were two Seventh Day Adventists, the Rev. A. F. Ballenger and the Rev. A. T. Jones. Mr. Ballenger said that he had been sent to Englewood under the information that the Marlowe Theater managers were persecuting the Baptist church. When he looked over the ground he found the shoe was upon the other foot. He said he had never witnessed a more flagrant example of church bigotry and intolerance than is being manifested in Englewood and backed up by a mayor and chief of police who were too cowardly to close Garfield park race-track. It was the old, old story of religious bigotry which compassed the death of Christ, which stoned Stephen, which cast the early martyrs to the wild beasts, which maintained the Inquisition, which caused a Protestant judge to sentence Michael Servetus to be burnt at the stake, which prompted the Boston magistrates in Governor Endicott's time to hang three "heretics" and sentenced two Quaker women to be publicly whipped and driven from the colony. It was the same religious bigotry that burnt the Salem witches. It was the same religious intolerance which drove Roger Williams from home in the dead of winter to take shelter with Massasoit, the Indian chief, and caused that red "heretic" to exclaim: "What a God hav the English that they persecute each other so!" It was the same kind of religious bigotry which sent three honest farmers of Tennessee to jail a few weeks ago for observing the seventh day of the week as a day of rest and working on Sunday. It was the same religious bigotry which threatens to close the World's Fair on Sunday. It was time to rise and repel such tyranny. It is this bigotry and intolerance that the National Religious Liberty Association is fighting. It is an attempted union of church and state. "I am a Christian," concluded the Rev. Dr. Ballenger, "but not the kind of a Christian that invokes a policeman's club to his assistance in converting the world. Compulsion is not the spirit of Christ. It is the result of the union of church and state. Matters are approaching a grave crisis when a church can dominate the civil power, and call out a platoon of police to enforce the edicts of the so-called Christians. If the Baptist church in Englewood can close up this place it can close up your place, and it would be just as consistent if they would call out the police and close up all other churches and compel everybody in Englewood to worship at the Baptist church. It would come to pass that the church having the strongest pull with the police department would hav the biggest congregation. I tell you, my hearers, that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Mr. Jones, who is well known to the Freethinkers of the West, having spoken at several Secular conventions, put these plain words before his hearers: "The question is simply whether the civil power should be dominated by the religious power. The question concerned not only Englewood, but the whole people of the United States. The action of the Englewood fanatics is indorsed by neither civil nor divine law. Jesus Christ was the author of Freethought and religious liberty. It was the master who said: 'If any man hear my words and believe not I condemn him not.' If Christ had been fashioned after the Englewood fanatics, he would hav called for a squad of police and clubbed his enemies into subjection. The churches are claiming everything, and are responsible for nothing. They don't pay a cent of taxes, but want to run things generally. You men whose property they are seeking to destroy hav to help pay the taxes which these people avoid. The church annually filches $500,000 from the federal government for the alleged support of denominational Indian schools. The church does not contribute a cent in taxes in support of the government, yet it has bulldozed Congress into closing the World's Fair on Sunday. I am a Christian and a preacher, but, thank God, not that narrow kind of a Christian. Christ said, 'Render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's.' These modern religious bigots want to render unto Cæsar the things that are God's, and unto God the things that are Cæsar's. If you don't rise up and resist such fanaticism the church will overthrow civil liberty and erect upon its ruins another Inquisition."

The Sunday laws of Illinois impose a fine not exceeding twenty-five dollars for "violating" Sunday, and of course the police are empowered to prevent as well as punish these violations. And Illinois has always been regarded as a liberal state. In his speech opposing the Sunday-closing clause of the Sundry civil bill appropriation for the Fair, Senator Palmer supposed he was stating the truth in saying that "we do not affect in the West to keep the Christian Sabbath, as it is termed, according to the ancient ideas that prevail in some portions of the Union. The state of Illinois," he said, "has never assumed to require the actual observance of any of the Sabbaths, either the Jewish or the Christian Sabbath. The people of Illinois, so far as I know their opinions, and they are best expressed in their statutes, treat the observance of the Sabbath as a personal duty to be determined by each individual for himself." But the Senator will now be compelled to correct his opinion, at least so far as the Christian portion of the population affect it.

We do not believe this attempt against personal liberty would hav been made had not Congress voted to close the Fair on Sunday The motiv is of course to close the theaters that churches and the contribution-boxes may be filled. The Christian bigots never realize that though they debar visitors to the Fair from all amusements they will not be able to drive them into the churches. That much of personal choice will still remain to them.

It givs us great pleasure to congratulate the Seventh Day Adventists upon their energy in fighting the battle of freedom. In political matters they stand squarely upon the Freethought platform, and though they and the Freethinkers can never join ranks we trust that by both working for the same cause something may be done to stay the flood of Sabbatarian intolerance which is sweeping over the land. If this is not done, it looks as though the Seventh Day folks will all soon be in jail for working on Sunday and the Freethinkers outlawed for heresy.

Crush the Monster!

The folly of Freethinkers trusting priests in any relation or manner has been forcibly shown again by a domestic episode in Montreal, as told by the daily press. Michael Ethier is a lawyer of prominence in Montreal. He married a very beautiful and pious girl. Like hundreds of the prominent Frenchmen in Canada he is a Freethinker, but thought like other deluded men that religion might be "good for women." His wife took a leading place in her social sphere, and became connected with the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, the Society of the Sacred Heart, the Society of the Infants of Mary, and a number of fashionable French religious and social societies.

"Father" Guihot is a handsome priest of the Sulpician order. He was appointed to one of the oldest churches of Montreal, where Mme. Ethier worshiped. He conducted a special class for ladies, and was also at the head of many religious organizations and charities, and his endeavors for the advancement of the church were always assisted by the ladies, with whom he was in constant connection. One of the most prominent members of his class was Mme. Ethier, as she was also one of his most valued assistants in his parish work. He also visited her at her home, and so confiding was her husband that he and the priest became intimate friends.

The denouement came a few days ago. Father Guihot late in June went on a holiday to France. Last week Mr. Ethier saw a letter addressed to his wife in Father Guihot's handwriting. Unsuspectingly he read it, and was amazed at the lover-like tone assumed by the priest to his wife. His suspicions aroused, he went to his wife's writing-desk, and there discovered a package of several score of letters written to Mme. Ethier by Father Guihot. They proved beyond a doubt the relations that had existed for the past seven years between the couple. The letters which Mr. Ethier found were of a most incriminating character. They referred openly to the relations between the woman and her priest In all of them the fondest expressions of endearment were used, and some were of the most scandalous nature, and mentioned several other leading French ladies. The correspondence was illustrated by free-hand drawings that are indescribable.

The discovery of his wife's unfaithfulness drove the husband almost out of his mind. He sought his wife and bade her leave the house. She went at once, and took refuge in a convent.

It is the old, old story over again. The priest is a serpent in every relation of life; and the Methodist ministers are not much better.

Écrasez l'Infâme!

The San Francisco Chronicle prints this fairy tale. The incident is alleged to hav occurred in Denver, August 23d: "Last night during a thunder-storm Gutleif Myers, an Infidel, stood on the street corner with several friends commenting upon the electric currents. Looking skyward, he exclaimed: 'There is no God; this fear is all folly!' He had hardly uttered the last word when a bolt of lightning struck him on the head, and a few moments later his dead body was carried home." The silliness of the Christians in getting up these lies is something remarkable, but the expectation that anyone will believe them is more so.

Cardinal Gibbons has ordered his clergy to go through their performances in their churches on October 21st in celebration of the discovery of America four hundred years ago. Some of the cardinal's reasons for the church celebration are that "the glory of the discoverer is our glory"—meaning the Catholic church—and that "he was born and reared in the Catholic faith, which is illumined by his virtue." A question not unkindly put to the cardinal is how this latter assertion tallies with the refusal of the Catholic church to make a saint of Columbus for the reason that "our discoverer" kept a mistress?

The report of the organization and proceedings of the Freethought Federation of America will appear next week, this issue going to press too early for it in detail. A dispatch from Chicago to the daily press of this city says under date of the 5th: "The Freethought Federation of America has been formally organized here. Two hundred persons were present at the meeting which perfected the organization. The object is to resist the interference of the church in all matters pertaining to government—federal, state, or municipal. The national headquarters of the association will be in this city until after the World's Fair. One of the specific objects of the Federation is to hav Congress repeal the recent enactment requiring the Fair to be closed on Sunday."

Among the bills passed by Congress at its late session was one relating to police laws and ordinances for the District of Columbia. The fifth section of the law was this: "That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to curse, swear, or make use of any profane language . . . in any street, avenue, public space, square, road, or highway, or at any railroad depot or steamboat landing within the District of Columbia, or at any place wherefrom the same may be heard, in any such street, avenue, alley, public square, road, highway, or in any such depot, railroad cars, or on board any steamboat, under a penalty of not exceeding $20 for each and every such offense." At the next term perhaps Congress will kindly establish a religion for us. The Constitution of the United States seems to hav no restraint upon the religious members.

A frightful occurrence is reported from Megantic, Canada, as follows: On July 9th, a woman there while in labor became insensible, and it was thought by those in the house with her and by neighbors calling that she was dead. The child was not born. A priest who was immediately sent for arrived within half an hour after the woman became unconscious. On learning the trouble he ordered one of the woman's neighbors to open her body in order that he might baptize the child if it were still alive. The man was given a razor and did as directed by the priest. Not much blood flowed, it was stated, at the first cut, but from subsequent cutting much blood flowed. The child was found alive, for it moved. Its head and shoulders appeared in view, and the priest sprinkled water upon it in ordinary baptism. The child was then replaced. The burial of the bodies of both mother and child took place the next morning. That is nineteenth-century civilization in a Roman Catholic country!

The United Labor and Liberal societies of Chicago hav wisely determined not to abandon the struggle for an open Fair next year. Several meetings hav been held and more are proposed. One of the committee having the matter in charge said to a Times reporter: "It is our intention to keep this question before the public by frequent meetings. The Sabbatarians hav been thoroughly organized, and though in a minority hav made much noise; they hav signed petitions early and often, and, I understand, in some localities had more names than the entire population; but now it is time for our side to do some work, the opposers of a closed Fair Sundays should organize, meetings should not only be held in Chicago, but in country districts, and resolutions be forwarded to the proper authorities. If an expression of the thinking people is fairly had Congress may repeal the condition for Sunday closing of the World's Fair. The question is more important than may be supposed. The Sunday persecutions in Tennessee would be extended elsewhere if the Sabbatarians hav their way."

The pope has appointed Archbishop Ireland as Catholic commissioner to the World's Fair, and it is proposed to hav a "Catholic church exhibit," which proposition leads a writer in a Western religious—but anticatholic—journal to make this suggestion as to some of the things to be shown: The various holy coats, all of which the Catholic church has declared to be the veritable coat worn by Christ. An exhibition of the historic Inquisition, with the secret tribunal in session; the procession of the Auto-dâ-fé, with the victim's robes painted with flames, and the various instruments of torture which they hav so skilfully applied to Jews and heretics. A carefully tabulated statement of the number of those who hav suffered the loss of property or life, or both, for refusing to accept the doctrins of the Catholic church, would also be a great benefit to the modern collector of church statistics; and finally, a true inside picture of convent life, as it has been, and is now practiced in the Catholic church. These are some of the things, the journal adds, we would be glad to see in the Catholic church exhibit, but even after these suggestions, we fear that our modest wish will not be gratified. Why, we leave our readers to decide for themselvs.

At a meeting of Christians held in Hanover county, Va., a few days ago, these resolutions were passed:

"Resolved, That with God's help, this shall remain a Christian community.

"Resolved, That we will tolerate no Mormonism in our midst."

The meeting was called and the resolutions adopted because a few Mormons had settled in the county. There was no pretense that they were polygamists, nor that they were bad citizens. It was enough that they believed in Mormonism, which differs from Christianity in being more biblical than the evangelical church. After the resolutions had been put a motion was carried that the body act as an escort to accompany the Mormons to the borders of the county. The Mormon elders hid in a tobacco-house, but were found and promptly escorted to the county border, and having promised that they would not again enter the county, were permitted to leave. Thomas Jefferson took credit to himself once for having accomplished the disestablishment of the church in Virginia. It seems to hav been practically reëstablished by mob-law.

A resident of this city went fishing up in one of the Hudson river counties on Sunday this summer, and was arrested and convicted. He appealed, but the conviction has been affirmed. An indignant fisherman writes to the Sun, condemning the decision of the court in this case, and proposes to contribute to a fund to test the constitutionality of the law prohibiting fishing on Sunday. "There must be," he says, "five thousand men in the state who sympathize with the man who fished on Sunday, and I, as one of them, will contribute a dollar to a fund to test the right of the state to stigmatize a man as a criminal for fishing on Sunday. If the court of last resort says the law is constitutional, then I submit, that it will be time for some Democratic community to elect a member of the legislature pledged to secure the repeal of a law so unfair to the masses." The law objected to by this man is one of the pettiest of the Sabbatarian limitations, and around New York is broken by thousands every week from April to November. It would also be broken in the winter if the weather permitted. But the people who break it giv no heed to its injustice, and the churches tyrannize over them because of their heedlessness. Our wrathful disciples of Izaak Walton should go to the fountainhead of the wrong and attack the religion which makes men bigots.

A Western paper prints this concerning one well known for his own worth as well as through his father's popularity among Freethinkers: "George Remsburg, a young man living at Oak Mills, near Atchison, Kansas, has been attracting considerable attention lately by his researches in the state for prehistoric remains. He has found eleven mounds on the high bluffs along the Missouri river, from which he has taken one complete skeleton and a great many relics of the aboriginal races. In excavating a mound near Leavenworth recently he discovered a large number of charred human bones. He also found a stone oven in which the dead were undoubtedly cremated. The ancient Maya tribes offered human sacrifices, and archæologists say the remains are those of that extinct race. Remsburg, although but twenty-three years of age, is writing a book, which is entitled, 'Prehistoric Man in Kansas.'"

A Florida correspondent of the London Agnostic Journal sharply criticises some faults of Americans, and as an illustration tells a pretty good story: "The Sunday laws are outrageous. Saloons are supposed to close, but they nearly all break the law (as in England many do); but this is practically winked at, and the saloonkeepers are in a manner blackmailed by being periodically arrested and fined; but no real attempt is made to stop the traffic—the fines help the taxes so, don't you see? A man was fined $200 for selling ten cents' worth of butter on Sunday. I was recently in the company of the attorney-general of a Northern state, who laughed at the above. 'Oh, that is nothing,' said he; 'in the city where I liv it was, till recently, illegal to play music on Sunday, to smoke a cigar in the street, etc. A man asked me to defend him on the latter charge; there was no defense; he admitted the smoking, and was fined $5 and costs. I was so incensed that I conferred with my friends, and we prevailed on a beer-garden proprietor to employ a Sunday band, and gave notice to the police. The bandsmen and saloonkeeper were arrested, and each fined $5 and costs. But listen to the sequel. On the following Sunday seven lawyers, of whom I was one, visited every church in the city and' (slapping his knee and laughing boisterously) 'arrested every damned organist! Well,' he continued, 'there was a great scandal. The judge called me into his room, and begged me to withdraw the charges; but I insisted on his convicting the whole batch, and he had to do it!'"

The Editor of the Children's Corner in her letter from Paris last week drew quite a pretty picture of a Parisian Sunday, and makes one long for such predominance of common sense in the United States. But for all its freedom, Sunday is enjoyed in France against the will of the clergy, and every Parisian of them all is a legal criminal. France has her Sunday laws, dating back to the sixth century, when every man, free or enslaved, nativ or stranger, was commanded to refrain from working on the first day of the week, and disobedience was punished by fine and flogging. And to the debauched Francis I. France owes equally severe edicts for the preservation of the "Lord's day." These stringent laws were not repealed until after the great French Revolution. Napoleon was a statesman, not a priest. But on the return of the Bourbons in 1814 the restored king combined with the clergy to reestablish the old Sabbatarian regulations. By a law of Nov. 18, 1814, the exercise of all trades and industries was prohibited on Sundays, and on all festivals recognized by the state. Shopkeepers were forbidden to take down their shutters; porters and stallkeepers were not allowed either to carry goods in the street or set up their booths in public places; and severe restrictions were laid on wagoners and carters who transported merchandise on the Sabbath. Labor was tabooed both in factories and in fields, and in 1822 two day-laborers were prosecuted and convicted at Chateau-Thierry for having been found at work in their master's vineyard on a Sunday. These laws, however, hav been practically a dead letter ever since the revolution of July, 1830, but they are yet unrepealed; and were a sudden wave of clericalism to pass over France, it is not by any means unlikely that steps would be taken to inhibit the carrying on of any kind of trade, commerce, or handicraft on Sunday throughout the length and breadth of France, and to compel the railway companies to run a minimum of trains, and agricultural laborers to abstain from hoeing out a weed or turning a sod in their fields, and keep all Paris in the house on Sunday. It is but another proof that the people hav to enjoy liberty in spite of the church; never with its consent.

About the Large Colored Picture.

BILLINGS, MONT., Aug. 26, 1892.

EDITOR TRUTH SEEKER, Sir: I am a common laborer, but will add $10 to Mr. Bird's Picture Fund.

GEORGE RUSSELL.

CHICAGO, ILL., Aug. 28, 1892.

EDITOR TRUTH SEEKER: Inclosed find $1, for which send the Bible Picture Book. You may put me on your books for $5 worth of Rock of Ages when you get them out. Send them C. O. D. I get your paper every Saturday of the P. O. News Company, this city. There are over two hundred thousand Freethinkers in this city, but they do not take much interest in spreading the light.

I am a heretic, and my better half is an Infidel; so you know the Bible Picture Book will be welcome in our house.

B. A. SHAW.

Paine Farm Stock.

James A. Greenhill, Clinton, Iowa.....$50

In the West.

News and Notes.

I had a fine time at Eau Claire. The lectures, however, were not so successful as I hoped for. It was a bad time of the year. It was in the midst of "thrashing." There was a strike on also among the mill hands, and they were leaving town by the hundreds. Then the circus came along, and who can contend with a circus? So my audiences on Friday and Saturday evenings were "fit, though few." I did not lecture on Sunday evening because it was expected that Unitarian clergymen would occupy the pulpit. Yes, I lectured in a pulpit, a good, nice, broad pulpit, the pulpit of the Unitarian church of Eau Claire. I must thank Mr. L. A. Doolittle and the trustees and members of this church for their kindness and liberality in allowing the free use of the building for my lectures. Although I might say some things that the Unitarians would not indorse, still they were willing to giv a fair chance to the "open and avowed Infidel."

I had a delightful vacation, however, with Mark Sherman and his family on the farm about two miles out of town. I arrived on Monday evening, and as I was disappointed about arrangements for lectures at neighboring places, I had several days for rest, and I enjoyed them to the utmost. Mark Sherman is an Infidel by the eternal decrees of nature. It was in his blood and brain. He was such an out and out unbeliever that when he read the record of his own birth in the family Bible he could scarcely accept it. There is so much fiction in the Bible it might extend even to the genealogical tree. His father tore out the record and Mark placed it where he could hav more confidence in its veracity. There is some logic in this, for there really are so many fibs in the Bible that when you come to the truth itself it is such a surprise that you can hardly recognize it. Mark Sherman has never kept anything back. He speaks right out, and his Infidelity is well known in this country. But the ministers declare, "Oh, what a good Christian he would make," for he owes no man anything, is ready to help, and has a happy home. The churches would like to hav him on their roll, for his way of living is all right. It is his unbelief that is so terrible.

Mr. Samuel Sherman, the father of Mark Sherman, is eighty-eight years old and is still bright as a dollar. He is a stanch Freethinker, and believes, but does not profess to know, that there is some truth in Spiritualism, and that we may liv in the beyond. But he thoroughly enjoys this world, has lived a busy and prosperous life, and the reminiscences of his long career are deeply interesting. He sent three sons into the war, Mark Sherman, Captain Sherman, and one other son not now living. He believes in our flag, but he wishes to make it the flag of liberty, and is on the roll of the Freethought Federation.

Mrs. Sherman and all the bright, robust children are Freethinkers. The shadow of superstition hovers not around this genial fireside. Here with age and youth, the evening and the dawn of life, both glorious with hope in summer's gorgeous weather; the groves musical; the fields glittering, the cows wandering over ample pastures, the great stacks shining like gold, the bright new machinery rolling and thundering, the huge sheaves plunging in, and the soft grain flowing forth like a cataract, the patient horses sturdily moving around the appointed track, the shouts of workers, the gay laugh and flash of children amid the tumult of toil—all these beautiful sights and sounds of healthful human life made the days pass dreamily along and I rejoiced in this "large margin of leisure" along the verge of battle and struggle.

Friday and Saturday I spent in the city with Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Stone. Mrs. Stone was born in the ranks of liberty. Her father was a German Freethinker, and she has inherited the bright spirit of her ancestry, and is thoroughly a woman of the future. Mr. Stone accepts Freethought in the mystical light of Spiritual faith, but the glory of this world is not lost in the dream of any other.

L. A. Doolittle, one of the leading lawyers of Eau Claire, Captain Sherman, Carl Kammeyer, Mrs. M. S. Swift, Mrs. F. Hubbel, R. A. Stall, J. F. Case, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reinhard, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Hogan, Mrs. S. C. Case, Rudolph Walters, formerly of Springfield, Ill., are among the friends I meet at this point who are ready to stand by the Liberal flag.

NOTES OF FREETHOUGHT FEDERATION.

Up to date I hav received five hundred and sixty names for the Freethought Federation, and this before the first meeting has been held. It will not take long to enroll ten thousand names. M. P. Braffet, of Scofield, Utah, sends twenty-four names, and writes: "It is certainly the time for the Liberals of this country to organize politically." W. F. Kelley, of Springfield, Ill., writes: "You hav my fullest consent, and I hope we may be able to accomplish something for that liberty which we ought to possess, but do not." Geo. B. Tyler, of Ocala, Fla., writes: "We will never hav our rights respected until we are felt at the ballot-box." C. F. Bergman, of San Francisco, writes: "The importance of such a movement should hav been considered and acted upon long ago. As a consequence we find the Wanamaker and kindred bigots enthroned to govern the nation." Franklin Steiner, of Des Moines, writes: "I hav read with satisfaction your call for a new Freethought association. The church is the greatest enemy of political as well as religious liberty." Mrs. Ella Tomlinson, of Butler, Ind., sends thirty-eight names. James A. Greenhill, of Clinton, Ia., sends another list with one hundred and sixty names. He writes: "I went to Mount Pleasant park yesterday, and the president, J. S. Loveland, took right hold and we got the names of most that were on the ground." Our Spiritualist allies are not behind in this new movement. Dr. J. M. Endicott, of Oakdale, Cal., sends over one hundred names. With such workers as Greenhill and Endicott it will not take long to muster one hundred thousand. The following strikes the key-note:

WINTAGH, N. Y., Aug. 31, 1892.

MR. S. P. PUTNAM, Dear Sir: Your call to the Liberals of America to meet at Chicago on Sunday, September 4th, for the purpose of organizing the "Freethought Federation of America," meets with my hearty approval. Recent legislation has shown that any demand which the clericals may make is likely to be granted by our legislators. Our liberties are no longer secure. Constitutional guarantees, once considered sacred, are disregarded. Our protests and remonstrances are unheeded. Our just demands are treated with contempt. Surely the time for action has arrived. Complete and thorough organization as a political force seems the one thing needful. Without organization we cannot hope to accomplish practical results. Backed by a well-organized political force our protests and demands would be heeded. Let us all unite in such an organization as is proposed and do our utmost to stay the tide of religious usurpation which seems ready to overwhelm us. In such a party as it is proposed to organize, disputes about particular beliefs or disbeliefs would be out of place. The one great object of maintaining our rights and liberties should engage the first attention of each and every member. In the Freethought Federation of America let there be but one ism—Liberal-ism. Let Liberals of every school unite for mutual protection. Let no special ism be introduced to produce internal strife and discord. We need to use all our strength against the common enemy. We cannot afford to fritter away any of it in internal strife.

I think I can safely assure you that the Liberals of this section will be with you heart and hand in this movement. All of them that I hav spoken with giv assurance of earnest support. I intend to see every Liberal hereabouts as soon as I can, and urge all to send their names and contribute some of the "sinews of war," for I am aware that this latter item is essential. As soon as any contributions are obtained, I will forward with my own. Hope to send something in a few days.

Yours respectfully, R. B. JACKSON.

With such assurances of support from all parts of the country, it is evident that the hour has come for Liberal politics. SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The Genesis of Religion.

While there are many forms of religion, each of which is claimed to be the only true one, there are hardly any real logical reasons for believing that all are not the more or less elaborated offsprings of the first crude ideas of a deity, and those first ideas must hav been formed many ages prior to the earliest times treated of in the Bible.

Although the Hebrew and Septuagint texts of the Bible state that man was placed on the earth only about six to eight thousands of years ago, geological research has brought to light quite tangible proofs that man has been on the earth many times the length of the period according to the Bible.

While we are smiling at the absurdities of early religions we must not forget that less than five hundred of years ago most people believed, absolutely, the earth to be flat; then, again, while we are, perhaps, laughing at the older belief that the earth is flat and resting on the back of an elephant, resting on the back of a tortoise —resting on what?—we must also bear in mind, that as the ancients probably believed the tortoise to be broad enough to rest on the air sufficiently to hold up the elephant that supported the earth, it is also quite possible that some of the religions still believed in may hav somewhat of a tortoise-like foundation.

In treating of the probable genesis of deistic religions I shall, for the sake of brevity, make use of the word "effects" as embracing, individually or collectivly, the movements of the sun, moon, and stars; the formation, collection, and discharges of the clouds; the increase and decrease of the thermal properties of the atmosphere, with the attending changes in the appearance of nature; the different velocities and pranks of the winds; the rise and fall of the tides; eclipses, comets, waterspouts, volcanic eruptions, earthquakes, and other phenomena of nature.

I shall also make use of the term "early man" to designate the very early inhabitants of the earth, among whom religion no doubt was born.

At first the effects were only passingly noticed by the early man, but as they were forced to his notice at more or less frequent intervals he must hav given them more and more thought and gradually tried to think out the cause of the effects.

The early man could not conceive the sun as being a burning mass about ninety-five millions of miles away from, and about fourteen hundred thousands of times more bulky than, the earth; nor could he conceive any of the seemingly small twinkling stars as being larger and farther away from the earth than the sun is, but regarded the sun as a small disk of very powerful light, guided in its course by some invisible power; and his conception of the other effects was in a similar vein.

The early man laid himself to sleep, awoke and found that he was still at the same place he had laid himself to sleep the evening before, and yet he had vivid recollections of having had intercourse with some fellow-beings and perhaps of having traveled quite a distance since the time he had gone to sleep, and yet on awakening found that he had not moved away from his sleeping-place. This confused him somewhat. He also had dreams of associating and having intercourse with fellow-beings who, he knew, were no longer among the living; this also confused him and caused him to think not a little and to finally arrive at the conclusion that the beings he saw while asleep were real people but akin to what are sometimes termed "ghosts."

Seeing that no inanimate thing moved from place to place of its own accord but that human aid was required to make it, and aided by the outcome of his thoughts concerning his dreams, the early man soon determined that the effects were caused and controled by invisible human beings.

Seeing or feeling the differences in the qualities and quantities of the effects, the early man concluded that the invisible human beings were of more or less gigantic forms, in proportion to the effects controled. This aroused more or less of the awe of the early man, and, as he was benefited by some, and in some way injured by others, he reasoned that some of the causes of the effects were good and the others evil beings. These causes were gradually appealed to to increase or diminish their effects according to the wishes or supposed welfare of the early man.

At first the causes were only appealed to for a desired result, but soon the empirical knowledge possessed by the early man taught him that, as human beings were generally pleased to hav tempting viands (such as they were) presented to them, and as the causes of the effects were believed to be more or less gigantic human beings in spirit form, it was also believed that offerings of food would hav the same effect on the causes as on early man, and so, naturally enough, offerings of foods were made to the causes before or while being appealed to for an increase or diminution of their effects.

Gradually a difference in the manner of appealing and making offerings was resorted to to conform to the supposed natures and attributes of the causes.

Later on the belief in a dwelling-place for the causes took root and developed into the belief in the existence of separate abodes for good or evil causes, and as sunshine was so agreeable and darkness so repulsiv to the early man, he, quite naturally, believed the abode of the good causes to be always bright and the environments always joyful, while the abode of the evil causes was believed to be in continual darkness and the seat of all misery.

As early man was divided into tribes and as each tribe was ruled by a chief, it was quite natural to reason that the different tribes of causes were also ruled by different chiefs whose subjects acted according to their wishes. But why spirit beings, any more than human beings, should want to be in continual darkness, was rather puzzling until early man saw the results of two men coveting the chiefship of a tribe, and then early man believed that at first all the causes dwelt in the abode of continual light and joyousness under the rule of one cause whose twin-brother wanted to become the chief. The brothers disputed each other's claims, and the other causes espoused the claims of one or the other, and finally massed under the respectiv desired chiefs to decide the question of supremacy. The vanquished causes were hurled by the victors into continual darkness and misery to be there ruled by the will of the would-be usurper. Thereafter the different tribes of causes did all in their power to make the inhabitants of the earth either good or bad so that when they died their spirits (breath) would go to swell the numbers of the followers of either the chief of good or chief of evil causes.

These ideas gradually became more elaborate and also brought about the discontinuance of the appealing and offering of sacrifices to individual causes only to be directed to the chiefs. Soon the early man reasoned, and acted accordingly, that by keeping the more powerful chief of good continually pleased he would prevent the machinations and ambitions of the chief of evil from becoming very effectiv and thus trend more toward the spiritual well-being of early man than by making appeals and offering sacrifices equally to the chiefs of the good and evil causes.

These beliefs became more and more popular, but without being systematized, until relativly wise men taught the more recent early man to worship only the chief of good according to certain forms. The teachings of these early relativly wise men were quite dogmatic, rather more ethical than religious, and often more cruel than just; but they laid the foundation for the different religions that hav come to us in the teachings of Moses, Mohammed, Buddha, Confucius, and Christ, as taught and written by themselvs or disciples, and all of them agreeing on at least one thing, the living up to, which marks the genesis of the true religion and forms the keystone of the rainbow of life: I mean—Do unto others as you would be done by.

EDWIN HOME.

P. F. Shumaker On Money.

In THE TRUTH SEEKER of August 13th Mr. Shumaker says: "Without a specie basis for money I am not able to think how we could determin the value of a paper unit or note of exchange. . . . What will we measure the value of a paper dollar with?"

I make the above a text for a few remarks.

The idea that a money exists, or ever did, or ever can, that has in the material of which it is composed an intrinsic value equal to the money units called for on its face, is an idea founded in prejudice and error; it is an impossibility in the nature of things. It is a financial superstition come down to us from the ages of despotism, barbarism, and ignorance, which the people as a body hav not yet been able to outgrow.

How is the intrinsic value of any and of every thing in the world determined? By the price it will bring, other things being equal, in the markets of the world for use in the arts and sciences. Is not this an incontrovertible proposition? Now then, to find the intrinsic value of gold and silver we must know what they would be worth in the markets of the world if there were no demands for them for coinage into money; and which in a reasonable view of the case would not be over one-fourth of their present nominal value. So the gold dollar of to-day has twenty-five cents of intrinsic value and seventy-five cents of fiat value; and yet it has no more purchasing or debt-paying power than a full legal-tender paper dollar. They are both given for value received, for a dollar's worth of labor or the products of labor. Labor is the only true measure of the value of any products of labor. The relativ value of all products, other circumstances being equal, depends on their relativ volumes, and money is no exception to this rule. Money can be kept at a uniform volume, say so much per capita of the population. That would make the relativ value of money to the whole aggregate of products uniform, but not to the particulars, which would be likely to vary in volume.

When money is plenty prices are high, except interest. When money is scarce prices are low, except interest. But interest for the use of money is wrong, and will sooner or later crush any people in the world. The laboring people of the United States to-day are carrying the enormous burdens of nine millions of mortages and thirty billions of interest-bearing debt; and unless this burden is taken off their shoulders it will crush them into the earth. Remember that labor creates all wealth, and pays all taxes, and all interests, and all profits.

But let us go back to the gold and paper dollars. The tax-payers hav to pay one hundred cents for the material to make a gold dollar, which after it is made contains only twenty-five cents of intrinsic value and seventy-five cents of fiat value, whilst for the material of a paper dollar they pay not over one cent, and which when made contains one hundred cents of fiat value. Quite a difference in the cost of two dollars which hav the same purchasing and debt-paying power. And now in proof of the superiority of the full legal-tender paper dollar I will refer to the republic of Venice, which issued an inflated currency of paper credits for value received, not redeemable in any other money, making them a full legal tender for all debts, public and private. These credits always stood at a premium above gold and silver in the money market for more than six hundred years until the system was arbitrarily abolished by Napoleon when he conquered the country. What better evidence than this, after a successful trial of six hundred years, of the superiority of the full legal-tender paper dollar given for value received, and backed up by the whole wealth and power of the nation? I think I hav answered Mr. Shumaker's questions beyond controversy and proved the superiority of a full legal-tender paper money over any other yet invented.

No country has any just right to impose on the people an interest-bearing debt, and there is never any reasonable or just excuse for doing it. The money of a nation should always be represented by the debt of the nation, which should never be interest-bearing. And it should be a misdemeanor for any individual or corporation to take interest for the use of money.

F. H. MARSH.

Globe Village, Mass.

The Story of Colonel Ingersoll's Eventful Life Retold.

T. C. Crawford in the Indianapolis Journal.

Col. Robert G. Ingersoll is one of the most striking and individual men among the prominent people of the United States. He has now lived in New York nearly ten years, and is oftener heard of in the courts than in the lecture-room or in the field of politics, where he used to be so conspicuous a figure. The colonel has gone through a wide range of experience and has come to the conclusion that there is more to interest him in the practice of his profession than there is to be found in the field of politics. Politics he has almost dropped. He occasionally appears as a lecturer and continues as of old to occupy his position of a bold and advanced Freethinker.

I asked him, during a recent call, if he had modified in any way his views concerning religion. Was he, with ripening years, as earnest an opponent of orthodoxy as when he first began? His reply to this was most emphatic, although I shall not pretend to quote his language. He said that he was more of an enemy to-day to every form of so-called orthodox religion as a combination of "meekness and malignancy."

. . . . . .

I hav seen Colonel Ingersoll a great many times during the last fifteen years, and I hav never seen him so adverse to public compliment and so anxious, in plain words, to keep out of the newspapers as now. In my talk with him I said something about writing a sketch, and he said, with evident shrinking, that no man's life should be written until he was dead. "Who can know anything about any man?" said he. "Who can understand the motivs that control him? What man understands himself?" He then went on to say, with a funny twinkle in his eye, that there were just two things in the world very hard to bear. One was to be hated by the public and the other was to be loved by it. If you are hated you are constantly misrepresented, lied about, and persecuted in a thousand ways which malignancy alone can devise. If you are loved, then people come and walk all over you and use up all your valuable time for nothing. The ideal thing was to be ignored by the public and to be to it an object of indifference.

In speaking of the public, he told the old story of the man who owned the ass and a dog. He was always beating the ass and petting the dog. The ass did all the work and served his master faithfully and could not understand why the dog was always the object of his most affectionate regard. He thought it all out one day, and observed that when his master came home the dog flew at him with joyous barks of welcome, and jumped up in his lap as he sat down. The ass thought he would demonstrate his affection in the same way, and so came braying at his master upon his return one day and jumped up on his lap about the same way the affectionate public runs at one of its favorits, and with about the same happy result.

. . . . . .

Colonel Ingersoll made his first appearance in the field of national politics in the convention of 1876, in Cincinnati. It was his eloquent tribute to Mr. Blaine in that convention which gave him his national reputation. He was already well known in the West as one of the most effectiv speakers on the stump and one of its coming lawyers. His picturesque imagery, his power as an orator, as displayed then attracted wide attention. A number of his Western speeches were then reproduced, and made profound impressions on account of the real character of his eloquence. His soldier's dream, called "A Vision of War," is one of the most eloquent things in the language.

It was soon after the convention of 1876 that Colonel Ingersoll came to Washington and joined his brother, who had already a fine legal practice in the national capital. The two brothers were thoroughly devoted to each other. They worked together as two brothers should. The death of E. C. Ingersoll was a great blow to the colonel. The field of politics proved a very disappointing one during the campaign of 1876. The colonel was very activ. He was in great demand by the campaign committees, and spoke very often with great force and effect. Yet he found after Hayes was inaugurated that there could be no recognition of those services. He held that if the party managers could afford to use his services during the campaign they could afford after the campaign to recognize him. His friends proposed his name for the mission to Berlin. Mr. Hayes said that he could not shock the religious people of the country by appointing him to any place. The colonel never asked for anything. He was always too proud and high-spirited for that. If he had been offered the Berlin mission he would hav declined it. He gave his services free and willingly, and when this objection was brought to him he ceased for the time to take very much interest in politics, and devoted himself to his law business as before. In the Garfield campaign he was again invited to take part in the canvass. He good-naturedly complied. He was more activ even in this campaign than in the preceding one. Garfield was elected. The man whom he had nominated at Cincinnati in 1876 with so much eloquence was made secretary of state. Mr. Windom, a personal friend, was made secretary of the treasury. Colonel Ingersoll at that time occupied a high seat in the interior counsels of the administration. He was constantly consulted by the makers of the cabinet, and was very close to Garfield and to Mr. Blaine. I remember during the uncertain period when Mr. Blaine was in the Senate and had not yet told the public that he would go into Garfield's cabinet, that I sent a note up to Colonel Ingersoll asking him when he thought Mr. Blaine would resign from the Senate and come out. I hav his autograph reply, in which he said: "Mr. Blaine, I think, will not let go the tail of one eel until he has a firm grip on the next. —R. G. I."

Colonel Ingersoll received no recognition at the hands of this administration, made up almost entirely of his personal friends. The reason given was the same. The religious people of the country were too strong, and while his services were very highly appreciated, and they would always be glad to hav them in any campaign, yet the road was not clear to giv him any great office. I never heard the colonel make any complaint. He kept on his even course, devoting himself after this entirely to his law practice and the lecture field. He could with difficulty be brought to indorse even an application for office.

It was not long after this that he came to New York, where he found his talent as a lawyer and a jurist more highly appreciated than anywhere else. His lines hav fallen now into most pleasant places. He has all that he can do and is generally recognized as one of the foremost men of his time as a writer, as a public speaker, and as a lawyer. There is no lecturer in the field to-day who draws such vast audiences. When I was in Chicago last fall the colonel was announced to lecture in the great auditorium. This audience-chamber will hold some seven thousand people. Every seat was filled. During the two hours he talked no one moved except to applaud or to laugh, and such was the magic charm of his eloquence that no one left during the two hours, and he could hav held the audience for two hours longer had he so willed.

He learned in Washington that there was not very much real difference between the two parties when they came together at the national capital. His main interest to-day in politics is owing to his belief in protection, although he said the cause of protection would be very much stronger if the manufacturers were not "such hogs." He believes in protection because it builds up diversified industries, and in his opinion givs greater opportunities for the development and employment of skilled brains. In speaking of the field of politics and of politicians he said: "Popularity and statesmanship in politics consist in having a good-sized swill-trough. The longer the trough and the more swill, the greater the statesman. His popularity ceases and his statesmanship disappears with the trough!" He thought a swill-trough would be a most appropriate monument at the head of the grave of a politician in these days. He then went on to talk in a more serious vein by saying that the respect of everyone followed the man who fought for some principle. "The man who fights for a principle, let it be protection, honest money, honest elections, or whatever it may be, is respected if he goes down. He has got something, but the man who fights for mere office, for mere position, and fails to get it, goes down and disappears. He has no trough, no supply for it, consequently he is lost."

While the colonel may be cynical in the field of politics and skeptical in the field of religion, in what relates to the comfort and happiness of those about him he is anything but that. When he lived in Washington he kept an open house. His hospitality was of the most genial Western West. He found this hospitality tremendously abused.

The tribes of cranks who flourish in Washington swarmed into his house until he was obliged to practically shut it up to guard himself against the horde of crackbrained visitors. One night, during one of his Sunday evening receptions, Dr. Mary Walker came to the door and insisted on coming in. The servant did not know what to do. Dr. Mary was dressed in a full suit of broadcloth and carried a high hat. The colonel came himself to settle the difficulty. He said to Dr. Walker: "I never yet closed my door in the face of any human being, and I do not say that my doors now close in your face. Dressed as you are you cannot come in here. If you care to come back in the habiliments of your sex you are welcome." It is needless to say that the doctor went away angry.

It is in the household that the colonel is seen at his very best. His wife is as keenly interested in life and in the mental occupation of her husband as he can be. The atmosphere of the house is the happiest conceivable. A spirit of kindness rules everywhere. The colonel is devoted to his family, and his life is as pure and clean on the private side as the most severe critic could demand.

One day in Washington a lady called at the colonel's house for the purpose of converting him to the cause of religion. She represented some missionary society. She came into the hall of the house, trembling at her own audacity in invading the household of this great Freethinker. The colonel was called and she explained, with trembling voice, the object of her visit. She expected to be overwhelmed with rude and sarcastic laughter, but she met only the polite and smiling good nature of the colonel. He said: "I feel complimented, but let's not make the matter too serious. I'm just going out to dinner. Won't you come out to dine with us, and you may hav an opportunity there of saying what you want to me." She accepted. The colonel introduced the lady to the Ingersoll family, who were prepared for everything always, and who showed nothing but cordiality to the missionary, who was a real lady, and who came there animated by a high purpose. This lady came to the Ingersoll house, and made several attempts to convince the colonel of the error of his ways. In the end she was so affected by the atmosphere of kindness and content in the house that she came to the colonel at last and begged his pardon for attempting to convert him, saying that she believed that he was in practice a much better Christian than she.

. . . . . .

One of the strongest and best things that I hav witnessed in the colonel's career occurred at a supper given by an uptown club in New York several years ago. Around the table there were gathered actors, authors, newspaper men, dramatic writers, and clubmen. Colonel Ingersoll was one of the honored guests of the club. It was the habit of this club at the dinners thus given to hav a special subject for discussion. This night the subject was: "Is Marriage a Failure?" The tone of the talk was commonplace, vulgar, inane, almost idiotic. One guest after another made some commonplace attempt to be witty at the expense of the institute of marriage. In the midst of this talk the colonel's turn came, and I hav never seen a more triumphant display of the influence of serious and dignified treatment of what is the most serious and dignified thing in life. It was like a cool wind displacing an atmosphere of malaria. The colonel, with a brush of his hand, waved aside the idle talk of the moment and said that the man who says that marriage is a failure has never stood with his hand locked in the loyal grasp of a wife and mother at the side of a child's grave. The tribute which followed to marriage, to love and its duties, was so eloquent, so convincing, and so touching that there was hardly a dry eye in the room when he finished. His speech put an end to the discussion. The colonel is by nature a loyal enthusiast. He is a firm friend, and does not understand friendship clouded by personal interest. His devotion to his family is one of the most marked traits of his nature.

As he comes to be better understood, there is less misrepresentation of his attitude before the world. People hav come to believe that he is sincere in his disbelief and are not disposed to quarrel with him about it. I asked him if he did not find a great deal of change in public sentiment in the last few years upon the subject, in the directions of greater tolerance of the views of Freethinkers. To this he gave the most decided affirmativ. People hav greatly changed in the last fifty years, he thought. "If they had not," said he, "I could not liv."

He finds, however, that the clergymen are as unrelenting as ever, and from them he receives no concessions. In speaking of this he said: "There is such a vein of snobbery that runs all through the existing systems of religion." No one, in his judgment, was so snobbish as a servant standing up for the importance of his master. The more important the master the greater the snobbishness. So what must be the feeling of the servant toward a Freethinker who has criticised the master which he regards as infinit?

A recent caller upon Colonel Ingersoll said: "You are too critical. Why, I believe you would even criticise the Lord's prayer."

"It is a subject for criticism," said the colonel.

"In what way?" was asked.

"In the phrase 'lead us not into temptation,'" was the reply. "It is an insult to the power to whom it is addressed to suppose that he should want to lead anyone into temptation. Would it not be more respectful to say, 'lead us from temptation?'"

The colonel is a great believer in a man's having sincere convictions. Some time ago a would-be lecturer called upon him for advice as to how he should succeed in the lecture field. The colonel asked him if he had any special subject in hand. The visitor replied no; he had come to the colonel for a subject. The latter replied that the only advice he had to giv to any man before going into any field of literature or the like would be, first, to hav something to say; second, to believe what he said sincerely, and third, to say it in as simple a manner as possible.

The colonel has made, perhaps, the greatest number of admirers and the fewest enemies in his lectures upon "The Family." His lecture on "The Liberty of Man, Woman, and Child" has had, perhaps, the widest circulation of any of his writings. A friend of the colonel related an incident which is suggested by the topic of this lecture. He said that he and the colonel were once walking through the Union railway station at Pittsburgh to change a train. On their way through the station they met a man and his family coming in the opposit direction. The man had his hands in his pockets and was smoking a comfortable cigar very much at his ease. Behind him came his wife carrying a baby, weighed down with bundles and with a second child dragging at her skirts. The man caught sight of Colonel Ingersoll, and then darted back and picked up one of the children and all the bundles. His wife then turned and stopped Colonel Ingersoll. She said: "Colonel Ingersoll, I want to thank you for your lecture on the liberty of man, woman, and child. My husband was very much impressed by it, and he is trying to do his best to be thoughtful. Your presence here in this station just suggested to him this division of labor which he has just assumed." The colonel smiled and passed on. It was one of the many thousand and one incidents in his life—the coming in contact with people who like his humanity, his gentle disposition, and his thoughtful regard for others. He has a passionate desire for everyone to be comfortable, contented. I hav heard him say over and over again: "Everyone has a right to be happy, and he is swindled out of his rights when he is unhappy."

I think that much of his hatred of religious forms and orthodox methods comes from an ultra-puritanical training given him by his Vermont ancestors. He is a natural-born rebel against prescribed methods for doing anything unless those methods appeal to his common sense. He is an extreme believer in equal rights, and as freely accords the right of criticism to the clergymen who oppose his views as he does in turn demand on his own part the privilege of criticising them. It is one of his lines of thought that if religion is strong it cannot be weakened by criticism.

He does not believe in the Parkhurst system of reforming society. I shall not quote any of his language upon the subject, because he is rather averse to criticising clergymen to the public, upon the theory that his view of this class is considered by many prejudiced. He considers, however, Parkhurst's method a wrong one and one that has done more to poison the minds of the youth throughout the country than any one thing that has occurred during the century. The name of Parkhurst is associated in the minds of nearly everyone more with what was sought to be destroyed than by the purpose which is supposed to hav actuated his conduct.

The colonel is nearly always at work. He possesses monumental industry and an extraordinary capacity for mastering a case. His mind works with lightning-like rapidity. He seems to see all around and through a question at the same time. He cuts short long-winded clients by anticipating in the briefest possible moment what they wish to say. He is slightly impatient with those who seek to waste his time. He is a wide reader of the best literature of this country and of Europe, and is today a student.

His powers of satire coupled with a colder disposition would make him very unpopular, but his satire is shaded by a kindly humor that softens the shaft. He has such a keen appreciation of the ludicrous, such a hatred of posing, that he soon brings opposing counsel who are anything but simple and natural down to this earth. One day he was arguing a case in Chicago against a very pompous attorney, who from the time he entered the court-room until he left it always played along the line of a prescribed part. He never made a natural move. In the course of his argument before the jury the Chicago lawyer laid out, with great show of theatrical display, fifteen sheets of paper in a row. Upon each sheet of paper was a massiv point which he argued for the jury, then formally laid the sheet aside. As he progressed down this row of points, laid out in his elaborate fashion, the colonel, who was then much younger than he is now, was seized with a wicked idea. He possessed himself of fifteen sheets of blank paper, and, when it came his turn to answer the fifteen-point lawyer, he walked up to the table in front of the jury, laid out his fifteen blank sheets with as great a solemnity and as much preparation as his opponent had employed. "Now," said the colonel, "I will address myself to the fifteen points made by the learned counsel who preceded me." He then picked up the first sheet, which was blank. He addressed his remarks to the point contained thereon, which was just nothing at all. He went through with the fifteen sheets in this same way, calling the attention of the foreman of the jury gravely to each blank sheet of paper. This witty fashion of saying to the jury that counsel who preceded him had said nothing which had any real bearing on the case, was so effectiv that it convulsed everyone, and carried the case without any real serious argument.

Colonel Ingersoll is a very proud, high-spirited, kind-hearted man. He loves the beautiful things of life. For music, for art, for literature, he is an enthusiast. He is always ready to help a beginner in any walk in life which leads upward. He is always finding some person of talent and genius. His introductions and his help hav contributed to the success of many.

The Declaration of Independence.

Had Jefferson never claimed to be author of the Declaration of Independence as he did in his private journal and in letters to friends, there is proof conclusiv that he did so in the Remonstrance of the House of Burgesses of Virginia, in May, 1874, written by Jefferson. It got by some means into circulation in England, in a very short time, where it attracted quite a sensation. Let anyone compare the original Declaration as presented to Congress and this Remonstrance and he will say, "If Jefferson is not the author of the Declaration it was stolen from the Remonstrance, which contains the Declaration and much more." Of whole sections the exact language is identical. HOLT.

Liberals and the World's Fair.

American Freethinkers should draw from the late action of Congress regarding the World's Fair some important facts regarding the present state of theology and the condition of Freethought. Those of us who think that the time is past when we are under obligation to fight Christianity should acknowledge their mistake. When anyone says that the church does not and cannot influence the government, let him look at the action of the late Congress. Last of all we should consider our own strength, and what we can do if organized. Unless we unite we are impotent, so far as any good work is concerned. The church knows our weakness. While we slumber the theological prowl about seeking to devour our liberties. There is no question whatever as to the fact that the majority of the people wanted the Fair open on Sunday; if put to a popular vote we think it would hav been carried by a greater majority than any other measure that has come up before the American people. Why did the church exercise so much influence and the Liberals so little? The answer is plain—they are organized, we are not. The church can claim no glory in its late victory. Such success will sooner or later bring disaster. By fair and honorable means they knew they would never be successful in inducing the board of directors to concede their demand; they therefore took to boycotting. They said, "We will ruin the World's Fair unless its managers get down on their knees and do honor to Christian bigotry." The clergy, the proprietors of saloons, gambling hells, and houses of ill fame, united and accomplished their object, and in the end will divide the profits of Sunday traffic. The church may deny this, but it is true for all their denial.

Liberals! Awake from your apathy. Organize in every city, town, or village, where there are enough of you to form a society. Let us revive the at present defunct American Secular Union, and if it is dead past all resurrection let us form another. Let our motto be, No union of church and state; no compromise with superstition; no peace to our enemies till they acknowledge our rights.

Des Moines, Ia. FRANKLIN STEINER.

Items of Foreign News Interesting to Freethinkers.

At the "Festival of Youth" held at Rheims on July 10th over three thousand persons took part.

Since the appearance of our last "Items" sixteen new Freethought societies hav been formed in Spain.

The Freethought demonstration held on July 3d at Louvain, Belgium, was attended by over two thousand persons.

Mr. Austin Bierbower's article, "Was Christ Crucified?" has been translated into Swedish and appears in the Fritänkaren.

Frederick von Bodenstedt, the brilliant Freethinker and author of the Mirza Schaffy songs, died at Wiesbaden, Germany, on April 18th.

If the cholera epidemic does not interfere, the congress at Madrid will be a decided success. The United States will be represented by our friend Mr. Léon Furnémont.

May 29th there was unveiled at Faytlez-Manage a monument in honor of the Belgian Freethinker and social reformer, Abel Wart. Over two thousand persons were present.

During the last four years 1,657,000 crowns hav been collected in Norway for foreign missions. Not one cent was gathered in to be applied to educating the people on religious questions.

On June 30th Miss Virginie Mauvais was buried at Nancy. She devoted her whole life, her vast fortune, to the education of the youth of Nancy and to the erection of different secular institutions in the same city. The mayor, aldermen, and fifty thousand people followed the hearse which contained the remains of what once constituted the Freethinker Virginie Mauvais. Speeches were delivered by various Freethinkers.

Secretaries of the various state Secular societies will confer a favor upon the writer of these "Items" by sending to Gustave Nelson, Groghan, N. Y., the number of local Unions, and of members of the same. The statistics are to be presented at Madrid at the coming congress.

The August number of Bulletin Mensuel has two supplements, one containing formulas of testaments and the registration of same, the other a call for money to the Literary Fund. The French Freethinkers hav tested and found out the great amount of good resulting by distributions of pamphlets.

At the annual congress of Swedish Freethinkers it was proposed to secure Mr. Lennstrand's services by paying him a yearly salary. As matters hav been our friend has not lived on the fat of the land. As yet we hav not received the minutes of the congress; hence do not know whether the proposal was carried or not.

Mrs. Annie Besant will probably soon be joined by Mr. Henry V. Berghell, the Swedish exile, at present speaker for a Unitarian church in this country. In a letter to the Fritänkaren he states that he is studying Theosophy, and believes that in that mystic faith he can find a peace which all other beliefs and unbeliefs hav failed to furnish him.

Freethinkers in Austria do not intend to submit to clerical dictation as regards the education of their children. Several lawsuits are pending before courts owing to the determination of ecclesiastics to teach a religion to the children of Freethought parents, in direct opposition to the wishes of the latter, and the public-school law of April 20, 1882.

We are pleased to inform our readers that the leader of the Austrian Freethinkers, ex-priest and editor of Der Lichtfreund, has so far recovered from his attack of meningitis, the sequel of influenza, as to be able to edit his paper and giv his weekly lectures at Vienna. Our friend has several times been subjected to the charitable persecutions of the orthodox, but never yet has he lowered the banner.

In French Freethought papers a writer signing himself "J. M." proposes that the names of the months be changed. It is proposals of this and similar kinds which work havoc in our lines. They do but harm, partly by causing discussions, partly by occupying space in our journals. They set brother against brother and make the church laugh. Personal hobbies, which do not benefit Freethought, hav no place in our papers or societies; they direct our attention away from what is really important.

Le Comité d'Etude Morales, the president of which is M. Jean Paul Cée, is growing. It forms now a part of both the French and Belgian Freethought Federations. The latest work of this Committee on Moral Laws is the preparation of speeches to be used on secular occasions, as adoption of children, marriages, and funerals. These speeches, which hav been adopted by the above-named Freethought Federations, are published in the committee's circular of May 22, 1892. Anyone who reads the French language can secure a copy of same by addressing Gustave Nelson, Groghan, N. Y., who is a corresponding member of the committee.

On June 5th the Freethinkers of Charleroi, Belgium, held their annual "Children's Festival." The festival, which was of the same pattern as our Sunday-school picnics, only more rational, was largely attended. About one hundred and fifty children took part in the procession. There was music, singing, speaking, and a general good time. It would be very advantageous to Freethought here in the United States if we paid more attention to the growing-up generation. It is not enough to attack Christianity by argument, we must endeavor to cut off the supply of the church, and that is the growing-up generation. If we leave it alone, it will either be gobbled up by the church, or, what is equally bad, become indifferent.

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

Finance.

Under the heading above I hav just read an article from Mr. J. W. Abbott to which I wish to make a few remarks and criticism.

"Money is a medium of exchange." True. "It is not necessary that it should hav an intrinsic value or a value within itself. The less it has the better. And it should be irredeemable."

I do not giv myself out as a financier, but with a little common sense one can pick a plenty of flaws in his many, to me, senseless assertions and averments.

If figures do not lie, they do not prove anything either, if not supported with good arguments and facts.

Money as a medium of exchange is wanted, not only between neighbors, man and man of the same nation, but for use the world over. That money should hav in itself no intrinsic value seems to me fallacious. It would not suit me, or Mr. Abbott himself, I should judge, after he gave it a little reflection. For example, I hav saved and wish to store some of my labor for future use. If I hav received pay for my labor in wheat or potatoes or any other product, then I wish to exchange it for gold or silver or jewelry—into anything that will not perish soon, and what everybody wishes and desires to hav. Now, in case of fire, what would become of my saved paper, the best Bank of England notes, as well as his fiat money? Where could it be found? Gold and silver could be searched for and picked up again with little loss if any. Therefore I desire money that has intrinsic value.

Paper is a great commodity, and most necessary for our transactions in commerce, but it is only taken when it comes from solid men or houses. Paper money is preferred to coin just as long as it can, when wanted, be redeemed in coin, and no longer. Irredeemable paper money would pass as long as the issuer of it could force it, and would be entirely worthless as a medium of exchange with other nations.

Mr. Abbott says: "It is the fiat of the government that makes the piece of anything money. You would not be obliged to take ten pounds of gold for a debt of a dollar, but you would be obliged to take . . . a silver dollar worth only eighty cents." But I ask: Who would not take even only one-fourth of a pound of gold in preference to his fiat dollar of eighty cents? Who but a fool? It is its intrinsic value that makes the difference and its desirableness.

Mr. Abbott says paper is the least liable to fluctuate of anything imaginable. It has been in the memory of our own age found that this is untrue. The Confederacy had plenty of paper; the more it used the less its value became; and what is it worth now? Venice was in its time immensely rich and wealthy, as England is now, and its banknotes were preferred to coin, the same as is the case with the notes of the Bank of England, but it had gold and silver for their redemption. Russia's notes were redeemable in copper and were a hindrance in commerce, as I read, and were simply forced fiat money. Rational beings do not want irredeemable paper money.

That this republican government has made vicious laws all in favor of banks, railroads, and monopolies in general, for the rich, is only too true. It cannot be denied it was done because it was and is in the interest of themselvs, the legislators, so to do.

People hav the voting power, but are too ignorant yet to use it with profit. Abolish all and every kind of taxes with the exception of two. Let all expenses of the state, county, and city be raised from the land value only; all improvements be freed. The general government should raise all its revenues simply and solely from a graduated income tax. This, in my view, would take an immense burden from the poor and middle class and put it where it belongs, on the rich, on those able to pay, on the most protected and favored classes. But besides this, as long as the people in general are willingly building costly, but worse than useless, churches by the thousands, and labor to sustain an army of parasites of priests and ministers, there is no hope for betterment. All I can do is to fall in with Puck and cry, "What fools these mortals be!" FREDERICK KOEZLY.

New York, Aug. 27, 1892.

Senators at Prayer.

The United States Senate at prayer presents a study for the curious who love to inquire into the peculiarities, whimsicalities, and absurdities of the great. Promptly when the clock indicates the hour of noon, the vice-president and the chaplain enter the Senate; the latter ascends to the stand of the presiding officer, standing below him, givs one rap with the gavel, and then the prayer proceeds with a good deal of suggestion of lip-service. Mr. Morton is an eminently respectable-looking man. It would be an impossibility for him to commit an act of indecorum, says the Louisville Courier-Journal. He would make an admirable lord mayor of London. His attitude is that of devotion without any degree of humility. Of the Senators, Messrs. Palmer, Hawley, Paddock, and Gibson, of Louisiana, throw all the devotion and humility into the service that the law allows.

One continually expects to hear an unctuous amen from each one of them at any moment during the services. Sawyer, Morrill, Sherman, Frye, Allison, Ransom, Vest, Vance, Cameron, and Butler are careless and unconcerned and somewhat bored. Hoar and Dawes rise. Washburn keeps his seat and yawns visibly, if not audibly, two or three times before the final amen; Brice also keeps his seat, but bends his head on his hand Methodist probation fashion. Stanford, too, keeps his seat for the sufficient reason that he is very weak in his pins, he having No. 5 legs and No. 12 trunk. Hiscock is the most bored man in the Senate when the devotional exercises are under way. He glances around the chamber, scans the galleries, and seems to be completely exhausted. With an immense stomach for biscuit, a big head for thought, and a powerful frame for action Hiscock was born lazy and has never grown out of it.

But for that he would hav been speaker of the House in 1881, and but for that he would hav been a big man in the Senate. As for his colleague, Hill, he is not in it at the hour of prayer. He remains in the cloakroom until the Senate is ready for business. Quay, doubtless through associations with Wanamaker, has learned to assume an easy if not graceful attitude—a happy medium between humility and carelessness. It is notable that the Senate never fills up till after the chaplain yields the chair to the vice-president.

Dedicated to Engraving on Title-page of "The Truth Seeker" August 7th.

Science! We hail thee! No better friend has man.
Savior of the race, unheralded, unsung,
Thou, the "rock of ages," wert ere worlds began.
Always right, though oft cajoled by wrong.
Science! Jewel fair! Thou art the king of kings;
We know thou art, no matter what thy name.
The cosmos yields to thee, the scepter flings,
And plumes thee victor in the vast domain.
Science! Thou Alpha and Omega art! To thee
E'en sky and sea, the vast and great unknown,
Their secrets yield. Thou hast the key.
Humanity, posterity, will never thee disown.
Science! Thou handmaid fair! We thee adore!
We bow to thee alone, our only hope.
As time rolls on, we love thee more and more.
Friend thou art, more dear than priest or pope.
Science! Crucible of all! 'Tis true that thy fair name
Has been assailed. By bigots crushed to earth,
Thou risest up more valiant, and with wider fame.
It still rolls on, this "rock" of priceless worth.
Science! Thou all in all! E'en must it be
In the great realm of fact thou stand'st secure.
Thy citadel is safe, without dogma or decree—
Defenseless, yet fortified by all that can endure.

Newark, N. J. HENRY BIRD.

About What "The Truth Seeker" Said.

From the Advent Review.

What of it? This is the question which some ask concerning the late action of Congress in favor of closing the World's Fair on Sunday. If Congress thinks best that the Fair be closed on Sunday, what of it? What is there particularly significant about that?

The significance of that act is just this: that Congress has now committed itself to religious legislation. The Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia was closed on Sunday, but that was the act of the managers, who had a right to so conduct it if they chose, just as the managers of the coming World's Fair would hav a right to do so if they saw fit.

But in 1876 there was no action of Congress in the matter. Then why not leave the matter on the present occasion to the commissioners who hav charge of the Fair? There is where it should hav been left. But no; certain Sunday zealots saw here too good an opportunity to be let slip, to commit the nation to the fatal work of religious legislation; and so Congress itself must act in the matter.

In this they hav succeeded. And so far as the influence of this action is concerned, it does not matter what course events may take. It would not matter if the commission should refuse the money on the condition offered, and open the Fair on Sunday; it would not matter if the next Congress should release the managers from the condition of Sunday-closing. The fact would still remain that Congress had declared itself competent to legislate on religious questions; and with this as a precedent, they will be called on to do more of it.

The most stupid part of the whole proceeding was that some of this majority threw themselvs helplessly in the lap of the church, declaring that it was "not wise legislation" to resist the religious element of our land, thus virtually advertising that whatever a majority of the religionists of the country demand, they can hav. And with this invitation, the churches will not be slow in putting in their demands.

True, what Congress has done so far, pertains only to the Fair, regulating the action of the people only with reference to that. But with this as a beginning, how long before a Sunday law, properly so called, for all the people in all places, for which there is now such a deafening clamor, will be secured?

Two of Our New Books.

From the Kansas City Times.

Thomas Ellwood Longshore's "Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion Compared with Ancient Myths and Miracles as Factors in Human Evolution," consists of the calm and clear opinions of a "reformed Quaker, who at the age of eighty years has announced to the world his final conclusions about some questions which hav agitated and perplexed mankind since the early morn of civilization." The various chapters giv ample evidence of the great learning, balanced mind, and profound reasoning of the aged author. Among the subjects treated are "The Old and New Testaments," "What is Religion?" "The Soul and Immortality," "Idolatry and Fear," "Morality and Ethics," "Education," "Sociology," and "Thoughts on Death."

The book comprises a vast fund of information concerning theologies of the past and present, and is written in a manner apt to attract and hold the attention of all minds endowed with a love of intelligent investigation. Regarding the institution under whose guidance man has stumbled through the ages, Mr. Longshore says: "The church is as certainly corrupt as the world, but it is a corruption of a refined and subtle order, which generates pride and a sense of self-righteousness that will not submit to criticism or disparagement. It may help those who hav fallen very low up to its own level; that is the best it can do. If you aspire to anything beyond you are safer, better off outside than you are in the church. Turn your attention to science, to the advanced thoughts of thinkers outside the church; the prescribed higher class of critics, students of ethics, of social philosophy, the educators of the world, that are far in advance of the church theology." [New York, Truth Seeker Publishing Company.

The Kansas Freethinkers' Association

Will hold their third annual convention at Ottawa, Kan., September 9th to 14th. John E. Remsburg and other good speakers will preach the gospel of truth.

All Freethinkers and Liberal societies are invited to attend and aid in the good work of teaching reason instead of faith. Clergy and Christians are especially invited to attend.

The Freethinkers will hav the use of Forest park, which has all the advantages of beauty, comfort, and convenience for the entertainment of visitors.

President, C. K. LEVERING,
Burlington, Kan.
Secretary, L. D. WHITE,
Halstead, Kan.

Lectures and Meetings.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM will lecture at Masonic Hall, Ellenville, N. Y., September 22d; evening subject, "Modern Thought in the Churches."

THE Annual Convention of the Canadian Secular Union will be held on Saturday and Sunday, September 10 and 11, 1892, when it is hoped that a full attendance of delegates will be present.

E. H. HEYWOOD writes: "There will be a special convention of the New England Labor Reform League in Boston Sunday and Monday, September 25th and 26th, day and evening. Due attention will be given to free speech, the tongue and pen of our faith. Hav the lewd knaves and fools who now jail Harman anything to say for the foul crime they are guilty of?"

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments for October and November:

Boston, Mass.	Oct.	2	Scofield, Utah.	Nov.	1, 2
Cincinnati, O.	"	9	Reno, Nev.	"	6, 7
Golden Pond, Ky.	"	14–17	Bishop Creek and
Chicago, Ill.	"	23	Round Valley, Cal	"	9–14
Bartley, Neb.	"	26, 27	Independence, Cal	"	17–20
Denver, Col.	"	30	Stockton, Cal.	"	27

Letters of Friends.

The Indecent Bible.

LINCOLN, ILL., Aug. 22, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In THE TRUTH SEEKER for August 20th the text illustrated by the cut on the last page is certainly calculated to make a decent man hold his breath. I want every reader to get down his "Holy Queer" and turn to Isa. xxxvi, 12, and then to prove the value of iteration on holy truths, turn to 2 Kings xviii, 27. This is fully as much as anyone can stand at one time, hence I will not at present giv any more references.

Yours truly, JOHN BUSHEL.

An Oldtime Friend.

HARBOUR, ARK., Aug. 22, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to say that I was a subscriber to the grand old Investigator for twelve years, and thought no one but Messrs. Mendum and Seaver could conduct a Freethought paper, and friend Bennett started a little seven-by-nine monthly paper in Illinois, and sent me a copy, No. 1, Vol. I; and as the Investigator was well established, I would support his sheet, and the first number was full of good reading matter. I concluded Bennett was the very man to run a Liberal journal. But, bless your life, how easy it is for a man to be mistaken. The way I look at the matter now, the present TRUTH SEEKER family are the very men to conduct a first-class paper.

I circulate my papers to anyone that will read them. I leave one at the barber-shop and at the news-stand.

J. H. HASLAM.

A Man Who Is Worse Than a Heathen.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., Aug. 22, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am one of those fools (according to the Bible) "that say in their hearts," etc., and hav, as Faust says, "no lingering fear of hell or devil," and, I may add, no God either. This has caused some of my religious friends to consider me worse than a heathen. But of course I do not mind that. I will tell you of one answer a Christian gave me the other day that made me smile. On my inquiring whether he had read any works of Voltaire, Paine, or Ingersoll, he exclaimed, "No, no! I never saw them and I don't want to!" "Why?" I asked. "I am afraid I might be convinced by their logic and reasoning and believe the same you do, and I won't do it!" Just think of it! A man admitting that his belief was based upon nothing and then afraid of getting his eyes open! What such people don't know would fill a big book. Every week I pass my copy of THE TRUTH SEEKER around to my friends, and I hope it will set some of them, yes, all, on the right track.

S. HALLBERG.

Labor Should Be the Measure of Money.

GILROY, CAL., Aug. 11, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I am a reader of what I consider your valuable paper and a sympathizer with the Independent party movement. After reading P. F. Shumaker's article on money in the issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER of August 13th I think by making a suggestion, and what to my mind seems to be an answer to his question, "What will we measure the value of the paper dollar with?" I may be the means of adding another to our common cause.

"What will we measure the value of a paper dollar with?" It seems to me, from the different articles published on the money question in THE TRUTH SEEKER from time to time, that the word "money" has no definit meaning but that it is wealth or represents wealth, depending on whether it be "intrinsic" or "fiat" money. It is generally conceded to be a true proposition that all wealth or value is the product of labor. Hence it seems to my mind that whatever form of money we hav, labor is one of the principal factors. Hence a unit of labor could be taken as a unit of measure for money.

Yours for humanity, S. P. DALEY.

God As an Organist.

SANTA CLARA, CAL., Aug. 10, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Happening to pick up a paper the other day containing a sermon by a celebrated New York divine, delivered in England, my attention was particularly called to these words: " . . . and you shall see God's hands striking the keys and God's foot trampling the pedals in the great oratorio of the ages."

What a narrow-minded, belittled idea of an almighty, all-wise, and all-powerful God; of a being who called into existence the almost infinit host of heavenly bodies, placed them in their proper places and made laws governing them, so there is no failure in their movements but they swing on and on through their tremendous paths! Think of a God who always existed, and created this heavenly host, playing with his "hands and feet" for the amusement of a few selected human beings.

If man could picture a God that was really above himself and one who didn't hav all of the human attributes, bad as well as good, it would do well enough to tell us his plans, etc. But man never has been able to do so and never will. Man is the highest being we know, so God is pictured likewise.

A man who believes in a God who stopped the sun in his orbit (?) simply to giv a chosen people more daylight to finish killing their enemies, and one who would make it likewise go backward simply as a sign for a sick king, can well talk about a God playing with his "hands and feet." Giv us more nineteenth-century enlightenment and fewer ancient ideas.

C. C. WOODWARD.

Affair With a Catholic Lady.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Four years ago I visited Roselle, N. J., conversing with a Catholic lady on Father McGlynn's excommunication from the church. She remarked, "I feel troubled; for the reverend gentleman christened three of my children, and sometimes I think I will hav them rechristened." I then said: "My mother had all her children christened but me. I was the youngest of six children, and she failed to hav me christened. And I was glad that I was the favored one, for I did not believe in baptism." I told her there was no hell or purgatory to punish us after death; that if we committed crimes we were punished; for that moment we were in hell, and if we were honest, industrious, and virtuous, our conscience was at peace and that was our heaven. And I said that those rewards and punishments were pure, unadulterated shams, and that those priestly fakirs could not get a living from intelligent, educated people—that they were kept alive wholly by simple, ignorant, superstitious mortals who did not hav the capacity or courage to think for themselvs. And it is only a lack of foresight, prudence, and reason for any person not to exercise their brains and do their own thinking. I bid this lady good afternoon. About three weeks ago I visited Roselle again and met and talked with the same lady. What a change had taken place since last we met. She laughed when I entered her door. She had thought of me many times, and the last time she conversed with Father Wiseman—if my memory serves me—the priest was speaking of the torments of hell and this woman had the courage to tell this priestly father, "I don't believe in hell." He replied, "Then you can't be a Catholic." And she has never been to church since. I remarked, "My good woman, you are free," and handed her a Freethought paper.

W. W. MORRIS.

Syllogisms on Money.

COOK, NEB., Aug. 15, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of August 13th, I see my old friend of Flat Creek, La., P. F. Shumaker, in his article "Money Again," asks this question: "What will we measure the value of a paper dollar with?" It appears he has never seen an answer to this question, and consequently is unable to see where the value comes in. I wish to answer only this question, leaving the rest with Mr. Jones, who is abundantly able to attend to it.

What will we measure the value of a dollar with? Answer: With law. Proof: I owe my friend Shumaker a debt of $5. I make a tender of $5 lawful money. My friend refuses the tender on the ground that it is neither gold nor silver. He goes before the judge with this plea. The judge rules the debt paid by the tender and assesses the cost of the trial on my friend, as a punishment for his ignorance, or perhaps worse—his resistance of the "sovereign authority," vested in the law which places the $5 of legal value upon the material substance of the tender whether it be gold, paper, silver, or any other substance capable of receiving the impress of the almightiness of this government.

If gold and silver are money, then the law is unnecessary;

But the law is necessary to make money;

Therefore gold and silver are not money.

Nothing can be created a medium of exchange except by force of custom or statute law;

Money is a medium of exchange;

Therefore money is created a medium of exchange by the force of custom or statute law.

A custom or statute law is the law of the land.

Money is created such by the force of custom or statute law;

Therefore money is created by the law of the land.

Laws cannot create matter;

Money is created by law;

Therefore money is not matter.

I hope my friend Shumaker will get his eyes opened to the fact that matter is not money, and I think he will from the way he has softened down since his answers to my questions some months ago.

W. P. BROOKS, M.D.

Preachers Recommend Prayer But Don't Practice It.

INDUSTRY, KAN., Aug. 19, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The new Bible Picture Book and "Travels in Faith" came to hand the other day; and in reply will say they are the most interesting and truthful books I ever read. The Bible Picture Book, especially, is not only interesting and instructiv but very comic indeed. It truly shows up the foolishness of believing in the Old Testament as an inspired book, let alone reason and common sense. Every reasonable and truthful person throughout the civilized world ought to send and get the new Bible Picture Book, as it will open his intellectual eyes as they were never opened before; and after they hav pondered over it carefully, lend it to their benighted Christian friends for careful perusal, as it will certainly be an eye-opener to them, unless they are past redemption. May you be successful in selling thousands upon thousands of them for the good of humanity, is my prayer.

I will also state in brief what little faith and trust and regard the preachers hav for their so-called God. A United Brethren preacher here in our village told us some time ago in his sermon that if we only would hav more faith and trust in God, God certainly would stand by us and assist us in everything that we truly stood in need of. And a few days after he made that assertion, an Infidel life insurance agent came along, and he got his life insured for several thousand dollars. Therefore, you can readily see that he has more faith and trust in man (if he is an Infidel) than he has in his God, whom he preaches to the people to put their faith and trust in. But then, I never saw or heard of one preacher that practices all he preaches. They imagin they are all "smart Alecks" and can lie and deceive the people for the honor and glory of their little God.

And we also hav a very portly and God-fearing sky-pilot in our village who preaches for the evangelical flock, by the name of Vennum. And to show to the world what regard this God-fearing man has for Sunday—he gets up a very enthusiastic picnic with a brass band on the holy Sabbath day and goes out to an Infidel's grove to serve his little old God, and in order to deceive he pulls the wool over the people's eyes and calls it "the children's day" for the Sunday-school.

But then, "great is the mystery of godliness."

J. B. WISE.

Chafing Under Sunday Tyranny.

FAIRPORT, N. Y., Aug. 17, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I was a born heretic, never from my earliest boyhood being willing to accept any belief or creed unsupported by evidence. In my youth I read the Bible until I became disgusted with its contradictions, absurdities, and obscenity, and hav wasted little time on the "sacred" volume since.

The action of Congress in voting to giv a large sum of the people's money to the World's Fair on a condition which will, if accepted, deprive a part of the people of those rights declared by the Declaration of Independence to be "inalienable," and guaranteed to every citizen by the Constitution, deserves the severest condemnation of every fair-minded man. It is an insult to the memory of those noble patriots who declared that all men are created free and equal. It is an everlasting blot on the record of the last Congress, and should consign the memory of every man who voted "Aye" to well-merited contempt. Nor is the shame and disgrace at all mitigated by the fact that this action was largely hypocritical; the average Congressman caring about as much for Sunday observance as a "yaller" dog. They were cajoled into taking this step by the howling of an army of frantic priests under the impression that it would in some way inure to their personal benefit. I would not be surprised if it should turn out that there had been brought to bear the force of an undercurrent which had its fountain-head in certain interests which Sunday closing would be sure to promote. Should the Fair be closed on Sunday you may chronicle the fact that it has prevented one man from going there. If I stay at home I hav my liberty. If I go to the Fair my liberty is abridged. I am an unwilling victim of that same spirit of priestcraft, bigotry, and intolerance which, when it had the power, held its iron heel on the necks of a large part of the human race, bringing every man to the fold or the rack, crushing out every budding ray of light, and keeping the world in utter darkness more than a thousand years. I am seventy-two years old, hav never worn the yoke of church dictation and never will.

Inclosed I send $1 for the Bible Picture Book.

NELSON LEWIS.

The Truth on Calvin.

NAUVOO, ILL., Aug. 11, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: By the influence of a former historiography the theologian John Calvin is usually taken for the ecclesiastical reformer of the French-speaking people, especially in Switzerland, for the benefactor of the small republic of Geneva, and for a man full of light. But this is a threefold mistake, as the modern developments and discoveries from the Geneva archives made by Galiffe prove the contrary. John Calvin has not been the ecclesiastical reformer of the French speaking people in Geneva. Nor has he been Geneva's benefactor, but rather her tyrant. He, finally, has not been a man full of light, but rather he has changed the spiritual slavery of popery into slavery to his own mind. This shall be proved by the following historical facts:

The reformation of the church had been introduced two years before Calvin's arrival at Geneva. It was Anton Fromanent who brought Zwingles's doctrin to Geneva. Then Calvin, prosecuted by the French government for his doctrins, took refuge in Geneva, and from that city he tried to influence the inhabitants of France by propagating the doctrin that God had elected only a few persons to salvation and had determined the rest of mankind to eternal damnation. His followers at Geneva—the French refugees—were blindly devoted to him and became the strongest party at Geneva. They oppressed the Liberal party by all means, and gave to their opponents the nickname, "Libertins." They executed one of their chief opponents, the syndic John Philipp, under false accusations. Now, Calvin spared no means to further strengthen his spiritual tyranny. He got a rich salary of six thousand francs, free dwelling and furniture, free wood and provisions, and the right "to make laws in order to rule the people." Instantly he organized a system of espionage by which he was aware of not only the deeds but even the thoughts of Geneva's inhabitants. He who injured him was accused as an injurer of God, and was sentenced to kneel down in a public place clothed only with a shirt and holding a taper in his hand, and confess publicly that he had done wrong. Among those punished were the officer, Peter Ameautt, and the printer, Dubois. Six French Calvinists who had resisted the voting in favor of Calvin were beheaded. From 1541 to 1546, during the influence of Calvin on the city government of Geneva, 76 persons were ejected from the city, 800 to 900 imprisoned, and 58 executed. Children to be baptized could receive no other than Bible names. Music and dancing were forbidden; so was the theater. Saloons were tried to be suppressed. Immorality increased from year to year. But those persons who adopted Calvin's system were not punished, and those persons who had left their wives in France were allowed to take another wife at Geneva. In his sermons Calvin called his adversaries brutes, beasts, dogs, wolves; and one day he said there had to be erected two gallowses to hang thereon 700 or 800 young Genevans. He punished 33 persons for their belief's sake. Jack Gruet, who was only suspected of having written a pamphlet against the Geneva preachers, was beheaded. Jerome Rolser was driven away for heresy. And how Michael Servetus, a Spanish physician who had fled from the Inquisition, was sentenced by Calvin to be cremated, is a historical fact too well known to need further mention.

GEO. ALEX. RITTER.

Prohibitionists Are Religionists, and Prohibition Is Despotism.

NUNACH, CAL., Aug. 19, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I would like to not exactly reply to an article in THE TRUTH SEEKER of August 6th, headed "Prohibition and Liver Disease," but rather make a few observations on the same. Mr. Steenerson seems to be rather huffy about the Prohibition party being accused of having gangrene of the liver, and he wants Mr. Heald to tell the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER what good we get from the saloon, how many great men the saloon has produced, and how it is a blessing to society. Before going further into the subject, permit me to digress a little from the main issue. I take it for granted that Mr. Steenerson is, if not an out-and-out Freethinker, at least a Liberal-minded man. Now, I hav met many Prohibitionists in the course of my life, but I may truthfully say I never met a Prohibitionist that was not a Christian. It seems to me if Mr. Steenerson would study up the subject, or just let him read the Prohibition platform through carefully, he ought to see that there is a nigger in the woodpile some place. The platform commences this way: "The Prohibition party in national convention assembled, acknowledging almighty God as the source of all true government, and his law as the standard to which all human enactments must conform, to secure the blessings of"—what? I will tell you—of Sunday laws; press censorship; ditto post-office; the Bible in the public schools, where the teachers would probably require a religious qualification in order to teach the young idea how to shoot, etc. Further comment on the above preamble to the Prohibition platform is unnecessary. Every thoughtful man ought to see that the liquor business which they (the Prohibitionists) pretend to make their main issue is only a cloak to hide their wicked designs on the liberties of the people. It is not the drinking of alcoholic beverages which they want to prohibit so much as liberty of conscience. I thank, not God, but the intelligence of the majority of the American people, that the Prohibition party is more liable to die of gangrene of the liver than to dictate to the free-born people of this country what they shall eat and drink and think.

Now, to get back to the beginning, Mr. Steenerson wants to know how many great men the saloon has produced, also how it is a blessing to society. Now, I think Mr. Steenerson is flying wide of the mark, like some Christian debaters. Mr. Heald never claimed it was a blessing to society. Houses of prostitution are hardly considered so either, I believe, yet a great many people consider them a necessary evil. As to how many great men the saloon produces, that is rot, and needs no answer. A great many great men, in fact the majority of great men, were and are at the present day users of alcoholic beverages. Whether they are products of the saloon or not, it takes a better logician than I to say. I will say in conclusion that I am temperance from a hygienic standpoint. I think a man is better off without any unnatural stimulating drinks, such as whisky, brandy, beer, wine, tea, and coffee. But because I think so should I prohibit those that do not agree with me from doing as they please in those matters? Out with such narrow-minded bigots.

ALBERT SANDBERG.

A Smart Fighter.

MAYSTON, TENN., Aug. 12, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Tennessee has some queer laws; the registration laws for instance. Every man in order to vote must hav a registration certificate and also a poll-tax receipt, and show them to the judges of election when he passes in his ballot.

In common with most other men, I thought it might be a cunning thing to vote, so I went to the office to register. I announced my name and one of the registrars said, "Hold up your right hand and be sworn." And I said bluntly, "I won't do it. What! I swear—swear to be registered? I never heard of such a thing."

One of them then explained that there were certain questions to be answered and they held that each one must be sworn to answer them truly. I offered to affirm, under the pains and penalties of perjury, to answer truly any proper questions that they saw fit to ask. But in doing so I would not take off my hat or hold up my hand—if I happened to be standing I would stand and if I was sitting I would stay sot. That I was a man and would play no monkey tricks at all.

I expect if a chain of lightning had drawn a train of circumstances through the room, those two men would not hav been so utterly dumfounded.

The copy of the law they had—a little pamphlet—did not say anything about affirming, and they requested a week for meditation and advice. The next Saturday I called again and they said they had learned that I could affirm but must do so in the words of the oath. I told them that was a distinction without any difference—that it was those "So help you God" words that I desired to avoid, and would neither swear or affirm with those words.

The result was they made out my certificate and wrote across the face of it, "The registrars disagree." Then I had to take the certificate to the county registration commissioners for them to "approve" or "disapprove." They informed me that the commissioners would meet Monday A.M., August 1st, to pass on all disagreed certificates, and would leave mine at the store of D. P. Henderson & Co., where I could get it in the afternoon. It was called for Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and telephoned for twice Thursday, the day of the election. No certificate and no reply to telephone.

Sunday after the election I wrote to the county commission the following letter;

MAYSTON, TENN., Aug. 7, 1892.

MR. W. G. M. THOMAS, Dear Sir: I would be pleased to know what disposition you hav made of my registration certificate. It was called for at the store of D. P. Henderson Monday afternoon, Tuesday afternoon, and Wednesday. You were telephoned about it twice Thursday. No certificate and no reply. I am not pleased. You had a right to approve or disapprove it, but you had no right to suppress it.

"So help you God." What god? The Brahman's, the Buddhist's, the Mohammedan, the Mormon, the Scandinavian? The one-headed monster of the Jews, the double-headed monstrosity of the Romans, or the triple-headed monstrous monstrosity of the Christians? Perchance one of the one thousand gods of the Grecians?

"So help you God." Whose god? I havn't any. Your god? I don't know anything about your god. Their god? Each one pretends to a different god and they all lie so infamously that I don't believe any of their gods would "help me" tell the truth. Has the state got a God? Not so far as I am informed. But if the state has a good healthy God let the state show him up or at least so define him that we may know that he can help us tell the truth—or else let the state go out of the God business.

"So help you God." The fact is, I am a man and I can tell the truth without the help of any God or any other man. And I don't believe the state has any right to jump a God onto anyone as a religious test of citizenship.

All the Gods we hav ever had any account of hav been purely imaginary, ideals, and for the most part the most horrible conceptions that the imaginations of barbarous men could conceive of.

To-day there are about eighty thousand preachers — pampered paupers — in the United States, each one striving to make out the devil (whatever that may mean) to be a more horrible monster than any of the others can—more horrible than any of the million preachers—paupers—that hav gone before hav made him out to be; and yet they say their God made him, governs, guides, and controls him. That makes their God a devilish sight worse than the devil. Go to, now, I will none of them.

Where is my certificate?

L. L. GOODWIN.

Later, Aug. 13, 1892.—Hurrah for our side! To-day, nine days after the election, I hav received from the county registration commission my "disagreed" registration certificate, "approved" by the county commission. Although too late to use, it gives me great satisfaction in this: My persistence has compelled the commission to decide that Freethinkers hav rights of conscience as much to be respected as those of the devotees of superstition. They decide that a Freethinker may affirm without taking off his hat, holding up his hand, or going through any other sleight-of-hand performance. They decide that a manly man need not be a monkey unless he chooses.

This country has twenty-one voting districts and the one I liv in is the only one where the registrars hav required everyone to swear. I boast the proud distinction of being the only voter in this district that has registered without either swearing or affirming. I do not believe they will play monkey-monk with me at the next registration. By the way, they hav learned something about the Gods that they had not thought of before.

The friends will please note my new post-office.

L. L. GOODWIN.

A Protest Against Narrowness.

GILLESPIEVILLE, O., Aug. 14, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: We call ourselvs truth seekers, and it seems some of us think we hav found this Eldorado and are not very particular whether others find it or not. We advocate Freethought; we are willing everyone shall think as he pleases, hav his own independent ideas, so long as he keeps them to himself. Just think any think you like so long as you do not think out loud. To enter our charmed circle you must believe as we do; put no faith in Gods, devils, Holy Ghosts, saviors, or immortality; for if you do you are a fool; and as we are all wisdom personified, and are sure beyond a doubt that we are on the right track, we want no fools in our company.

Are we truth seekers who are struggling to better humanity, to trample ignorance, superstition, and bigotry underfoot—struggling to find a light that no mortal has ever yet been able to discover? Are we going to pattern after and make our standard of honor that of our foe, the church? Are we going to clothe ourselvs in bigotry and superciliousness, and close our doors to all save Agnostics? Are we going to spend our lives, our fortunes, our energies, in hurling anathemas at the head of our detested foe, and in the end become imitators? In short, a second sect of Puritans? They dissented from the Church of England, came to America that they might hav freedom of thought and speech; but it was for them only. Woe unto those who differed. They were witches, fiends, and devils. Some of us are in favor of excluding Spiritualists from our societies. Can we do this and still claim the title of Freethought for our society? Some of us, I fear, hav queer and limited ideas of liberty and freedom. What I understand by a Freethought society is one where everyone is at liberty to air his ideas, be he Deist, Atheist, Spiritualist, or what not.

We should respect each other's opinions. No two are exactly similar, and one is just as likely to be wrong as the other, and only by comparing our ideas can we become enlightened. As regards the Bible, no one who has carefully perused it can believe it aught but a jumble of errors and falsehoods. For it we ask no tolerance, but for the belief in God and immortality we would at least implore patience. Not that we believe in either. We hold them at most to be but shadowy myths, conceived by fanciful, imaginary minds, yet we cannot contradict them. We know naught of what is beyond the shadows. And we will go so far as to say, that person has never yet been born, nor never will be, who would not rejoice to hav immortality proved true. Some say, One world at a time. That is a very sensible idea. Get all you can out of this life, for you hav no assurance of another. But sometimes the pleasures of this world pall on us, our sweets turn to Dead sea fruit, and we feign would think of another life where the sorrows and sufferings and sins of this imperfect one hav no part. When we are supremely happy we would hav the life beyond in our fanciful imagination just as this is, but when we exchange this verdant, flower-strewn path for the winding, intricate one of thorns and thistles—and this every mortal does, for sorrow is the heritage of humanity, for "into each life some rain must fall"—it is then we conjure up different scenes for the future. It is not the belief in immortality or in a supreme being that corrupts and enslaves humanity, but the numberless mediators between man and this imaginary being. Then we would say, Believe in a God if you will, believe in immortality if it lends you any assistance, but in the name of common sense, do your own thinking. If your God must be propitiated with prayers, pray, then, yourself, and do not hire some lying Christian hypocrit to do it for you. Thomas Paine believed in a God and immortality. Paine is to the Freethinker what Jesus Christ is to the Christian. Christ is claimed to be the founder of the Christian religion, though there are serious doubts on the subject, but we may safely claim the hero of the American Revolution as the founder of Freethought in America. In the Old World there were others before him, but on the American continent the name of Thomas Paine stands out in bold relief as the first who possessed the dauntless courage, the firmness of principle, and the magnanimity of spirit to publicly denounce a set of impostors, fiends, and holy hypocrits, and expose their frauds and impositions to the world. With his grand and magnanimous mind he rent the veil of superstition asunder that for centuries and centuries hung over humanity like a pall. He let into this vast temple of darkness a light like the rays of the sun at noonday. He gave holy hypocrisy, superstition, and ignorance a blow which will eventually annihilate them. Thomas Paine, with his torch of reason, did more for humanity than all the Gods, Ghosts, and saviors that ever disgraced and polluted the world by their presence.

We Freethinkers claim to be followers of the teaching of Thomas Paine. We pretend to fashion our ideas and principles after his, but how different are we who would exclude another from the light of reason and common sense merely because his ideas do not in every detail agree with our own, because he has not advanced into the light quite so far (or mayhap, for aught we know, farther). I repeat, how different are our narrow, pusillanimous, arrogant minds, our poor little shriveled-up souls (if we hav any), from the noble, grand, and chivalrous man whose sympathy went out to all humanity. I fear some of us are like the Christians we so justly malign; people who liv in glass houses should not throw stones. We are good examples of the followers of Christ, who do not follow his teachings at all, but a code of laws suitable to their own narrow, supercilious minds, and label it "Christianity" as we label ours *Free*thought. "A house divided against itself can never stand," and so long as we wrangle over our little differences of opinion we never will succeed. The emancipation of the human race is our aim. Surely our cause is great enough, grand enough, and just enough to call forth the best of our sympathies, energies, and talents.

HERRISSA MARIE CRYDER.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight.
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Across the Atlantic.

To London via Dieppe.—Sights of London.—The Tower and its Dungeons.—Emblems of Royalty.—Westminster Abbey.—The Crystal Palace.—Houses of Parliament.—Hampton Court Palace.—Windsor Castle.—Kew Gardens.—Death of a Noble Woman.—Grave of George Eliot.—Slums of London.—Charitable Institutions.—An American Gentleman's Liberality.—Bunhill Cemetery.

After parting with all our francs and centimes in Paris, because they do not like to take French money in England, and because, also, it is impossible to keep it, we left in evening train for London, by way of Dieppe.

For a long distance, as we sped along, the bright light of Eiffel tower shed its brilliant rays upon us. It was nearly midnight when we reached Rouen, the door of our compartment was unlocked, and we were told we could hav refreshments. I asked for a glass of lemonade—"lemon squash," it is called here. Well, some sort of vile compound was brought to the compartment. "How much is it?" I inquired. "Sixpence." "What is the stuff?" I asked farther. "Lager." The train moved as I handed the glass and sixpence to the man; there was a tingling smash, a sound of broken glass, an emphatic exclamation, and we were quickly out of sight.

It was between 12 and 1 when we reached Dieppe, and immediately we went on board the little "tub," or packet. Finding our beds, which were simply wide shelves cushioned, we "turned in," as the sailors say, with our clothes on. "If you can cross the English channel without being sick you can go anywhere on the water," said a friend.

Well, we accomplished the feat, but we were weak and dizzy in the morning, from bad air, for our party were all piled in one room. We were awakened at Newhaven by a rough voice, "Tickets, tickets—show your tickets." We fumbled in our pockets and reticules, and on producing the requisit bits of paper, the man said, "Four and sixpence, if you please, miss." "What for?" "Why, for going first-class, when yer only had a second-class ticket." "But we are a party. We do travel first-class—don't you know?" "Oh, yes—that's all right."

On deck we were subjected to the scrutiny of the customs officials, or our luggage was, and after much delay we boarded a train and started for London, thirty-seven miles distant, without any breakfast.

Faint, tired, and hungry we were when we arrived at Victoria station, but after we found our London home, at 37 Bedford place, and had some breakfast, we felt like ourselvs again.

London! busy, bustling, rushing, stirring London—how can I describe it? How can anyone? It is a world in itself. "Well, it does beat all!" said an old gentleman, standing in Piccadilly circus and watching the great tide of humanity as it swayed and surged and swept along like the ocean waves. You watch the people as they swarm in the busy parts of London, this way and that, in and out, here and there, until you are dizzy, and you wonder where they all come from, where they all go, where they sleep and where they eat. You feel the multiplied heart-beats of the populace, the moving, surging sea of men and women, and you know that underneath this strong, strange, billowy mass there are chords of love and tenderness, hopes and fears, joys and heartaches, toil, trial, and trouble—ah, so much, so much.

It seems so strange to be here amid the localities and spots that hav made history so full and strange; to be in the very streets and roads that Dickens made so plain in the years gone by; to see old Newgate prison, Chancery lane, Charing Cross, Cheapside, Threadneedle street; and when you get into that part of Holborn christened "High"—"Igh Oborn," as the cabbies pronounce it—you involuntarily recall Hood's "Lost Heir," and you can understand the precise situation, and realize just how the heir did get lost, "all along of following a monkey and an organ," for an old organ-grinder with a monkey stands on yonder corner, with the children dancing around him.

You can see almost everything under the sun in London; and for a penny you can ride to almost anywhere.

Everybody visits the Tower of London, for history has made us familiar with it years ago. It was founded in the time of Cæsar, and from that day it has been a most striking figure. Instead of one great tower, the structure contains thirteen towers and covers over thirteen acres.

My heart ached as I looked up at the "Traitor's Gate," and at length passed into the Beauchamp Tower, where many a state prisoner has been kept in durance vile. In the White Tower I stood in the cell where Sir Walter Raleigh lived, or staid, rather, for twelve years, and here wrote the "History of the World."

In front of this cell in the area is where the head of Essex was severed from his body.

We stood in the little narrow cell where Sir Thomas Moore was once imprisoned with not a ray of light, and not far away is the deep, dark dungeon, totally dark, where the four hundred were at one time crowded to die by inches. This dreadful dungeon was called "Little Ease," and when a prisoner died here it was said that "he had died by the hand of God."

Here was where Sir Thomas Wise was confined, and it is said, with what truth I know not, that a cat brought him a pigeon every day, and this kept him from starvation. He managed to come from this dungeon alive, and afterward adopted the figure of a cat for his coat-of-arms. Not far from this subterranean hole was what was known as the "torture chamber," and we fancied almost that we heard the groans of the victims as they were subjected to horrors too revolting to believe. Blood seems to be dripping from the wall, and oh, how glad I was to emerge from the gloomy place. We next visited the "Bloody Tower," and entered the room over the entrance gate, where the little princes were smothered by order of their cruel uncle, Richard III. Blood, blood seemed everywhere and at every step. Here, a little outside, was designated the spot where Anne Boleyn was executed in 1536. And as soon as the dread deed was accomplished, a gun was fired from the ramparts of the tower to announce to her brutal husband that all was over. He was hunting at the time in Epping forest, and the next morning married Jane Seymour. And here, too, was where Lady Jane Grey laid her head upon the executioner's block, saying simply, "I pray you, sir, dispatch me quickly." She was the victim of "Bloody Mary."

Here, too, was enacted the scene of the tragedy of the countess of Salisbury, seventy years old. She would not put her head upon the block. "I am no traitor," she said, and though she struggled for her life, her murderers dragged her by her gray hair, and held her till the ax had done its work, and the tyrannical brute, Henry VIII., had satisfied his thirst for her best blood.

We had but lately seen Henry Irving and Ellen Terry in the play of "Henry VIII." at the Royal Lyceum Theater, and with all the enormities and sins of that sensual reprobate fresh in mind, I could not omit passing censure upon the deeds he did while in the body.

The emblems of royalty, all of gold and precious jewels, are kept in a glass case in the Tower, a perfect blaze of glitter and gay display. Better, far better, to melt the gold and sell the gems and feed the poor, the wretched, miserable dependants, who stay and fester in the reeking abodes of London.

I can only devote a brief space to the places and sights I see, for to particularize would take many pages.

All of you hav heard of Westminster abbey. One day I went with others to visit this great Gothic pile of stone. Well, it is beautiful, with its arched and lofty ceilings, its armorial bearings and carvings, masses of exquisit traceries, ornamented panels and pillars, stained glass and dimly lighted aisles. But, honestly, I do not see why Americans should go into such rhapsodies over Westminster abbey as some do. I don't see the sense of it. Of course the royal dust is buried here, but the same is now no different from that of the hirelings who did the most menial service for the kings and queens of England, not a bit. The "Poet's Corner" interested me most of all. There I stood with reverence and respect. Here is the bust of Dryden, the medallion portrait of "rare Ben Jonson," a statue of Campbell and Addison. Here we were, on every side, with reminders of poets, authors, actors, musicians, a bright array indeed. We looked in vain for a tablet of Byron, but his countrymen hav refused him a place among their honored dead.

The bust of Burns smiled upon us, and Shakspere, great and grand like a king, towered over all. A modest slab marks the resting-place of Robert Browning, though his wish was to be buried alongside of his own beloved Elizabeth Barrett. In a conspicuous niche is the marble bust of our own Longfellow, and an inscription tells that it was placed there by English admirers of the American poet. Some friend had that morning left on the shelf beneath the bust a lovely bouquet of sweet peas, mignonet, and ferns. It so chanced that I carried that day some roses and forget-me-nots, and I added them to the flowers already near the imaged marble of our honored poet.

It was a gala evening when I visited the Crystal Palace, and I thought when there what a pleasure it would be to hav you all with me. What a time we would hav wandering over the lovely terraced park and inspecting the magnificent palace of glass. There was an organ concert that evening, illuminations, and fireworks. You can form some idea of the magnitude of the place when I tell you there were no less than twenty thousand people upon the grounds and nobody was crowded. The colored lights made it like fairyland, as they glimmered and glittered among the trees and playing fountains. I had seen Paris by gaslight, and it was wond rful, but the illuminated Crystal Palace and grounds I hav not seen surpassed.

London is rich in its parks and open spaces, in pure water, in clean streets, and thus, for all its grime and smoke, for all its crowded thoroughfares and its six millions of people, it is a healthy and attractiv city.

I omitted to say that in my visit to Westminster abbey I failed to find in the Poet's Corner any reference whatever to the poet Chatterton, although I had been told that his remains were taken from the pauper's grave in Shoe lane and buried there. It is not so. The "marvelous boy," as Wordsworth called him, he who was made to represent the type of suffering and unrequited genius by Alfred de Vigny in one of his finest dramas, and to whom Keats dedicated his "Endymion," has no place of honor that I could find in Westminster. Poor Chatterton, dying of starvation in a garret, but brave and proud to the last, he valued neither the praise nor censure of the multitude. He said,

What I think right I ever will pursue,
And leave you liberty to do so, too.

And no doubt it is the Narrow notions,

Notions which disgrace
The boasted reason of the human race, that kept the name of Chatterton from the list of honor in the old abbey. Yet, as I told you before, the dust of royalty is here, and the effigies of kings and queens in marble are on every side. Looking upon the statue of Queen Elizabeth, in pointed bodice and high ruff, I was reminded of her words in her last days. She sat muttering: "Mortua sed non sepulta"—"Dead, but not buried—tired of being a queen, and tired, so tired of life." It is not so fine to be a queen, after all, although Victoria appears to hav an easy enough time, and is apparently greatly beloved by her people.

The houses of Parliament are always an attraction. The new palace of Westminster is a splendid piece of architecture. It has eleven hundred rooms, one hundred staircases, and two miles of corridors. Think of it! The lord chancellor's seat is called the "woolsack," because stuffed with wool, and only the lord chancellor must sit upon it.

In the eighteen niches and at either end of the room of the House of Lords are statues of those brave fellows, the barons who made King John grant the famous Magna Charta. The lower house, or House of Commons, is not as magnificent as the House of Lords, but still does very well.

There is a gallery for strangers and ladies, but the one for the latter has a screen of iron bars, nobody knows for what reason, unless they thought the ladies might jump over and take part in some of the debates unless held back by iron. To me it is emblematical of the subjection in which many would retain women if they could. But the star of woman is in the ascendant, and bolts and bars are being melted in the sun of enlightenment and justice.

I had the pleasure of listening the other evening, at a temperance meeting which was presided over by Canon Leigh, to a member of Parliament who has recently been elected as a representativ of the working people, himself a miner.

One is constantly impressed with the vastness of London. But then the city dates away back to the first century. It was taken by the Romans under Claudius, and evidences of the conquest still remain—old Roman coins hav here been found, and remnants of the old Roman walls still survive the changes wrought by time. Boadicea, brave woman, led the Britons, who took the city in A.D. 61, and burnt it.

For more than a thousand years London has been famous, and so it will always be.

At this season, Londoners are out of town, but still the city seems crowded. At popular places one can hardly make his way through the jostling crowds. A strangely busy place is London at all seasons.

You hav read of the "palladiums of English liberty." They are said to be found in the four inns of court—Inner Temple, Middle Temple, Lincoln's and Gray's Inns. The great tribunals called justice are held here; then there are other courts, as that of the common pleas, probate and divorce courts, and poor debtors' court, etc. How much justice is dealt out here is more than I can say.

The Bank of England is called "The Old Lady of Threadneedle street." You may hav some idea of its size when I tell you it covers over nearly four acres, and employs over a thousand persons.

One day I drove out to Hampton Court palace—the gift of poor Cardinal Wolsey to Henry VIII. Jane Seymour lived here and Catharine Howard, as wives of Henry, and here the old wretch married his sixth wife, Catharine Parr. Charles II. was at this place at the time of the plague in London. It is a delightful place, the great rooms filled with paintings, some fine and others mediocre.

In the great Gothic hall, which Wolsey designed and Henry VIII. finished when Anne Boleyn was queen, was enacted, in 1718, Shakspere's great play of "Henry VIII." Here is his portrait, Wolsey's, Queen Elizabeth's, and those of other notables.

The gardens are not less but more attractiv than the old palace. Here is the great grape-vine, over a hundred years old and loaded with grapes of the Hamburg variety. These are all for the queen, and neither love nor money can purchase one till after she has had the first taste.

Here is the "maze," an intricate and oddly designed hedge-walk, the hedge seven feet high, and if you do not mind instructions you are sure to be lost amid its intricacies. The views and lakes and walks in all directions at Hampton are lovely indeed; but I do not care to liv always amid its attractions, however.

Another day was spent at Windsor castle—not as the guest of the queen, you know, for she is now at Osborne. It is an old stone building, just like the pictures you hav seen of it. Cromwell used to liv there. The state apartments are always open to visitors, but they are repetitions of similar ones seen before, with some variations.

One can look at the stables too, but we hav finer horses in America than these royal beasts. The "home park," so called, at Windsor contains only about five hundred acres, but the view across it is fine; so also is the view from the round tower of the castle. England pays big sums to support its royal family.

In the afternoon of the day we were at Windsor we drove out to Stoke Pogie, the little country churchyard where Thomas Gray, the poet, lies buried. The day was pleasant and we wandered at our pleasure about the old place, leaned over the tomb of Gray, where he lies buried with his mother and sister, and sat under the yew tree's shade of which he speaks in the "Elegy." This tree, which has grown to an enormous size, is more than seven hundred years old. We pulled some of the bark for a memento, and then went into the old-fashioned church and took a seat in the private room where the family of William Penn, in the old days, was accustomed to occupy. Sculptured skulls were on the walls, and many strange devices, but I did not feel at all religious, and I suspect the old sexton was shocked at my worldly remarks.

It was quiet out there in the churchyard; the folks there hav to be quiet. The birds sang as they flitted overhead; there were wide spaces, grass, and flowers; the sky was blue, and we were out of the London smoke. I enjoyed the scene and the hour.

Nobody will omit seeing the Kew gardens. I was forcibly reminded of Chatterton's allusions to them as I walked amid the profusion of flowers and trees in that lovely spot. I suppose these are the finest botanical gardens in the whole world. There is a collection of plants from every part of the world. The exotics in the great palm house are wonderful to look upon. The great winter-garden is very attractiv, and besides the numerous conservatories, there are three detached buildings called the Museum of Economic Botany. Among the flower-beds are some of the old-fashioned flowers arranged after the style of our grandmothers' gardens. It is all free to the public, and many people roam about the extensiv grounds every day.

When I left home a gentleman in Boston asked me to take a book to Mrs. Ernestine L. Rose as a present from him. On reaching London I found that Mrs. Rose was lying very near to death in Brighton, and unable to see anyone except her physician and nurse. A few days after she died. The funeral was private and only brief remarks were made at the grave. I went out to Highgate, the cemetery where she lies buried, reaching the spot just after the attendants had departed. The grave had not been filled in and I looked down upon the casket that held all that was mortal of a brave and talented lady, one who in her life was true to truth and who struck many valiant blows at the tyrant, Superstition. Near by the ashes of Austin Holyoake repose, and a few steps onward is the plain, unpretentious grave of George Eliot. This simple inscription marks the spot:

"Of those immortal dead who liv again in minds made better by their presence."
Here lies the body
of
"GEORGE ELIOT"
(MARY ANN CROSS).
Born 22d November, 1819,
Died 22d December, 1880.

We must all come to this, and well it is if we can say at last, "We leave the world somewhat better than we found it." We turned reluctantly away after taking a handful of the English clay from the grave of Mrs. Rose to carry to America. We did not see her living, but were the last to look upon her body at Highgate cemetery. We passed the grave of Michael Faraday as we went. There are few trees at Highgate, and it is not so lovely there as in our American cemeteries. One old tree near a grave cost the owner of the lot £500 to hav it remain there.

Perhaps nowhere in the world is there so much vice and crime as in London, and yet it may not be worse than in other parts according to the population. The "slums"—appropriate term—reek with the horrors of ignorance and filth. I hav been into the Whitechapel district and marked the phases of life there. One Sunday morning I went into "Petticoat Lane." I wish you had been with me. This is the quarter given up to the Jews, and on Sunday they are out with all the wares you can think of. Such a babel of voices! Such a crowded thoroughfare! Such faces! Oh! everything for sale—old clothes and new ones; silver watches for a shilling, trousers for a penny—such as they are—bottles, knives, spoons, files, saws, and second-hand pipes for smokers! Bonnets, stovepipes, beads, jackets, ale and beer, worn-out shoes, and dirty stockings! Well, it was a sight. Thieves and pickpockets, fried fish and raw fish, cakes and old harness, dolls and donkeys, hams and suspenders, shoestrings and tarts! Well, it was great on a Sunday morning. A man offered a pocket-handkerchief, crying, "Only a penny, ma'am, only a penny!" It looked like my own handkerchief, and sure enough mine was missing, but when my pocket was picked is more than I can tell. I was wise, however, to leave my watch and pocketbook in my room, or my loss might hav been greater.

As an offset to the vices of London, charitable and helpful institutions hav arisen on every side. The "People's Palace," right in the very heart of misery, is a glorious undertaking and is doing vast good. Another is Dr. Barnardo's system of homes for homeless children, starting twenty-two years ago with one or two children, and now grown to the number of three thousand children who are cared for, taught trades and made into good citizens. It was a great pleasure to go over the central institution of Dr. Barnardo's, here in London, and see the children rescued from sin and shame.

Of course, drink is the great curse of London as elsewhere, but there are workers for temperance and sobriety, trying to show the people how to liv healthfully and truly. A meeting at Hackney was very enjoyable. It was a reception to Mr. W. Jennings Demorest and Madam Demorest, of New York. Mr. Demorest, who is a millionaire, offers silver, gold, and diamond medals to the best declaimers of temperance speeches. As there is nothing sectarian about the matter, our Freethought temperance societies should engage in this contest. Mr. Demorest and his handsome wife are doing grand work among the youth of the world, having distributed twenty-three thousand medals in America alone, and are ready to respond to calls from the uttermost parts of the earth.

When one has leisure, if he ever does find it in London, he can visit Bunhill graveyard and see the last resting-place of that tired pilgrim, John Bunyan, old Isaac Watts, the hymn-maker, and Daniel De Foe, who has delighted the hearts of quite as many, if not more, with his Rob Crusoe, than the verse-maker with his religious rhymes. In the same cemetery there lies "Dame Mary Page, Relict" (who would be a relict?) "of Sir Gregory Page, Bart. She departed this life March 11, 1728, in the fifty-sixth year of her age. In sixty-seven months she was tapped sixty-six times; had taken away two hundred and forty gallons of water without ever repining at her case or ever fearing the operation." Was not this a wonderful relic(t)?

Across the street from this burial-place is the grave of John Wesley and his life-sized monument. "The World Is My Parish" is the simple inscription upon it, and just back of it is the little chapel where he used to preach, with the house where he lived in the same yard. But I hav written enough for this time. Good night.

S. H. W.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.

Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents, MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Small fees; valid patents with broad claims; letters of inquiry promptly answered.

For FREE pamphlet, PATENT LAWS address Commissioner of Patents, Washington, D. C.

We hav been informed by o d inventors and experienced patentees, who employ this solicitor, that he is skilful.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By B. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED. A Work proving Christianity a Fiction. Most Startling Revelations of the Nineteenth Century Send Address for Prospectus to
ORIENTAL PUBLISHING CO., P.O.Box 446, Philadelphia, Pa.

To Regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABULES.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

News of the Week.

JOHN G. WHITTIER is dying.

BERLINERS are agitating for repeal of the law which permits only five hours' work on Sunday.

THE directors of the World's Fair are considering postponement for a year on account of the cholera in Europe.

GLADSTONE'S refilling the post of Master of the Royal Buckhounds is disapproved by many who condemn the chase as cruelty.

TALMAGE preached in London last Sunday on Noah's ark. This craft, he said, was of just the size of the Teutonic, Majestic, City of Paris, and City of New York combined.

ON Sedan day, the German holiday to celebrate a victory over the French, the religious ceremonies in Germany were limited to services petitioning God to withdraw the cholera.

CHOLERA has narrowly been prevented from catching in New York city. Three steamers carrying cases of it hav been detected, and are being detained in the Lower Quarantine.

THE board of health of Hamburg, Germany, has traced the infection of that city to a Russian immigrant camp, from which refuse water got into the river Elbe, near the Hamburg waterworks.

THE Standard, founded by Henry George, has suspended. It gave up the ghost, says Mr. Post, its last owner, "simply because the men who had been contributing money for it got tired of putting up."

CHOLERA continues to ravage Russia. A soldier in the Russian army has written to a friend in Boston: "The people are carried away with a frenzy of superstition and go about from town to town bearing huge crosses aloft and singing as they march, believing that such ceremonies will drive the plague away."

AT Monticello, N. Y., Joseph Heidt has been convicted of killing his uncle, George Markert. Joseph and his father believed George to practice witchcraft and by this means to hav killed their cattle and harmed them otherwise. Joseph asked him to remove the spell, and hard words passed, whereupon he killed the uncle.

BERLIN Socialists are placarding walls with posters ridiculing the anti-cholera directions of the authorities. One reads: "How can the proletariat of Berlin, living as they do from hand to mouth, obey the official orders? How can they eat nourishing food? How can they boil water? Food and fuel cost money. The workingmen are on the verge of starvation, and hav not the money to spare."

A WRITER from the Eastern countries through which the cholera passed into Russia says: "In Persia no panic prevails, for the people look upon the epidemic as a visitation from God, and, with the calm indifference which characterizes the Orientals, bury their dead with a callousness that would lead a stranger to conclude that they were without hearts. No attention is paid in Persia to sanitary laws."

TALTON HALL was hanged at Wise Court House, Va., on the 2d, for murder. He was said to hav committed ninety-nine murders, and certainly had perpetrated half that number. A dispatch describing his prison-life says: "He joined the Catholic church, and he always received the preachers who came to see him. Still he was bitter against his enemies, and he said that if executed, several of them would pay the penalty of his death."

THE mayor of Oberammergau, Switzerland, writes that no one there will go to Chicago to produce the Passion Play. He says: "More than two hundred and fifty years ago our ancestors solemnly pledged themselvs to produce the Passion Play every ten years in grateful remembrance of their having been spared from the pest then raging, and this vow was always faithfully kept by us. Nothing is further from our thoughts than instituting productions of the Passion Play besides those given every ten years."

LIEUTENANT TOTTEN has made over his property to his wife, in a document containing the clause, "should I apparently disappear." Asked what this means, he said: "The time will come when you will hear of some person, it may be in your own family, who has gone, and no trace can be found of them. You will wonder, and the first you know some other person in some other family will also be missing. Disappearances will become common, and no one can explain them. You will see crowds of people flocking about the churches and asking themselvs what is happening, but they cannot explain the mystery. It is mostly the fulfillment of the prophecies that are laid down in the Bible."

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.
Loeb & Loeb, Montgomery.
Arizona.
J. S. Mansfield, Tucson.
California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 117 W. 1st, Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 102 N. Main, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Thos. W. Baker, Selma.
L. R. Titus, 237 South 4th st., San Jose.
Canada.
P. C. Allen, 35 King st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
John McKenna, 80 Yonge st., Toronto.
R. J. Moffat, Sea Island, Tulu Island, B.C.
Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.
C. Smith & Son, 385 Larimer st., Denver.
Stanchfield & Co., 200 Union ave., Pueblo.
Harbottle & Co., Salida.
Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.
A. J. Gardner, Kissimmee.
Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.
Illinois.
Post-Office News Co., 93 Adams, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., 204 Wabash ave., Chicago.
Chas. W. Curry, 183 Madison st., Chicago.
Chas. Macdonald, 55 Washington, Chicago.
Indiana.
H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.
A. C. Katt, Fort Wayne.
Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne, New Orleans.
Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Baker & Holton, 87 Woodward av., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Minnesota.
E. P. Parcher, 8 3rd st., So. Minneapolis.
Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.
Nebraska.
J. M. Wiley, P. O. News Depot, York.
New York.
Brentano Bros., 5th ave. & 18th st., N. Y.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
Abramowitz Bros., 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., N.Y.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.
E. J. Nieuwland, 10th ave. and 157th st.
Anderson & Co., 704 8th ave.
S. M. Bernhard, 119 E. 104th st.
Harlem Book Co., Boulevard Hotel, 124th st. and Lexington ave.
Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 342 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
B. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Day & Co., 259 Superior, Clevel'd.
Alf. Warren Co, 217 Central ave, Cincinnati.
Thos. Goddard, Box 235, Huron.
Standard News Co., 14 W. Tusc st, Canton.
Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 291 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.
G. Thornton, Palace Hotel Block, Heppner
Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden, Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
R. Staley, Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.
Fulton Bros., McKeesport.
Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.
Tennessee.
W. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry, Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.
Rich Bros. & Mills, 229 N. Cherry, Nashville
Texas.
H. Hover, Denison.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 346½ Main st., Dallas.
G. W. Baldwin, Houston.
E. L. Merrill, Independent Pulpit, Waco.
Utah.
C. H. Parsons, 164 S. Main, Salt Lake City.
Margetts Bros., 76 Main st., Salt Lake City.
Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
J. C. Nathan, 104 S. 2nd st., Seattle.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.
West Virginia.
News Store, 123 3rd st., Parkersburg.
England. [London.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st.,
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.
Australia.
W Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.
New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Price, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

A LARGE mass of error is easily embalmed and perpetuated by a little truth. —Mackay.

No one e'er could comprehend
How soul and body so completely blend,
Together hold, as ne'er to part, while they
Torment each other throughout the live-long day. —Goethe.

IT is always those who incur the gravest suspicion of having no soul at all who kick up the biggest fuss about their soul and make the biggest rustling among the Bible leaves in order that it may be "saved."—Saladin in God and His Book.

MEN (as all philosophers of antiquity hav said) made God in their own image: which is the reason why the first Anaxagoras, as ancient as Orpheus, expresses himself thus in his verses: "If the birds figured to themselvs a God, he would hav wings; that of horses would run with four legs."—Voltaire.

IF Christians habitually looked at themselvs, and at the followers of foreign religions, from the same point of view, there would be much less exultation over their own superiority. If the Koran declared that God said to Mohammed: "Smite Amalek. Destroy utterly all that they hav, and spare them not; but slay man woman, infant and suckling," the text would doubtless hav been quoted thousands of times by theologians, to prove the cruelty of Moslems, and the improbability that such a command came by Divine inspiration.—Lydia Maria Child.

THE presence of the devil in theology has been a frequent cause of confusion and perplexity, which has ever kept the pot of disputation boiling with seething intensity. If the devil was God, then who was God? Rip Van Winkle's perplexity after twenty years of sleep, as to "Who the devil am I?" is no more bewildering. If God was the creator, and his sway was universal, his power omnipotent and his omnipresence over all, then where was there room for the devil in the material or spiritual world? Among the primitiv theologians this metaphysical problem did not awaken any disturbance. The dictum of authority was sufficient. The council had declared that Satan existed, and was the corypheus of hell, leading all his hosts against God and his earthly children. This was sufficient. If no one could answer the ethical and metaphysical problem this strange antagonism between two great gods gave rise to, it was enough that there was a lesson to learn, no matter whether true or false, whether consistent or confused, and there were a plenty of eager shallow-pates which speedily adopted it for their mental furniture. As Miss F. P. Cobbe says: "It was some satisfaction, at least, to be sure that the earth rested on an elephant, and the elephant on a tortoise, even though nobody could conjecture on what the tortoise might stand." But notwithstanding this complacent acquiescence on the part of the primitiv Christians, this same question has come up ever and anon before the courts of common-sense, and demanded an answer.—Henry Frank.

NOT only is man's existence on the earth limited in time, but so also is his distribution in proportion to the extent of the earth's surface, of which only a comparativly small part may be turned into fairly comfortable dwelling-places. By far the greatest part of the earth's surface consists of deserts of water, sand, and ice. Two-thirds of it are covered with water, and of the remaining third some parts only are suited for men to dwell in. Even these as a rule cannot be inhabited without toilsome cultivation and a permanent ruinous struggle against unfavorable natural conditions and against hunger, disease, climate, wild beasts, etc. Why should so many wasted sunbeams brood daily over the huge sandy solitudes of Africa, while the poor and miserable men of the Polar regions are pining away in semi-darkness and everlasting cold? Why should there be drouth in one place, and inundations in another? why famin in one and superabundance in another? why fertility here, and barrenness there? Why should frost, rain, vermin, the scorching heat of the sun and other similar agencies destroy whatever man, struggling for dear life, imagins that he has wrung from the elements by gigantic exertions and superhuman efforts? Must not he be actually bereft of his senses who seriously contends that the earth has been fitted up by an allwise and all-merciful providence as a becoming dwelling-place for man? Only by the uttermost exertion of his physical and mental faculties is man enabled to eke out a bare existence on earth, jeopardized all the while by thousands of dangers. And these faculties of his were not bestowed on him by a benevolent creator, but are the final result of a slow and toilsome evolution by natural means.—Büchner.

Valuable Books on Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞ Catalogues Free. ☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,

Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,

Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore

Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Cleveland Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 8 P.M., in Room 208 City Hall, for lectures and free discussion on science, religion, and social questions. Able speakers will interest the audience. A. SEE, Pres.; J. ROSENBURG, Sec., 425 Lake street.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by

DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony. 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, New York.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, - - 40 cents.

J.D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,
Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BEST:

THE

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 3-ounce coin silver, $22; 4-ounce, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $31 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7.50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $15; 11 jewels, $16.50; 15 jewels, $23; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3.60, knives, $1.75; forks, $1.75; all for $6. Solid silver spoons, $1.50 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2.75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Extra heavy teas, $3. Etched:
"The Time to be Happy is Now,"
50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2.75, and $3.50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.

Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

A BOOK FOR MEN.

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.

Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS, Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

AN UNRELIABLE SORT OF A GOD.

Who gave Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the robbers? did not the Lord, he against whom we hav sinned? for they would not walk in his ways, neither were they obedient unto his law.—Isa. xlii, 24.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? AustinBierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50
21.	History of Religion. E. E. Evans	20

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth $1 00.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book.

It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY and RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

THE

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON. WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

6	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
3	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
5	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Result
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
20	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
5	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 38. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, September 17, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

HOW THEY BRING THE LORD TO TERMS IN MEXICO.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A HISTORY OF RELIGIONS.

BEING

A Condensed Account of the Results of Scientific Research and Philosophical Criticism.

By Elizabeth B. Evans.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Telcology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth - - - - - 50 cents.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Life of Thomas Paine,

WITH A

History of His Literary, Political, and Religious Career in America, France, and England.

By MONCURE DANIEL CONWAY,

Author of "Omitted Chapters of History Disclosed in the Life and Papers of Edmund Randolph," "George Washington and Mount Vernon," "Washington's Rules of Civility," etc.

To Which Is added a Sketch of Paine by William Cobbett.

No real biography of Paine has ever appeared. The so-called Lives of Paine have been mainly the controversial work of pamphleteers, turning chiefly on his religious heresies. Paine was in his fifty-eighth year before he published anything concerning religion, and before that time he had acted an important part in revolutionary movements in the United States, England, and France. But in the religious conflict initiated by him, his political services and military career hav been but inadequately considered. A certain historical ostracism has buried in the archives of various countries a large mass of documents containing records of paramount interest and importance. Mr. Conway has personally searched such records, in Europe and America, and has obtained from these fresh light, not only on Paine, but on various eminent figures in American and European history with whom he was associated. A large amount of unpublished correspondence has been included in the volumes.

Mr. Conway says in his Preface: "In the laborious work of searching out the real Paine I hav found a general appreciation of its importance, and it will be seen in the following pages that generous assistance has been rendered by English clergymen, by official persons in Europe and America, by pers ns of all beliefs and no beliefs. In no instance have I been impeded by any prejudice, religious or political. The curators of archives, private collectors, owners of important documents bearing on the subject, have welcomed my effort to bring the truth to light."

Two vols., royal oct., gilt top, portraits, $5.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50: in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents Address this office.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c. 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 80c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3 00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price. $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Order of Creation,

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE

HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 38. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, September 17, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - SEPTEMBER 17, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

Religious Treason.

We call attention to these principles of the National Reform Association, commonly called the God-in-the-Constitution party, set forth by the Rev. J. M. Foster, one of the most prominent of the Sabbatarians of the country, in the Christian Statesman of August 13th. They set forth that party's idea of the relation of church and state:

"1. According to the scriptures church and state are mutually separate and independent divine institutions.

"The church's sphere is the conscience and the heart. She deals with matters of belief. The moral law is both a civil and an ecclesiastical code. In the former sense the state is its keeper; in the latter, the church. It is the state's duty to suppress open idolatry, as Asa did in Judah; it is the church's privilege to enforce the worship of the true God within her pale. It belongs to the state to punish blasphemy, to the church to sanctify God's holy name. It belongs to the state to prohibit all public Sabbath desecration; it is obligatory upon the church to consecrate the day to God. The state must crush polygamy and banish speedy and easy divorce and prohibit the 'social evil.' The church teaches husbands to love their wives—wives to obey their husbands. The state punishes the external act of covetousness; the church strikes it down in the heart with the sword of the spirit. The church and state are mutually separate and independent provinces of Christ's dominion, each subject in its sphere to the mediatorial throne.

"2. According to the scriptures, the state in its sphere exists for the sake of, and in the interest of the church.

"Not to mention the fact that Christ is 'head over all things to his church,' it is expressly asserted, 'kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and their queens thy nursing mothers;' 'the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted;' 'the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it.' The general truth here taught is not far to seek. 'Mountains' and 'hills' in scripture signify the greater and smaller kingdoms of the earth. 'The mountain of the Lord's house' means the church; and to 'be established in the top' of the one and 'exalted above' the other indicate that the nations shall be the support and defense of the church. Kings becoming 'nursing fathers' and queens 'nursing mothers' refer to the sustaining care which nations shall exercise over the church, and 'serve' signifies the ministry of the nations in providing for her material wants. The essential truth of these prophecies is, the true state will hav a wise reference to the church's interests in all her legislativ, executiv, and judicial proceedings. The expenses of the church in carrying on her public aggressiv work it meets in whole or in part out of the public treasury. Thus the church is protected and exalted by the state.

"3. According to the scriptures, the church and the state will exist in friendly recognition and cooperation.

"Because the state is distinct from the church it does not follow that it is divorced from her. The Christian family is a divine institution. It is independent of the church, and yet it exists in friendly recognition and coöperation with her. The church will recognize the good offices of the Christian state, and the true state will formally acknowledge its obligation to serve the church. They may swear the same covenant bond, in which are embodied the duties which each in its sphere owes to the king of kings. The nation and church of Israel seem to hav sworn the same bond at Sinai. The church of the British Isles and the three kingdoms—Scotland, England, and Ireland—swore the same covenant in 1643, 'the solemn league and covenant.' Our nation is under as much obligation to acknowledge the Lord Jesus Christ in her constitution as the church is in her creed."

This platform of principles stops short of being practical treason in only that its advocates cannot use force to make it law. But it is a distinct declaration that the Sabbatarians desire a solid union of church and state, with the state subordinate, and but a nursing father to the church—that is, a father looking solely to the welfare of his child and abnegating his own individuality. Mr. Foster drew up this platform immediately after the Congressional vote on the World's Fair as a further program and guide for his party.

Freethinkers should take notice, and act accordingly.

Cholera and Christianity.

The pest of cholera has reached our shores from plague-stricken Hamburg, and dozens of ships are quarantined in the lower bay, while their immigrant passengers are taken ashore and fumigated.

The scourge is being dealt with in an intelligent and practical way, and there seems to be no danger that it will reach land. But it is, to an unbeliever in divine providence, not a little satisfactory to see how completely the believers in the Lord and his watchful care rely upon sanitary measures to check its spread instead of upon prayer and faith. While they are always iterating and reiterating that the Lord looks after his own, that he always knows what is good for man, and saying when death does come that it answers Jehovah's inscrutable purpose, and is all for the best, these good Christians look to disinfecting processes, cremation of cholera-infected clothes and corpses, and quarantine of exposed persons, to save them from a calamity which if it did strike them they would claim to be of the Lord's sending and therefore beneficent. Even our pious president did not depend upon his Lord in this case, but hurriedly called a cabinet meeting and issued a proclamation quarantining incoming steerage passengers for twenty days. The Christians of to-day hav mighty little faith in their Almighty Jehovah.

The religious press also forgets to tell the people to depend on the Lord to stay the pestilence. They say that we shall probably escape it; but their reasons are not what one might expect from such devout and God-fearing and God-depending folks as religious editors. Instead of looking to escape through the goodness of God, or the virtues of the Virgin Mary, or the divine beseechment of Jesus, they think we shall escape because "it is getting late in the season, cool weather has already set in, and we are fully organized to prevent its introduction and spread." So it seems that cool weather and sanitation, in their opinion, are more potent than the Lord, for of course he sends the plague or it wouldn't be here. If it does not come in they will say the Lord stopped it, or that the health officers' efforts, under the blessing of God, prevented it. But if it had reached these shores in midsummer, and had spread over the country, it would, on the other hand, hav shown that the cholera bacillus is, in hot weather, more powerful than Jehovah, or that he desired his chosen people to be afflicted by it. And in this case it is to be noted that God's chosen people are the dirtiest ones. So it strongly appears that the Christian appeal to and trust in sanitation instead of prayer, is, while being all-praiseworthy from the Infidel view, somewhat inconsistent with the professions of the believers.

The attitude of the Christians is in marked contrast with that assumed by them when they knew less but were better Christians than now; the value and sincerity of a Christian being measured by the amount he believes, the faith he has in God, and the corresponding lack of reliance in himself. As we pointed out in some timely editorials a few weeks since, the Christian, when he really was a Christian, believed that the Lord sent epidemics to punish Sabbath-breakers, blasphemers, and deniers of his Godship. The Christians of to-day do not believe such things—that is, no intelligent man does—but they still profess to believe that he did in Bible times, such as the epidemic that destroyed fourteen thousand seven hundred Israelites, and was arrested only by the high priest Aaron; the pestilence sent in retribution of David's wicked numbering of the people; the plague with which Jehovah menaces sinners, and the one described in Revelation. These they believe in because they are said to hav occurred long ago; they do not think such things possible now, as they hav learned something. Yet they hold that God is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. They also profess to believe that he answers prayer. Why, then, do they not pray to him instead of quarantining the stricken persons?

The treatment of this epidemic shows that faith is fast giving way to knowledge. The medicin men find fewer and fewer followers, and their incantations are laughed at. When Congressman Kilgore, of Texas, stood up in the House of Representativs and said that he had known a drouth to be concluded by a special prayer-meeting on the subject of rain, he created much mirth among his fellow-members. And any religious idiot who should propose prayer as a prophylactic, even, for cholera would be the scorn and butt of ridicule of the whole country. The religious idiots know this and wisely refrain from making such exhibition of themselvs.

The Religious Cashier.

The business of banking has reached such vast proportions that it is the motiv-power and financial heart of the nation. It draws the streams of money into its steel vaults at evening, and in the morning throws them out through all the arteries of trade with regular pulsations. Its power to draw back the next evening depends upon the confidence the financial public hav in its security for their wealth.

The latest inventions in time-locks, air-tight doors, and bars and bolts—the latest, best, and hardest quality of steel and all the elements of protection against fire and burglars—must be secured by the bank which hopes to succeed and hold the confidence of its patrons, else their money will be intrusted to other banks. Let the least breath of insecurity be whispered and how quickly the depositors will withdraw their money to another bank. Reforms in banking are continually being made, and new devices for protection are constantly being invented, displayed, and paraded before the people who deposit money as inducements for their confidence. The greatest reform, however, which has been made in banking during the present century is taking place now and will do much to restore the confidence of the public in banks generally. Honesty of the custodians of the funds intrusted to their care is of vastly more importance in successfully establishing and holding confidence than steel vaults or time-locks, and to establish and hold this confidence of honest purpose, it was thought for a long time that one of the most necessary precautions of safety, as well as a sure means of gaining the public confidence, was to place behind the counter a man proficient in leading the prayer-meeting. The Sunday-school superintendent was prized as a cashier. The people seemed to prefer that their money was in his keeping. If he could pray long and fervently on Sunday he would secure large deposits for his bank. If there was a rival bank in the same town, the leading banking institution was the one whose cashier was leader of the prayer-meeting. If he could look very pious and make his face long and solemn on "the holy Sabbath," he was a general favorit during the unholy week-days. The minister would recommend him to the innocent flock, and if he was possessed of a round, full, corpulent body and gold spectacles so much the more confidence was imposed in him. A favorit with the preacher he was a favorit with the people. But "a change has come over the spirit of our dream;" there has been a great awakening from the dream of security, until vast amounts of money hav been locked in safety-deposit boxes. The people hav been robbed by these pious hypocrits and frauds—millions hav been stolen and squandered by them—until it has become necessary to dismiss the religiously inclined cashier and servant of trust from the banks. Public confidence in him has become utterly destroyed, and not without good reasons. It is now looked upon as a suspicious circumstance for a cashier to pray. A bank can hardly do business if its cashier is superintendent of a Sunday-school. The people are not inclined to trust him with their money, and this state of affairs has well-nigh ruined the business in places. Their lack of confidence is fully confirmed by the records of bank crimes. Fully nine out of every ten embezzlements, forgeries, and robberies hav been committed by very pious ones, by the ones who hav made the longest and loudest supplications and the leaders of the church and Sunday-school.

At first this was a matter of great surprise, and the newspaper which made a "scoop" over its contemporaries would call attention in double-leaded headlines to the fact that the absconding or defaulting cashier was a leader of the church or a superintendent of the Sunday-school; but now it simply says, in effect, "He wore the usual garb of piety, and was an activ leader in ——— church." It is no longer a matter of surprise, but it would now be a surprise if the absconder did not wear the cloth of sanctity. While it is true that immense sums are locked up in safety-deposit vaults where there is no possibility of their being embezzled, it is a healthy state of affairs and is already compelling banks to use honest servants. A few years of honest dealing with the people will restore confidence and bring back into circulation millions of money which is now in hiding from these religious cashiers.

Our Brutal Ancestors.

The Twentieth Century says: "Puritanism in the days of its vigorous life was . . . worthy of respect on account of the sincerity with which it strove to realize its ideal theocracy."

That is to say, hanging heretics and witches and whipping the bare backs of women are acts to be respected because the perpetrators were sincere in the belief that they were doing the "Lord" a service.

On the same principle the Catholic church should be eulogized for killing millions of people. Philip the Second was remarkably sincere in his religious fanaticism. Torquemada, also, was a most sincere Christian—really pious, and believed he was doing his victims a real service in killing them so that the Lord could get their souls. But, for our part, we could never respect the men who murdered for opinion's sake, nor the spirit animating them.

Puritanism as understood was never worthy of anything but horror and disgust, and the Puritans religiously were a lot of human beasts. We should as soon think of respecting a pugilist as a Puritan.

The Democrats of Pittsburgh, Pa., hav made one of their campaign issues the repeal of the Sunday law of the state.

The supreme court of North Carolina will not hear arguments hereafter on Mondays. The object of this regulation is to keep the lawyers from having to travel on Sunday to reach the city in time for their cases on Monday.

The marriage of Mr. Charles Vernon Webb to Miss Luna E. Monroe occurred on the 4th inst. Miss Monroe is the daughter of the late Dr. J. R. Monroe, editor of the Ironclad Age, of Indianapolis, Indiana, and inherits much of the genius and wit that made her father so much admired and famous. She was activly engaged with her father in his work during his lifetime, and his friends and patrons will remember the many articles from her pen that appeared from time to time in his paper. Mr. and Mrs. Webb will liv in Pittsburgh. The Ironclad Age will in future be conducted by Mrs. Power, another daughter of the late J. R. Monroe.

The Chicago Herald is alive to the importance of keeping the World's Fair open on Sundays, and is circulating petitions calling upon Congress to repeal the Sunday-closing clause in the appropriation bill passed at the last session. The Herald says it "knows that if the Fair is closed on Sunday such closing will operate as a great handicap upon millions of workmen and their families, who will thus be deprived of the privilege of visiting the Exposition." And the Herald also "believes that the overwhelming sentiment of American citizenship is in favor of making the Fair in its broadest sense what it will purport to be, a World's Fair; and that in order that it may be this in truth there must be no puritanical prescription of the observance of any particular day as the Sabbath."

The United States Senate is a very religious and temperate body, as everybody knows, says the Philadelphia Telegraph, and therefore it would never do to insinuate that all the Senators who voted for Sunday closing of the Fair were not perfectly sincere, nor that there was the least hypocrisy in the vote for the liquor Prohibition amendment, which was afterward knocked out. The fact that the Senate has on occasions held sessions and worked on Sunday must not be allowed to count against this assumption of virtue, as such sessions hav always been a continuation of the legislativ day of Saturday. The fact that a large number of them do sometimes hav quiet little dinner parties on Sundays and that they get "biling" drunk on Sundays and on other days in the week, it would not be charitable to mention in this connection.

The San Francisco Wasp adds this to our information concerning the "agent" of the 'Frisco counterpart of Comstock's society: "The father of the girl seduced by the secretary of the Society for the Furtherance of Vice, Bennett, took a shot at the rapscallion the other night in Oakland and happily missed him. It may be asked why the failure of the irate parent's pistol to do its duty should be regarded as a fortunate occurrence, when such a shining mark as Secretary Bennett was the target. It is always a lucky mischance, however, when the bullet flies wide of its preferred destination, and thus stops the coroner from interfering in a job that properly belongs to the hangman." Of the same loathsome subject the Star says: "If the people of this state had a healthy moral sentiment on the subject, Bennett would not be shot, but he would be lashed from one end of the state to the other, and then back again. His vice-society associates, having whitewashed him and still retaining him as secretary, are accessories to his crimes, the common belief, according to the Oakland Times, being that he knows too much to permit of any other course by them than that adopted."

It was one of the dreams of the Freethinkers of this city a few years ago, when Science Hall was leased and used as a Liberal headquarters, to hav a theater where science and morality should be taught through stage representations. The dream is to be partially realized through the labors of Garrett P. Serviss, for many years night editor of the Sun, and known as one of the most accomplished astronomers of the country. The daily papers announce his retirement from journalism to devote his time to the development of the Urania Scientific Theater. Recently Mr. Serviss illustrated by means of a stereopticon a lecture called "A Trip to the Moon," and another, "From Chaos to Man," and the great success which greeted the productions here demonstrated to the satisfaction of the persons who had their money invested that such an undertaking was profitable, besides serving a great educational purpose. Negotiations were therefore opened with Mr. Serviss with a view to securing his permanent services in the establishment and management of the new scheme. Mr. Serviss has made arrangements to take hold of the work, and soon the theater will be allied to the Liberal press in disseminating scientific facts.

Chicago has long borne the reputation of being a godless city, given over to worldliness, and hustling for business rather than salvation. It has churches, of course, within its somewhat extensiv boundaries, but with the exception of the Roman Catholic sect, the congregations are small. These facts, apparent even to a casual visitor, led the Times of that city recently to institute a little religious census of its own, and what it found seems to shock it. The church of Christ, it declares, has lost ground, and is about seventy-five years behind the rest of the country. In one ward, with over thirty thousand inhabitants, there were but two hundred communicants; in another, with forty-one thousand population, only six hundred and fifty communicants. Commenting upon these figures one preacher admitted: "Chicago has less than half the average American percentage for evangelical church-members. She is about seventy-five years behind the country at large in this respect. One of the most alarming features of the case is that, as an almost invariable rule, the Protestant churches are numerous in proportion to the wealth found in their vicinage." In contrast with this poor showing of the evangelicals is the gain of the Roman Catholics. The Times says that this church "is growing with extraordinary rapidity, and Chicago is to-day, perhaps, the greatest Roman Catholic city in the world. Rome itself has but fifty-four parishes, while Chicago has ninety, and the Catholic population of Chicago is greater by one hundred and fifty thousand than the entire population of the Italian capital. Within five years fifty thousand Poles hav made Chicago their home, and they hav been added to the membership of the Catholic church." The Times is very much alarmed because the Protestants make such a poor showing, and frantically calls upon them to do something. The chances are, however, that Chicago will go on about as she has been going and nothing particular will happen because of it. The only thing in the figures which need alarm patriots is that Catholicism has increased to such an extent that it controls the city.

When the House was in committee of the whole on the state of the Union, having in consideration the civil Sunday bill, the Hon. William A. McKeighan, of Iowa, opposed the World's Fair appropriation, paying particular attention to the classical argument of the Hon. Mr. Brosius, who favored the grant. Incidentally Mr. McKeighan pointed a moral on honesty with this story about Colonel Ingersoll. "I was much diverted by the remarks of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Brosius]. The interesting recital of the sun kissing the hills (and things) was beautiful. He related to us the way in which Pericles caused the people of Athens to submit to exorbitant taxation by a cunning appeal to their pride. His remarks brought to my mind an incident of my war experience. It was my fortune to be a member of the Eleventh Illinois Cavalry during the late unpleasantness. It was told of Colonel Ingersoll that when on a certain occasion the chaplain was found in possession of a fine horse to which he had no good title, in law or morals, the colonel took him to task about it. The chaplain said: 'Why, colonel, Christ stole an ass on which to ride into Jerusalem.' 'But,' said the colonel, 'you are not Christ, that horse is not an ass, and we are not going to Jerusalem; and I advise you to take the animal back and restore him to his owner.' This House is not Pericles, we are not representing the people of Athens, this appropriation is not for a public building. The greatest glory of our government should be that every dollar taken from the people by taxation should be applied to the legitimate expenses of the government." Mr. McKeighan forgot to say whether the chaplain profited by the colonel's rebuke or not. But, at any rate, until the church expels that chaplain, if he be alive now, it ought to be a little careful what it says about the great Agnostic.

In the West.

News and Notes.

The Freethought Federation of America has been formed. Over one thousand members hav now been enrolled. Every seat in Madison Hall was occupied on Sunday afternoon and evening, September 4th. The proceedings were harmonious. There is no doubt as to the necessity of political action. The only question is, as to methods. The methods outlined in the call are in the main adopted. I gave my lecture on "Liberal Political Organization." This will be published and circulated. Its suggestions met with the approval of the conference.

I made my call without consultation with anyone, on the spur of the moment, aroused by the infamous action of Congress. The wide and splendid response to this call from all over the country shows that the same indignation at injustice pervades the Liberal ranks, and the same determination to overthrow the wrong.

With the stalwart band of one thousand Liberals already organized we shall go on to make one of the greatest and most powerful Freethought societies in the world. The object of this association is to intensify and make more successful every other organization and instrumentality now in existence devoted to the same ends.

The constitution and resolutions adopted will no doubt meet with the support of every Liberal.

Mr. Charlesworth at the evening session gave a brilliant lecture on "The Philosophy of Secularism." This is the first time I hav listened to our eloquent comrade. He is admirably fitted for the work to which he has been chosen. He has youth, energy, hope, thorough knowledge of our principles; he is a keen thinker; an able, graceful, and winning speaker. The audience was intensely interested in his exposition of constructiv Freethought and he was cheered to the echo. Knowing as I do the difficulties of the Liberal work—that we are on the frontier line and it needs peculiar talents to succeed, since we cannot follow old paths but must be making new ones continually, and new exigencies are ever pressing upon us—I feel that in Mr. Charlesworth we hav a man of insight, of courage, of determination, of loyalty, of eloquence, who will be an invaluable aid to Liberalism and who has before him a career of noble service. The Liberal field needs such men, for every day the mission of Freethought broadens and deepens.

Letters to the conference were read from Gustave Nelson, who givs a cordial welcome into the ranks of the International Federation; J. Spencer Ellis from across the line; John Maddock; Otto Wettstein; C. Beal, ex-president of Oregon Secular Union; J. Henry Schroeder, now president of that Union; C. F. Burgman, president San Francisco Secular Union, and others. Hundreds of letters were received from all over the country indorsing the movement, giving assurance of material aid, and promising that thousands of names will be added to the roll.

Now for work. The issue is right before us—the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday. This is all-important. We can succeed, I believe, but we must bend every energy to the conflict. Congress is now the battle-ground. I shall make Washington my headquarters during the coming session and devote my time to the repeal of the Sunday-closing act. It is necessary to be upon the ground and watch every movement of the enemy. It will require constant vigilance and hard work. I believe that three-fourths of the American people are in favor of opening the World's Fair on Sunday. Their voice must be heard in the halls of legislation and be victorious.

We intend to hav the greatest Freethought mass convention ever held in this country on the first Sunday after the opening of the Fair. We shall hav headquarters open every day, with a reading-room, books, papers, etc., and a cordial welcome will be given to every Freethinker. Then will come the International Congress of Liberals. The Federations of the Old World will join hands with the Federation of the New. A bright and glorious advance is before us, and success is assured.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

English Notes.

DEAR TRUTHSEEKERS: It is so long since I wrote you that I am almost ashamed to make a fresh start. Every consecutiv number of THE TRUTH SEEKER comes as a silent witness of my inconstancy. Well, the fault lies rather with the superabundance of work than with laziness. During the past six months Secularism has jumped like a frog in these parts and kept me very busy. It ought, all the same, to engross the attention of twenty bishops instead of a paltry one.

I am glad to read that you are catching hold of the same fever in the States and that Brothers Putnam and Charlesworth are going to lick you into shape. If the advice of an old stager is worth anything, you will back them up in their struggle and help them in every possible way. Isolated branches are like isolated teeth, good in their way, but not the best possible. Union and combination are the secrets of success in social life. Every Freethinker in every town and village should be gathered up into his own branch of the society; every town in every county should be federated into a county federation; every county federation be joined, as such, to each other into a state union, and the whole of the states should combine into a great United States National Secular Society. Why not? Americans hav enough grit in them to do it if they like. When they are thus united the national society secretary will need only to communicate with the secretaries of the state societies; these in their turn will set in motion the whole of the county federations in their states; the counties will show the way to the towns, and the towns will hurry up the individual members. Thus your Secular organization would be as complete as that of the German army.

At headquarters in England there is no sign of disturbance and the general work of the society is running smoothly along. Mr. G. W. Foote, our president, was in Manchester a week or two since, looking fairly well and hopeful, though considerably pulled down by his recent illness. The post of president of the National Secular Society is no sinecure, though entirely unpaid and even costly to its holder. Mr. Charles Watts was here, too, looking as bonny as ever and full of that quiet fun which ever characterizes him. Heaford was here not long since and speaks highly of the improved prospects of Secularism in the places he has visited.

I hav been amused lately with some innocent mistakes made by the dear Christians in Manchester. One good gentleman called in at our bookshop in Oxford street to see whether the Freethinker was edited by Mr. Foote the barrister. Of course it was not, but the good fellow made a purchase to see what it was all about. A lady in our city has a photograph of the president on her drawing-room whatnot, and a friend was surprised to find that although it was Mr. Foote it was not the great Barrington Foote, so well known to lovers of the stage.

Nor is it only Freethinkers who are thus mixed up. Our negro opponent, Celestine Edwards, has just invented a periodical called Lux. An old lady, particularly anxious to buy a copy, tried several news-agents to that end. One of them assured her that she must hav made some mistake in the matter; that there was no such name as Lux, but that there was a Luck and that must be the paper she wanted. Satisfied in a way, she went home full of information as to the latest horse-racing tips which she found in her Sporting Luck; but for the life of her she cannot make out how such a journal can be called a Christian Evidence paper, or how a Christian preacher can find it in his conscience to put in so much wickedness and so little theology. Last Sunday night I was asked if I had seen the newspaper "by a party of the name of Lux." "And of such is the kingdom of heaven!"

Your TRUTH SEEKER pictures continue to attract people to the bookshop. Unfortunately they do not buy, but they read all they can get at for nothing. Youngsters bring each other and explain the pictures the one to the other and enjoy a hearty laugh. Parsons look as sour as vinegar and women seem likely to go into hysterics. To make matters more pleasant, the proprietors hav had some big show-bills of their tracts painted in bright, showy colors and hav startled the good Christians out of their wits by displaying "God in a Box," "Was Jesus Insane?" and "The Wickedness of God" for a penny each. Folks hav evidently carried the blasphemy far and wide, and visitors come to see us as they might go to see the cathedral. "Look, there it is: 'God in a Box.' Isn't it awful? How could God get in a box? Let's buy one." Sometimes we are told we ought to be locked up, that the windows ought to be smashed, the shop shut up, and goodness only knows what else.

Our enemies are beginning to find that Mrs. Besant, in embracing Theosophy, has not become a Christian. Of course they are glad that she has left us, but they are equally mad that she has not joined them; therefore Theosophy is not the heaven-sent blessing it was at first considered to be by these blood-washed sinners.

During the past few weeks I hav had most cheering evidences of the revival of Freethought energies in this antiquated England of ours. Rochdale, a Lancashire town, in which the ancient stocks are still to be seen in close proximity to the large and venerable parish church, had fallen fast asleep. One day she bethought herself to waken a little; and she awoke. From that time her spacious town hall square rang with the voice of Freethought orators, and already the red stand which we borrow from our Socialistic friends is the great center of attraction whenever it is placed in position. Rochdale has a fine hall—once a chapel, like so many of our meeting-places—which must seat close on a thousand persons; and it has been decided to try and revive in the coming winter its departed glory. The wonder is why such lively citadels hav been allowed to die out. Secularism is undoubtedly on the increase, but Secular activity is not so in due proportion; and yet the churches are not making headway. I think it must be that Freethought doctrins hav so far penetrated society that the members of the nation hav almost unconsciously adopted our program. Witness the thousands upon thousands who regularly go away for the week's end (Saturday to Monday) and who disport themselvs beside the broad ocean without ever thinking to enter a church or chapel! Our workingmen's clubs hav their theatrical or musical entertainments, or even dances, in winter. Our Secular halls hav lectures or social evenings. Our churches are giving semi-secular services under the name of "Pleasant Sunday Afternoons," and Christians may break the whole Decalog so long as they retain church-membership and pay their blackjacks. What shall the harvest be?

So important has the work become that ordinary writing is out of the question and we hav been compelled to issue a small local paper to keep the districts well informed. The first number is very incomplete, because it takes secretaries a long while to wake up; but I think one Freethought Messenger will soon be as important to our north-country Englishmen as THE TRUTH SEEKER is to the United States of America. Yours fraternally,

Manchester, Aug. 20, 1892. SAM STANDRING.

The Chromo.

KANSAS CITY, KAN., Sept. 7, 1892.

TRUTH SEEKER CO.: If you will hav the chromo or lithograph referred to in last week's TRUTH SEEKER made, I will take two copies at 50 cents each. I hav no doubt as to your ability to sell several thousand copies, if it is well executed. T. J. TANNER, 1905 N. 6th st.

Freethought Organizations.

The Freethought Federation of America.

The call issued by S. P. Putnam to the Freethinkers of America to meet together in Chicago on Sunday, September 4th, was responded to by Freethinkers from several different states. Delegates from Iowa, Indiana, Ohio, and Illinois were present, and manifested throughout the entire meeting an interest in the proceedings that spoke well for the future success of the Federation.

The writer (John R. Charlesworth) was elected as chairman of the meeting, and opened the conference by an address setting forth the reasons for which they were called together. Mr. Putnam was then introduced and delivered the thrilling address upon the subject at issue found following this report, and which will be printed and circulated as a campaign document. A considerable portion of the afternoon was occupied in addresses and music, when eventually the meeting settled down to official work. The constitution, which had been previously prepared, was then read, and, after a somewhat lengthy debate, with a few alterations and additions, was unanimously adopted by those present. This concluded the work for the afternoon, and the conference adjourned until the evening session.

Promptly at 7:30 the conference reconvened, the writer again occupying the chair. The first business to be transacted was the election of officers to carry on the administration of the new Federation, when the following were unanimously elected:

President, S. P. Putnam, of California.

Vice-Presidents, H. Coons, of Lexington, Ill.; N. F. Griswold, of Meriden, Conn.; Samuel Silverman, of Cincinnati, O.

Secretary, John R. Charlesworth, of New York city.

Treasurer, Geo. L. Robertson, 345 W. Randolph street, Chicago.

The names of the officers-elect were received with marked appreciation and enthusiasm, which plainly evinced the confidence placed in them by the Freethinkers present, and I might venture to add by Freethinkers throughout the country. The conference also authorized the board of directors, which consists of the president, two vice-presidents, secretary, and treasurer, to select a list of vice-presidents representativ of the several states.

The president-elect then assumed the chair and presided over the meeting. He made another short address upon this occasion in which he asserted his intention of doing the utmost that lay in his power to make this Federation a voting power in the United States, whereby it should become a factor in the political life of our country. The writer also thanked the conference for the honor conferred upon him by placing him in such a responsible position as the secretaryship offered. He promised to do the utmost the situation would allow, and to show by his future efforts in the Freethought movement that the confidence imposed in him had not been misplaced. The following resolutions were then read and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That in the opinion of this conference, the recent act of Congress in closing the World's Fair on Sunday is a dangerous and startling violation of the principles of this government. It is absolutely unconstitutional and should therefore be regarded null and void in law, for it is based upon a recognition of this government as a Christian government, and such recognition is beyond the power of Congress to assert. For in the treaty with Tripoli (the same being set forth in the Constitution of the United States) it was officially affirmed by George Washington as the supreme law of the land, "That in no sense whatsoever is this government founded upon the Christian religion." Thus making the act of Congress in closing the Fair on Sunday revolutionary in its very nature. A usurpation of individual rights, it is destructiv of liberty and justice, and is the most obnoxious kind of class legislation. It is a crime against the workingmen of this country, and which favors only vice, ignorance, disease, and ecclesiastical tyranny, and we therefore demand its repeal.

Resolved, That the recent attempt of the mayor of Chicago and the police force to close the Marlowe Theater on Sundays by unlawful measures deserves the strongest condemnation, and we denounce all those engaged in such criminal interference with the rights of the people as unworthy of the political support of all Freethinkers.

Resolved, That the attempt to unite the parochial schools with the public schools, in such manner as to introduce religious instruction and exercises of any kind into the latter, is a dangerous infringement upon our secular system of education and should be opposed by all Freethinkers; and that candidates of parties in favor of such a union should not receive the support of the members of this Federation.

Resolved, That under the auspices of this Federation arrangements shall be made for a grand mass meeting to be held in Chicago on the first Sunday after the opening of the World's Fair; also to arrange for Freethought headquarters in Chicago, to be opened every day during the continuance of the Fair for the welcome of Freethinkers from abroad, and for Freethought lectures, meetings, and entertainments every Sunday evening during the Fair.

Resolved, That this Federation shall invite the International Federation of Freethinkers to hold its next Congress in the United States at Chicago under its auspices, and this Federation assures them a hearty welcome.

This concluded the work of the present conference, and after a few brief speeches had been made by members and friends of the Federation, the writer gave an address of an hour's duration, followed by another from the president.

A visitor from Canada was present with us—whose name I failed to learn—who spoke upon the immense gains that our cause had achieved in that priestridden, hidebound, orthodox country. Others gave their experiences in this direction from the various states and territories, which show beyond the possibility of doubt that the Freethought movement is making rapid strides throughout the country.

Together with those who signed the constitution at this meeting, and those who had sent their names by mail, over one thousand hav already been enrolled as members of the Federation. James B. Greenhill, of Clinton, Ia., sent in a list of two hundred and four names; Mrs. Sarah G. Fox, of Lemoore, Cal., sends over one hundred; W. I. Fox, of Capron, Ill., brings with him a list of thirteen, and Monday morning's mail brings in over one hundred more. This is undoubtedly a splendid beginning for the new Federation, splendid success to be achieved in so short a time, and we urge all Freethinkers to send in their names to me, with as many others as they can secure, as early as possible. With good work and assistance of this description, we shall soon be able to muster a roll of one hundred thousand names or more; and think what a voting power that will become when centered upon the object of securing Freethought political reformatory measures. We hav as yet solicited no funds of any kind for this work beyond the collections taken up at the meeting. Remember that no initiation fee is asked, nor are any assessments to be placed upon the members; it is to be supported by purely voluntary contributions. Up to the present we hav borne all the expenses ourselvs, more than half of which hav not yet been met. We therefore solicit any subscription, however small, to assist us in defraying the expenses we hav incurred. All donations should be forwarded to the treasurer, Geo. L. Robertson, 345 W. Randolph street, Chicago, Ill.; and all business communications, names for membership, etc., be sent to me at Chicago to the same address, which is the headquarters of the Federation for the time being. In sending names for membership care should be taken to send post-office address.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Sec. Freethought Federation of America.

Liberal Political Organization.

The power of the state is universal. It is upon every man, woman, and child. We are born into the state, and cannot escape its authority. We do not choose to be citizens. We are citizens, whether we will it or not. We can stand outside every other institution of human society, but we cannot stand outside the state.

Being thus by necessity in and of the state, self-respect compels us to see that the administration of its authority should be absolutely just.

The state, as George Washington says, "is not persuasion, but force." It is not advice; it is compulsion. It is not reason. It is not eloquence. It is the sword. It is the organized physical force of human society. It is an enormous power. In the freest nation in the world it is capable of vast tyranny. It must be constantly watched. Like fire, it is a dangerous servant and fearful master. It cannot be left for one moment to irresponsible action. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." So long as the state exists, no matter how wise or good the people, there is peril to individual rights. The state, as Thomas Paine says, "is a necessary evil." It is made necessary by the existence of a greater evil—namely, crime. When crime ceases the state must cease as a logical consequence of human progress.

The state therefore being physical power, infinite and enormous in its action, how supremely important it is that this power be confined to its legitimate function—namely, the suppression of crime. If allowed to go beyond that function it must be for universal economical or business purposes only, and never for any moral or religious purposes.

This is the formative idea of the American republic, as set forth in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. Washington officially affirmed that "in no sense whatsoever is this government founded upon the Christian religion." Jefferson said: "It is wicked and tyrannical to compel any man to support a religion in which he does not believe." Franklin declared: "That religion which depends upon the state for its support is for that reason a bad religion." When it was moved to amend the Virginia Bill of Rights by inserting the words "Jesus Christ" Jefferson, in his correspondence, reports that the amendment was defeated by a large majority. There is no Bible or church in the Declaration of Independence, and no God or any religious word in the Constitution. Not only is the total separation of church and state natural justice, it is the expressed will of the founders of this republic. To unite church and state in any manner is to destroy the fundamental principles of our government.

In many ways there has been a union of church and state in the administration of our laws. In the exemption of church property from taxation—the appointment of chaplains—religious exercises in our public schools, etc. Against these we have persistently contended by agitation, by petition, by legal and legislative proceedings, but the recent action of Congress in voting to close the World's Fair on Sunday is by far the most startling and dangerous assertion of ecclesiastical political power that has ever disgraced and darkened the history of American politics. It is a stupid crime, a damnable usurpation. The church has forced its institutions and doctrines by physical power upon the American people. The church has drawn the sword with the same bitter and destructive spirit that made the horrors of the Dark Ages. The church has declared its innate savagery. It has not in this matter appealed to reason, to conscience, to argument, to civilization, but to brutal force. Only by the brutal force of a corrupted state could the gates of the World's Fair be closed on Sunday.

This act has aroused universal indignation. The church has shown itself to be at heart a wild beast, a furious despotism, and not a moral and intellectual power. The church has declared itself to be the enemy of civilization. It has forced the issue. It has unfurled the black flag of barbarism.

What a crime has been committed, a crime against the working people of this country. Millions are now shut out from the noblest exhibition of art and industry that this century will produce.

It is right at their very doors—the products of civilization, the inspirations of genius, a world of beauty, a world of delight, a miracle almost of loveliness and grandeur. One must see it to realize its marvelous magnificence. Millions of toilers are in dark and miserable tenement houses. They want to get out into fresh air; they want to see something; they want to have a glimpse of higher and nobler things beyond their poverty and struggles—something to give them hope, a little rainbow hue of promise to their laborious days. Right here in this mighty and beautiful city of Chicago is a paradise beyond all that poet has ever dreamed; here humanity is pouring out its most precious treasures; here nature reveals its myriad wonders of land and sea; here is the song of triumph, the triumph of labor itself; here is the glory of human effort, the victory of the ages, the victory of man over brute force, the grandest, the most animating spectacle that has ever adorned and glorified the pathway of human progress, and yet the church, with fierce, ambitious hand, with the scowl of a tyrant, with the leer of a hypocrite, with the crouch of a coward, bolts and bars the gates of this beautiful paradise, and says to the hungry and eager millions, Go to the slums, go to the dens of vice, stay in your heated and crowded homes, drink in disease with every breath, live in torture, live in misery. On our holy Sabbath day you must be imprisoned, for fear that our finances might suffer, that we might not receive your paltry shillings. Such is the attitude of the church to-day. It is a cursed, inhuman despot, and I hate it, I detest it with every fiber of my being.

We must meet this power at the ballot-box. We have petitioned, we have remonstrated. It is useless. We must vote for Liberal principles, or they will be destroyed. The greatest of all conflicts for human liberty must take place in this American republic. It is either the surrender of our government to the Christian churches, and bloodshed and horror for the next ten centuries, or it is universal justice, universal peace, and universal liberty. But reason, persuasion only, will not win the day; there must be also the power of millions of votes.

A long, hard conflict is before us—a conflict that will last a century. "These are the times that try men's souls" as in the great days of the Revolution. We want no sunshine patriots, but stalwart soldiers, who will stand by the flag no matter how many defeats are suffered.

In combining for political action we still recognize the manifold nature of the Liberal movement. It is intellectual, moral, scientific, philosophical, economical, industrial, and social. It is all that concerns human nature, human history, and human advancement.

Liberal organization must be manifold. No one organization, national or otherwise, can express all that Liberalism means. There must be many organizations, local, state, and national organizations. Every organization should be absolutely independent in itself. It should have its own law of being, its own methods. Liberal organization should not be a machinery, but a life.

As the territory narrows, the work broadens; as the territory broadens, the work in purpose is limited. That is, a national organization cannot be so comprehensive in its designs as a local organization. The national organization must adopt one line of effort, and forego others. It cannot be thoroughly intellectual, moral, economical, and political at the same time in action. If it chooses to be political it must be that alone. Only by concentration, by limitation of aim can there be intensity and success of action.

The local organization can embrace in its work all that concerns human life. It can and should discuss every question of living interest, be it literary, scientific, philosophical, economical, historical, or social. There is no subject-matter of human thought and experience but what a local organization can deal with. It is for universal inquiry. Everything is welcome. Individuality has full play. But when we come to the state organization there must be some limitation. The state organization must confine itself at least to political and economical questions. It cannot take into active consideration in its organized efforts purely literary, scien ific, philosophical, or historical questions.

When we come to the national organization there must be a still further differentiation and limitation. In fact, the differentiation extends so far that there are three national organizations instead of one today, and all are necessary.

The American Secular Union is organized mainly for legal and legislative work, which is always important. The Union was never organized for purely political action. It could not be made an active political body. But there are always questions to be brought before legislatures and before courts, questions of far-reaching importance, and to present these questions fairly and reach a just decision is a work that demands constant attention.

The freedom of the mails and freedom of speech and press, is a question of such immense significance that a separate organization, the National Defense Association, is needed for that. There never was greater danger in this direction than at the present time, and there must be a special body to meet the peculiar and dangerous tactics of the enemy.

The Freethought Federation is not to take the place of these useful organizations already established but to advance upon a new line made absolutely necessary by the recent action of Congress. Hitherto there has been no effort to make Liberalism a voting power. It has not been thought necessary. It has been hoped that by education, by agitation, by petitions, by appeals to courts, our rights might be maintained. We have trusted that politicians had honor and courage. We have been disappointed. We have found the majority of them to be fools, hypocrites, and cowards. We must change these politicians. We must put true men in their place. We can only do this by the ballot.

The Christian churches have forced this issue. We must take our position and fling our banner upon the political field, and we must some day succeed, or it is as certain as that the sun shines in the heavens that this republic will be destroyed.

We organize for one supreme purpose, as the antislavery party organized for one supreme purpose. We organize for the total separation of church and state. All other issues are subordinate. Until this is accomplished there is no solid foundation for any other reform through political action. No social and industrial question can be settled except by a free, Secular government. Let the church remain as an influence if it can, but destroy every particle of its political authority.

By concentrating on this one issue and making this the line of battle constantly, there is no doubt that Liberalism will eventually win the day in American politics. In the unrolling of tremendous events, in the changing and destroying of old parties, the new Liberal party may be able to command the situation, and with its own candidates sweep the field. Why not? Do we not represent the grandest ideas of the American republic? Are we not the true Constitutional party, the true Republican and Democratic party, the People's party, too? If we stand firm upon our principles, like the old guard at Waterloo, shall we not become the center of the mighty battle, and shall we not, by our decisive action, turn the tide for liberty and progress? It is the dream of my life, as of many a Liberal throughout the country, that opportunities might so combine in the pregnant years that are before us that a man like Ingersoll, of world-wide popularity, might bear our standard and be elected to the presidency of the United States. This is not beyond the possibilities of the political world, which never was so surcharged with upheaving and creative forces as now. Vast changes confront us, and revolutions are hurrying on. When was there ever a better opportunity to take our stand upon eternal principles? When was ever more need of a radical party, of a true American party, a party conservative of the original purpose of this great nation, a party of liberty, of justice, of human rights?

Why should we be any longer under the despotism of the partisan lash? Why should we belong to and obey a party as our master? Why should we not be superior to party, and use the party, and not let the party use us?

I hope that Ingersoll will some day be elected president of the United States; not that the office would honor him, but that he would honor the office with his genius, his eloquence, his honesty, his universal humanity, his sympathy with every toiler upon this planet, his heroic devotion to liberty, his brave and generous spirit so thoroughly cosmopolitan and so genuinely American. Has it come to this that we cannot elect a great man to the presidency, that politics must be mere expediency and commonplace, a dull routine, where only the orthodox horse can tread the everlasting round? Are we to have no grandeur in American politics, no fresh inspirations, no splendid possibilities? Is there to be nothing but the "party hack," the "public crib," the "spoils of office," the "bar-room politician," the "boss," the "political pull," the "machine," the "ring," the "available candidate?" Is one to be remanded out of politics because he is too brilliant, too sincere, too much of a man and not a puppet? Are brains at a discount, and "brass" the only currency? Is "gall" successful and genius defeated? Is politics only barter and sale, and the longest purse the arbiter of our destinies? Is it useless to cast a vote for what is absolutely right? Is there not courage enough to be in a minority? Must we go with the crowd? I don't believe it. I don't believe the American people are going to the bad. I don't believe that churches impregnated with the barbarism of the past will rule our country. I don't believe that cowards and hypocrites will carry the day. I don't believe that fools will win, although they do live and move and have their being in the halls of Congress. One live man is better than a million fools, and some day the fools will go to the wall.

One thing or the other must be done, either to surrender politics to the mean, the miserable, and the bigoted; or to make them resplendent with the glorious principles of pure liberty and justice.

No one will question but that some time or other Liberalism must be a matter of practical politics, that the ballot must be used, that there must be a Freethought party. Other instrumentalities will be thoroughly used, the press, the platform, argument, persuasion, but the ballot must finally be the appeal.

Our principles will never fully triumph except by organized politics. Liberalism must be something more than moral power, it must be something more than intellectual enlightenment; it must be a voting force. As well say that a man should act without his body as to say that Liberalism must be only an unorganized influence. It must be an influence undoubtedly. Art, poetry, eloquence, philosophy, science, will minister to its ultimate grand victory. But there must be a political victory also. The tremendous power of the ballot must be used for Liberalism or it will be used against it.

The sooner we begin the marshaling of our forces the better. How long are we to wait? Already Congress and the Supreme Court and the president—all branches of government—judicial, legislative, and executive, have pronounced this a Christian government. Was there ever a greater danger, or was there ever a more fitting opportunity to fling our banner to the breeze?

There is, therefore, no question about the necessity of a political organization at the present time. As well stop to argue whether you shall strike a blow when the assassin's dagger is at your throat. We must strike. The only question is, how to strike the most effectually.

I don't believe in rash action. I don't believe in rushing forward like a mob. I believe in calm, steady, persistent action. I believe in studying the situation, making the best use of all opportunities. I believe in organizing a campaign, not for this year, nor for next year, but for a hundred years to come. Our party must be a growth; it must throw its roots wide and deep. Our principles are eternal principles, always living, always glorious, as necessary ten thousand years hence as to-day. I honestly believe that we are entering upon the greatest conflict of the ages; that our civilization is at stake, all that man has acquired in the past. I believe that never were vaster despotic forces in play than now. I believe that Liberty was never more subtly or more potently assailed. I believe that the church, realizing both its weakness and strength, is preparing for an enormous struggle. I believe that other forces, forces of wealth, forces of monopoly, power in the hands of a few, all these will combine to put upon man's brain and man's body the most far-reaching and irresistible tyranny that has ever existed. It is useless to shut our eyes to the impending crisis.

Are we, then, pioneers in the ranks of freedom? Are we to say in this world's conflict, every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost? If so, in the end the devil will not only take the hindmost but every one of us, for is there a greater devil in the universe than the church itself?

What shall be the method of coöperation?

First of all, coöperate. The old adage is, if you want a hare-soup, you must first catch your hare. We intend to act on this common-sense principle. Knowledge is power, and the first thing to know in Liberal political action is upon whom we can depend. Who are Liberals. Who will stand fire. Before we summon to fight we must summon to council. It is no use to make a campaign until we have enlisted the soldiers, and numbered them. We must act according to our material, but what material will Liberalism in this country give for political action?

This is the first thing to do, to make our combination—to find out how many radical Liberal voters there are in the republic.

This is the first object of the Freethought Federation—the enrollment of the genuine Liberal voters of this country.

Let me define the genuine Liberal voter. Let me say what is expected of members of the Federation now to be organized.

I do not mean separate political action, the nomination of candidates in opposition to other parties. That is a thing of the hereafter. That is a matter of evolution. I do not mean that they who join the Freethought Federation must quit their present party affiliations. Work through other parties if possible, and hold the balance of power. Endeavor to put the Demands of Liberalism in their platforms. If this cannot be done, then there must eventually be separate action. For this we wait the logic of events.

What I mean by a genuine Liberal voter, and what is expected of every member of the Freethought Federation, is always to refuse to vote for the candidate of his party if that candidate is known by his record to be in opposition to the Demands of Liberalism. This is the test. A Liberal who votes for a candidate in declared opposition to a Secular government is not a genuine Liberal. You might just as well expect a genuine free-trader to vote for a tariff candidate, or a genuine protectionist to vote for a free-trader. What are a man's political principles worth if he votes for a man who is in direct antagonism to them? A principle that we are not willing to vote for is no principle at all. A principle that we can put off and on is not worth even as much as the clothes we wear. Liberalism is not merely an opinion. It is a principle deep and broad as humanity itself. We cannot be false to it. We must maintain it. It is infinitely more than a question of tariff or revenue. It is a question of eternal right or wrong. It is a matter of human progress or of retrogression.

Every man must judge for himself. We do not purpose to form an iron-clad association. We do not purpose to use the party whip. There is no party whip, no compulsion. We come together by the laws of attraction. We act harmoniously through a common judgment. We don't want tools and machines in our party. We want thinking, independent men. If you have brains, use them; use them constantly in all the affairs of politics. Don't be superstitious in politics any more than in religion, and don't submit to authority in politics any more than in religion. Don't be the slave of any organization, not even of a Freethought organization. Don't do anything because others tell you to do it, but because your own reason is the prompter. I don't want a hundred thousand voters to vote as I might tell them to vote, but I want to enroll a hundred thousand thoughtful, investigating, clear-headed, and courageous voters, who will vote fairly and squarely for their own best conviction every time. Such a host of voters would be a tremendous power. These voters would one day become the commanding influence in this republic.

I do not see how any genuine Liberal can vote for the candidate of any party who, in his political action, has been the ally of the church. Here the line must be sharply drawn. I affirm that every member of Congress who voted to close the World's Fair on Sunday should be put upon the black-list, and every Liberal in the country should do all in his power to defeat his reëlection, and the Freethought Federation should do the same with its organized power. How is it possible for a genuine Liberal to support a candidate who has voted to violate our rights? As it is now we are absolutely helpless. What do the politicians care for our petitions, our remonstrances, our resolutions, our mass meetings? These are not backed up by votes. But let the votes be there and the politicians will take heed. Some men are so constituted that the only way to make them respect you is to knock them down. Politicians are built that way—most of them. Let us knock them down by thousands of Liberal votes and they will respect us. Otherwise they will obey the bidding of the church.

I propose hereafter to vote for a Liberal every chance I get. I propose to be a Liberal in politics first, last, and all the time. I propose to call every official to strict account, and if he sides with the ecclesiastics in their attempt to unite church and state I shall do all I can against him and shall urge Liberals to do the same, without regard to party lines, and the Freethought Federation is organized to make this policy tremendously effective by co-operation. If a hundred thousand Liberals do this the church power will receive a fatal blow. Take for instance the recent action of Mayor Washburn in the attempt to close a theater on Sunday night by police force. I say that in view of this action no genuine Liberal can ever vote for Mayor Washburn for any office whatever. He has disgraced the high position he holds. He has shown himself to be the paltry tool of the church. Through his official power he has committed a high-handed outrage against liberty. If he did it honestly he is a fool; if not, then he is a coward and a hypocrite. Would Mayor Washburn have committed this infamous and criminal act if he had known that there were Liberal voters in Chicago who would relentlessly combat him at the polls for his despotic action? Certainly not. He cringed to the church for the votes of the church. He violated law; he violated rights; he struck a blow at liberty to win the political support of the churches. There is no question about this. What is our duty in the matter as Liberals? To do our level best to see that such official is defeated if his party dares to put him in nomination again; and to make our protest against such high-handed proceedings available, we must organize and act as an army of Liberals, and make our protest universal, and not merely individual. Congress would not have voted two to one to close the World's Fair if a solid mass of one hundred thousand Liberals had confronted them, not simply to petition, but to hurl their political power against them if they were thus disloyal to the Constitution. The Farmers' Alliance would never have voted unanimously in favor of closing the World's Fair on Sunday if Liberalism had been organized as a voting power. We are browbeaten on every side, treated as if we had no rights that any party was bound to respect, and yet we quietly submit and go on voting with the powers that be, trusting that political liberty will be won by some blind chance, instead of by our own courage and devotion.

"Who would be free themselves must strike the blow."

Understand, we do not vote against a man on account of his religious opinions. We do not vote against a man because he is a Christian; that is not the point at all. It is not a religious war upon which we are entering. It is altogether another matter. I do not vote against any man on account of his religion. I vote against him purely and solely on account of his political acts. I vote against him because he votes to take away my liberty. I vote against him because he uses his official power to abolish the Declaration of Independence, and make null and void the Constitution. We ask no candidate about his belief. That is not our concern. We want his political record. That is our concern, and by his political record we approve or condemn. We are organizing to defend human rights, not to attack or maintain any creed whatsoever. I want no political support for my creed. I simply want liberty, and I want every man and woman, too, to have the same liberty.

The first thing then to do is to enroll, to find out how many Liberals in this country will openly stand upon the platform of the Demands of Liberalism, the Declaration of Independence, and the Constitution of the United States. I believe that there are one hundred thousand stalwart Liberal voters in our land to-day. To combine these into one grand cooperative force is the object of the Freethought Federation. Such a union would give a wonderful strength to Liberalism. It is an absolute necessity that we do this, and when we have created this splendid companionship upon the world's political field, after years of experience in the vast and inevitable conflict before us, more radical methods than any outlined at present may be wisely and harmoniously adopted. The career of the Liberal political party in the future cannot be marked by the keenest-sighted statesmen. Its work will be "the long result of time." We cannot tell what will be best to do four years hence. But what is best to be done now is evident—to rally the grand army of freedom, to strike hands, to stand together.

We not only thus create a splendid companionship, but we bring into play outside of purely political action an enormous instrumentality for the education of the people. Education is radically necessary. The masses of the people of this country are profoundly ignorant. They do not understand the principles of secular government. They do not understand the position of the church. They do not see the danger that exists. They do not know when their own rights are violated. Take the Sunday question. How very few understand it. How very few know the origin of the Christian Sabbath—that it has not the slightest foundation in the Bible. What Dogberries our Congressmen are on this question. Two to one of them must be writ down as asses. Every word said in favor of closing the World's Fair was bosh, based on absolute ignorance of Christian history. I am amazed and disgusted to find that the majority of our representatives at Washington are such dunces. How great the need of education among the people when Congress itself presents such a mass of ignorance. We must vote and we must teach through the Freethought Federation. We must spread information. We must get people to read and think. If we have this enrollment of one hundred thousand Liberals, we have an instrumentality by which we can distribute millions of copies of Freethought documents all over the land. In conjunction with voting, this process of education must be carried on, and to this purpose mainly the funds of the Federation will be devoted.

Our common school system is in danger. In one county in the state of Illinois the superintendent of schools was elected by Catholic votes with the express understanding that in Catholic districts the parochial schools be allowed to take the place of the public schools, and the teachers in these schools receive certificates and be paid as teachers in the public schools. Here is a deadly blow against our system of universal education connived in by a candidate of the popular party in order to win office. Against such a candidate the vote of every Liberal should be cast. If we do not meet this issue our common schools will be abolished by the cowardice of the old political organizations.

The method adopted by the National Liberal League of auxiliary societies has proved to be useless. These societies in nine cases out of ten die and are a drag upon active work. What is wanted is individual membership. One live man is better than a thousand defunct societies. A combination of societies is too much after the old orthodox style. It takes hell-fire to give such complicated machinery any kind of a go. Take hell-fire away and all the magnificent organization of the Catholic church would be of no avail.

We want in Freethought a combination of individuals. It is to the individual reason that we constantly appeal. It is individual support that we desire. The individual is always alive. The society is too often a corpse. The plan of fees and assessments, except in mutual benefit societies, has proved a complete failure. Abolish fees and assessments and depend upon voluntary contributions. Every Liberal who is willing to be counted as such and signs the constitution in good faith is a welcome member and a voting member, whether he pays or not. We don't judge a man by his pocket-book, but by his courage and devotion.

There is no question but that every member will do the best he can to supply the "sinews of war" when the time comes. It is left for everyone to judge for himself what he shall contribute.

I think everybody will admit that if we enroll one hundred thousand Liberals in this country who are willing to vote Liberalism, we have in that very enrollment itself created a gigantic power for the triumph of Secular principles.

The enrollment is the beginning, not the end. The end is a vast Liberal party, a glorious republic free from church domination, social and industrial progress by the genius of Liberty. S. P. PUTNAM.

The Freethought Federation of America.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS.

PREAMBLE.

Realizing that the safety of republican institutions is imperiled, the advance of civilization impeded, and the most sacred rights of man infringed, by the least interference of the state in matters religious, as instanced by the recent act of Congress in closing the World's Fair on Sunday, we hereby organize the Freethought Federation of America to help secure throughout the United States a practical compliance with the principles involved in the Demands of Liberalism.

CONSTITUTION.

Article I.

This organization shall be known as the Freethought Federation of America.

Article II.

(A) The general object shall be to effect a total separation of church and state.

(B) As specific objects, in order to accomplish the general object, we indorse the Demands of Liberalism, as follows:

1. We demand that churches and other ecclesiastical property shall be no longer exempt from taxation.
2. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in state legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions supported by public money, shall be discontinued.
3. We demand that all public appropriations for educational and charitable institutions of a sectarian character shall cease.
4. We demand that all religious services now sustained by the government shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly as a text-book or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.
5. We demand that the appointment, by the president of the United States or by the governors of the various states, of all religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.
6. We demand that the judicial oath in the courts and in all other departments of the government shall be abolished, and that simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury shall be established in its stead.
7. We demand that all laws directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath shall be repealed.
8. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated, and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.
9. We demand that not only in the Constitutions of the United States and of the several states, but also in the practical administration of the same, no privilege or advantage shall be conceded to Christianity or any other special religion; that our entire political system shall be founded and administered on a purely secular basis; and that whatever changes shall prove necessary to this end shall be consistently, unflinchingly, and promptly made.

Article III.—Mode of Work.

The means to be employed in order to secure compliance with the foregoing demands shall be, lectures, conventions, and agitation through the rostrum and press.

Article IV.

Candidates may be nominated, if thought advisable, at any time upon the platform of the Federation. If no candidates are nominated, the candidates of all other parties are to be questioned and their position ascertained, and if in opposition to the demands of our movement, the political power of this Federation shall be used against them wherever available.

Article V.

This Federation will not necessarily be opposed to present political parties. Members of all parties can become members of this Federation, provided they endeavor to make the Demands of Liberalism a part of the platform of the party to which they belong and refuse to vote for candidates who are opposed to these demands.

Article VI.

All persons indorsing the Demands of Liberalism and desirous of propagating the principles involved therein may become members of this Federation by signing the constitution, or sending their names to the secretary for that purpose.

Article VII.

All members shall be allowed to vote by mail or otherwise upon all questions affecting the work of this Federation, the same to be submitted to them by the secretary immediately after the board of directors hav taken action thereon.

Article VIII.—Officers.

The officers of this Federation shall consist of a president, two or more vice-presidents, a secretary, and treasurer. The president, two first vice-presidents, the secretary, and treasurer shall constitute a board of directors, who shall be intrusted with the general management and control of the Federation.

Article IX.—Election of Officers.

The officers shall be elected annually, and shall hold office until their successors are elected. All elections shall be by ballot.

Article X.

The duties of officers shall be those generally pertaining to those of president, secretary, treasurer, and board of directors.

Article XI.

All moneys contributed to the funds of the Federation shall be used for practical campaign purposes and for the distribution of Freethought political literature.

Article XII.

No change shall be made in this constitution except by a two-thirds vote of the members present at any regular meeting called by the board of directors, notice of such change to be given three months previously.

Signed this 4th day of September, E.M. 292.

S. P. PUTNAM, President.
JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH, Secretary.
G. L. ROBERTSON, Treasurer.

News from the Northwest.

Since my last letter of some two months ago I hav been "firing my wad" in the great North and state of Washington, which will some day be one of the greatest states of the Union. I gave four lectures at Cathlamet; three at Skamokawa; one at the New Era, Ore., camp-meeting; three at Olympic Hall, Seattle; four at Snoqualmie Falls; five at Gillman in Odd Fellows' Hall; four at Black Diamond in city hall; and in most cases had crowded houses. The Liberals and Freethinkers, Spiritualists, etc., always gave me a most hearty reception and supported me well in my lectures on radical science, evolution, etc. I make no arrangements ahead, hav no promised pay, make no long jumps, stay a week in a place, and am well paid. My lectures are of the most Liberal kind. I hire and pay for my own halls, stay at the best hotels, and hav nothing to complain of. Christians generally come out to my lectures, but are poor pay, as their loose change goes into the rapacious maw of their idol, the church. I had the felicitous pleasure of hearing and meeting W. S. Bell here in Seattle. He takes the world easy, is not afraid of the devil nor a warm abode "over there." Brother Bell is a fine lecturer and a most agreeable gentleman, with a fund of stories that no doubt would eclipse our lamented "honest old Abe." I saw Rev. Clark Braden advertised to speak here not long ago in the Methodist church, so, as I had never met the "gintleman in black," and had seen Heston's scenter or essence-peddler, I concluded to take in the show and see the animal. I found the church, which is a magnificent one, filled to the doors, but no animal in the pulpit, as I was early. I soon noticed a very peculiar-looking man flitting about here and there, talking in quite a pompous way with different ones in the audience. His very peculiar way and looks caused me to size him from a phrenological standpoint as follows: a short, thickset man about like Putnam or Reynolds, with his hair parted in the middle and roached up on each side full two inches, evidently to piece himself out as near to a man in hight as possible; a very square, full forehead, showing fine memory and good imitativ power; head very broad from ear to ear and from eye to eye, and very high in the crown or region of self-esteem and firmness, with a mouth, chin, and spread of jaw like a bulldog; very large language and use of words—such a cast of head would giv a man much boldness and ferocity, egotism, and a great amount of perseverance, and much fighting qualities, that would stoop to anything to beat his opponent. He would hav very little principle, and neither charity or mercy, love or kindness. I concluded he had a good deal of influence somewhere, but I could not for the life of me place him or tell his business or profession, but presently he stepped into the rostrum and was introduced as the great Rev. Clark Braden—the religious bulldog of modern times, should hav been added. He declared he had been imported to Tacoma to meet the arrant coward, as he termed him, C. B. Reynolds, who had thrown down the challenge to meet him (Reynolds) to all the orthodox ministers of that city, but that they knew he knew the history and black record of every Infidel lecturer in the field, for he had met and whipped them all, and showed up their miserable record. His verbosity was wonderful, and memory of dates, events, history, etc., was as fine as I ever listened to. He indorsed all of Thomas Paine's works up to the "Age of Reason," but gave us the startling information that they were all written while Paine was a Quaker preacher, except the last, which was written after Paine had become a drunken vagabond and an Infidel; thus in a few years more the church will claim all of Paine's great works, and in time Ingersoll's too. He said Ingersoll was an arrant coward and the greatest literary pirate that ever lived; that all his works of any note were stolen and dressed over to suit the occasion. His denunciation of Liberalism, and Freethinkers and Spiritualists as obscenists, free-lovers, drunkards, liars, adulterers, etc., was diabolical in the extreme, but applauded to the echo, like the pugilist who knocks his opponent down. Ingersoll, Underwood, Putnam, nor any of our workers escaped his viperous attacks, and to the people of the church that knew nothing to the contrary it had a tremendous effect to build up a detestation for the Liberals. I hav traveled for many years in the lecture work, but hav never met Braden's equal for demonish, unprincipled scavengering. He can do a thousand times more injury to our Freethought cause than a hundred men like Talmage or Field, and to meet him in debate would be about like driving a polecat out of your chicken-house with a pole. You would wish you hadn't.

Braden would seem to belong to that class of animals often referred to, as I can't see what they were made for. He is the John Sullivan gladiator of the church, unconquerable because he chooses weapons no decent man would touch. He is yet in the prime of life and is everywhere present at a moment's call, and his mouth is a gatling gun filled with filth and froth. The church indorses him, the people feed and pay him, and he is their spy and picket-guard, and loves Jesus, and eats his body and drinks his blood, "allee samee as Melican man," and no doubt expects two crowns and a double harp when he gets "over there, over there." I find very few people; especially young men, in the great West, that believe in the Bible or much of the creeds. Another hundred years and most of the civilized world will look at the Bible and the dogmas of the church about as we do at the Egyptian mummies and laugh at the nonsense and silly religious belief of their early progenitors. Science and the free schools and evolution will, in time, remove all the clanking chains which superstition has riveted on poor ignorant humanity.

Seattle, Wash. PROF. D. C. SEYMOUR.

Persecution of a Freethinker by the Priests of Manilla.

From the Hong Kong Daily Telegraph of July 21st.

Since the dark days when the all-powerful priesthood of Spain instituted the foul system of bloody persecution held up to execration in all ages as the Inquisition it is doubtful whether a more fiendish plot and a more dastardly outrage was ever conceived by the long-robed followers of the Virgin Mary than was consummated in Manilla just ten days ago. As far as we can gather—and our sources of information are exceptionally reliable, though not abundant—the facts of the case are as follows:

About two years ago a large number of Spanish subjects, nativs of the Philippines, including a gentleman named Dr. J. Rizal, incurred the displeasure of the "powers that be" (composed of the archbishop of Manilla and his army of black-gowned, black-hearted satellites) in the Philippines owing to the publication of some pamphlets, of which he was author, in Paris and Brussels, exposing from a Freethinker's point of view the evils prevailing in the Philippines, which the learned writer traced, and conclusivly proved were chargeable, to the priesthood. As soon as young Rizal had published his pamphlets he set out for home in the Philippines, taking with him, as it is alleged, a goodly number of copies for distribution amongst his relativs and friends. One of these pamphlets fell into the hands of a holy father, who took it to the bishop of his district, and thence it "got" into the hands of the archbishop. At once a convention of prominent members of the church was held in Manilla at which it was decided to prosecute the Rizal family, confiscate their property (which was worth £50,000 at least), exile them, and drive all their followers out of the land. As soon as young Rizal learned that a secret ukase had been issued with the sanction of the civil authorities he fled to Hong Kong with his aged mother and father, fearing that they would be put to death—probably be poisoned. That his conjecture was well founded proved true beyond the shadow of a doubt, for he was soon pained to hear that the priests, backed by the military authorities, were instituting vicious and unrelenting persecutions against his relativs and large circle of friends, and later on it became known that their villages had been destroyed (as reported at the time in these columns) and dozens of his relativs exiled to the most unhealthy and barren part of the Philippines. He therefore did all that lay in his power to expose the brutality and illegality of the priests, in the hope that wiser counsels might prevail at some future date.

After Dr. Rizal learned that persecution was rife and that a price had been put on his head he decided to settle down in Hong Kong and practice his profession (that of an oculist), at which he became a specialist in France a few years ago. He did so, and rented professional quarters in D'Aguilar street. A few months passed in this way, when he was rejoiced to hear that the new governor-general of the Philippines had issued a decree pardoning the Rizal family, recalling them and their friends from banishment, and restoring to them the property so ruthlessly seized by his predecessor. All was carried out as ordained, with the exception that young Rizal preferred to remain in Hong Kong with his aged parents, whom he supported since their flight from the bloodthirsty priests of Manilla. After a while the boycott of the Telegraph was also suspended, and many of Rizal's friends wrote him that there could be no doubt that the new governor-general was a very liberal-minded man and that it would, therefore, be safe for him to return to Manilla, and endeavor to put the business connected with the family estates in order. But he hesitated to return, though his heart yearned for another glimpse of his nativ hills and vales, and he wrote his friends positiv refusals to listen or attach credence to their assertions. He even activly took up a scheme for transferring a whole section of the nativ population of Luzon to Borneo, where they hoped to liv in peace and security from monastic rapacity. This plan, as we reported a few weeks ago, was on the eve of accomplishment. This became known to the authorities, who it now appears were "lying low" to trap the one man whom they feared because he was regarded as a patriot of the first order, and they therefore conceived a desperate plot to get him into their clutches. The governor-general was approached by the archbishop and prevailed on to address Dr. Rizal through the Spanish consul in this colony and assure him of his deep regret for the tyranny to which his family had been subjected and, further, that he, the governor-general, would not only be glad to hear of such a brilliant scholar returning to his nativ land but was desirous of interviewing him personally in the hope that, as a result of their parleying, some reforms for the amelioration of the sad condition of the masses might be arrived at. The consul duly performed (and we believe in good faith) his part of the program and succeeded in getting Dr. Rizal off to Manilla a fortnight ago in the steamship Don Juan, prior to which he furnished him with a free passport by order of the governor-general. No sooner did the Don Juan arrive in Manilla than a swarm of detectivs came on board and searched Rizal's baggage and person as though he were a dangerous political offender for whom the authorities were on the qui vive. But he was allowed to land and later the governor-general's private secretary called on him to express his excellency's regrets that he should hav been subjected to such indignities, and assured him that the mighty priestridden autocrat would be pleased to grant him audience at once. Somewhat pleased at the compliment paid him by so august a personage, the unsuspecting doctor said he could not believe for a moment such a kind-hearted magnate as the governor-general had proved himself to be could be guilty of such duplicity as many might suspect when they saw the reception he got as soon as the steamer dropped anchor in the port. He then, without further molestation, went off to Government House and was received most hospitably by the general commanding the forces and the governor. A long conversation ensued in which the two Herods expressed considerable interest in the welfare of the masses and it was arranged that Dr. Rizal should call the next day for the purpose of expressing in private his views on reforms in general. The conference was duly held next day and the doctor invited to a séance on the following day. He went, little thinking of the dangerous nature of the net which had been so skilfully spread to catch him. Hardly had he taken his seat in the drawing-room, to await there the pleasure of the governor-general to see him, when a number of soldiers under command of a lieutenant and corporal entered the room, took him prisoner, and drove him off to a fortress, where he is now a close prisoner.

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM's lecture appointments for October and November:

Boston, Mass.....	Oct. 2	Scofield, Utah....	Nov. 1, 2
Cincinnati, O.....	" 9	Reno, Nev.....	" 6, 7
Golden Pond, Ky.	" 14–17	Bishop Creek and
Chicago, Ill.....	" 23	Round Valley, Cal	" 9–14
Bartley, Neb.....	" 26, 27	Independence, Cal	" 17–20
Denver, Col.....	" 30	Stockton, Cal.....	" 27

Letters of Friends.

Accuses the Christians of Carrying Off Our Money.

OCEAN PARK, WASH., Aug. 20, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I will inclose $5—$2 on my subscription to THE TRUTH SEEKER and the other $3 for three of those fine picture-books, the "Old Testament Stories." Send two of them to my address and one to the friend's address inclosed.

Maybe I will work off some more picture-books. I hav had lots of fun with my book. I would not take $10 for mine if I could not get another one. Oh, dear, I wish I could get all the books I want. But money is so hard to get. I think it has dropped through the bottom of some place, or the Christian people hav gathered it all up to pave a new street in heaven. Do not forget to send the Picture Books as soon as possible.

Yours ever truly in the cause of justice, R. J. BUTTS.

Prompt for Organization.

BLACK RIVER, MICH., Aug. 21, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I saw in THE TRUTH SEEKER of the 6th inst. a communication by S. P. Putnam on organizing a political Freethought party, and as I hav not his address I thought I would send to you to hav my name sent to him as a member of the Freethought Federation of America. I am with the Liberal party in their demands for justice and fairness in the Constitution of the United States. I say, tax the churches as you would any other individual land- or property-holder. And I am against a union of church and state. I cannot go to Chicago, but will use my best endeavors for Liberalism.

In closing this letter I must say, long may the good TRUTH SEEKER wave as the light of liberty to mankind. I will try and get you some subscribers to my best of all papers. ALONZO CHAPELLE.

If Men Would Only Read.

Aug. 25, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Myself and wife like the paper. We hav it all to ourselvs, as the most of my neighbors belong to the meeting and would think that it was a great sin to be caught with THE TRUTH SEEKER in their house. I express my opinion freely and everywhere. I must giv my neighbors credit for their kindness toward me. I find by talking with a great many of them that they do not know what they believe. If you could get them to read they would not be so easily gulled by the preachers, but as a class the farmers read but little. I long since discarded the wooden plow. I see nothing but cruelty and injustice in all mankind being cursed because one man sinned, or in one man dying for other men's sins. It is strange to me that men of brain and education should believe such stuff at this day when men are allowed to think and express their thoughts. C. F. TINGLE.

Advice on the Best Policy to Adopt.

SAN CARLOS, ARIZ., Aug. 5, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Some one of your patrons mildly objects to the illustrations in your paper. I like them, and think that while they may repel one in a hundred people, upon the whole they will do vastly more good than harm. Who, when he is aware of it, wants a religion so open to ridicule as that of the Bible? And many believers hav become skeptical when shown the weakness of their God.

The copy of "Old Testament Stories Illustrated" I obtained of you has done good service here for almost two months, and now I hav sent it on a mission to Arkansas, to enlighten the dull Methodists of that region.

Later I see some subscriber wants you to stop sending THE TRUTH SEEKER to his address for the reason, if I comprehend him correctly, that he wants a strictly Atheistical publication; while I am going to drop the Ironclad Age for the reason that it is getting more Materialistic, if possible, than it was when the old editor died, and it displays no patience toward our allies—the Spiritualists and other ists not Christians. We need all the help we can get to down Jehovah, and after we accomplish that much-desired end, we can turn our guns on the Spiritualists, et al, if the world gets too small to hold both of us. But just now why should we hav strife among ourselvs in the face of such an enemy as orthodoxy?

Please send the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book," etc., as below.

E. C. VAN DALSEM.

Let the States Vote to Open Their Exhibits at the Fair.

BRAYTON, N. Y., Aug. 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I understand that great excitement and strife is going on throughout the country concerning the opening or shutting of the World's Fair on Sunday. It is probable that nearly every one of the states will hav a department of its own to deposit its nice articles for exhibition. Now here I will say, let each state control its own department, and, by popular vote (the majority ruling), say whether they will open or shut their doors on Sunday. These are American principles devised to us in the Constitution that our fathers dearly bought with their own blood to leave behind for their precious offspring to enjoy freely under the shade of Liberty's tree. I would let all foreign nations control their departments as they may think best, by opening or shutting their doors or not on Sunday, and that will show to the world that we are free in deed and in principle as well as in name, and not as Pat said of us—"A pretty free country this where the dogs are let loose and the stones tied fast"—I myself mean, the priests let in and the people shut out.

ASA W. BRAYTON.

About God.

MAYSTON, TENN., Aug. 14, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Here is the finest poem in the American language. I make the claim because it contains more truth and less poetry than any other production:

A TOUGH QUESTION ANSWERED.

The millions toil in shop and soil
To drive away financial ruin,
The few well clad and always glad—
Oh, what is God a-doing?

'Mid want and pain in bone and brain
Our livelihood pursuing,
Where losses rain, and small the gain—
Oh, what is God a-doing?

Where fathers fail and mothers wail,
O'er fates beyond enduring;
The rich oppress with dire distress—
Oh, what is God a-doing?

The cyclone rash, the railroad smash—
A country feels their ruin,
Demolished homes and broken bones—
Oh, what is God a-doing?

The seals of pestilence are broke,
And peopled cities wail its stroke,
Death his hell-broth brewing;
Before it fall the great and small,
In every walk gaunt famin stalks—
Oh, what (in ——l) is God a-doing?

The tornado's shock, the sunken rock
With wrecks old ocean strewing;
And then on land on every hand,
In battle's roar, a thousand more—
Oh, what (— ——!) is God a-doing?

A devil bold, so we are told,
Does all this fearful ruin,
And God has planned it to his hand,
And that's what God is doing.

L. L. GOODWIN.

Lafayette, Not Paine.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 3, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I write this in hopes to see you lay before your readers the correction of a very important mistake, made in your excellent paper of September 3d, page 572, as to the key of the Bastile, which was sent by General Lafayette to General Washington.

We read in Mack's "Lafayette," by Ebenezer Mack, page 235, as follows: "With a letter to General Washington, March 17, 1790, in which he stated some of these difficulties, what had been accomplished, and what was hoped for, Lafayette transmitted a key and a drawing of the Bastile. 'Giv me leave,' he said, 'my dear general, to present you with a picture of the Bastile a few days after I had ordered its demolition, with a main key of the fortress of despotism. It is a tribute which I owe as a son to my adopted father, as an aid-de-camp to my general, as a missionary of liberty to its patriarch.'

"General Washington acknowledged the receipt of these trophies Aug. 21, 1780: 'I hav received,' he said, 'your affectionate letter of the 17th of March by one conveyance, and the token of the victory gained by liberty over despotism by another; for both which testimonials of your friendship and regard I pray you accept my sincere thanks. In this great subject of triumph for the New World, and humanity in general, it will never be forgotten how conspicuous a part you bore, and how much luster you reflect on a country in which you made the first displays of your character.'"

MRS. SARAH ANN VAN BLARCOM.

All Who Laugh at This Will Get Four Years' Punishment.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose a rare specimen of religious bigotry. I think it is worth publishing in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Respectfully yours, L. LEREIN.

This prayer was found in the year of Our Lord 135. It was sent from the pope to Emperor Charles, when he was going into battle, for safety. And they who shall repeat this or hav it about them shall never die a sudden death, be drowned, nor be imprisoned. Nor shall they fall into the hands of their enemies, nor ever be overpowered in any battle. Being read over a woman in labor, she shall be instantly delivered, and when the child is born place this prayer on its right side and the child shall rise up and thank you. And he who shall write this prayer from house to house shall be blessed by the Lord, and he or she who shall laugh at this prayer shall suffer four years' punishment, and who wear this prayer shall hav three days' warning before death.

PRAYER.

O Adorable Savior dying on the cross for my sins, O Holy Cross of Christ, hav mercy on me, an unworthy sinner! O H C of Ch, guide me in all good truth, and save me from an unprovided death! Crucified Jesus of Nazareth, giv me grace that the wicked enemy may keep off me, now and forever. Amen.

In honor of J C in this Sacred Person and Merciful Death; in honor of Resurrection and godlike ascension through which he desires to bring us to Salvation. True as I was Circumcised on New Year's day as the three angels brought forth the offerings; true as on the third day He ascended into Heaven and will save me from my enemies, visible and invisible, now and forever. Amen.

Into thy hand, Lord, I offer my spirit. Jesus hav mercy on me, Mary and Joseph, pray for me, particularly at the hour of my death. Amen.

Indignant at Clerical Misrepresentation.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Aug. 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: It is about time that I should let you know that I still liv. Yes, I am trying to exist by mining beach sands. Your paper I read with deep pleasure in my tent on the lonely seashore. What could I do without it?

I hav just come to the city, and read in to-day's paper a sermon preached by that fanatical, inconsistent, and untruthful man, B. Fay Mills. The article is worthy of your consideration from the fact that Mills makes assertions relativ to Hume, Paine, Voltaire, and Ingersoll which should be refuted. The article speaks for itself.

But, dear TRUTH SEEKER, what puzzles me is this: How did Mr. Mills, or any other man, ascertain the character of God—that is, if such a being ever existed?

You will see by the article that Mr. Mills admits that God is entirely ignorant of the commission of a sinful act until men and women expose their acts to him (God). What a God he must be!

The truest utterance which he makes is that "ministers are of no use but to stir up the people."

By illustration he speaks of a woman who, he says, appealed to God, and adds that God could do nothing for this woman but what she could do for herself. If this is true, of what benefit is God to anyone? When, oh, when will people realize that the Bible is an imposition, and its expounders are fools or knaves and only preach it that they may liv in ease, while their dupes sweat and toil to support them and liv in poverty and want?

Time will not permit me to say more at present. My only hope is that Colonel Ingersoll will refute the lies uttered by this false prophet, B. Fay Mills.

Yours for truth, WM. PATTERSON.

[The rantings of B. Fay Mills, professional revivalist, are not worth considering. His remarks about Paine, Hume, and Voltaire, are the regulation lies, proved to be lies a thousand times, and what he says of Ingersoll is claptrap. It would be worth while to expose Mr. Mills to the same audience, for their sakes only, but he is not worth space in THE TRUTH SEEKER. He is too cheap a blatherskite.—ED. T. S.]

Says Ingersoll Should Shun Politics.

DU BOIS, PA., Sept. 2, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: It must be almost three years since my first and only letter appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER's "Letters from Friends." Many changes hav taken place since that time, which caused the writer of this letter to drop out, as it were, from the ranks of men, women, and children.

Freedom of thought is not nor never has been tolerated in this neck of woods. You hav not many subscribers in this part of Pennsylvania, but those of us who embraced the idea of Voltaire, Paine, and lastly, Ingersoll, of New York, are as determined to stand up for that principle today as ever the above gentlemen could be. We are not all gifted like the eloquent New Yorker, either as regards education or other necessary qualities to be taken into consideration; but one thing we hav got is the real manhood to stand for our rights as American citizens.

And allow me the liberty of saying that although Pope Bob is right in a great many of his ideas, he is wrong in some. Ingersoll's politics should not be discussed through Freethought papers. He is a Republican—may he be one till Democracy has erased the bloody shirt from its gigantic bosom. Neither of these parties cares for him. He is not wanted during a campaign unless willing to stand upon a Calvinistic creed which he has tried in a weak and feeble way to denounce since a boy on his mother's knee. Why, then, should our leader (we recognize him as such) be asked through the press to go upon either stage or pulpit to speak for Harrison? He is not a Harrison man, and has a free and acknowledged right to try and elect some one who will be what he claims—an American first, last, and always. When we as working-men and -women try to illumin the great Agnostic's pathway, we simply show ourselvs to be lamentably lacking in even common sense. Who knows Ingersoll's business better than Ingersoll? Answer will at once come from every real Freethinker to the effect that Robert certainly has not forgotten himself yet, especially when he reads the North American Review which contains "Thomas Paine" by that "bold, bad man"—as the puny and pussy-cat Methodists call "Our Bob."

Respectfully submitted by

ROBT. REAY.

A Sister of an Activ, Inquiring Mind.

EDOM, TEX., Aug. 28, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been a reader of your excellent journal, THE TRUTH SEEKER, but a very short time, but many useful lessons hav I learned during that short time. I now belong to several secret societies, and I hav always been a Liberal, always thirsting after the truth of mental developments—moral developments, physical developments, social developments, economical developments, and religious developments. I hav belonged to two different churches, and now hold a letter of membership in the latter. I never hav been satisfied with any religious creed or doctrin or religious rules. I indorse one about as much as I do the other. I read all kinds of ethics and other doctrins. They all sound strange to me. There is something wrong somewhere. I do not think any one church has got the theory right. I am not partial in my religious views, therefore accept the truth wherever I find it, rejecting the part I think is false. I believe there was and is a God. I believe there was a Jesus Christ, one of the best men that ever did or ever will liv on the earth, and I think he and his disciples were very liberal, for the disciples sold their houses and land and had all things in common, and put or appointed men to wait on the women and children to see that none went lacking. Men were appointed over companies of fifties and hundreds. Jesus was a typical Moses, for in Moses's day we see the same just law and government that we see in the dispensation taught by Christ and his disciples, for they taught reform, liberal reform, a just government for and by the plain and common people. But Romanism coveted the people's land, and wrenched the just laws and governments from out of their hands, and so priests, kings, lords, and usurpers hav reigned ever since, to the destruction of justice and humanity and Liberalism. We hav bowed and are still bound to bow the knee to heathenish rules in what is termed free America, in serving the Lord on the first day of the week instead of the seventh. And if my voice from the Sunny Southland of Texas will do any good in keeping the World's Fair open on the first day of the week, Sunday, then send it up to headquarters, for it is sanctioned by a majority in this land. For women hav a right to think and speak their sentiments in America, for God has endowed them with intellectuals, the same as he did man; and our forefathers knew this and inserted into the platform of government in the early days of American law the plank of universal suffrage. It does not read, men's and boys' suffrage; it says, universal suffrage. From this we infer it meant woman's rights to think, speak, act, and vote on universal issues. Now, if I am wrong will some of our friends on the other side of the question please prove up their point? For I am seeking the truth, so let us hav it, my friends. It will be greatly appreciated by us Liberal-minded, Freethinking Socialists.

Yours for reform,

MRS. GEORGIA E. SHAW.

Information on That Fiat Bank.

COOK, NEB., Aug. 29, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I see in your issue of August 27th one "P. D.," of Castana, Ia., wants proof concerning the Bank of Venice. I hope this will satisfy not only Mr. "P. D.," but all other inquirers after truth. I giv facts from Stephen Colwell's digest of fourteen authorities. It proves:

First, That there was a National Bank of Venice founded on a loan of two million ducats spent by the state in 1171, and the bank existed within the memory of living men, a period of six hundred and twenty-six years, during which time it was gradually enlarged over seven hundred per cent.

Second, That A. D. 1423 it was modified by laws to prevent fluctuation.

Third, That the four per cent interest previously paid was abolished.

Fourth, That all promis of reimbursement, other than transfer of credit receipts, was abolished also.

Fifth, That the nation "took the coin of its loans one time for all" in the nation's bank, giving a credit receipt only.

Sixth, That no coin was kept as a specie basis of credit, or for strengthening the nation. It was immediately paid out.

Seventh, That no promis was made to pay coin after 1423 for nearly four hundred years of its continuance.

Eighth, That this "fiat," or legal credit, was that in which all coins were expressed, the fixed standard of payment, and thus the money of account; specie being for retail coin or export commodity and legal tender at twenty per cent discount.

Ninth, That the premium fixed by law of twenty per cent premium over the Venetian gold ducat, so celebrated for its fineness in export, was a real superiority of legal money of account over the commodity of gold, and even gold money.

Tenth, That it was not dependent on any promis of convertibility or redemption in gold, as no claim for any gold was acknowledged in the national bank.

Eleventh, That it continued for nearly four hundred years with all these extraordinary attributes, producing no financial panics and no opposition; but on the contrary grew until it exceeded the money per capita of any nation in Europe, ancient or modern, and was the pride of Venice, the envy of Europe (Shylock).

Twelfth, That it only fell when Napoleon conquered Venice, when it had reached an issue exceeding $16,000,000 of government credit or money for two hundred thousand people.

Thirteenth, That Napoleon could not and did not find one single ducat in its vaults, as there had never been a pretense of any; that he would hav taken gold if it was there, is clear, and thus hav been strengthened to further enslave Venice.

Fourteenth, That the interest alone saved to the people on each million ducats was $6,250,000,000,000 at four per cent for four hundred years, savings-bank interest.

These facts mean something. They amount to much more than calling us "cranks," "crazy fiatists," "calamity howlers," and all the other hard names that are heaped upon us by those who are unable to answer our arguments.

Respectfully, W. P. BROOKS.

Noble Ideas.

WACO, TEX., Aug. 30, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been a reader of your interesting journal for months, and thank you for the benefit and instruction you are the means of giving through your publications and advertised books. We, in Texas, feel the burden of "protection and salvation;" and are beginning to appreciate the great political and Liberal revolution now progressing here to rid this state of sumptuary laws and business depression induced by unscrupulous politicians and religious fanatics. Liberal books make honest and fearless thinkers, and these are our best and most useful and progressiv citizens, to whom the world must ever look for direction and hope.

I want the various books named in the inclosed list. Send me by express, C. O. D., about one hundred, to add to my library of Liberal reading for the benefit of my little family and many friends, whose leisure hours may not be wasted listening to Sunday orations on "how to be saved." A broader idea of life, a greater love and faith in the infinit, is the better religion the world needs. How much happier and better is he who believes in the facts and infinit possibilities of nature's laws and forces. Earnest thought and noble aspiration in the attainment of knowledge, bereft of superstitious awe and dread, are essential to ethical culture and independent intellectual advancement. Interest in phenomena, in all life and all growth, all evolution and progress, tends to improve the mind and heart and keep them ever alert for the reception of new ideas and new facts. The constant change and evident force and development in all matter and all life reveal new wonders and new beauties here and inspire us with greater hope and greater faith in the hereafter. "Christian mythology" and the religious superstition of olden time still has its influence; but the world is growing wiser and better, and we can now rejoice without fear of chain or fagot that we liv in this age of progress and reason. And as rises the glorious Texas sun, casting his first beams of golden light over the great green prairie, dispelling its mists and changing its dews into glistening gems, and forcing reverence and admiration for the great panorama, so shall skepticism and science dispel the gloom of old theology and claim the allegiance of the world's better and wiser generations. And then, you, "ye good and faithful servants," enter thou into the joy of thy benefactions. One great worker in this cause I admire and honor—the thoughtful, the fearless, the great-hearted Ingersoll. May he long liv to see the good he has done in teaching men how to reason and think, and how to liv and love. As his life has brought the world to reverence and honor the memory and genius of the immortal Paine, so his own epitaph will bring to his name and to his cause the love, admiration, and gratitude of every continent.

I am no writer, but my heart is with you.

J. P. HODGE.

Rejected Communication.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Aug. 24, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I send you an article which a friend of mine wrote as an answer to the article of Mons. Janssens in the Morning Star of the 4th and 11th of June. In the city where we are we could not get a paper to publish it, after trying every one. I told him there were several Liberal newspapers up North and West that I thought would publish it, and he asked me which one I considered best. My answer was that for me I thought THE TRUTH SEEKER was the best. I therefore send you a copy of it, hoping that you will find a place in your valuable columns to publish it, and oblige a Freethinker of the school of the great and Liberal-minded man of the world, Robert Ingersoll.

Respectfully, LEONCE LEONARD.

DEAR SIR: Articles condemning Pythianism published in the Morning Star of June 4th and 11th by his grace Monseigneur Janssens, came to my notice to-day. As the articles hav remained unanswered, permit me to use your valuable columns to reply. His grace asserts that Pythians are under the ban of the church because they will not hand their ritual over to be inspected and dissected as decreed by the third plenary council of Baltimore and council No. 247, because they hav a prelate and prayers, which hav a tendency to weaken the faith of man, as it substitutes the religion of man for the revealed religion of Christ. These reasons are very plausible, and would hav been listened to with downcast eyes by the people of the fifteenth century, or when our forefathers went to war with a club for a weapon and a turtle-shell for a breastplate; but in this age when science has made such strides, when the mysteries of the deep are no longer a closed book to man, when the firmament which the ancients believed was the abode of the Gods has been so thoroughly investigated by the telescope—in this age of science, the beams of which glide into every hamlet, holding Education by the hand, before whom superstition, ghosts, and hobgoblins disappear, man needs no longer fawn and cringe with Jesuitical mien before a priest, nor need his free thoughts be the means of sending him to the stocks, the thumbscrews, and other vile means of torture, constructed to crush Freethought and invented by the faith of which his grace Monseigneur Janssens is the highest dignitary in this state. Can his grace show me in any portion of the scriptures where Christ forbade secret societies? If he did not say so, why should his grace and three hundred ecclesiastics hav a right to dictate on the same to man? Where can his grace show me in the scriptures any order for a secret society to turn over to his excellency the pope their rituals so that they be rewritten and doctored to suit their special purposes? And if the scriptures do not say so, why? Again, I ask, why should three hundred ecclesiastics, no matter how sanctified, be better judges of what is right than three hundred thousand free-born Americans—men born under the stars and stripes with that great luminary Freedom shedding its rays around them; men who sent science and education to every little hut, and who gave to man—man the image of his maker—a right to use his brains? Can his grace tell me that the children of Freedom are not as good judges of right or wrong as any set of men no matter how anointed they might be? Then his grace says that no secret society should hav a prelate, one not anointed and made such by the grace of God. I ask the gentleman, why should one who has been rubbed with oil and ashes and who has staid three years in a seminary learning only one thing, and that orthodoxy, be more worthy to say grace than the father of a family? Is it only those who hav a certificate to that effect who can ask God to send down his blessing upon any body of men? Is God, the great, the good God, so narrow-minded as to say to St. Peter, "Close the door, Pete, there is a prayer coming up from a man who is not in the business," when that prayer comes from the heart of the one who says it, when every word is felt? But when a priest is officiating does God say unto Peter, "Open quick the door—one of our fellows is sending up a prayer," and immediately do the angels grab up their harps and begin playing when that priest is saying that prayer unfeelingly—he is too much in the business to feel it—and trying to hurry matters up to get through with the job?

I now reach the portion where his grace says that secret societies hav a tendency to weaken revealed religion. (Is the decree of a body of priests and their orders inspiration?) Does his grace mean to say that the religion which says, "Do unto others what you want done unto you;" the religion that has the halo of love around it; the religion of home, of the fireside; the religion which tells a father to love his wife and children, can be outshone by any system that he has to thrust upon us?

I hav now covered the question of his grace, and will say to my brother Pythians that if they follow the teachings of Pythianism they will surely enter the kingdom of heaven, if there is any, all Rome notwithstanding. I feel that if by following the precepts of Pythianism I will be damned I would certainly prefer going to see the pyrotechnics a Pythian than be given a harp with the proviso that I should not think, that I should be as my forefathers were in the days of the Inquisition. Let his grace look over our Declarations of Principles, which is an open book to everyone, and he will see that Pythianism is brotherly love, a mansion of goodness erected upon the pillars of friendship, charity, and benevolence. If there is anything wrong in keeping the distressed widow, in extending the hand of fellowship to a brother in need, and being charitable to the orphans, I want to know it.

Respectfully, L. M. T.

The Creation.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: The character, endowment, and history of Adam are very interesting subjects for reflection to the whole race of man. And because the memorial of Adam is brief and obscure, it is more desired that information should be had on the subject of Bible history.

Creation—this term properly signifies a production of something out of nothing. A learned monk, Calmet, in his "Critical Dictionary of the Bible," says, "There is no word which accurately expresses absolute creation out of nothing."

Now, who is to know who wrote the first book of Moses, called Genesis, commencing, "In the beginning?" When was that? It remains a mystery, like many other things related in the Bible.

When Moses was forty years old he murdered an Egyptian and buried him in the sand, and fearing detection ran away and became a fugitiv from justice. Now, Moses being a murderer, can it be true that God would employ him to do God's will?

It appears to me, in reading the first part of Exodus, that another person, not Moses, wrote the book, for it relates what Moses did. Moses lived one hundred and twenty years, according to the account of him in Deut. xxxiv, and was buried in a valley, "But no man knoweth of his sepulcher unto this day." Very singular, that. Also, the fellow who wrote the history told a lie when he said, "There was none like unto Moses, whom the Lord knew face to face." It will do well for the curious to read part of Ex. xxxiii, 11: "And the Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend." In the twentieth verse of the same chapter: "And he said, Thou canst not see my face, for there shall no man see my face and liv." There is a place: "Thou shalt stand upon a rock: I will cover thee with my hand; and I will take away my hand, and thou shalt see my back parts, but my face shall not be seen." What humbug for a man with a rational mind to believe.

Will not some of your able correspondents enlighten me on the following questions: "And God said, Let us make man in our image after our likeness. So God created man in his own image. In the image of God created he him." Now, I desire to be informed, Who was God talking to at that time? And which was created first, the serpent or Adam?

In reviewing the history of Adam there are a few things that demand particular notice. The formation of Adam is introduced in the creation to lead readers of the Bible to reflect upon its truth. God said, first, "in our image;" second, "according to our likeness." There seemed to be two ideas. First, "in our image"—in our similitude—does not that refer to his figure?

And again: "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Now, I want to know: How could Adam sin, when it was the breath or spirit of God that gave life? Could a just God impart sin into an image he had formed? It is said one must partake of poison to be inoculated with it.

Adam was innocent; had no experience. He was a dummy; was not capable of doing wrong, and could not in the nature of things, for he possessed the spirit of his creator, and knew not sin. If it is otherwise, then I must conclude that God intended that Adam should fall, and he prepared the way.

Why was there any restriction placed on Adam that God knew Adam could not keep?

In my opinion (which some folks think is not worth much), I think the account of the creation of the world and the fall of man is one of the greatest humbugs of the age.

How strange it is that superstition will hang on to mankind. Yet it is not strange either, for what is instilled into the youthful breast is likely to remain, unless Reason makes the mind clear.

Yours truly, S. R. THORNE.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Honr."

Across the Atlantic.

Through the Slums.—Salvation Army and Its Work.— Wage-Workers.—Annie Besant.—The Old Flag.—Good-bye to London.

I told you about "Petticoat Lane" on Sunday. On Monday it is no better, but worse. It was a wet, sloppy morning when, in company with two ladies, I went that way again, away out in the Whitechapel district, the peddlers and fishmongers on every side, through the dense and motley crowd of humanity, into the byways and dark passageways of London. Here one sees misery and wretchedness in their every aspect. Children, pallid, squalid, pinched; women, haggard, fierce, and determined; others, weak-willed, trembling, tottering; men with the look of rapacity, greed, cruelty, gleaming from their eyes—"fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils"—anything for money. Poor, wrecked, unfortunate human beings of all nationalities here congregate and liv—no, simply stay. There is no real life here. The dark, low places where they creep in, crowd promiscuously together, and learn to call it home, how shall I describe them? I cannot.

We went along Hanbury street and through numerous little back alleys and turnings till we came to the workshops of the Salvation Army. Here were brawny, stalwart men who hav become reduced in circumstances and, having nowhere else to go, come here to find work for food and lodging. Nine or ten different trades are carried on, such as carpentering, matweaving, painting, polishing, cabinet-making, tambourine-making, etc.

One bright young fellow in the cabinet department I questioned: "What brought you here?" "Hunger! I was out of work, obliged to pawn my tools for food—at last I came here." It was very pitiable. Many hav seen better days. One young man had been a drawing-master in a college and was graduated from a prominent college. His pictures showed decided talent. My sister purchased one of his pictures, and we bought tambourines also.

These men work here till a better chance offers somewhere else. I think I told you in a former letter of the shelter for men connected with the Army, where nearly three hundred men find a place to sleep at a nominal sum. There is also a woman's shelter, where, every night, three hundred and more women find a place to lay their weary heads. One part was set aside for the women who had babies with them. Fourpence a night givs them a roof over their heads. "And do you mean to say that these women hav no homes?" I asked. "No homes whatever." "And what do they do during the day?" "They stand around the streets—some sell matches, lavender, fruit, or beg from passers-by." Later I saw some of these women, whose pale, sharpened features, wide eyes, and hungry look made my heart ache, standing out in the pitiless rain as they were. No home on earth. And yet the duke of Westminster, the duke of Bedford, and others whose yearly incomes swell to millions, pass these flesh and blood relativs—for we are all one family—heedless of their cries and pleadings. I must say that in caring for these wretched beings the Salvation Army, as distasteful as some of its methods are, is doing good work among the poor and lowly.

Society is much at fault. The wage-workers, an army in themselvs, do not receive a fair equivalent for their toil. Men work for a whole week for twenty shillings, about $5, and support a family out of that. Policemen are paid from twenty-three shillings to thirty-three and thirty-eight shillings per week. Would not our policemen in America grumble some at such pay as that?

Horse-car conductors get five and sixpence a day, $1.37, and work from 7 A.M. to 10 P.M. All grades of work, so far as my inquiries hav been, are poorly paid, compared with American prices. And women are paid worse than men. They do the most menial work for the smallest compensation—washing doorsteps, scrubbing here and there for barely enough to keep body and soul together.

You hav heard of the Aerated Bread Companies and their restaurants. They are met with frequently in London. In these restaurants bread, cakes, milk, coffee, and tea are furnished at very low rates, and they are exceedingly well patronized, so that the corporations realize forty per cent per annum. But what are the wages of the young girls who wait on customers in these places? I will tell you: They receive eight shillings per week up to fourteen or fifteen shillings as the maximum—and pay for their food and lodging out of that! No wonder poverty and misery abound, and the streets throng with girls offering themselvs as sacrifices to the demon of lust, compelled to a life of shame by hunger and cold. I hav stood breathless almost and watched at midnight the barefaced, open plying of a calling that should make humanity blush with shame and indignation. Civilization! Enlightenment! I had almost said there is none, only a low, immoral, beastly groveling amid the smoke and fires of lascivious desires and uncontroled passions.

Sunday, August 21st.—

This morning I made a pleasant call upon that sincere enthusiast, and most lovely lady, Annie Besant. A drive of four or five miles out into the country, called St. John's Wood, brought me to the place where she livs, in a community of twelve—workers as earnest as herself, no doubt. Over the gateway the words "Theosophical Society" in gilt letters announce the fact that here may be found the headquarters of Theosophy in London. My friend and I were ushered into the library, and in a few minutes Mrs. Besant entered. Gentle, unassuming, earnest, with deep thought written all over her fair face and looking from her beautiful eyes, one is immediately inspired with her sincerity and the truthfulness of her motivs in whatever cause she espouses.

Mrs. Besant has had a varied experience and a wonderful one. She is to be esteemed for her candor and allegiance to truth in whatever form it appears to her, admired for her bravery under many trying positions, and loved for her own womanly self.

Madam Blavatsky's portrait is prominent in the rooms, and the mystic insignia of the Orientals appear on the walls and about the apartments. Mrs. Besant took us into the hall where meetings are held every Thursday. To-day decorators were busy embellishing the hall with pictures exemplifying the ancient religions. There was an air of mystery to the uninitiated about the premises, but it was not unpleasant. Mrs. Besant expects to visit America in early autumn on a lecture tour, when her hosts of friends there will be happy to see her again.

Mr. George Mellen, of Fall River, called this afternoon, and as he left he espied the silken folds of the dear old American flag in the hallway. "Ah," said he, "let me walk under the flag again," and turning back he stood a moment under its protecting folds. The loveliest piece of bunting in the world is that same precious flag of ours. It is respected, too, by Englishmen as by every other nationality. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sprague, of Malden, left London to-day for Germany. They are charming acquaintances, introduced by Mr. Mellen, whom to know is to greatly admire and respect.

Somebody asks me about buying goods in London, and the prices. Well, some things are cheap, cheaper than in America, as woolens, especially gentlemen's apparel. Some grades of gloves are low-priced, and linens are cheap, but as a rule, American prices compare very favorably, and I would not advise people to spend much money here. Americans are unwise to leave much money here for articles to be obtained at home for reasonable prices. Counting your expenses and the everlasting fees demanded of you, one pays dearly for every purchase made.

Keep the money in circulation in your own country, ladies and gentlemen, and patronize home industries.

I hav just seen two copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and heard a remark that it is the best Liberal paper in the world. The price for it is just double what it is at home.

I expect to leave London on the morrow, and before I go, you will want to know where I hav made my home for the last four weeks.

It is here in Bedford place, No. 37. "Columbia Mansions" is the attractiv name of the two connected houses that attract many American travelers. Madam Azulay, herself, is a very attractiv lady, and is always happy if her guests are comfortable, and if they are not so it is usually their own fault. This place offers special inducements, as it is convenient to nearly all the public and popular resorts in London, and yet is so quiet that one might easily fancy himself quite in the country. People meet here not only from the United States, but from nearly all parts of the world. Captain Baker and his charming wife, from India; Mr. Edward Alquerin, from Brazil, and Mr. Turner from the isle of Wight. From the United States, a host of charming people make every day most interesting, as Miss Marion Grant, from distant Oregon; Mr. Robert Adams, of Fall River; Miss Ellen Mosman, from Maine; Mrs. Alice Pitts, from Boston, who is now on her way to her home; Mrs. Rose and her bright boy, Albert, from Dallas, Texas, and her sister, Mrs. Burton, and son, Waldo, from New Orleans.

I must tell you a little incident concerning Mr. Alquerin, mentioned above. He brought with him from Brazil a red cedar chest—box, they call it here—and he wanted to dispose of it. As he did not find a purchaser, he gave it away. I think he felt sad when he learned that I would hav bought it had I known, and perhaps he would hav presented it to me had he known. No doubt he will always regret the fate that kept Brazilian cedar in England rather than in America. I am sure I shall.

I almost hate to leave London after all. It has been very pleasant to me here, and I hav seen much of its life, its people, and its places of interest, of which there are many. I hav told you briefly of some special points of interest, but hav been obliged to leave much unwritten, to be recalled at future times. London will always be a green and lovely spot in my memory.

I should tell you that in London here I hav made my home in Bedford place, Russel square. The Columbia Mansions are kept by Madam Azulay, and American strangers are made very welcome here. "Make yourself at home, be happy," says the handsome and accomplished madam, "and thus you make me happy;" hence she always has a houseful of Americans at Nos. 37 and 38.

My last evening in London was a very pleasant one, as a happy company indoors at the Mansions can testify.

Capt. Edward Baker, superintendent of the pearl fisheries, and correspondent of the Madras Mail, entertained us in a brilliant manner, but I could not induce him to tell how I may smuggle a few pearls into the States should I visit India at some future time. SUSAN H. WIXON.

THE STORY HOUR

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will

Price, $1.00. Address,
THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW,
WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.

By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

Materialism:

Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German.
Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

—LIQUOR DRINKING—

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament.

THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not Included in the New Testament.

Price, - - - - - - - - - $1.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, - - - - - - 75 cents

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIOT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, - - - - - - - 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS TO NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents

Send Twenty-five Cents
FOR
MADHOUSES AND ABUSE OF LUNATICS

And get the Plain Dealer—a Liberal weekly paper—free for six months.
Address ELMINA D. SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

The Modern Science Essayist

Popular Evolution Essays and Lectures.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life and personal characteristics; his views on education; his religious opinions. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His ancestry, life, and personal characteristics. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. Did the material universe ever have a beginning? By GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology; How the world grew. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETABLE LIFE; How does life begin; The problem of spontaneous generation. By WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The evidences from geology, geographical distribution, and comparative zoology. By ROSSITER RAYMOND, Ph.D.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: Relation of man to the brute creation; his ancestral line; duration of human life on the planet. By E. D. COPE, Ph.D.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: The mind and the nervous system: the nature of mind. By ROBT. G. ECCLES, M.D.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. Primitive man; growth of the family, city, and state: development of the domestic relations; marriage. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. Origin of religious beliefs; ideas of primitive man. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. How altruism grows out of egoism; the proper balance. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION—a, from geology; b, from morphology; c, from embryology; d, from metamorphosis; e, from rudimentary organs; f, from geographical distriouition; g, from discovered links; h, from artificial breeding; i, from reversion; k, from mimicry. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By REV. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. Relation of the doctrine to prevailing philosophical systems. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. Plans for social regeneration as tested by evolution. By REV. MINOT J. SAVAGE.
16. THE SCOPE AND PRINCIPLES OF THE EVOLUTION PHILOSOPHY. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
17. THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF HERBERT SPENCER'S PHILOSOPHY. By SYLVAN DREY.
18. THE RELATIVITY OF KNOWLEDGE. The nature of sense-perception; sight, sound, taste, smell, feeling; the doctrine of the Unknowable. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
19. A STUDY OF MATTER AND MOTION. An excellent digest of a much vexed question, with quotations from many authorities. By HON. A. N. ADAMS.
20. PRIMITIVE MAN. Man as revealed by archeological studies; evidences of man's antiquity; geological periods; man's appearance in the pliocene; paleolithic and neolithic races; the ages of bronze and iron; cave men and lake-dwellers; dolmen and mound builders; primitive implements and tools; proofs of man's natural evolution. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
21. GROWTH OF THE MARRIAGE RELATION. Marriage a primitive institution; its earlier forms; no evidence of original promiscuity; exogamy and endogamy; group-marriage; polygyny, polyandry, and monogamy; marriage by capture; monogamy the highest form of the relation; divorce and divorce laws; marriage a contract; its regulation by the state. By C. STANILAND WAKE.
22. EVOLUTION OF THE STATE. The growth of political institutions; the patriarchal family; the tribe and clan. By JOHN A. TAYLOR.
23. EVOLUTION OF LAW. How law begins; statute law and judge-made law; the conversion of customs into law. By PROF. RUFUS SHELDON.
24. EVOLUTION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE. Supernatural ideas of disease; fetichism in medicine; the beginnings of medical science. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
25. EVOLUTION OF ARMS AND ARMOR. The necessity for arms and armor under the struggle for existence. By JOHN C. KIMBALL.
26. EVOLUTION OF THE MECHANIC ARTS, development of the human hand; the earliest use of implements and tools. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
27. EVOLUTION OF THE WAGES SYSTEM. The definition of wages; economic characteristics of the wage system; wages the outgrowth of slavery; origin and development of the wages system. By PROF. GEO. GUNTON.
28. EDUCATION AS A FACTOR IN CIVILIZATION. The beginnings of education; early methods in Egypt, Persia, China, Greece, and Rome; early Christian ideas of education; Catholic and Protestant views; the common school system. By MISS CAROLINE B. LE ROW.
29. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. I. The Theological Method. By REV. JOHN CHADWICK.
30. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. II. The Socialistic Method. By WILLIAM POTTS.
31. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. III. The Anarchistic Method. By HUGH O. PENTECOST.
32. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. IV. The Scientific Method. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
33. ASA GRAY: His Life and Work. By MRS. MARY TREAT.
34. EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUMANS. The Man and his Work. By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

☞ Each Number, Ten Cents. ☜

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by
ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.
The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.
Price. cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents.

PUSHED BY UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents: cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full, index 446pp., $1.50.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S W...

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER O...

Essays and Lectures. Embracing In... ence of Christianity on Civilization; Chr... tianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offe... in Place of Christianity; Scientific Materialism... Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialist Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will t... Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cru... ties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bibl... Freethought Judged by Its Fruits; Our Ide... of God 300 pp., paper, 60 cents.

Influence of Christianity upon Civiliza... tion. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place o... Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism; Its Meaning an... Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Stand... point. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Re... former. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: He... Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS
I. B. SEELEY & CO.
WARRANTED.

SEELEY'S HARD-RUBBER TRUSSES

Will retain the most difficult forms of HERNIA or RUPTURE with comfort and safety, thereby completing a radical cure of all curable cases. Impervious to moisture, may be used in bathing; and fitting perfectly to the form of body, are worn without inconvenience by the youngest child, most delicate lady, or the laboring man, avoiding all sour, sweaty, padded unpleasantness, being Light, Cool, Cleanly, and always, reliable. The correct and skillful mechanical treatment of

HERNIA OR RUPTURE A SPECIALTY. EITHER IN PERSON OR BY MAIL.

25 YEARS REFERENCES:—Profs. S. D. Gross, D. Hayes Agnew, Willard Parker, W. H. Pancoast, Dr. Thomas G. Morton, and Surgeon-Generals of the U. S. Army and Navy. Our "Mechanical Treatment of Hernia or Rupture and Price List," with illustrations and directions for self-measurement, mailed on application. I. B. SEELEY & CO., 25 South 11th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

News of the Week.

JOHN G. WHITTIER died on the 7th.

PARIS reports fifty to one hundred cases of cholera daily, and twenty-five to fifty deaths.

DANIEL DOUGHERTY, "the Silver-tongued Orator," of Philadelphia, died on the 5th.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN was beaten by Corbett at New Orleans on the 7th. The cause was an extraordinary slowness, which prevented his hitting or warding.

HAMBURG, Germany, is being devastated by the cholera. Most persons able to leave hav departed, and dispatches describe the place as "a city of the dead and dying."

POSTPONEMENT of the dedication of the World's Fair (Oct. 21, 1892), and perhaps of the Fair itself, on account of the cholera, is being more and more talked of by the directors.

THE house of Dr. Bartlett, an American missionary in Konia, Asia Minor, has been burnt. He had refused to promis not to hold religious exercises or instruct nativ children on the premises.

BLAINE has written to the chairman of the Maine state Republican committee a letter naming as the three issues on which to fight Democracy, protection, reciprocity, and national as against a proposed state currency. He does not mention Harrison or the "Force" bill.

IT is proclaimed by the New York health officers that that city has not had a single case of cholera, the disease having so far successfully been kept in the ships in the harbor. The cases of cholera once said to hav occurred in the city are declared to hav been but disorders resembling it.

FOR many years there has been friction in the Detroit, Mich., police department between the Catholic and anticatholic factions. This has brought out an order from the new chief that members when on duty will not be permitted to wear, on any part of their police uniform, any badges except that furnished by the board of police, Grand Army of the Republic buttons excepted.

A COMMUNICATION from India says: "All the conditions invite pestilence. Boards of health are almost unknown and a sanitary engineer would starve to death if he relied on his profession for a livelihood. Among the inhabitants, to whom life is too frequently mere existence, there is a fatalistic disregard of death and the cholera is considered a natural agency for decreasing the overcrowded population. The religion of the country even is opposed to innovation and the change of conditions which hav existed for centuries." It is in this country that the cholera started, thence spreading through Russia and other countries equally dominated by religion and devoid of Freethought and science, till it has reached and menaces even the more Rationalized nations.

THE cholera continues its ravages in Russia. It is thought that in the last two years influenza, typhus, and cholera together hav killed a million persons. This amount is far in excess of the official returns, which are primarily incomplete, and in addition are not desired by the government to show a great mortality. There is an under-supply of doctors to combat the cholera, owing to fear of the superstitious inhabitants on the part of physicians and medical students. The following dispatch describes an occurrence which may be taken as a sample of the many ways in which the highly Christian but utterly knowledgeless populace spread the disease: "At Samara a Volga steamer had been pressed into service for the removal to a place of burial of the accumulated corpses of several previous days. When it was about to leave the wharf a frantic crowd of peasants came scurrying out from the highways and byways of the town. Bearing down upon the guard of police on the pier, the enraged fanatics hurled them into the stream and then rushed aboard the boat in search of the corpses, ranged upon the lower decks in tiers. Then the lifeless forms of the departed were raised into sitting positions and numerous fantastic performances were gone through, with the object of 'resuscitation.' A much more ghastly scene could hardly be dreamed of. The eyelids were pushed back, the lips forced open, and all sorts of 'old woman's' supposed life-elixirs were forced down throats of the dead. Meanwhile women knelt around upon the deck praying loudly for the restoration of life to the inanimate forms, invoking every saint in the calendar and indulging in the most melancholy lament for the victims of witchcraft, as their superstition impelled them to consider the corpses."

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.

Address and Portrait only. 69 pp., 10 cents.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.

The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.

Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—[John Swinton's Paper.

Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'" —[Ingersoll. Price, $1.

Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.

Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.

Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.

My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents, MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Small fees; valid patents with broad claims; letters of inquiry promptly answered.

For FREE pamphlet, PATENT LAWS address Commissioner of Patents, Washington, D. C.

We hav been informed by old inventors and experienced patentees, who employ this solicitor, that he is skilful.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

RI-PANS TABULES

To Regulate the
STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE
RIPANS TABULES.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

Antiquity Unveiled.

The Book of the 19th Century.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED, a work giving the true origin of Christianity—The Christian Scriptures traced to their source and proved to have been derived from the written Gospels and teachings of ancient sun worship. This volume contains the greatest and most important revelations of our time and no student should be without it. A perusal of its contents will make apparent the necessity for what is termed the higher criticism of the Bible, a topic that is causing so much agitation at present. 625 Pages, Cloth and Gilt. Price, $1.50. Postage, 12 cents. Agents Wanted.

Oriental Publishing Co., Philadelphia, Pa.
P. O. Box 446.

For Sale by Principal Booksellers.

Agents for The Truth Seeker.

Alabama.
News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.
Loeb & Loeb, Montgomery.
Arizona.
J. S. Mansfield, Tucson.
California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 117 W. 1st, Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 102 N. Main, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Thos. W. Baker, Selma.
L. R. Titus, 237 South 4th st., San Jose.
Canada.
P. C. Allen, 35 King st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
John McKenna, 80 Yonge st., Toronto.
R. J. Moffat, Sea Island, Tulu Island, B.C.
Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.
C. Smith & Son, 385 Larimer st., Denver.
Stanchfield & Co., 200 Union ave., Pueblo.
Harbottle & Co., Salida.
Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.
A. J. Gardner, Kissimmee.
Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.
Illinois.
Post-Office News Co., 93 Adams, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Brentano Bros., 204 Wabash ave., Chicago.
Chas. W. Curry, 183 Madison st., Chicago.
Chas. Macdonald, 55 Washington, Chicago.
Indiana.
H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.
A. C. Katt, Fort Wayne.
Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne, New Orleans.
Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Baker & Holton, 87 Woodward av., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Minnesota.
E. P. Parcher, 8 3rd st., So. Minneapolis.
Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.
Nebraska.
J. M. Wiley, P. O. News Depot, York.
New York.
Brentano Bros., 5th ave. & 18th st., N. Y.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
Abramowitz Bros., 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., N.Y.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.
E. J. Nieuwland, 10th ave. and 157th st.
Anderson & Co., 704 8th ave.
S. M. Bernhard, 119 E. 104th st.
Harlem Book Co., Boulevard Hotel, 124th st. and Lexington ave.
Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 342 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
B. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Day & Co., 259 Superior, Clevel'd.
Alf. Warren Co, 217 Central ave, Cincinnati.
Thos. Goddard, Box 235, Huron.
Standard News Co., 14 W. Tusc st, Canton.
Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 291 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.
G. Thornton, Palace Hotel Block, Heppner
Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden, Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
R. Staley, Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.
Fulton Bros., McKeesport.
Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.
Tennessee.
W. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry, Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.
Rich Bros. & Mills, 229 N. Cherry, Nashville
Texas.
H. Hover, Denison.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 346½ Main st., Dallas.
G. W. Baldwin, Houston.
E. L. Merrill, Independent Pulpit, Waco.
Utah.
C. H. Parsons, 164 S. Main, Salt Lake City.
Margetts Bros., 76 Main st., Salt Lake City.
Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
J. C. Nathan, 104 S. 2nd st., Seattle.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.
West Virginia.
News Store, 123 3rd st., Parkersburg.
England. [London.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st.,
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.
Australia.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.
New Zealand.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Price, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

Gems of Thought.

THE first annals of modern nations are fabulous: things prodigious and improbable ought sometimes, undoubtedly, to be related, but only as proofs of human credulity. They constitute part of the history of human opinion and absurdities. —Voltaire.

I SAY Nature continues, glory continues,
I praise with electric voice,
For I do not see one imperfection in the universe,
And I do not see one cause or result lamentable at last in the universe.
—Walt Whitman.

EVEN if nothing worse than wasted mental effort could be laid to the charge of theology, that alone ought to be sufficient to banish it from the earth, as one of the worst enemies of mankind. What a vast amount of labor and learning has been expended, as uselessly as emptying shallow puddles into sieves.—Lydia Maria Child.

IT is well to recall that the only office of the Devil is to inspire fear and terror, and thus to cover the world with the gloom of superstition and ignorance. The Devil was, therefore, ever the priest's right bower. The Devil and the priest hav always been arm-locked in the struggle of the church against progress and enlightenment.—Henry Frank.

JUDGED in the court of reason and according to the accessible evidence of history, regarded in the light of the new science of comparativ religion, Christianity is no exceptional faith. Its claims of supernatural origin and attestation by miracle are unfounded and irrational. Like all the other religions of the world, it is a human institution, a natural growth out of preëxisting conditions, the product of our Father, MAN.—Lewis Janes.

I DO not trouble the gods; but no father had ever premature gray hairs for me; to no mother hav I brought shame; no man in the world can say I ever turned my back upon him as a friend, or as a foe either; if he preferred me in that capacity; I never swindled mortal man, though many a mortal man has swindled me; no woman in all the world can point to me as the author of her ruin; and no child and no kitten but loves me. But I blaspheme the gods and ridicule their priests, and, therefore, I hav to go to sheol.—Saladin in God and His Book.

To me, the success of Mormonism is no evidence of its truth, because it has succeeded only with the superstitious. It has been recruited from communities brutalized by other forms of superstition. To me, the success of Mohammed does not tend to show that he was right—for the reason that he triumphed only over the ignorant, over the superstitious. The same is true of the Catholic church. Its seeds were planted in darkness. It was accepted by the credulous, by men incapable of reasoning upon such questions.—Ingersoll to Cardinal Manning.

NOT only form, mind, and speech show the method of Evolution, but morals may be traced upward from the emotions of animals and by observation of savage races of men. Agassiz says that dogs hav something very like a conscience. Animals show love and sympathy. Moral sense has been developed by the perception of what is serviceable; and intuitions of right and wrong, which we call conscience, are inherited from ancestors, and are the result of their experience. Therefore we may hope for progress as experiences accumulate, and may believe that in the future man will be better than in the past.—Robt. C. Adams.

FORTUNATELY such [Christian] views hav usually prevailed rather in theory than in practice; and the sound sense of human nature, which is not entirely to be stifled by any dogma, as well as the irresistible pressure of life, hav guarded mankind as a whole from the ruinous influences of a conception of life divorced from the terrestrial; a conception which, on account of its spiritualistic convulsion, must be regarded as the most inveterate enemy of material elevation. But there will be less and less of this as man advances in knowledge and intellect, and as he learns to understand that the aim and object of all human effort must not be the contempt, but the knowledge, control, and utilization of Nature. Toward this the whole thought and working of civilized mankind are actually tending at the present day. In practical life men giv the lie direct to their faith, which has sprung from Oriental fatalism and despair of life; a faith to whose diametrical and irreconcilable opposition to all intellectual and mental progress and to all efforts directed toward the joy and happiness of life, no thoughtful person can shut their eyes. "In practice," says L. Feuerbach very correctly, "all men are Atheists; they deny their faith by their acts."—Büchner.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.
Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.
Common-Sense Thoughts on the Bible. 10c.
Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.
Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.
Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.
Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.
God Proposed for Our National Constitution. 10c.
Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.
Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.
Is Spiritualism True? 10c.
Man's True Saviors. 10c.
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.
Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.
Radical Discourses on Religious Subjects. $1 25.
Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1.25.
Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.
Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.
What Is Right? 10c.
What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.
Who are Christians? 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1892. Price, 25 cents.

Possibilities and Impossibilities, T. H. HUXLEY, M.A., LL.D.
The Growth of Agnosticism, R. BITHELL, B.S., Ph.D.
Early Verses, The Late CONSTANCE NADEN.
Sundays and Holydays, SAMUEL LAING.
Ecclesiasticism, ALFRED MOMERIE, M.A., LL.D.
Christ a Religious Creation, F. J. GOULD.
After Many Years: A Poem, W. B. MCTAGGART.
The Activities of Agnosticism, AMOS WATERS.
Religion Without Superstition, CHARLES WATTS.
Mr. Gladstone and Supernaturalism, H. J. HARDWICKE, F.R.C.S.
The Land of Death: A Poem, SALADIN (W. STEWART ROSS).
The Triumph of Rationalism, FREDERICK MILLER.
An Agnostic Homily, HON. C. K. TUCKERMAN.
Eternal Life: A Poem, GEORGE HENRY MARTIN.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Pocket Theology.

By VOLTAIRE.

Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms. Price, 25 cents.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price, - - - - 10 cents.

ALE AND BEEF

"PEPTONIZED"

For { INVALIDS, CONVALESCENTS, NURSING MOTHERS.

Supplies complete nutrition. Agreeable to the most delicate palate. The only liquid pre-digested Food Tonic on the market.

Physicians Prescribe it. Your Druggist Sells it.

ALE & BEEF CO., 267 W. 17th St., New York.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,

Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,

Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore

Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Cleveland Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 8 P.M., in Room 208 City Hall, for lectures and free discussion on science, religion, and social questions. Able speakers will interest the audience. A. SEE, Pres.; J. ROSENBURG, Sec., 425 Lake street.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1.

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by

DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel, Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c. cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, . . 40 cents

J. D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN,

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,
Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE BEST!

THE

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 3-ounce coin silver, $22; 4-ounce, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $31 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7 50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $15; 11 jewels, $16 50; 15 jewels, $23; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3 60, knives, $1 75; forks, $1.75; all for $6. Solid silver spoons, $1.50 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2 75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Extra heavy teas, $3. Etched:

"The Time to be Happy is Now,"

50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2 75, and $3 50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.

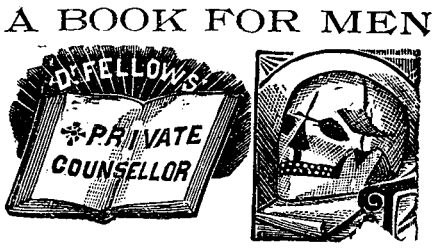
Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

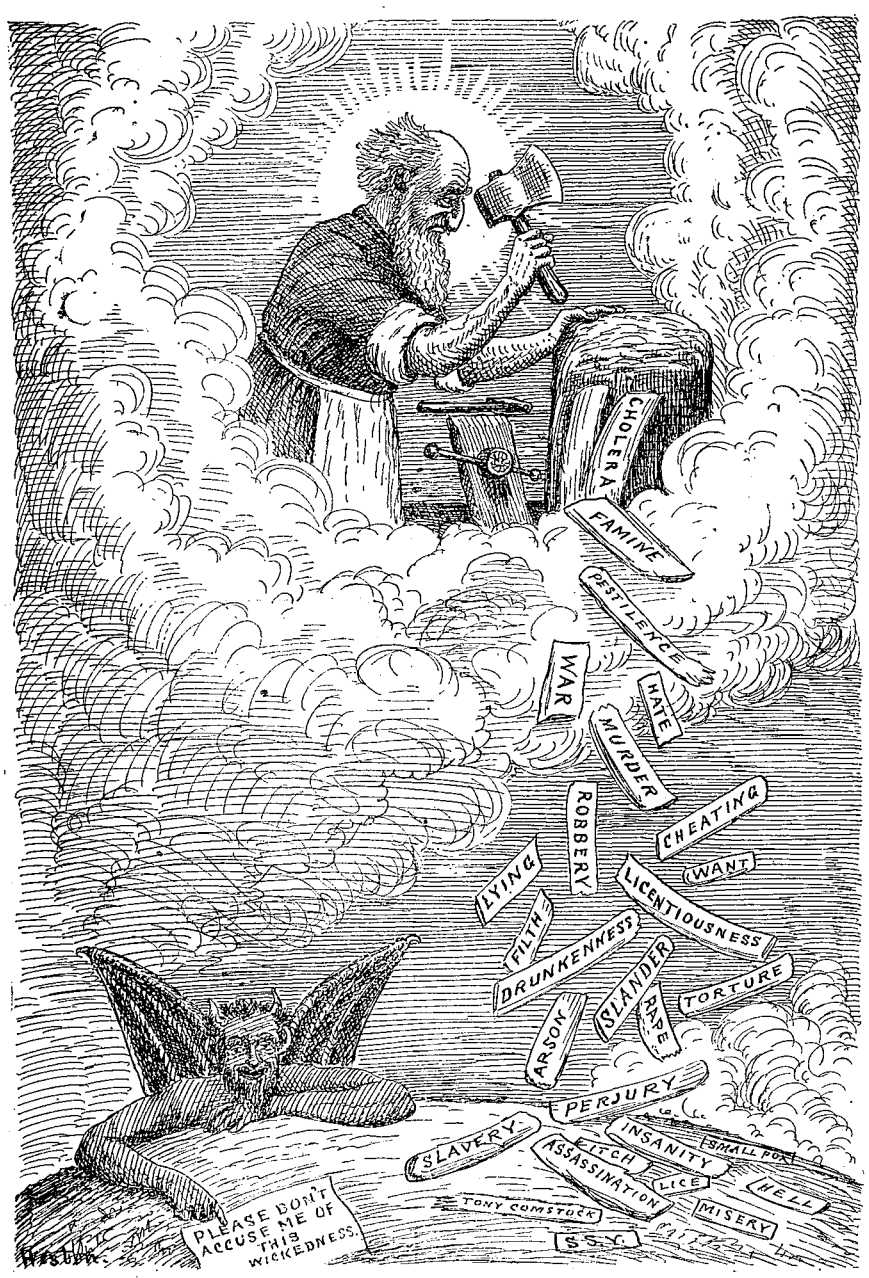


"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.



A BOOK FOR MEN

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.

Address, DR. ROB'T P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

CHIPS FROM AN ALMIGHTY WORKSHOP.

I form the light, and create darkness: I make peace, and create evil: I the Lord do all these things.—Isa. xlv, 7.

Life and Career

—OF—

CHARLES BRADLAUGH,

—BY—

George Jacob Holyoake.

Every Freethinker wants this Life of the Great English Secularist by the Father of Secularism.

Price, 15 cents; Ten copies, $1. Address this Office.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY —and— RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

The Evolution of the Devil. By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York city. The most learned, accurate, scientific, and philosophical analysis of his satanic majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title-page. Price, 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Ingersoll's Address before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian association ever invited a noted Infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from be ginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? AustinBierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50
21.	History of Religion. E. E. Evans	20

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo. cloth $1 00.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

—THE—

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

16	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
3	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results.
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
10	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
6	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
15	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
1	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible,

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. [Price, $1.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 39. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, September 24, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

A COMPARISON OF DOCTRIN—THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE ANIMATE AND THE INANIMATE.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Clootz, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A HISTORY OF RELIGIONS.

BEING

A Condensed Account of the Results of Scientific Research and Philosophical Criticism.

By Elizabeth B. Evans.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,
Immortality of Matter,
Immortality of Force,
Infinity of Matter,
Value of Matter,
Motion,
Form,
Immutability of Natural Laws,
Universality of Natural Laws,
The Heavens,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,
Original Generation,
Secular Generation,
The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Man,
Brain and Mind,
Thought,
Consciousness,
Seat of the Soul,
Innate Ideas,
The Idea of God,
Personal Continuance,
Vital Force,
The Soul of Brutes
Free Will,
Morality,
Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth - - - - - 50 cents.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Life of Thomas Paine,

WITH A

History of His Literary, Political, and Religious Career in America, France, and England.

By MONCURE DANIEL CONWAY,

Author of "Omitted Chapters of History Disclosed in the Life and Papers of Edmund Randolph," "George Washington and Mount Vernon," "Washington's Rules of Civility," etc.

To Which is added a Sketch of Paine by William Cobbett.

No real biography of Paine has ever appeared. The so-called Lives of Paine have been mainly the controversial work of pamphleteers, turning chiefly on his religious heresies. Paine was in his fifty-eighth year before he published anything concerning religion, and before that time he had acted an important part in revolutionary movements in the United States, England, and France. But in the religious conflict initiated by him, his political services and military career hav been but inadequately considered. A certain historical ostracism has buried in the archives of various countries a large mass of documents containing records of paramount interest and importance. Mr. Conway has personally searched such records, in Europe and America, and has obtained from these fresh light, not only on Paine, but on various eminent figures in American and European history with whom he was associated. A large amount of unpublished correspondence has been included in the volumes.

Mr. Conway says in his Preface: "In the laborious work of searching out the real Paine I hav found a general appreciation of its importance, and it will be seen in the following pages that generous assistance has been rendered by English clergymen, by official persons in Europe and America, by persons of all beliefs and no beliefs. In no instance have I been impeded by any prejudice, religious or political. The curators of archives, private collectors, owners of important documents bearing on the subject, have welcomed my effort to bring the truth to light."

Two vols., royal oct., gilt top, portraits, $5.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price, 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap. 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper. 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man." $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers. 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Order of Creation,

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE

HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER,
PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE,
E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 39. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, September 24, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - SEPTEMBER 24, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

The Design Argument.

"ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 8, 1892.

"EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Dear Sir: Judging from a reasonable standpoint, there are evidences of the existence of an intelligent creator.

"Being an Agnostic, and at the same time an investigator and seeker of the truth, I submit the following for your digestion and explanation:

"In searching throughout the dominion of nature, we are confronted with innumerable cases, both in plant and animal life, where there must hav been at some time prior to their creation or existence a thinking something, and where they could not hav been the result of accidental arrangement or adaptability. In the flower is found a substance called honey, upon which substance the humming-bird subsists. The flower can exist without the presence of the humming-bird, but the flower is necessary for the existence of the humming-bird. Does or does not this peculiar arrangement in nature reveal to us the existence of forethought, and a carefully conceived plan by which all life is furnished with the requisits upon which it exists? J. CLENDENING, JR.

"St. Louis, Mo."

Freethinkers trying to convert Christians find that one of the arguments most difficult to remove from the minds of the latter, and the one affording their religion its most substantial support, is the above argument, that there is a design in nature evidencing an intelligent personal creator. Even some who hav rejected the Christian revelation still halt as Deists, and though denying Jehovah affirm a superintending, beneficent personal god. But the argument from design has been totally exploded in a dozen different ways. It is well that Freethinkers should familiarize themselvs with its refutations for use against Christian neighbors.

First. The design argument vitiates itself, by necessitating an infinit series of designers.

When the child who was told that "God made everything," asked, "Who made God?" there was asked a question sufficient to silence every Christian. This question has never been answered. It can not be answered. After hearing it once every Christian should close his mouth in silence and never be heard to speak on design again. No further argument should be required. Consider it. We find a watch and we say: "So curious and wonderful a thing must hav had a maker." We find the watchmaker and we say: "So curious and wonderful a thing as man must hav had a maker." We find God and we then say: "So curious and wonderful a thing must not hav had a maker." What kind of reasoning is this? If it is the wonder of the thing that first suggests the necessity of a creator, must not that necessity for a creator increase just as the wonder increases? The false reasoning of the Christian is like that of the Hindoo in accounting for the suspension of the earth. "Whatever exists," said he, "must hav some support; the earth exists, and is therefore supported." So he said that it rested on the back of an elephant. The elephant needing support, he said that it rested on a tortoise. Then he forgot that according to his own premis, that whatever exists must hav some support, the tortoise must hav something upon which to rest. Just as the Hindoo stopped reasoning when he got to the tortoise, the theologian stops when he gets to his God.

The Christian generally uses the words, adaptation, fitness, in describing that in the universe which he says evidences a God. Adaptation, fitness—these must equally exist in the divine nature to enable him to reflect and design. And this adaptation and fitness would presuppose another intelligent designer capable of producing that adaptation and fitness. This one would necessitate another. This one another. And so on. An endless succession of Gods is the logical consequence. The common-sense decision is simply to confine ourselvs to the affirmation of a universe, for we hav daily evidence of it and know that it is here; as for any creating, designing, self-existent God, he is disproved by the very argument by which it is attempted to prove his existence.

Second. Another argument establishes that if such a God did exist, he could not be a beneficent God, such as the Christians posit. What effrontery is it that talks about the mercy and goodness of a nature in which all animals devour animals, in which every mouth is a slaughter-house and every stomach a tomb! "Observe," said the minister to his son, "with what beneficent design is the crane so fashioned, in legs, bill, and feet, as to catch fish with ease and provide its means of subsistence." "Yes," replied the boy, "I think I see the beneficence of God, at least so far as the crane is concerned, but don't you think the arrangement a little tough on the fish?" What about that wonderful adaptation of means to ends, that exquisitly contrived mechanism, by which the cancer fastens and feeds upon the body of the loving and beautiful girl?

Third. Let us ask another question. If, when we perceive results similar to those that might be due to a wise man, we conclude that they hav been produced by a being similar to a wise man, then, when we see results similar to those that might be due to an idiot, shall we not conclude that they hav been produced by an idiot? Proceedings such as if seen in a man would be pronounced idiotic, may be seen to constitute almost the whole workings of nature. We will mention a few.

An egregious slowness of process is found to hav characterized the production of things as they are. Examination of our globe by geologists reveals that all present forms of vegetable and animal life hav been produced not by a single decisiv act but through a series of changing forms by a process extending over millions of years. "Suppose," says Colonel Ingersoll, "that upon some island we should find a man a million years of age, and suppose that we should find him in the possession of a most beautiful carriage, constructed upon the most perfect model. And suppose, further, that he should tell us that it was the result of several hundred thousand years of labor and of thought; that for fifty thousand years he used as flat a log as he could find before it occurred to him that by splitting the log he could hav the same surface with only half the weight; that it took him many thousand years to invent wheels for this log; that the wheels he first used were solid, and that fifty thousand years of thought suggested the use of spokes and tire; that for many centuries he used the wheels without linch-pins; that it took a hundred thousand years more to think of using four wheels instead of two; that for ages he walked behind the carriage when going downhill in order to hold it back, and that only by a lucky chance he invented the tongue; would we conclude that this man, from the very first, had been an infinitly ingenious and perfect mechanic? Suppose we found him living in an elegant mansion, and he should inform us that he lived in that house for five hundred thousand years before he thought of putting on a roof, and that he but recently invented windows and doors; would we say that from the beginning he had been an infinitly accomplished and scientific architect?"

Again. To make a machine adapted to serve a purpose and then to wantonly destroy it without allowing it to fulfill its functions, would be conduct such as we could expect only from a fool. Now, in nature we see the immense majority of the seeds of plants produced but to perish, and the immense majority of the young of animals formed but to die. A thousand are born where one livs; where one attains perfection a thousand are wretched miscreations. What shall we say of this stupendous prodigality of waste? What should we say of a like waste in a man? If we say that success in nature is the work of a man-like intelligent being, why not say that failure in nature is the work of a man-like idiot?

Again. Many animals hav what are called purposeless organs—some rudimentary and never developed sufficiently for use, others suppressed and degenerated, others aimless and inactiv, others positivly injurious to their possessors. What kind of design is this? Why do some animals, like the dugong, hav tusks that never cut through the gums? Why has the guinea-pig teeth that are shed before it is born? Why has the whale teeth that it never uses? Why has man in his eye a remnant of the membrana nictitans, or third eyelid of birds and reptils, not of the slightest use to the human being? Why has man that useless organ, the vermiform appendix? Evolution shows us that these are remnants of a former state which once served a purpose, and are not yet eliminated from succeeding forms of life. Theology requires us to believe that a God of omniscience made all these animals just as they are now.

But of the creatures that hav got here at last after all the eons of slow striving at production, of those that hav survived the frightful carnage of life on life in which thousands perish and one escapes, of the organs on these creatures which are not rudimentary, or degenerated, or aimless, or hurtful—of the organs, that is, that now perform functions, in a manner mainly helpful, not one is perfectly adapted to its environment and performs its function perfectly. The eye, upon which Christians lavish so much admiration, is an extremely imperfect instrument. The number of persons seen with eye-glasses and other devices to aid vision shows how easily the organ is disordered. In mechanical construction it is inferior to the cheapest optical instrument in the market. The ear is as imperfect as the eye. In the structure of the external ear, and attached to it, are ten muscles all in a rudimentary condition and all absolutely useless. Indeed, all of the ear visible to the eye, except a small shell-shaped depression immediately around the opening, is completely useless. For what purpose was this mass of useless material formed? To get frozen, is the only answer we can think of just now. The internal construction of the ear, testifies Professor Garrison, is quite as faulty as that of the eye. Hardly has a child got its first set of teeth when they hav to be removed to make room for the next, which are called the "permanent" set. How permanent, probably many readers know. As a matter of fact, the dentist furnishes the only permanent and reliable set we ever hav. In the throat we find the tonsils, which serve no earthly use but to get inflamed. Every bit of food and drop of liquid on its way to the stomach must pass over the opening of the trachea, or windpipe. Thus the life is endangered every time a mouthful of food or drink is swallowed. Sometimes the result is merely the spasmodic coughing we may notice in ourselvs every day caused by the entrance of small crumbs or drops of water. Sometimes the person is choked to death. Space will not permit mention of the misconstruction of the great organs of the trunk, and of the whole body.

Fourth. But, finally, there is this argument, irresistible and conclusiv, which supersedes and renders unnecessary all the preceding. We simply deny design. Subserviency, fitness, is one thing. Design is another. The subserviency we admit; the design we deny. When two organs or functions are so constituted that one assists in the working of the other, we hav subserviency. Design is this with the addition of something else—the addition of the fact that this subserviency was antecedently set up as an end by some intelligent being. A thing done is not necessarily a thing designed to be done. When design is affirmed of an action, it must be shown that the agent in that action had the result in view at the beginning of the action. The fact that things exist as they now are proves simply—that things exist as they now are. Unless we can first examin the volitions of some being at the beginning of the course of nature, and discover that he had in view the present constitution of things, we hav no means of guessing whether this constitution came about by negligence of his, or through mistake, or in direct opposition to his wishes, or that there is such a being. All that can be said of present nature is that it is; to an affirmation of its design the first datum, that a being had it in view, is utterly lacking. All that can be said of the bees that our inquirer speaks of, is, that they exist; we do not know that they were desired, and therefore do not know that they were designed. They find honey now, and use it, and so exist; if the honey had not chanced to be present, they would not find it to use and consequently would not exist; science informs us that there were immeasurable eras wherein there was no honey and they did not exist.

The fact that any object is constituted in a highly complicated manner does not tend to prove that it was designed. The reason why we believe on finding a watch that it was designed is not, as has been commonly held, its complication and co-adaptation. The reason why we believe it had a designer is solely that we hav had a previous experience of such mechanisms being designed by men. Experience is in this as in everything else our only source of knowledge; and as to the contemplation of the present order of the universe by any preëxisting being, experience is totally lacking. The judgment, says Hume, which infers a designing cause from adjustments adapted to effect an end rests wholly upon experience; and as we hav no experience of world-making, we hav no right in such a case to infer a world-maker.

There still linger in our habits of thinking remains of that old egotism of considering ourselvs the end of all creation, and so seeing design in all the processes that hav led up to the production of us and the establishment of our sovereignty over creation. But this is unfounded; it would hav suited nature about as well, as far as we can see, to produce an intelligent elephant, or an intelligent cat, as man, an intelligent ape; and in that case the intelligent elephant or cat would hav looked back and egotistically discovered the same designs to produce and exalt him that we discover now. Of life there is in the world very little. Nearly all matter is inorganic. Inorganic matter has for inconceivable time been worked and reworked by that energy inherent in matter which both Christians and Freethinkers recognize, they under the name of God, and we under the name of Force. Among the endlessly varied combinations and recombinations of matter some combinations hav become highly concatenated. Such masses of matter exhibit a lengthened concatenation of varieties of matter and of combination each of which varieties or divisions in its workings has a bearing upon all the others. This concatenation of forms of matter we call organisms, life. Such a concatenation does not necessarily carry in itself an implication of a previous design. Of such combination there is very little; it is not marvelous that the endless permutations of inorganic matter hav produced some; instead of wondering that there is any, we may just as reasonably and profitably wonder that there is not more. And from these concatenations of forms and activities we are no more to infer design than we are to infer, when a man taking a blind backward step overthrows some object which falling causes the successiv fall of a long row or concatenation of objects which chanced to be behind him, that that man designed that concatenation—that chain of causes and effects.

The manner in which complicated organisms are produced from simple beginnings, priest-hated evolution fully shows. This subject, evolution, we strongly urge our correspondent to read up. Without so doing, he perhaps will not be able, after all that we hav said, to see clearly how without an overruling intelligence there could hav come about all the cases of suitedness, which has in the past been called design, which we see about us daily in animal and plant life. We hav not room for an exposition of the topic here. For our friend's immediate satisfaction we will remark simply, that present living organisms possess those organs and functions that preserve life only because the organisms which did not possess such organs and functions failed in the competition for existence, and consequently cannot be present. Whatever is here possesses all that is necessary to enable it to be here, otherwise it could not be here. God did not purposely endow a living organism with its useful functions; to the exact contrary, he (better, Nature) created this and nine hundred and ninety-nine other organisms, and the others all chanced to be without the useful functions and perished, and this lucky one of the thousand had them and lived. The bees adverted to in our questioner's letter seek that food which best suits them and in the places which are most facil to them not by heavenly providence but because those bees which by chance vary from the type and are born with an instinct to seek it wrongly do not liv to perpetuate their unprofitable constitution. As to the flowers, it is beginning to be perceived by botanists with more or less clearness that those which secrete honey are thereby propagated by the insects which that honey attracts, those creatures diffusing the seeds as they fly away; while those flowers without honey either hav perished or hav developed some other means of continuing their species. Beasts of prey that haunt deserts hav desert-like colors not because a God thus furnished them but because of all the animals who hav ever undertaken to hunt in deserts those of contrasted colors hav failed and consequently forsaken such places. The Lord did not obligingly furnish the polar bear with his snowy fur so favorable for hunting, but such dark-furred bears as originally were about the pole starved to death and only the white remained. Similarly of the black Hindoostan bear. No creator instructed scarlet-plumaged birds to build covered or concealed nests; nature took the method—a little round-about, it is true, and a trifle cruel—of having killed off all those who did not chance to hav a fancy to do so. The tiger has vertical markings like the lines of the grass and bamboos through which it creeps upon its victims, but we fear that many a differently colored one must hav made, just as he was expiring from starvation, very inappreciativ remarks upon the method by which the creator chose to secure the correct striping on his prosperous brothers. But our space is filled. For the detail of this subject of evolution, which is highly interesting, and necessary in argumentation with Christians, we recommend our present correspondent, and others, to consult our book catalog for such works as Darwin's "Origin of Species" and "Sexual Selection," Robert C. Adams's "Evolution," Büchner's "Force and Matter" (chapters xii to xiv), and if the reader is disposed for technical and elaborate works, Haeckel's "History of Creation" and Spencer's "Biology."

To recapitulate: (1) The design argument vitiates itself by necessitating an infinit series of designers; (2) if there be a designing deity he cannot be beneficent; (3) if there be one he cannot be wise, for (a) his processes are egregiously slow; (b) they are egregiously wasteful; (c) they are often purposeless, and (d) they hav produced at the present day wretchedly imperfect mechanisms; (4) finally, subserviency must be distinguished from design: the interaction of any two objects whatever in the universe may be said to show a certain fitness, or suitability, in each for the other, and indeed if they did not possess it the action could not hav taken place; but we must not select from all the rest the class of interactions in animal and plant life, and assert that these demonstrate a thing which the rest do not, viz., an intent on the part of an intelligent overruler to produce them; the impulse to do so springs from our egotistic, self-glorifying disposition to regard ourselvs and our like as the objects of all nature's workings; and all these subserviencies are fully explained without a God by evolution.

Radical Changes Proposed.

Mr. R. B. Westbrook, D.D., announces that he will, in Chicago, October 23d, as advertised by the board, propose the following amendment to the constitution of "this society." What "this society" is he does not tell us, but from the fact that his proposed changes are printed directly following a resolution adopted by the board of directors of the American Secular Union we infer he means that society. These are the changes offered for consideration:

"Article III, paragraph 1, to be amended so as to read: 'The equitable taxation of church property by the public authorities, as other property is taxed, to raise revenue for the common protection and defense.'

"Paragraph 2, of the same article, to amend by striking out all after the words 'public schools,' and add 'whether in the form of Bible reading, the offering of prayers or the singing of hymns or songs of a sectarian character.' It is not intended hereby to prohibit the teaching of the pure principles of morality and practical ethics, as this can be done without religious exercises or sectarian dogma.

"Paragraph 4 of the same article to be amended by adding 'and to secure this end we are in favor of a XVI amendment to the Constitution of the United States, substantially as recommended by the National League for the Protection of American Institutions.'

"Strike out paragraphs 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9 of Article III (not because they are not important, but because we think it best to direct all our energies at present to the three great subjects of church taxation, religious exercises in the state schools, and Sunday laws).

"Article V. After the word 'membership' add 'but all life members shall be subject to the approval of the board, and also all annual members. All persons entitled to vote at an annual Congress, shall be permitted to vote by proxy, under rules to be established by the board.'

"Strike out the word 'corresponding' before the word 'secretary' in Article IX, and use the word 'secretary' instead of the plural form in the heading in the article.

"Strike out the whole of Article XII and Article XIII —dispensing entirely with auxiliary societies."

The constitution now proposed to be amended is the one written principally by Dr. Westbrook and adopted at the Portsmouth congress in 1889. The ex-president of the Union is very energetic in the drafting of constitutions, and it is to be regretted that his great zeal for work has been hitherto confined to these verbal efforts.

With these exceptions the changes are unimportant where not unnecessary. There can be no harm in retaining all the demands of Liberalism in the constitution, though emphasis should at this time be placed upon the phases Dr. Westbrook enumerates. Two changes, however, are for the worse. The proposed change in regard to schools is evidently for the purpose of allowing the Union to commit itself to the Unitarian Manual of Morals, published under Mr. Westbrook's direction. The part of paragraph 2 which he proposes to leave demands "the total discontinuance of religious instruction and worship in the public schools." The clause he proposes to add limits this discontinuance to Bible reading, prayers, and sectarian songs. The paragraph is better without the addition.

The recommendation that the Union should indorse the constitutional amendment proposed by the National League is foolish or knavish. That League is a Protestant organization working for the political interests of Protestantism as against Romanism. The Secular Union is organized to oppose both of these sects. To take sides with one is to surrender to it. Such indorsement would commit the Union to Protestant political demands.

The proposition to abolish auxiliary societies destroys the very basis of the Union, and makes it a new organization. If that is the desire of the Liberals, then it should be done. If not, not.

Owing probably to the detention of ships and fumigation of mails at the quarantine station of this city, Miss Wixon's letter from Across the Atlantic has not reached us this week. Thanks to the progress of medical and sanitary science, the threatened cholera epidemic has been averted, and in a short time things will go on as before.

The Lutherans of Illinois hav declared their intention to support the Democratic party of the state because the Republicans refused to repeal the law making private schools subject to state inspection and giving state officers the power to forbid attendance upon such as do not meet the state educational requirements. The Lutherans hav church schools of a poor sort, and the law injures them.

In the East.

News and Notes.

What a difference between Chicago and Washington. Chicago is all business. Its streets are tremendously crowded. Everybody is doing something. Its buildings rise, massiv, built for use and not for beauty. The tide of life rushes along like a cataract and there seems to be no check, not even at midnight's solemn hour.

In Washington it is like the broad, placid flow of the Potomac itself. Washington is a vast country town. It does not hav the air of business, but of rural prosperity. Its streets and avenues stretch away in picturesque quietude. The great Capitol looms up in soft magnificence against the glowing sky, and the tall monument—a shaft of splendor—seems to pierce the dome as we lift our eyes along its glittering surface.

Washington is a place for retirement, except when Congress meets, and then it is a place to study human nature in its headlong rush for power.

Washington is not and will not be a literary center. Poets and journalists will not throng as in New York, for here is not the original life of man, but the mimic life rather of fashionable society and politics. Washington, however, will be a great educational center. Vast universities will be erected—mainly, however, for the support of old-time methods and ideas. The Methodists are to expend $10,000,000 for a university. Other denominations are working in the same direction. The Catholics hav already erected a magnificent structure. It towers like a grand old castle of the past. To me it has a threatening aspect, as if in its solid masonry were enshrined the superstition and tyranny of the Dark Ages. These institutions are becoming the buttress of the churches, and in the battle of the future will be tremendous forces upon the side of ancient wrong.

There are many Liberals in Washington, but very few come to the front. In Washington, society is potent, and society generally is in favor of hypocrisy. It won't do to express your honest thoughts amidst these elegant festivities.

W. H. Burr, however, has the courage of his convictions, and it was a great pleasure to spend a day with him and enjoy his frank hospitality. Mr Burr is a philosopher and scholar and has searched all the dark places of human history, and has ably discussed literary and scientific problems. He is not afraid of facts whichever way they point. He has a healthful outlook upon the evil as well as the good that is in the universe, and, like myself, does not believe with the poet that "whatever is, is right." He cannot find "God" any more than I can, and therefore man must be his own providence. Mr. and Mrs. Burr are Liberal but not dogmatic believers in Spiritualism. They hav seen much to convince themselvs, but realize that each one's own experience must be the source of faith.

Mr. Burr kindly devoted himself to making me acquainted with Washington during my few hours' stay. I had not visited Washington since the war, and I found great changes. Among other places we went to the Soldiers' Home. This is a lovely domain, and when I get worn and battered and can't do any more fighting in the Freethought ranks, I suppose I can linger here and rest. I would like it, if it were not for the strict rules and regulations. I must get up at a certain hour—eat my meals at a certain time, and go to bed according to order. It is a good deal like prison life, although surroundings are most elegant and beautiful. If one could be left at perfect liberty it would be a delightful home indeed after the storms of life. Mr. Burr and myself sat by the noble statue of General Scott, and here spreads before you one of the grandest prospects in the world. You can look for miles away. The Potomac rolls its ample stream; the woods and hills dotted with homes stretch beyond; the great city lies at your feet, swathed in summer's splendid garb. The monument adorns the glowing scene with lofty finger jeweled by the noonday beams. One can dream here of the glorious republic, for in this gorgeous panorama lies its history and its hope.

I hav had glimpses only of Washington in this short sojourn. I must thank Mr. and Mrs. Burr for their kindly reception.

There is to be a great conflict here this winter on the World's Fair Sunday question. More than ever do I feel the necessity of meeting the issue at this point. It is of the first importance to change the vote of Congress. I believe it can be done. I believe that a great Liberal influence can be exerted by proper effort. There never was such a contest on our hands, so far-reaching in its results. It is a question of the deepest principle. This is one of the crises of American history, that is to determin the character of this government for ages to come. If we win, we win a victory whose fruits can never be lost. It is a question not simply of government, but of civilization. Shall we hav the highest, the best, the noblest civilization—a civilization for all humanity, or shall we hav that which is only for the benefit of the few? Shall the hope and happiness of man be simply what the church permits?

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.

The Freethought Federation.

When friend Putnam first wrote me in reference to this Federation I was not favorably impressed with the project.

Later, when a more complete outline was published, I realized that he had really grasped the situation and that there could be no doubt that the Federation would find a hearty response and substantial support from the Freethinkers of the entire country.

This issue has been forced upon Liberals by the brutal tyranny of these Christian bigots. For their demand that the toilers of this land should be denied a Sunday at the World's Fair is nothing short of brutality, proving the barbarous intolerance of ecclesiaticism even in this latter part of the boasted nineteenth century.

Their action is an insult to the civilized world. For every nation has been invited to participate, only to be met by this insolent artifice of narrow-minded religious cranks and a contemptible, cowardly Congress. To complete this infamy they hav committed forgery and perjury, and verily made the "graveyards yawn." This atrocity was accomplished through conceit and arrogance and marks a crisis necessary for the new departure of the Freethought hosts. Truly the deadheads of society hav become its dictators. These organizations which pay no taxes to maintain the state; who annually defraud the people of hundreds of millions; who liv through begging, bulldozing, and illegal lottery schemes; the free-lunch fiends of the domestic poultry-yards; the free-pass or half-fare railway mendicants—these utterly useless, and, to put it most charitably, "blind leaders of the blind," hav actually dared to defy the great masses, to violate the Constitution, and proclaim an ecclesiastical slavery.

Is it not time for a new departure? Is there no life left in the Liberals of this land? Are they going to keep on paying and supinely submitting? They must no longer be satisfied with pleadings and petitions. They must also work and vote—not to tax and enslave even the Christians, but—to free mankind. A politician will fear one hundred organized votes more than a ten-thousand petition. Since the Christians hav dared to invoke the political power, we should accept their challenge, meet them on their own field, and defeat them. We can enlist not only the stalwart Liberals in this fight, but the Spiritualists, the great body of German voters, and a large element of the nothingarians. Mark my words, from now on the day of the dictatorial deadhead is doomed. His decline may be gradual but decline he will, and that work can only be done by the Freethought Federation.

I hav requested President Putnam to go to Washington, open up quarters, and remain through the entire session, if necessary, working for the repeal of this odious act, thoroughly believing that the Liberals of the entire country will aid in keeping him there if they thoroughly believe that something will be done.

Who is better equipped for this service than the man who has lectured in nearly every state, town, and city in this country? Who has thousands of personal friends among the Freethinkers? Who knows of their desires and is thoroughly in touch with the great army of progress? The brave, brilliant, indefatigable worker, who has carried the flag of freedom from coast to coast, S. P. Putnam.

The secretaryship with Charlesworth will be no sinecure. He is thoroughly in earnest, full of energy and enthusiasm, and is a natural orator. He is destined to become the Bradlaugh of America. Of the vice-presidents I will not speak until the list is completed.

As treasurer no more accurate or honest man could be selected than Geo. L. Robertson. He is a Liberal who has been tried and never found wanting when the good of the cause demanded. He is a bright, activ, intelligent business man, brave enough to stand for his convictions and generous enough to support an unpopular cause. Some of our Liberal friends may remember him at the Pittsburgh Congress, though he is strikingly modest. A lady asked there who "that good-looking young man was." Besides being a wonderful linguist, he is lately blossoming out as an orator. He was put up as an independent candidate for alderman in his ward, and with only a three days' canvass polled a surprisingly large vote. His word is as good as his bond, and his bond is as good as gold. Do not fail to send him your contribution—make it the size of your indignation—to 345 W. Randolph street, Chicago, Ill. A dollar from each Liberal of the land will accomplish vast results under this new movement. Now is the time to send it.

E. A. STEVENS.

A Birthday Letter From an Agnostic Mother to Her Son.

We thought of you a great deal on Sunday, and our thoughts often took the form of speech. You know our love for you would make us wish you every possible good. If we could compel fate to giv you a happy and prosperous life she would be compelled to produce her best gifts for you, but that cannot be; we hav done the best for you that we could. Now I say of you as David said of Jahveh, "This right hand and his holy arm hav gotten him the victory." That is your chance. Lean on common sense and reason, not on the strength of anyone, God or man. You hav a good share of common sense and a strong will. Make them work together. Make them take good care of your body. For if that is not in good condition you cannot hav the best in life, unless you take up with the Christian doctrin of the value of suffering and with "Rejoice in the dealings of a triune God." Paul said, "Keep the body under." I say, "Keep the body up." And to do so keep bad habits under, even to your beloved tobacco. I am a little afraid of that for you lest it make a chain in time that may hamper your movements and leave you no longer a free man. There! such are my sentiments on your entrance into your twenty-first year. You must pardon my sermon. You know most boys get two a Sunday. If you get one a year you must not complain, and please do not think your mother an old nuisance if she is solicitous for your welfare.

Aug. 21, 1892. M. E. A.

Thomas Paine on Free Trade.

In No. VII of the Crisis, written Nov. 21, 1778, are these sentences: "The commerce of America is perfectly free, and ever will be so." "Trade flourishes best when it is free, and it is weak policy to fetter it." The author of "Rights of Man" says in part second, chapter v: "In all my publications, where the matter would admit, I hav been an advocate for commerce, because I am a friend to its effects. It is a pacific system, operating to unite mankind by rendering nations, as well as individuals, useful to each other." "If commerce were permitted to act to the universal extent it is capable of, it would extirpate the system of war, and produce a revolution in the uncivilized state of governments." "Whatever has a tendency to promote the civil intercourse of nations, by an exchange of benefits, is a subject as worthy of philosophy as of politics. Commerce is no other than the traffic of two persons multiplied on a scale of numbers; and by the same rule that nature intended the intercourse of two, she intended that of all. For this purpose she has distributed the materials of manufactures and commerce in various and distant parts of a nation and of the world; and as they cannot be procured by war so cheaply or expeditiously as by commerce, she has rendered the latter the means of extirpating the former." "The prosperity of any commercial nation is regulated by the prosperity of the rest; if they are poor, she cannot be rich." "There can be no such thing as a nation flourishing alone in commerce; she can only participate; and the destruction of it in any part must necessarily affect all." "The idea of having navies for the protection of commerce is delusiv; it is putting the means of destruction for the means of protection. Commerce needs no other protection than the reciprocal interest which every nation feels in supporting it; it is common stock, it exists by a balance of advantages to all."

Fully to understand how much Paine meant by these words, we must remember that, after his return from France to America, he was an activ member of the party which raised his friends, Jefferson and Monroe, to the presidency, and which was trying then, as it is now, to hav commerce "perfectly free" in America, "to unite mankind by rendering nations useful to each other," and "to promote the civil intercourse of nations by an exchange of benefits." He embittered his slanderers by the vigor with which he resisted all schemes to fetter trade, and to destroy commerce under pretense of protecting it. He stood firmly with the Democrats against protectionists; and nothing else would hav been consistent for the man who said, "My country is the world, and my religion is to do good."

Franklin thought like Paine about free trade; and the question whether they were right or wrong is one to be decided, not by political prejudices, but by acknowledged facts. The best proof of a right is capacity to exercise it without wronging anyone. How capable we are of trading freely with other nations appears from the fact that our exports during the year ending with last June were worth more than $1,000,000,000. Besides great quantities of farm products, we sold in foreign countries nearly $30,000,000 worth of steel and iron wares, including locomotivs valued at $1,700,000, and $12,000,000 worth of leather and leather goods. We had competed even more successfully against foreign manufacturers twelve months before. The July number of the Forum givs a list by a Republican Senator of countries where "nearly every article we can produce for export" is now sold "at prices much below those asked by European competitors." Mr. Blaine stated two years ago in the North American Review that our makers of firearms, agricultural machinery, tools of various kinds, boots and shoes, furniture, pianos, organs, and jewelry, were "selling their productions in Canada against the competition of the world;" and this is still the case. The American manufacturer undersells his rivals so easily that there is no particular need of protecting him against them. The great need is that he should hav full liberty to produce better and cheaper goods. This is even more for our benefit than his. He may be satisfied with small sales at high prices, in a home-market, protected against foreign competition by a tariff and domestic competition by a trust; but this system makes too little demand for labor and too great cost of living for our people's good. Let him make larger sales, abroad as well as at home, and he might employ more workmen, at even better wages, supply his fellow-citizens at lower prices, and still find his business worth carrying on.

It is no use to say that we are prevented from exporting by our high wages. They are highest in industries which, as just mentioned, export largely. Our farmer undersells Europeans at their own doors, despite their cheap labor. Russia pays low wages, exports little, and cannot even save herself from famin. England has higher wages and does more exporting than any other country in Europe. Australia has very high wages, eight-hour laws, cheap goods, low tariffs, and large exports. Labor is paid low in Russia and India, because it is inefficient. It is paid higher here and in Australia, because it is worth all it costs. Mr. Blaine said, in 1881, "Undoubtedly the inequalities in the wages of English and American operativs are more than neutralized by the greater efficiency of the latter and their longer hours of labor." A statistician, who was working under his direction, found that the annual value of goods produced by American mechanics was twice as great as that produced by English mechanics, though the number of men was about the same. We hav high wages because we hav very efficient men. Can they not hold their own in fair competition against the inefficient?

What really does put unnecessary obstacles in the way of America's competing with other countries ought to be plain enough to those who remember what a fall in price was caused by lowering the duties on refined sugar and putting raw sugar on the free list. It was proposed at the same time to take hides off of that list, but the manufacturers said that boots and shoes could not be made at high wages and sold at low prices unless hides were left free of duty. Our cotton mills would be much less prosperous if they had to pay duties on all their cotton. It is right and just to let the worker on cotton or leather goods get his raw materials as cheap as he can. Is it not equally just to let the worker on woolen and iron goods hav equal liberty? Start a woolen mill in any foreign country whose manufacturers are worth talking about and you can hav wool duty-free, however high the tariff may be otherwise. Did we achieve political independence in order to deprive the American manufacturer of freedom which he could enjoy in Canada, or Austria, or Ireland? Many of the leading manufacturers in New England are asking for free wool, and whether they are going to hav it will be determined at the next election. Then we shall also hav a chance to decide whether there is to be any such reduction in duties on iron ore and coal as is desired by hundreds of manufacturers, including an ex-governor of Massachusetts. He is still a Republican, but he does not like his party's tariff. Other leading manufacturers, like Farquhar in Pennsylvania, Harter in Ohio, and Sargent in New Haven, Conn., declare that with free raw materials they could sell agricultural implements and various kinds of hardware much more cheaply at home, undersell foreigners everywhere abroad, pay higher wages, and employ more men. Our present tariff hinders their doing this by raising the price, not only of their raw materials, but of their tools and machinery, and also of all the glass, lumber, brick, lime, nails, screws, iron beams, and other articles which they use in keeping up their buildings. This last class of taxes, with those upon tools and machines, are imposed upon farmers as well as manufacturers, and are burdens upon all our industries. The only difference is that the manufacturer is better compensated than other producers, so that, as was acknowledged four years ago in the circular sent out by the Republican League of the United States, they "were getting practically the sole benefit, or at least the most directly important benefits, of the tariff laws." This circular, of which a copy lies before me, was sent confidentially to the manufacturers, and they replied by contributing so liberally as to get their candidate elected and their protection increased. Protecting a manufacturer means laying such duties on foreign goods likely to compete with his as enable him to charge higher prices without being undersold. These higher prices are paid by Americans who are engaged in other industries where they hav to use his goods in order to produce theirs. Their industries are made more costly and less profitable by the protection given to his. His gain is their loss. Protecting any of our industries necessarily injures others. Most manufacturers gain more than they lose, and other producers lose as much, or more, than they gain. The manufacturer's gain comes, as we hav seen, in the form of large profits and small sales, which is the operativ's loss. The former loses by all the duties put on for the benefit of makers of his tools, twine, wire, machines, wagons, clothing, and furniture, while he gains nothing, in most cases, by the tariff. There would be a slight gain to him if the Republicans could win such a victory this fall as would embolden them to carry out Secretary Rusk's plan of taxing hides, but he might lose more on boots and shoes than he gained on hides; and the operativs in the shoeshops would find wages decline as sales fell off, owing to the increased difficulty of competition in Canada and the growing determination of Americans to make old shoes last longer rather than pay the new prices. Another result of a Republican victory would probably be such an increase of the duty on tin-plate as would enlarge the profits of half-a-dozen American manufacturers and cripple twelve hundred canning factories, some of which hav had to discharge half their hands since this tax was made a heavy burden by the McKinley tariff. This measure, like all other protectiv systems, was intended to check importation. Imports, however, are paid for by exports, and if, for instance, we were allowed to get more coal and lumber from Canada, she would be able to buy more, not only of our cornmeal, flour, and salt pork, but of our boots and shoes, tools, agricultural implements, sewing-machines, steel rails, locomotivs, and other American goods which she is accustomed to purchase.

We voters will soon hav a chance to say at the polls whether our right to buy at its real value whatever we need to help us carry on our honest business should be taken away in order to enable any manufacturer, however wealthy already, to make the largest possible profits in the way which leads to the least possible amount of employment for American labor. Now is the time to follow Thomas Paine's principles and do our part "to unite mankind by rendering nations useful to each other."

F. M. Holland.

Christian Endeavor.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor has attracted attention by its great convention held in New York; and those who are outside the churches were surprised to learn that this organization, now only ten years old, comprises one million two hundred thousand members, or with the Epworth Society of the Methodist Church, a similar organization, numbers about two millions. The Freethinkers, who hav struggled unsuccessfully for half a century to found a society that would cohere and augment, stand aghast at this prodigious growth, and they may study with interest the cause and method of this phenomenal development.

In the last quarter of a century the progress of modern thought has sapped the vitality of evangelical religion. The blood of Jesus has ceased to move the emotions, and hell has lost its terrors. It was found that conversions upon the old method of conviction of sin and atonement through the blood had almost ceased and very few young people were joining the church. The growing facilities for amusement proved to be means of depleting the prayer-meetings, and the rinks and dancing-rooms were becoming powerful rivals of the church. The serious problem of how to save the institution by securing the young people, without whom it must soon decay, confronted the ministers and exercised their greatest ingenuity. Social gatherings, "tea fights," fairs, and picnics were tried, but they were tame affairs compared to worldly entertainments and most people preferred their fun without any religion in it. In this crisis, a wise minister, Mr. Clark, hit upon a method of enlisting the young people in church work which was just adapted to the current intelligence and temperament and has proved an immense success. For the time being it has saved the church and given it a new lease of power.

Being in a seashore village this summer, where the society was in full swing, I resolved to study the institution and try to learn the secret of its power. I procured its constitution, got some of the girls to take me to two of the meetings, and inviting the gentlemanly pastor to sail in the yacht Xiphias, I was favored with his exposition of the subject.

Two features of the society largely account for its growth. The first is its obligatory nature, which appeals strongly to persons of tender conscience and fastens a yoke upon them. The vital point in the constitution is Article VII:

THE PRAYER-MEETING.

1. All the activ members shall be present at every meeting, unless detained by some absolute necessity, and each activ member shall take some part, however slight, in every meeting. To the above all the activ members shall pledge themselvs, understanding by absolute necessity, some reason for absence which can conscientiously be given to their master, Jesus Christ.

Once a month a consecration-meeting is held.

It is expected that if anyone is obliged to be absent from this meeting he will send a request to be excused by some one who attends.

A lookout committee hunts him up if he fails, and

If any activ member of the society is absent and unexcused from three consecutiv monthly meetings, such a one ceases to be a member of the society, and his name shall be stricken from the list of members.

These sentences are italicized and are evidently considered crucial.

The following is the pledge required of activ members (also italicized):

Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I promis him that I will strive to do whatever he would like to hav me do; that I will make it the rule of my life to pray and read the Bible every day, and to support my own church in every way, especially by attending all her regular Sunday and midweek services, unless prevented by some reason which I can conscientiously giv to my savior; and that just so far as I know how, throughout my whole life, I will endeavor to lead a Christian life.

As an activ member I promis to be true to all my duties, to be present at, and to take some part, aside from singing, in every Christian Endeavor prayer-meeting, unless hindered by some reason that I can conscientiously giv to my Lord and master. If obliged to be absent from the monthly consecration-meeting of the society, I will, if possible, send a verse of scripture to be read in response to my name at the roll-call. Signed ——.

The second feature that accounts for success is the policy of employing every member of the society in an official capacity. There is a president, vice-president, corresponding secretary, recording secretary, treasurer, and there are unlimited committees. Those named are: Lookout, prayer-meeting, social, Sunday-school, calling, music, missionary, flower, temperance, relief, and good literature. Thus each one is made to feel that he has a useful sphere. The pastor seemed to place almost more stress upon this feature, but admitted that the obligatory clauses were also a strong incentiv.

The meetings that I attended were composed of about twenty girls and three boys, aged from fourteen to twenty five—mostly about fifteen to seventeen—and the pastor. A young lady presided; hymns, one or two verses, were frequently sung; psalms were recited in unison; ejaculatory prayers were uttered, often only a sentence; verses of the Bible or wise passages from modern authors were read, and brief comments were sometimes made. No one spoke over a minute, except the pastor, and all took some part. The girls sat while speaking, but the boys arose to pray and one young man gave a good old-fashioned three-minute prayer. The subjects of the two meetings were "Christian Heroism" and "The Christian Death," and the main tenor of the ejaculatory remarks and prayers was, "May I be faithful," "May I be a heroic Christian like Daniel," "May I hav courage to speak a word for Jesus," "May I be thankful," "Let me liv so that I shall be ready to die."

This organization shows a wise perception of human nature and was a canny move on the part of the ministers. The employment interests and flatters. The yoke of bondage controls. Those subject to it naturally seek to enforce its grasp upon the necks of others. Wisely, no doctrins are introduced. The object as given in the constitution is in these words: "Its object shall be to promote an earnest Christian life among its members, to increase their mutual acquaintance, and to make them more useful in the service of God." But there are enemies at work in the fold. Worldliness creeps in to enliven the meetings and I hav heard of one place where, after the pastor leaves, the benches are cleared away and a dance succeeds the prayers. Common sense also rebels, and the mothers and elder sisters are getting up in arms against the compulsion that enforces the attendance of the girls at so many meetings and afflicts their morbid consciences if they stay away.

I undertook this investigation to see if I could get any suggestions for Liberal organization. The compulsory feature is in such direct opposition to Rational principles that it cannot be considered, but the second feature undoubtedly contains a useful lesson. The employment of the members is the surest means of interesting and holding them together. From this part of the constitution Liberal societies may well copy.

While Freethinkers may well regret the strength that this society lends to that organized ecclesiastical tyranny known as the church of Christ, it is encouraging to see in it the evidence of the decay of dogmatic belief and the substitution of theistic and humanitarian ideas as the enthusiastic emotions in the religious life. This progress is all in the direction of Rationalism, and if we shall not witness the destruction of the church, we shall see it influenced by modern thought so as to be less the vehicle of supernatural belief or the instrument of enforcing clerical power.

With growing education and intelligence the Christian Endeavor prayer-meeting will be deemed too inane to satisfy desire, and it will become a literary society and social club with only a prayer to bless it, just as the sacred concert that was held in the hotel parlor Sunday afternoon with piano, violin, mandolin, and guitar, was saved by a hymn at its close. Nature works things out in her own way, through natural selection and the survival of the fittest, and all we Freethinkers hav to do is to peg away with our ideas and let results take care of themselvs. As we spread truth-seekers we shall create truth-finders. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Montreal, Sept. 4, 1892.

Authorship of the Declaration of Independence.

Mr. Holt ought to hav read "Junius Unmasked" before claiming that there is proof conclusiv in the Remonstrance of the Virginia House of Burgesses, written by Jefferson in 1774, that he was the author of the Declaration of Independence. There is no such Declaration in the paper of 1774, for the sufficient reason that neither Jefferson nor any other statesman thought of Independence until after the first bloodshed at Lexington in 1775. Nor did Jefferson's paper of 1774 contain the germs of the Declaration any more than did the writings of John and Samuel Adams, Franklin, Otis, and Dickinson. A thousand men in America had, perhaps, expressed the cardinal doctrin of equal rights, and multitudes had protested against the usurpations of the British Parliament.

The grievances recited in the Declaration of Independence are but verbal repetitions of the same contained in earlier papers. I hav paralleled eleven consecutiv counts in the indictment of the Declaration of 1776 with an equal consecutiv number in a "Declaration of the Causes and Necessity of Taking up Arms," prepared by Mr. Dickinson one year earlier, and the expressions agree almost verbatim, differing only in their order. And again, I find in a report written by Jefferson in July, 1775, being a reply to a conciliatory proposition of Lord North, the same eleven complaints. The fact was that they were familiar to everybody, and in drawing up the Declaration of Independence they had to be enumerated as before.

Nor is it at all surprising that the Declaration of 1776 should repeat certain expressions of Jefferson in 1774 and 1775. He who drafted the instrument never intended to claim its authorship, any more than that of the Letters of Junius.

The introduction to Jefferson's paper of 1774 is analyzed in "Junius Unmasked." In the three great requisits of style, precision, unity, and strength, where Paine is perfect, Jefferson is defectiv; and in the fourth, harmony, he fails altogether.

Mr. Holt's statement that Jefferson claimed to be the author of the Declaration in his private journal and letters to friends is misleading. Jefferson studiously evaded the claim until the age of eighty, when Paine had been dead fourteen years.

For many years after the Declaration of Independence its authorship was a matter of conjecture. In October, 1802, when Jefferson was president and Paine was on his way back to America in a national ship, the editor of the New York Gazette said:

Mr. Jefferson was one of a committee of five, indeed, and after they had jointly drawn up the instrument it was given by Congress to a certain person, who, above all others, the Democrats would dislike to hear had corrected the writings of Mr. Jefferson, for revision and amendment, and it was from this person it received the ELEGANT DRESS it now appears in.

The italics and small capitals are the editor's own. He was mistaken, as we now know, in regard to the joint authorship and subsequent revision. And the "elegant dress" of the instrument was in the original draft by Thomas Paine, which underwent much mutilation by the Congress.

I dismiss the subject with the following quotation from Colonel Ingersoll:

Certain it is that Jefferson could not hav written anything so striking, so comprehensiv, so clear, so convincing, and so faultless in rhetoric and rhythm.

BURR.

Our London Letter.

The new Parliament is now complete, all the spoils of office hav been distributed, and work is going to commence, but not this year. Although during the elections we were told that many reforms would hav to be initiated without delay, and bad laws already passed must be speedily repealed, it is now discovered that they can wait to an indefinit period, but when the new members do settle down to their work they will do wonders and make the electors stare. With such a number of Agnostics now on the side of the majority we ought to see some result favorable to freedom of thought and opinion, but while they hav as leader such a firm believer in the "word," they will be able to do little or nothing, and we may hav to wait for what we want for some time yet, and the priests will hav a further lease of power to work mischief. We had great hope of John Morley, but he is simply an echo of his chief and does not mean to allow his opinions on religious matters to affect his Parliamentary ambition. So far he has been a failure, and would hav been of more service outside the Parliament house, where he was not afraid to announce his beliefs. He has now another and a bigger chance of showing his powers, and it is to be hoped may redeem his character. Fortunately for himself and his constituents, and the people generally, Labouchere has not been appointed to an office, though he writes on the subject as though he had been somewhat annoyed in being left out in the cold. As an independent-minded man he may possibly hav done good service as a minister of state, but then he must hav trodden severely on the corns of Gladstone, who is not in power what he is outside, and that would not hav done. Somehow there seems a depressing influence in Parliament, and those who promis so much if they are granted permission to enter fall far short of execution when admitted. It is a pity such a man as John Burns should hav allowed himself to be led away by the clerical party, but he may see the error of his ways and reform.

The Romish church is growing bold here; within a few days an archbishop has been appointed in England and another in Scotland. A little more foothold and an effort will be made to establish that creed as the state religion, and then the Protestant party will come running to the Freethinkers to help them against the common enemy; but their prayers will scarcely be answered, as the rival sects will do more good to the commonwealth by fighting the question out between themselvs; and when both parties are exhausted by the struggle, Freethought will seize the opportunity to crush the evil power of all the clerics. Secular power is bad for religious people, who would be much better employed in contemplating the beauties of the new Jerusalem than interfering in mundane matters, though they will never be able to see it until compelled, as they are so anxious to make "the best of both worlds," which is, to say the least of it, exceedingly greedy.

Clergy fees are becoming a sore point, and certain amusing exposures are from time to time made in the papers. One curate at £150 per annum was appointed to a berth worth £220, and as soon as he took over the job had a little bill of £139 presented for fees, which he had to pay before he had his first year's salary, and also spent £50 in repairs to his house, so he found himself considerably on the wrong side of the ledger during his first year of office. I cannot think why he did not try the power of prayer, and get some ravens or fishes, or something of that sort, to supply the deficit. But then parsons are only to tell their hearers how much efficacy there is in prayer—and collections—and can scarcely be expected to believe it themselvs, and precious few of them do. I was talking to a young man to-day who is shortly going in for a curacy. He told me he was just now having a good fling and intended having one final spree next week, before he went up to the bishops. I am informed that this is a common thing, and it shows how full these aspirants for the good work are of the holy spirit, with which they hav to declare they are imbued when entering into office. But priests are only now just what they hav always been, the black sheep of the community, and if we do happen to hear of a priest who is a decent liver, his praises are sung most highly, which only goes to show how rare they are. J. D.

Infidel Death-Beds.

From the Mid-Continent.

Almost every person is familiar with the awful Infidel death-bed scenes as depicted from the orthodox pulpit, and so long and often hav they been described that we take it as a matter of course that Infidels always die in fear of everlasting punishment which they could not be brought to see until their sin had become unpardonable. On the other hand Christians—good orthodox Christians—hav always been supposed to die with the smile of peace on their countenance. The author of this little book (price twenty-five cents) has gathered such facts as were obtainable on the death-bed scenes of Infidels of all ages, and if he has presented only facts, as he claims to hav done, we must believe that Infidels hav, as a rule, died as they lived, at peace with all mankind, and fearing not the future. And come to think of it, why should they not? If they hav been honest in their convictions through life their death should be peaceful.

"Pushed By Unseen Hands."

From the Denver Republican.

. . . All are suggestiv on various lines of thought, as this writer's stories usually are.

From the Iowa State Register.

This list of most beautiful stories is full of nature, pathos, patriotism, and a little humor. A better collection was never published.

Freethought Organizations.

The Freethought Federation of America.

[Headquarters 345 West Randolph street, Chicago, Ill. S. P. Putnam, president; John R. Charlesworth, secretary; George L. Robertson, treasurer.]

The work of the new Federation has already commenced. Activ preparations are being made for a temporary location of the president at Washington during the next session of Congress, from whence he will conduct an activ and aggressiv movement against the closing of the World's Fair on Sunday.

To secure the repeal of this infamous act must be the main object for Freethinkers to work upon, and we must know no rest until such end is accomplished. The ecclesiastical machines hav now thrown down the gage of battle, and it becomes our bounden duty to take it up. You hav those at the head of this Federation who are in earnest and eager for the fray. But remember, that this fight, which must be carried on in our legislativ assemblies, cannot be maintained without your support. I know you do not desire any martyrs. I know that the Freethinkers are willing to bear their share of the burden, and now that we hav a plan of campaign outlined for future work, we can with a good conscience solicit the support of our friends.

The Federation is no longer a supposition; it is now an actual fact, and has already a larger membership than has ever been reached by an organization of its kind in America. Judging from the letters of congratulation that hav been poured in upon me, the Freethinkers of America were ready for such a movement. The opportunity to utilize the political power placed at their disposal, in a direction from which beneficial results to us, as Freethinkers, shall accrue, has now been put before them, and if it is your concern to see our party obtain their rights and privileges as citizens of this republic, you will not fail to seize the present occasion and weld our forces into one solid body, bent upon the determination to carry on the warfare against pious politics, and through the instrumentality of the ballot-box drive from our halls of legislation those who, for party considerations, yielded to the dictation of the church.

First we must secure the repeal of the late measure enacted by Congress, closing the World's Fair on Sunday. Next comes the grand mass meeting of Freethinkers to be held in Chicago on the first Sunday after the opening of the World's Fair, followed by the congress of the International Federation of Freethinkers, and last, but not least, comes the permanent location of Freethought headquarters in Chicago during the continuance of the Fair. This must be done, even before the others. Freethought must be represented at the Fair, and what method could be employed for our representation to greater advantage than having an open place for our brethren from abroad to come to, where they can meet with friends whose thought is in beating with their own, and where they can be shown to advantage the generosity and hospitality of American Freethinkers?

I hav already forwarded an official letter to the representativ of the International Federation of Freethinkers, to be read at the congress in Madrid, inclosing a copy of the resolution passed at the late conference, to invite them to the United States.

The president and myself hav arranged for an activ propaganda during the coming winter season, and we hav every reason to believe that before our next regular meeting our membership will hav increased tenfold.

But let me impress upon you this one fact, we cannot accomplish the above work unless we receive the undivided support of the Freethought party. Remember the officers are to be paid no regular salary, but are entirely dependent upon the lecture field for their support. In view of this, then, let me urge once again the pressing necessity for your help, your support, your encouragement. The fight is forced upon us, and we take it up gladly, in order to show the world that Freethought is not a passing fancy, nor even a sportiv jest, but that instead it is a deep-rooted conviction, which if properly taught will so influence the coming generations as to lead them to a higher and nobler state of human progression. We love the conflict, and are armed fully for the fray, imbued with desire to free mankind from the shackles and the chains of superstition and tyranny.

Think of those noble words uttered by the immortal Paine, "If there must be war, let it be in my day, so that my children may hav peace."

Friends, Freethinkers, and comrades, that same spirit which inspired Paine to write that sentence is alive to-day; it has never been thoroughly extinguished, but slumbering, and now the smoldering embers, left by the generations now gone, shall be fanned into a burning, living flame that shall kindle enthusiasm within the breasts of the people in behalf of the sacred cause of liberty.

The church has ruled long enough. The priests and the parasites of society must be taught to keep their hands from off the political life of our country. The church party is too arrogant; they must never be allowed to put back the hand of our freedom's clock to the time of the Middle Ages. That this may ultimately come about, unless we are eager and activ enough to resist it, is almost an absolute certainty, for while Roman Catholicism is on a decline in many parts of Europe, it is on a gradual increase in the United States, though at present not to any alarming extent, owing chiefly to the fact that hundreds of thousands of ignorant Roman Catholics are yearly flocking to our ports from all parts of Europe. Arriving here, they take part in American political life, not avowedly as American citizens, but slaves of Rome, having already sworn their allegiance to the pope, and will follow his bidding in preference to a conformity with the statutory laws of the land.

Our chief concern now must be to cast aside party politics, and cast our vote for that candidate who promises to go farthest with us upon the platform we shall present. This is a movement that every Freethinker could and should indorse; then do not hesitate longer—send in your names for membership, and whatever donation you can properly afford.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH,
Sec. Freethought Federation of America.
345 W. Randolph st., Chicago, Ill.

The Secular Union Congress.

The hall in which the sixteenth annual Congress of the American Secular Union will be held is the old "Forum," located on Washington boulevard, corner of Sangamon street.

This should be a representativ congress. Every auxiliary should send a full delegation. Every annual and life member should attend. Every honorary vice-president should come as a representativ of his or her state. Everyone opposed to this republic being converted into a theocracy should take this opportunity to protest by his presence against it.

Every lecturer should be present. All are invited.

The following speakers will make addresses at the Congress: Dr. R. B. Westbrook, ex-president of the American Secular Union; John E. Remsburg; the Rev. Alonzo T. Jones, editor of the American Sentinel; Judge C. B. Waite; P. J. O'Shea; Judge John W. Tindall, editorial staff of Inter-Ocean; Horace C. Bennett, president Chicago Secular Union; John F. Geeting, and Mrs. M. A. Freeman.

Other speakers are yet to be heard from and will be announced later.

The Congress will cost money. Secularists understand this. Let each contribute at once and as generously as he can afford to toward defraying the expenses.

The present board has not been extravagant in its disbursements or importunate in its demands. It has left the matter of finances largely to the consciences of Liberals.

The board was created solely by the organization it represents. It came into its present position through no action of its own. It does not care to continue its existence one moment longer than its creators desire it to. But it asks, as some small remuneration for its services, that the Liberals of the country will enable it to make by the success of this Congress a splendid protest against ecclesiastical encroachments upon the people's liberties. It asks that they will permit it to practically demonstrate that there is a grand Secular army organized as a political power having for the basis of its work the Nine Demands of Liberalism.

The American Secular Union was organized for a specific purpose. It should retain its name. It should continue its work. Liberals hav paid their money into its treasury, taken out life-memberships with the understanding that its continued existence was an assured fact. Were its work done it could triumphantly disorganize. But its work is not done.

Let every lover of liberty attend the Congress at Chicago, October 23d, 24th, and 25th, determined that the best shall be done for the Secular cause. And that this Congress may be an honor to the organization, let each send at once his or her remittance to M. Reiman, treasurer, 4,325 Drexel boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

MRS. M. A. FREEMAN,
Cor. Sec. American Secular Union.

Canadian Secular Union.

ANNUAL CONVENTION, 1892.

On Saturday evening, Sept. 10, 1892, a large number of delegates assembled at Science Hall soon after 7 o'clock. As they arrived, those who were strangers were introduced to each other, the greetings being especially warm in some cases. Mr. Allen Pringle, whose name has been so often and so prominently before the public, was received with particular marks of respect and admiration; and Mr. Wm. Algie was the recipient of many good wishes from his numerous admirers.

At a little after half-past 8 o'clock the secretary moved that Mr. Algie take the chair, and this was seconded and carried unanimously.

Mr. Algie said he regretted the absence of the president, but he was glad to say that Captain Adams had not deserted them entirely, but had sent his annual address, which he proceeded to read, as follows:

FELLOW-MEMBERS OF THE CANADIAN SECULAR UNION: I regret that my greeting to you this year must be by written instead of by spoken words. At the time of your convention I expect to be nearing the mountains of British Columbia; but I shall be with you in thought, and shall earnestly wish that the outcome of your convention may be the quickening of individual zeal and the adoption of measures that will tend to the more rapid spread of Secularism in Canada.

The central idea of Secularism is attention to this world, on the ground that it is the only world that we know anything about. Attention is the synonym for remedy. When an evil is perceived, the spontaneous remark of everyone is—that affair needs attention. If the people of Toronto want their city to excel all others in attractivness and comfort they must attend to Toronto rather than to Timbuctoo; and if we want the world to grow better we must think of earth rather than of heaven. There is no greater enemy of progress than the religion which teaches people, who hav come to liv seventy years in a place, that they hav "no abiding city" there, that their abode is cursed, that they must not try to improve it, but should liv in self-denial, hoping for "a city yet to come," "a home beyond the skies." Secularism tells people that it is worth while to be happy even for seventy years, and that they should do the best for themselvs and their neighbors with the means at hand, no matter whether there is another life or not. If men gave up yearning for heaven and set to work in good earnest to improve the condition of mankind, through the knowledge of nature's laws and wise application of her forces, possibly life in time would become so prolonged that men would cease to consider the question of future existence as "the chief concern of mortals here below." This is what our Union aims at—to teach the importance of attention to a known earth, rather than to an unknown heaven, to uphold the motto, "One world at a time," and to instruct people that the ills of life are to be cured by natural means, not by supernatural remedies. Instead of saying "Earth has no sorrows that heaven can not heal," we would say, "Earth evils can be cured by earth knowledge." Ignorance is the source of all evil, and as man becomes master of nature's forces he will gain control of his own destiny. It is in man that walketh to direct his steps, and the sooner he learns that no heavenly helper nor earthly counselor can insure his welfare, but that with best foot forward and right arm ready he must make his own way, the sooner will his path be plain and his progress be assured.

Of my own fulfilment of the duties of the presidential office during the past year I hav little to say. There seems to be no official duty to perform, although there is unlimited scope for individual effort. I hav felt it a duty and pleasure to try to sustain Secular Thought, which has been so ably and satisfactorily conducted by our friend Mr. Ellis, and at present this is the only organized effort that the Union has in hand. The Secular societies, outside of Toronto, organized through the zealous labors of Mr. Watts, hav not as a rule continued a vigorous existence, and the lack of men and means has prevented any systematic propagandist oratorical efforts outside of the societies.

For three years past, acting in the name of the Secular Union, I hav made it my personal work to secure liberty of affirmation and the abolition of religious tests throughout Canada. I am glad to report that a bill has been introduced in the Dominion Parliament by Sir John Thompson, and is expected to become a law at the next session, which secures all that can be desired; that is, the option of choosing to affirm without being obliged to declare one's religious opinions, the exact wording being, "If a person called or desiring to giv evidence, objects or refuses to take an oath, or is objected to as incompetent to take an oath, such person may make the following affirmation: 'I solemnly affirm that the evidence to be given by me shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.' And upon the person making such solemn affirmation, his evidence shall be taken and hav the same effect as if taken under oath."

Another section of the bill provides that, "If a person required or desiring to make an affidavit or deposition in a proceeding, or on an occasion whereon or touching a matter respecting which an oath is required or is lawful, whether on taking office or otherwise, refuses or is unwilling to be sworn," such person shall be permitted to affirm.

When this law is passed, we shall make a vigorous effort to get the obnoxious oaths laws of the Province of Quebec changed, a work which I hav prosecuted unsuccessfully for several years; the cause being considered so hopeless that it has been impossible to find a member of the legislature who would consent to present the bill that has been prepared with the able assistance of Mr. Max Goldstein, of Montreal.

For the progress made in the Dominion Parliament we are indebted to Sir Donald A. Smith and Mr. Robert Sedwick, Q. C., deputy minister of justice, as well as to the Hon. Sir John Thompson, all of whom hav shown an enlightened appreciation of the question and a cheerful readiness to act.

Although this has been a personal effort, I hav made it as president of the Union, and if it is finally successful I desire that it shall be considered as the work of the Canadian Secular Union.

There are obviously two methods by which opinions may be promulgated, speaking and writing. The platform and the press are the means of public instruction, and it is very desirable that the Secular Union should make greater use of both. A missionary of this society ought to go to every town and village in Canada, giv addresses in halls, schoolhouses, barns, or in the open air, and in each place find if possible one or more persons who would be accredited representativs of Secularism. Through these persons a systematic circulation of Liberal literature could be maintained, and in two or three years all Canada would become familiar with the ideas of Rationalism. In addition to the circulation of Secular Thought, which is our first duty, a publication committee could select suitable tracts and books to distribute by sale or gift.

Christianity finds no difficulty in procuring enthusiastic evangelists to spread its dogmas, and it would seem that the grand ideas of Secularism might inspire an equal devotion and find an advocate who would devote his life to their promulgation. If a suitable person should offer to undertake this mission I believe the Liberal thinkers of Canada would provide the means for his support. It seems to me that the Union should make a special effort to secure a traveling secretary or agent who would giv his whole time to the work of lecturing and spreading literature at large throughout the Dominion. By his efforts the circulation of Secular Thought might be so increased that it would become self-sustaining, and the funds now voluntarily contributed could be used for other branches of the missionary work.

I believe it is a question of men rather than of means, and that the money will be forthcoming to support one who would show the zeal and capacity for this work. The good results of the propagandist work done by Mr. Charles Watts in Canada are the warrant for continued efforts in that direction; and apart from the consideration of securing a local lecturer for the Toronto Secular Society, I wish that the Union might at this convention resolve to seek the services of a lecturer at large.

During three years I hav had the honor of holding the office of president. I am both willing and gratified to serve the Union as long as desired, but there are others meriting the honor, who perhaps would bring new methods and increased usefulness, and I shall be pleased if the convention appoints such a person to succeed me.

The work in which we are engaged is one that should arouse the enthusiasm of every lover of humanity. The principles of naturalism which form the basis of the Secular philosophy are the groundwork of all constructiv effort. The object of all improvement is the perfection of man and the final goal is happiness. The great means to secure this is liberty. Freedom of thought, of speech, and action is essential to man's best development. As a society and as individuals we must oppose every encroachment of church or state upon personal liberty. The demands of Secularism should be kept in view and insisted upon on every occasion; and we need to remember that our responsibility as individuals is not relieved by the resolutions of a convention, but that the duty of personal effort remains, and that above all other power for influence is the earnest, sincere utterance of man to man. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Montreal, Sept. 4, 1892.

At the conclusion of the address the chairman called upon the secretary for his report.

The secretary then gave a short report of the work done by the Union during the past year. The bill for allowing affirmations, introduced into Parliament through the agency of their president, had been withdrawn, on the promis of the government to introduce the substance of the bill as a clause in the general act to be passed next year. This would no doubt satisfactorily terminate that struggle. Among the work done by the committee, the work o addressing and mailing the pamphlet written by Mr. Allen Pringle, the entire expense of which had been borne by a stanch friend of Freethought, was by no means a small matter. The committee appointed at the last convention to carry out the proposition to organize, if possible, a burial society, had done some work in the way of drafting a constitution and rules, of which a report would be presented by the secretary of the committee tomorrow. The work of the Union during the year had not been very heavy, but if Secular Thought were placed on a satisfactory basis, no doubt their energies would find some larger fields in the future. The local Toronto Secular Society had carried on its work successfully on the whole, notwithstanding the difficulties in which it had been placed by the sudden withdrawal of Mr. Watts. Although no lecturer had been engaged, the Sunday evening meetings had been continued, though they could hardly be termed successful; but the debating club was proving very successful, and a series of socials had enabled the society to close the season with a fair balance-sheet. There was plenty of work ahead, indeed, for orthodoxy was yet able to lay a heavy hand upon its opponents, as nearly a dozen cases which had occurred during the past year, in which pressure had been brought to bear to cause the discharge of Freethought employees, very clearly showed. The gratifying result of the street-car struggle last January, in which over ten thousand voters cast their ballots in favor of a free Sunday, should nerve them to renewed exertion in the future, until they carried it to a successful issue.

The secretary read letters from Charles Watts, Arthur B. Moss, E. B. Foote, Sr., Franklin Steiner, W. G. Hay, R. Fraser, J. H. Stewart, Charles Etler, John Helm, D. A. Blodgett, and E. M. Macdonald.

On the conclusion of the reading of letters the chairman called for nominations for the special committees to arrange the work of the convention at the Sunday meetings, and the following committees were appointed:

On resolutions—Messrs. Allen Pringle, Geo. Caldback, A. Earsman, J. S. Ellis, F. Armstrong, and Wm. Algie.

On Secular Thought—Messrs. Kendal, Hodgins, Groom, Taylor, Dixon, and Dr. Rollins.

After some remarks from the chairman the convention adjourned till Sunday A.M.

SUNDAY MORNING.

At 9 A.M. on Sunday morning the committees assembled, and proceeded to business, and at about half-past 10 the chairman took the chair and called the convention to order, announcing the first business to be the election of officers.

By unanimous votes the retiring president, secretary, and treasurer were reëlected; and after numerous nominations, the following gentlemen were elected on the executiv committee: Messrs. George Martin, Montreal; E. Duval, Hamilton; A. Roe, Wingham; J. Lockie, Waterloo; W. Macdonnell, Lindsay; J. Taylor, J. A. Risser, F. Armstrong, and E. J. Kendal, Toronto. Messrs. Algie and Hodgins, who had been nominated, offered to serve whenever called on as far as they were able to do so.

The secretary then reported the following resolutions from the committee on resolutions, and they were put from the chair:

Resolved, That the thanks of the convention be tendered to Capt. Robt. C. Adams for his activ exertions in spreading Liberal principles, and more especially for his efforts to secure the passage in Parliament of a bill to remove the legal disabilities under which Freethinkers hav hitherto labored, by giving liberty of affirmation and abolishing religious tests. (Carried unanimously.)

Resolved, That the Canadian Secular Union tenders fraternal greetings to the American Secular Union, and expresses its entire concurrence in the work of that Union in the great efforts hitherto made, as well as those contemplated, for the purpose of keeping open the Chicago Exposition on Sunday, and pledges its utmost exertions to the same end. (Carried unanimously.)

Resolved, That the Union regards with feelings of satisfaction and encouragement the great progress made by the National Secular Society of England, under the presidency of Mr. G. W. Foote, and with the able assistance of Mr. Charles Watts and other lecturers; and earnestly hopes that the exertions now being made to secure a permanent home for the headquarters of Freethought in the metropolis, where the name of the late great leader of our cause, Charles Bradlaugh, may be honorably enshrined and perpetuated, will be crowned with success. (Carried unanimously.)

Resolved, That the Canadian Secular Union congratulates the Liberals of Manitoba on the distinct gain which has been made in the direction of freedom from priestly control as the result of the recent struggles; and trusts that they will be nerved to still greater efforts, until, in the near future, education, one of the most important departments of the national life, shall be made completely free and secular. (Carried unanimously.)

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

The chairman called the convention to order soon after 2 o'clock, and, introducing the subject of Secular Thought, called upon Mr. John Taylor to report.

Mr. Taylor presented a statement of the details of receipts and expenses on Secular Thought account for the year from Sept. 1, 1891, to Aug. 31, 1892.

The secretary then gave some further details of finances, and also estimates for the future, to show the convention the actual condition of affairs; and he referred to the letter of their Port Hope friend as showing what it was necessary for the convention to do in order to relieve him from further trouble and anxiety for the next year. The paper was being carried on by him at some financial loss and a sacrifice of all his available time, and he asked the convention to shoulder only a portion of the financial burden. After considerable discussion a sufficient amount was subscribed to put the paper out of debt.

Mr. Allen Pringle then presented an address he had prepared. When this had been read Mr. Denton reported for the committee appointed on the matter of the formation of a sick and burial society. He said that in consequence of the many failures of the schemes in the way of assessment societies, the government had determined to oppose the formation of any new ones for some time, and nothing could be done. The committee had formulated a constitution, however, and he thought from what the minister had said, it would be possible to bring it to a successful issue before the next convention.

The convention concluded Sunday evening with a large gathering at the Academy of Music. Mr. William Algie occupied the chair and explained to the audience the purpose of the Union. They wanted, he said, the entire removal of civil disabilities, and he was glad to say that this was rapidly approaching accomplishment, for the government had undertaken to introduce clauses into the general act to be brought forward next session, allowing affirmation and abolishing religious tests in the cases of those who objected to taking the oath. Then they wanted to hav the public school education entirely free from religious teachings of all kinds; and they wanted all tax exemptions abolished. If there were any exemptions they should be in the case of the property of the widow and the fatherless, not in those of rich churches, which were generally well able to pay their legitimate taxation. He was glad to see that some of the churches in Toronto had determined to pay their fair share of taxation. Another object they had in view was to bring about an absolutely free Sunday. He was not, however, an extremist. Some people talked about the Parisian Sunday. How many of them knew what the Parisian Sunday is? He could tell them that the Parisian Sunday was not a thing to be afraid of. The Parisian workman enjoys his Sunday, and its effect was undoubtedly very beneficial. He then announced that the first meeting of the Toronto Secular Society Debating Club for this season would be held on Sunday next, September 18th, at 3 P.M., at Science Hall. Mr. B. F. Underwood delivered the closing address on "The Known, the Unknown, and the Unknowable."

Two Bad Boys.

A humorous incident occurred recently at one of the leading Catholic churches of Brooklyn which caused great merriment to those that were within earshot. An old Irishwoman in a black hood and a wrap had just risen from in front of a confession-box, where she had held a long conference with G. Almighty through the "howly confessor," and crossing herself with stupid devotion, gave a religious sigh of relief and started to go out. On her way she encountered a life-sized image of the Virgin Mary. She halted, and making a graceful courtesy, finally fell upon her knees, and bowing devotedly, addressed the "howly ould woman" thusly: "Howly mother o' God, how glad I am to see yees. We hav had a heap o' throuble in our lives. I've jist bin tell'n' yer father-in-law, God, a divil of a story to aise me mind, through howly Father O'Toole. O howly mother, you had the boy, Jesus Christ, who was crucified. An' I had the fine boy, Patrick, who was hung. O howly mother, phat bad luck we've had wid our boys. Oh, murdher!"

Lectures and Meetings.

S. P. PUTNAM'S lecture appointments for October and November:

Boston, Mass.....	Oct.	2	Scofield, Utah....	Nov.	1, 2
Cincinnati, O.....	"	9	Reno, Nev.....	"	6, 7
Golden Pond, Ky.	"	14–17	Bishop Creek and
Chicago, Ill.....	"	23	Round Valley, Cal	"	9–14
Bartley, Neb.....	"	26, 27	Independence, Cal	"	17–20
Denver, Col.....	"	30	Stockton, Cal.....	"	27

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH will commence a lecture tour through the states to California in October. He will go by way of the Northern Pacific and return by a southern route. Liberals along the line desiring lectures, etc., should address him at 345 W. Randolph street, Chicago, Ill. Geo. Longford, secretary of the Friendship Liberal League, writes: "On Sunday, October 2d, Mr. Charlesworth will lecture for Friendship Liberal League, Philadelphia, Broad and Wood streets, at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. Liberals throughout the vicinity are cordially invited to participate with us in these intellectual treats."

S. P. PUTNAM will lecture Saturday and Sunday next, September 24th and 25th, at Meriden, Conn. It is hoped that all Liberals in the vicinity will attend. In announcing his visit the Meriden Daily Journal says: "S. P. Putnam, ex-president of the American Secular Union, who is to deliver three Freethought lectures in Pacific Assembly Hall, September 24th and 25th, has been at work for a few weeks organizing a new party, to be known as 'The Freethought Federation of America.' It is not arrayed in opposition to the old political parties, but the intention is to vote only for those who favor that part of the platform regarding the Demands of Liberalism. Mr. Putnam's direct object in organizing his forces at present is to affect the action of Congress in refusing to hav the World's Fair open on Sunday. Some time ago he had five hundred names of those prominent in the movement, and his aim will be to make the list so large that the call will be bound to be a powerful factor in influencing the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday. All who heard Mr. Putnam when he lectured in Meriden last winter found him an interesting speaker, and it is on account of pleasant associations formed in this city that he decided to return here again. His first lecture will be Saturday evening, September 24th, and he will deliver two lectures the following Sunday afternoon and evening. A general invitation is extended the public to be present."

Letters of Friends.

Solomon's Song Licentious, and God Limited to the Jews.

CHRYSTOVAL, ARIZ., Sept. 2, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Heston with his inimitable cartoons has cost me the price of a "holy Bible." How can I get even with him? His object-lessons are priceless jewels amid a world of rubbish.

I reread that Poem of Passion in the "good old book" yesterday called Song of Solomon, and am now more amazed than ever that so licentious a publication could ever hav passed muster with the bigots of King James's version of the so-called "holy scriptures."

Mr. Editor, can you or anyone else show anywhere in the Bible that Jehovah ever claimed to be other than the God of the Jews? He constantly reiterates, "For I am the Lord thy God," and refers in terms of disrespect to the other gods who were his contemporaries. Will some of the sanctified please answer this question?

O. F. THORNTON.

Plea for the Unitarians.

SAN CIMEA, CAL., Aug. 6, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of July 30th, in the frontispiece, the Unitarians are represented among the orthodox frauds. Now, would it not be policy not to interfere with the Unitarians? They are certainly the most liberal of any people who profess belief in a hereafter—in fact, so closely allied to the Agnostics practically that there is hardly any difference. I think if we could rid the world of all religious orders but the Unitarians the curse of religious intolerance, to all intents and purposes, would be banished from the earth.

They certainly serve as a stepping-stone from orthodoxy to Freethought, and the advanced ideas they advocate serve to draw large numbers of thinking young men and women from the orthodox fold who would otherwise remain there for society's sake if nothing else. They deny the doctrins of original sin, infant damnation, and blood atonement, which act is humanizing, at least. And half a loaf is better than no bread. We ought to be thankful.

JOHN A. STEVENS.

Advises Circulating Petitions.

UKIAH, CAL., Aug. 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Finding a form of counter-petition to the commissioners of the World's Fair in one number of THE TRUTH SEEKER, I cut it out and put it in shape for signers, and from the success I am meeting it has occurred to me that California should at once be furnished with forms of this petition, scattered throughout the different counties of the state like autumn leaves, that they may lodge in hands who hav an interest in having the Fair conducted on rational and secular principles—not only for the interest and benefit of the inhabitants of the United States but for the interest and benefit of all the countries throughout the length and breadth of civilization. Therefore, if it has not already been done, I would suggest the scattering of these petitions throughout the state. By a little timely industry no doubt some twenty thousand or more names may be obtained just as well as not. Had I the petitions I would take the responsibility of distribution in Mendocino county.

THOS. R. MCCOWEN.

More Pictures Wanted.

PAW PAW, ILL., Sept. 3, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Could you furnish extra pictures of THE TRUTH SEEKER after we receive the paper, and if so what would they cost per one hundred? I think you could sell thousands of them if people knew they could get them. Save the plate or type, and after people receive the paper let them say how many pictures they want. Then you would know how many to strike off and mail.

What does that picture represent where the girl is kneeling before the priest—I mean the ball on her head?

With respect, U. R. PATCHEN.

[You probably saw in our editorial columns last week a notice of a colored edition of one of the most admired of our pictures, which we will issue if enough funds to pay the expenses are subscribed. If this first venture is successful we will issue colored editions of other pictures. This perhaps will meet your wishes. As to the girl represented in the advertisement of "Crimes of Preachers," she wears her hair (with a little exaggeration) in a fashion prevailing at the time of the picture's designing.—ED. T. S.]

The Use of the Pictures.

SAN JOSE, CAL., Aug. 31, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: On account of changes in building 85 South 1st street, I hav moved to Masonic Temple, No. 119 South 2d street, San Jose, where we shall continue, through the aid of your valuable paper, THE TRUTH SEEKER, to get Christians away from the devil and nearer Christ.

I also receive subscriptions to, and sell and circulate, all the Liberal and scientific books and papers that the hand of providence may point this way. To make the Liberal news-stand a fixed star in this priestridden valley of Santa Clara will fill the measure of my ambition plumbfull.

To advance the cause of Freethought, the establishment of a Liberal news-stand in every city would do more good than any other lever that could be rigged, because it reaches thousands who would never hear a Freethought lecture nor read a Liberal book. But a liberal display of THE TRUTH SEEKER with those holy pictures to the front on the most popular thoroughfares of our cities will fetch those blood-stained seekers after truth (the Christians) every time. Since I opened my news-stand one year ago I hav seen many of the "dyed in the wool" take their notebooks and write down the texts under the cartoons in THE TRUTH SEEKER, no doubt for the purpose of consulting the Holy Queer to see if they were correct. By this they are led very quietly on to investigation, and the preacher begins to hav trouble with some of his sheep.

Fraternally, L. R. TITUS.

The Church and Its Vile Allies.

NEW HARTFORD, IA., Sept. 5, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: So far this year I hav failed to get my new subscriber, but I shall keep trying. I will send $5 in this for two years for myself; and if I get a new one, and cannot get two, will chip in $2 50 more for another year.

I want to help raise a fund next year to send our preacher, Watson Heston, on a summer vacation. His illustrated sermons are better than all the sermons that hav been preached by Christian pulpit-pounders. Heston's sermons put people to thinking; the pulpit-pounders put people to sleep. The latter are a benefit to overworked people, but their hell and hallelujah pap is getting played out to the extent that we cannot sleep as of yore, thus the good they do is fast passing away.

I think it is time Liberals organized as a political party, for since the bootleggers, gamblers, pickpockets, and prostitutes hav gone in with the Christians, we are in danger of all the oldtime Christian persecutions. The church has been most successful when most corrupt, and knowing this they hav drawn the above elements to them. Horace Boies, our present governor of Iowa, said in one of his speeches last year that if he was defeated the preachers and bootleggers would defeat him. Well, the preachers and bootleggers roared and ranted, and we were fool enough to bet our money Boies would be knocked out. Iowa had more intelligence than we thought and we were glorified that the fool and his money parted. All states are not like Iowa, though, so it is well that we organize.

MEL PIERCE.

We Already Giv Both Sides of This and Every Other Question.

PITTSBURGH, PA., Sept. 8, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been thinking for some time of asking you through your valuable paper to giv us some pointers on the tariff. I hav always been a Republican, voting that ticket, thinking it right, and thinking by doing so that it was keeping up the wages of the workingmen, but I, with thousands of others, hav begun to think that we are only helping the capitalist and not benefiting the public and ourselvs. And when we come to study into the effect of tariff we find that we hav no paper but what is so tainted with one side's or the other's politics that when we read we cannot decide which is correct. Tariff for revenue I think right. But if we could get a few articles through THE TRUTH SEEKER showing both sides, I think it would do much good. And it also might help the paper if you were to come out and giv both sides of so important a question as the tariff. I know it would be a little out of your line, but it would be quite an advertisement to say, "Take THE TRUTH SEEKER; it has no political ax to grind, and you will get the truth on both sides."

DELMONT JONES, SR.

The Fair Gates Must Be Open.

LEXINGTON, KY., Sept. 5, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Who advances civilization? Is it the fierce, cruel, and wealthy pious woman, who is so sublime in her ignorant rage for spurious and dangerous reform that she is called a person of splendid abilities, who ought to vote and hold office, her wisdom being so great that she thinks she can remodel the laws and Constitution?

How heathenish, also, is the temper of those who would strangle the noble progressiv zeal of the people with a cord of religious fanaticism, forgetting that the Wat Tylers are not all dead; that the sacredness of human rights is the ruling thought in the minds of the masses—though they will not resort to violence to do good, but will conquer by might of overpowering numbers. Who shall fasten the gates of the World's Fair against the power of public sentiment? Those who do so will hear a crash which will resound through the universe. Does it advance civilization to shut your ears to that powerful and holy throb of the great heart of the world, which is all the world livs on? You will not carry a pistol, my friend, but you will lift that ponderous gate from its hinges, proving the demands of the soul for liberty. Could any good-natured policeman take umbrage at proceedings so natural—the grand joke of the world for all ages?

And think how pure a literature should be to prove that we are civilized. Men and women who hav sense enough to kill a musketo should condemn the book of Esther, which Luther wished to throw into the Elbe, the most indecent contribution to the world's literature which is known.

ALHAZA.

The Nobility of the Freethought Cause.

POTTER, ARK., Sept. 5, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I desire to ask the following question: Why is it that our TRUTH SEEKER brethren do not more thoroughly organize? It seems to me that our cause ought to awaken a more earnest spirit, a more widespread impulse, than appears to prevail at present. What is the task before us? It is to obtain liberty and freedom of conscience for every woman, man, and child, and to abolish superstition with the force of reason, thereby imparting more happiness, more brotherly love and kindness, to the human family. This being the case, is there any cause that more justly deserves our best effort? Many Freethinkers fail to realize the importance, the greatness and honor, of that task. Our noble standard-bearers of our cause, although hated now by some, are destined to be loved and honored by all, like the abolishers of slavery, now loved by those who once hated them. Freethought is bound to stand on the top round of the ladder in time—or at least, that is my judgment. Freethought in this country, I am pleased to say, is steadily advancing. Great improvement has been made in the last five years; and if we were to organize, in my judgment the tide would turn in our favor most rapidly. Brethren, let us organize whenever and wherever we can. Let every one of us take, read, and distribute Freethought literature all we can, and do ourselvs justice, and sooner or later the victory is ours. Ignorance and superstition are monsters to deal with, but they are bound to succumb to reason and intelligence. It is true we are not promised eternal happiness at the right hand of God for our work, but we are promised something better—that is, happiness now. Jehovah's company is not very desirable to decent people, unless he has changed since the days of Moses and the prophets.

Many of you hav advantages we do not possess. We liv here in the mountains, fifty miles from railroads, with no good chance for lectures.

Yours for an endless march on their lines, J. R. PERRY.

The Fair Sundays.—People's Party Principles.

FONDULAC, WIS., Aug. 20, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: If I go to the Fair at Chicago and the door is closed on Sunday, I shall then of necessity go to One-Eyed Mike's saloon where the doors are open at all hours and the cancan, led by Mother Rahab, commences at 3 P.M. and runs all night. I would much rather go there than go and hear Rev. Mr. Talmage discuss the question of total depravity. I hope Heston will make a picture of the Senate as they looked and appeared when they declared this country was a Christian country, by refusing to donate money unless the doors were closed on Sunday. That beats Mother Rahab, for she let General Joshua's spies in, on Sunday.

Now another strike at Buffalo, "all in consequence of Cullom's amendment to the Reagan bill," which fixed the fare and freight on all railways, which would hav dealt justly by the people and railways, and thereby prevented the great combines of railway and Congressional millionaires.

Now, the only way out is to elect Weaver, the People's candidate. Then we will tax incomes and level the people; fix the fare and freight on railroads; elect Senators, postmasters, etc., and increase the money to $75 per capita, all issued by the government and made a full legal tender for all debts, public and private.

Inclosed find $13.10 for appended list of books. I also send some names and addresses for sample copies.

Yours truly, DE-W. C. PRIEST.

Religion and Cholera.

ANACORTES, WASH., Sept. 1, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: To-day in this far distant point in our country I read that the cholera has reached New York, and one Spaulding, assistant secretary, informs us that he will do all he can to avert it, but if divine providence has decreed that we will hav it we will hav it anyway:

Secretary Spaulding says that if it is the will of divine providence that the cholera should enter the United States, it will be impossible to keep it out.

Secretary Spaulding is an impious fool. If we must accept his dictum, we might as well resign ourselvs to the inevitable and quit wasting our substance trying to thwart the divine will, which will be done, notwithstanding the laudable exertions of Mr. Spaulding to delay its execution as long as possible. If the almighty should eventually surmount the barriers which Mr. Spaulding has had the temerity to interpose in his way, and fasten the scourge upon us, that timely utterance of that gentleman will hav completely absolved him, in the eyes of his countrymen, of all responsibility. Indeed, his strenuous exertions to turn the almighty from his fell purpose will assuredly, in time, be recognized and rewarded by a grateful and guileful public. Secretary Spaulding is a blasphemous ass. His remark was as void of common sense as the drivel of an idiot. He belongs to a class of canting hypocrits who would blame their sins on God if they could, a class which constitutes a worse foe to piety than all the Atheists and Agnostics in Christendom. The president should hav the fool's mouth stuffed speechless with old rags, before he has a chance to further discredit the nation which he represents in his present official capacity.—Walla Walla Daily Spectator.

The cholera livs by superstition. It starts in Arabia and Persia by superstitious Moslems or Mohammedans, who lug rotten corpses, a year or two dead, to Mecca so they can get the benefits of being in the Holy City. And when it spreads in its devastating course across the world and enters America a superstitious fool in Washington says if divine providence has decreed it we will hav it anyway. "Divine providence" is having more fun in Hamburg than a tiger in a children's nursery just now. Is not Secretary Spaulding doing wrong to take precautions against "divine providence?" Won't it only make D. P. the madder when it does get in with its chastening rod known as cholera bacterium? Bah! Isn't it sickening? That is a sample of the Holy John and Hypocrit Harrison administration. A set of canting thieves! Dump them out and put in their places a set of wooly-headed, thick-lipped, long-heeled plantation darkies, who can "wuk some cunjeh" on the cholera, or "hoodoo" it with the "left hind foot of a rabbit killed in a niggah graveyahd in de light ob de moon."

The Mohammedan who starts the cholera says "it is the will of Allah!" And Assistant-Secretary Spaulding says "if it is decreed by divine providence it will come." At last advices he reports it about "nip and tuck" between himself and D. P. I will never vote for Hypocrit Harrison nor Hypocrit Cleveland. GEO. WILSON.

Has Man an Immortal Soul?

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 29, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: I will take as my text Eccles. iii, 20, 21: "All go unto one place: all are of the dust and all turn to dust again: who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?" We understand by an immortal soul a spirit that inhabits the body of man, and which, on the dissolution of the body, continues to exist forever, be conscious of its existence, and hav a perfect recollection of all it passed through in connection with the body while on earth. If man possesses such a soul or spirit it must be independent of life, and either must hav existed in a conscious state before it entered the body, or was called into existence by the creator for the special purpose of inhabiting a particular body. What are the characteristics by which man is distinguished as a soul-possessing animal from a soulless animal? Consciousness, reason, and a knowledge of good and evil are the qualities that distinguish man from the brute, and they are therefore claimed to be the properties of the soul.

At what time and in what manner does the soul enter the flesh? It cannot be that the father and mother by the act of procreation call the soul into existence, as they furnish the quick seed which develops by the operation of nature's law. A spirit is a thing which is not in nature and can not be called into existence by a law of nature.

According to the orthodox doctrin the soul is breathed into existence in the flesh by a special act of the creator. At what time and in what manner is this miracle performed? Does the soul exist in the embryo, or does it come into the fetus with the first breath of life?

Who will answer these questions?

The soul must certainly be in the body when the child is born, and remain in an unconscious state until man becomes a thinking animal. It cannot be denied that the qualities on which we base our belief in an immortal soul—reason and knowledge of good and evil—are vastly different at different stages of life. They develop with the body. They are strong when the body is strong and vigorous, and they decay with the body and are weak when the body is enfeebled with sickness or age. They are mentally great or small according to the organism which acts them. They may become dormant through sickness, or from injuries sustained by the mechanism. They may become apparently extinct in man throughout his natural life. And yet at the extermination of the body a soul or a spirit issues forth from it with restored consciousness, and a perfect knowledge of all things which affected the living man, though he was unconscious of them at the time they happened! I pause for an answer to this question.

Has man an immortal soul? Man is a creature of this world—a part of the created; animated with the spirit that pervades all nature and governed by nature's unrivaled and unchangeable law. What is not in nature is not in him. The finite is the limit of man's knowledge, and we cannot go beyond it. The law of nature is sufficient for all things in nature; it leads everything to its destiny, each according to its kind. It directs the seed to become a plant or a tree—an apple-tree or a pear-tree, according to its kind. In the lower animals, it is guided by instinct; in man instinct is enlightened by reason, which directs him in the pursuit of happiness. Reason is the result of thought and experience. Thought is a secretion of the brain, which affects the nervous system, and causes those feelings that giv warning of what is right or wrong. Experience and the impressions received through the senses enlighten man to correct his understanding. Action is the law of life, and happiness is its aim. Happiness is within the law, and the pursuit of it determins the will. If a man understood the law that is within him he would there find a code of ethics more suitable to him as a man, more conduciv to his happiness, and better adapted to his social condition than any that has yet governed his kind. CHAS. ENOWITZ.

The Sunday-School in the Schoolhouse.

DEUSTER, WIS., Aug. 14, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed clippings from our county paper. And I wish you would inform me whether the Sunday-school could as easy as this be made to vacate the schoolhouse in any district. My brother G. H. was chairman of the meeting, and he and I were the only ones that did the talking, and we two talked them out.

I wish I could do more for the cause, or our cause, but I hav had the worst luck of any man on earth. In five years my crop has not paid the expenses, and being heavily in debt it makes me scratch to keep up. And the worst is, no crop worth gathering this year. But my courage does not fail me. J. W. KRUSCHKE.

CRANBERRY CENTER SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

At the annual meeting of the School District No. 7, of Necedah, after the usual business had been attended to, the chairman, G. H. Kruschke, arose and said that, as there was no more business to come before the meeting, he had some remarks to make about the Cranberry Center Union Sunday-school, which had for two years past held weekly meetings on the Sabbath in the schoolhouse. He stated that one hour's Sabbath-school corrupted the children's morals more than a week's teaching in the common schools could counteract. All necessary teaching was contained in the text-books of the day school. Little stories taught the children all the morals they needed. At school they were taught only the real, in fact only those things which their faculties taught them they could see and grasp. Children's minds should not be poisoned by such things as he had heard taught at the Sabbath-school, such as, "What do you suppose those two creatures in shining garments of cast-steel were?" and the answer, "Angels." He was interrupted by cries of, "Dry up! dry up!" etc. At last order was restored long enough for a motion to be made, testing the feelings of the district in this matter. The chairman at first refused to place the motion before the house, but at last was prevailed upon to do so, and the majority were in favor of the Sunday-school remaining in the schoolhouse.

The following morning G. H. Kruschke advertised that he would deliver a lecture upon the subject of Atheism in the schoolhouse on July 10th, at 2 o'clock—the usual hour at which the Sunday-school has been in session. In face of the above facts, although the majority of the electors had authorized the use of the schoolhouse by the Sunday-school, the superintendent decided that although the most prominent were prepared to fight for their rights, it would be better to call a special meeting of the Sunday-school to act upon the matter. Below will be found the secretary's report of the meeting.

The meeting was called to order by the superintendent, who, by her opening address, stated the business for which the meeting had been called. She first stated the business which was brought before the meeting was whether we should or not giv up holding our meetings in the schoolhouse in accordance with the urgent demands of the Atheistic element of the district. After some debate, it was decided by a unanimous vote to remove our Sabbath-school to other quarters. A motion was made and carried that a committee be appointed to draw up a set of resolutions with regard to our change of location.

The four members; the superintendent; Mrs. W. L. McGow, the secretary; L. S. Waring; Mrs. James Bassett, and Mrs. William Evans drew up the following resolutions:

"Resolved, That although before the Sunday-school was organized, permission was granted by the electors to use the schoolhouse for public meetings of a good moral character, and the majority declared their willingness to hav the Sunday-school remain in the building, yet as two families hav objected to its use for such purposes, we deem it best to select some other place in which to continue our meetings.

"Secondly, Resolved, That we as an organized Sunday-school tender our thanks to the district for the use of the schoolhouse during the past two years.

"Thirdly, Resolved, That we also tender our thanks to the majority of the electors for the hearty support of our organization and principles, and the privilege which they granted us of occupying the building on the Sabbath for an indefinit period.

"Fourthly, Resolved, That whereas for a time it will be necessary to hold our meetings on the property of private individuals, an invitation to attend is extended to all, as the meetings are public and for the good of the public."

After these were read, a motion was made and seconded that they be adopted. It was put to a vote and carried.

The next business was to decide upon a place in which to hold our meetings, as no less than five hav been offered. The motion was made and seconded that we accept the offer of Mr. Wm. Evans of his store building as being most suitable and convenient. The motion was carried. A vote of thanks was then tendered to Mr. Evans and the others for their kind offers. Motion was made and carried that the minutes of this meeting be published.

(Signed) LEORA S. WARING, Secretary.

Christian Cheats.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., July 11, 1892.

MR. EDITOR: That old Latin proverb to the effect that "the world wishes to be swindled or humbugged," etc., has shown itself in a queer way in this city lately when it was announced in one of our great religious dailies that a Christianized Jewish rabbi from the far backwoods of Asiatic India was in the city to gather souls (not "shekels") to Jesus—in fact, with the stupendous idea to Christianize the Jews! The following was intended as a draw-card for his work here:

TEN LOST TRIBES.

Elder John Sergius, of the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, in southeastern India, who is making a tour of the United States in the interest of a fund to further the evangelization of the Jews of that country, preached at the Travis park Methodist Episcopal church last night. He claims that the Jews in that portion of India which is his nativ home are the descendants of the long-lost ten tribes of Israel and that he himself belongs to the tribe of God, the sixth son of Israel, better known to Bible-readers as Jacob. The dialect of his people, he says, is the ancient Hebrew. The church, of which he has been twenty-six years an elder, he refers to as Israelitish orthodox Christian, and claims that in customs, practices, and doctrins they strictly follow the Apostles and the early church. His church, he says, was founded by St. Thomas, who visited India in A.D. 45, and who was put to death in A.D. 55. Five years later, it is claimed, Bishop Timothy visited India and ordained seven elders of the church, from which time to the present an unbroken line of succession has been kept. They hav three orders in their ministry—deacons, elders, and bishops—to the second of which he belongs. They practice infant baptism exclusivly, except in case of converts from non-orthodox churches. The mode is always sprinkling. They observe the Christian Sabbath and the sacrament of the Lord's supper. Upon entering their synagog they remove their sandals, wash their feet, and then engage in divine worship.

While Elder Sergius and the church to which he belongs accept Jesus Christ as the real messiah and believe that he fulfilled all prophecy concerning the spiritual messiah, yet his people are daily looking for the appearance of a temporal messiah who shall gather the Jews from all parts of the world and lead them to the Holy Land. Already seventy thousand of his tribe hav been converted and he is here to raise funds to aid in the conversion of the rest, among whom there is a great field for evangelical work.

In personal appearance Elder Sergius bears some resemblance to the Hebrews with whom Americans are familiar. He was a Nazarite from birth until a short time ago, when some mischievous American boys trimmed his long hair, which hung far below his shoulders. He has a very heavy beard and his hair still hangs in great abundance over his broad shoulders. He is a learned man, speaking seven or eight foreign languages. He also speaks English tolerably well. His letters of recommendation are written in Sanscrit. He will probably preach here another night this week.

We, as the great "unwashed by faith," may hav a smile when we see persons in these United States, the inhabitants of which are enlightened people generally, so taken in by such frauds as the "Reverend Sergus, or Sergius, of India," whose "letters of recommendation are in Sanscrit."

The easily beguiled reporter or interviewer of the reverend ex-rabbi may be able to tell what Sanscrit is. But if a converted Jew travels with such trash as that, it may be palatable as an oddity, but for the thinking man it is an absurdity—more than that, an imposition and a willfully practiced fraud. Sanscrit was the classical language of the ancient Hindoos. The language is dead and the once great Hindoo race almost extinct. The letters may as well contain a bill of fare of "Cana's wedding feast" and we would not know any better.

A fraud or an impostor in ordinary life is despicable enough, but a religious hypocrit such as this Rev. Sergius! He claims to be an "ex-rabbi," not an ex-Jew only; the latter becoming a convert is at least somewhat rational, but a rabbi converted! It is a moral impossibility—judged by the Mosaic law in such cases made and provided. He is not respected by those with whom he wishes to mingle, but only regarded as a curious specimen of crankism for or with a special modus of begging like the meek and lowly Nazarene; while he is looked upon by Jews generally as a charlatan or mountebank and swindler.

As a proof, or at least a hint, that your correspondent is not far from the truth I herewith giv an extract from the San Antonio Light of the 28th of June last:

The following is taken from the American Israelite of June 23d and concerns a gentleman now in this city:

"'The famous rabbi, Rev. John Sergus, of the Jewish Christian church, India, will lecture at St. John's church, corner of Twenty-fifth and Broadway, this evening at 8 o'clock. He will appear in ancient Mosaic costume, and will giv thrilling accounts of the black Jews—wild people living in trees—marriage in India, fire and devil worship, etc. He will also sing several songs in Samaritan, Syriac, and Hindoo languages, and giv examples of oratory in the ancient Hebrew tongue.'

"We quote the above from the Galveston News as a sample of what we poor Jews hav to suffer. Sergus, the 'famous rabbi,' was a simple, unpretending tramp living on Jewish charity until he wore it out. He then took up conversion to Christianity as a trade, and has been living on the fat of the land ever since. As Barnum said, people like to be humbugged. People who liv by their wits know this and profit by their knowledge. They style their victims 'suckers,' and your shrewd Jewish vagabond knows that of all 'suckers' the pious Christian who believes the conversion of all Jews to Christology is a necessary forerunner of the millennium is the 'rankest'—ergo, the most easily 'bled.' We trust our readers will excuse the slang, but we can hardly speak of men in Mr. Sergus's profession without using its technical terms. We cannot see any reason for getting excited about things of this kind. If Christian congregations insist on being 'stood up,' we can do no more than to warn them, and then let them do as they please."

The reverend tramp found that the harvest was not what had been anticipated, for when the plate was passed during the "performance" in one of the "houses of God" the "house" became suddenly empty, and the empty seats refused to come down with the expected filthy lucre. The reverend Asiatic son of the lost ten tribes of Israel will no doubt spread the report of the great depravity of our beautiful city of the Alamo.

"Truth is mighty and will prevail."

I am watching the San Antonio river flow by, its swift bluish waters carrying on its bosom large lumps of the long-growing watergrass as it is being cut loose further above; flowing down to the gulf, and then, according to eternal laws of nature, again to form the primitiv atoms for isles and continents in millions of years to come; opposit a forest-clad island with beautiful shade-trees from whence come the shoutings of merrymaking children. I sit here dreaming, yet awake. I can see mentally what Heine must hav beheld when he wrote his "Ode to the Forest:"

Ye hills and dales and valleys,
O beauteous forest green!
My heart and soul do rally,
In solitude unseen.

Nature cares nothing for the fanatical or mythological Sabbath, or the Constantinian Diæ Soli. Eternity knows no day, month, or year; it is not for humanity to grasp, it is infinit. HERMAN BREUSING.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Books.

Be Thyself. 10c.
Christianity No Finality. Spiritualism Superior. 10c.
Common-Sense Thoughts on the Bible. 10c.
Deluge in the Light of Modern Science. 10c.
Garrison in Heaven. A Dream. 10c.
Geologist and Radical. By J. H. Powell. 25c.
Geology. Past and Future of our Planet. $1.50.
God Proposed for Our National Constitution. 10c.
Irreconcilable Records. Genesis and Geology. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 40c.
Is Darwin Right? Origin of Man. $1.
Is Spiritualism True? 10c.
Man's True Saviors. 10c.
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. 10c.
Pocasset Tragedy. Legitimate Fruit of Christianity. 10c.
Radical Discourses on Religious Subjects. $1 25.
Radical Rhymes. With Author's Portrait. $1 25.
Sermon from Shakspere's Text. 10c.
Soul of Things. Psychometric Researches, etc. 3 vols. (Vol. I by Wm. and Eliz. M. F. Denton.) Per vol., $1.50.
What Is Right? 10c.
What Was He? Jesus in 19th Century Light. Paper, $1; cloth, $1.25.
Who are Christians? 10c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

GEMS OF FREETHOUGHT.

The Myth of the Great Deluge. By James M. McCann. 15 cents. Ten copies, $1. It is the most complete and overwhelming refutation of the Bible Story of the Deluge that I have ever read.—B. F. Underwood. To read it is to be astonished at the possibilities of religious credulity.—T. B. Wakeman. Mr. McCann's dynamite bomb has blown the fallacy to atoms.—A. B. Bradford. It ought to meet with a very large sale.—C. P. Farrell.

The Evolution of the Devil. By Henry Frank, the independent preacher of New York city. The most learned, accurate, scientific, and philosophical analysis of his satanic majesty ever published. The book contains 66 pages, is beautifully bound, with likeness of author on title-page. Price, 25 cents; five copies for $1.

Ingersoll's Address before the New York Unitarian Club. The first time in the history of the world that a Christian association ever invited a noted Infidel to lecture before them. The lecture is a grand one, and was received by the club with continuous applause from be ginning to end. The pamphlet contains 12 pages, beautifully printed. Price, 6 cents; ten copies, 50 cents.

Memorial Oration by Colonel Ingersoll on Roscoe Conkling. Delivered before the New York legislature May 9, 1888. Price, 4 cents.

Dwight L. Moody. An interview by Susan H. Wixon. Price, 5 cents. Ten copies for 30 cents.

God in the Constitution. By Robert G. Ingersoll. One of the best papers Colonel Ingersoll ever wrote. In paper cover with likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

What Would Follow the Effacement of Christianity? By George Jacob Holyoake. This is a most valuable contribution to Freethought literature. Bound in paper with good likeness of author. Price, 10 cents. Twelve copies for $1.

ife and Carecr of Charles Bradlaugh. By George Jacob Holyoake. With good likeness of Mr. Bradlaugh. Price, 15 cents. Ten copies for $1.

What Constitutes a Freethinker. By H. L. Green, editor of the Freethinker's Magazine. A good missionary document. Price, 15 cents per dozen.

Ingersoll's Great Address on Thomas Paine, at the late Paine celebration in New York city. Price, 6 cents; ten copies for 50 cents.

Standing Up for Jesus; or what the editor of the Freethinkers' Magazine thinks of him. Price, 4 cents; twenty-five copies for 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, New York.

To Regulate the STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS, TAKE RIPANS TABULES. SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

News of the Week.

WANAMAKER has completed his tour of the Cape May churches as an evangelistic exhorter.

A NEW series of United States postage-stamps, the engravings representing scenes in Columbus's life, is to be issued.

THE participators in the anti-missionary riots about Shen See, China, hav been punished. Several French priests had been injured.

IN Saxony on a recent night, the government issued orders forbidding all who had not paid their taxes from attending a public ball.

WELSH religious newspapers are abusing Professor Huxley for repulsing a preacher who thrust himself on him in the street and insisted on converting him.

ON the 8th Anna Louise Robinson, priestess of the Lockport, Mo., Spiritualist society, performed the marriage ceremony of Wm. Scott and Lena Doty.

THE cornerstone of a Columbus monument was laid at New York city on the 16th. The mayor was not able to assist, but Archbishop Corrigan was present in the seat of honor and blessed the stone.

IN Russia on the 7th during service in a Greek Catholic church a Roman Catholic who fanatically hated the Greek church attempted to blow up the building with a bomb, but succeeded only in blowing himself to pieces.

THE government Official Gazette of Corea contained the following among its late news: "July 27th—The board of ceremony asks that an officer of the third rank be sent to Yong Sang at the river to pray again for rain."

JOE BLANKINSHIP, of Monroe county, Tenn., who has been a religious fanatic twelve years, last Sunday tried to persuade his wife to let him crucify her for the sins of the cholera sufferers, whereat he was taken into custody.

THIS advertisement appeared in a late Birmingham, Eng., Daily Post: "New Religion.—Young gentleman is founding a new religion, which is sure to become popular, and desires a lady of means to assist him in the work. Address ——"

THE Woman's Christian Temperance Union has petitioned Comstock not to allow the nude statue of Diana from the tower of Madison Square Garden, New York, to be forwarded to Chicago to be placed on the Agricultural Building at the World's Fair.

IN Brooklyn, N. Y., two Italians engaged in a shooting affray over the possession of a statue of St. Rosalia. They wished it as a charm against cholera, as St. Rosalia once banished that disease from Italy, and it cannot enter a building containing her picture.

THE British and Protestant forces who conquered their Catholic rivals in Uganda, Africa, hav divided it into seven districts, giving the Mohammedans two, the Catholics only one, and keeping four themselvs. Even in their allotted portion the Catholics are not allowed to proselyte.

BISHOP HORSTMANN, of Ohio, writing on the dedication of the Fair, rejoices that "as Catholics our Holy Father, Leo XIII., calls on us to make the day one of special praise and thanksgiving to almighty God, for his infinit mercy in leading on Columbus to the successful accomplishment of his almost superhuman undertaking."

IN the City of Mexico a sister of the Conception convent discovered in the conventual archives information that $3,000,000 in gold had been buried by the mother superior during the war with the French. Excavation for the money was begun under the supervision of priests, but President Diaz heard of it and took control of the work, and finding the money devoted it to the state treasury.

CHOLERA has entered New York city and five persons hav died. The number of pest-ships held before New York harbor is continually being augmented. In Europe no more immigrants will be shipped for New York at present. Spain and Portugal hav declared a quarantine against New York. Passengers between Canada and the United States will be examined, and mails will be disinfected.

CHOLERA has now entered nearly all the European countries. In Hamburg throngs fill the churches and stand outside praying for the staying of the plague. In the holy but exceptionally dishonest land of Russia, says a dispatch, "funds voted for disinfecting purposes are embezzled by the men to whom they are intrusted for administration; drugs, clothing, and food for the convalescents released from sanitary headquarters are carried off by doctors and nurses and consumed in their families or sold."

THE SABBATH.

By M. FARRINGTON.

A Thorough Examination and Refutation of the Claims of the Sabbatarians.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

The Sunday Question.

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL REVIEW. WITH REPLIES TO AN OBJECTOR.

By GEORGE W. BROWN, M.D.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

Materialism:

Its History and Its Influence Upon Society.

By DR. LOUIS BUCHNER, Author of "Force and Matter," etc.

Translated from the German. Paper, 12mo, 15 cents.

Bible Temperance.

LIQUOR DRINKING

Commended, Defended, and Enjoined by the Bible.

By E. C. WALKER. 10 cents

Apocryphal New Testament.

THE GOSPELS,

Epistles, etc., Attributed to Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and not Included in the New Testament.

Price, - - - - - - - - - $1.

A FEW DAYS IN ATHENS.

By FRANCES WRIGHT.

Embellished with the portrait of Epicurus, the Greek philosopher, and the author.

Price, - - - - - - 75 cents

BIBLE IN INDIA.

—HINDOO ORIGIN—

Of Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

By LOUIS JACOLLIOT. Price, $2.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A HISTORY OF ALL

The Women Who Figure in the Bible.

—BY—

AN UNGODLY WOMAN OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Cloth, - - - - - - - 75 cents.

SISTER LUCY

—AND—

Her Awful Disclosures

AS [illegible] NEW HALL CONVENT.

And a Few Words on Auricular Confession

Price, - - - - - 10 cents

Superstition in All Ages.

BY JEAN MESLIER,

A French Catholic Priest, who renounced Christianity and Exposed the Falseness of that Religion and the object of the Priesthood. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

PHILOSOPHY OF SPIRITUALISM

AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.

By R. F. MARVIN, M.D. Cloth, 50 cents.

Books by S. P. Putnam.

The New God. Price, 10 cents.
The Problem of the Universe, and Its Scientific Solution, with some Criticisms of Universology. Price, 20 cents.
Waifs and Wanderings, A New American Story. Price, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents. "A prose epic of the war, rich with incident and dramatic power; breezy from first page to last with the living spirit of today."—[John Swinton's Paper.
Golden Throne, A Romance. "The author certainly has genius. The divine creative spark is within him. The book is filled with manly thoughts, expressed in manly words—the transcript of a manly mind. Every Liberal should read 'Golden Throne.'"—[Ingersoll. Price, $1.
Ingersoll and Jesus. A conversation in rhyme between the Nineteenth Century Infidel and the Galilean Reformer, wherein it is shown there is much in harmony between them. Price, 10 cents.
Adami and Heva. A poetic version of the Indian story of the Garden of Eden in which its superiority to the mutilated copy—the Genesis legend—is shown. Price, 10 cents.
Gottlieb: His Life. A Freethought Romance. Price, 35 cents.
My Religious Experience. Price, 25 cents.

For all of the above address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafavette place. New York.

THE STORY HOUR.

For Children and Youth.

By Miss Susan H. Wixon, Conductor of the Children's Corner in the New York Truth Seeker.

Small Quarto—10x8 inches—nearly Three Hundred pages. Illuminated Covers. Sixty-six Full-page Illustrations, with Twenty-five Smaller Ones.

CONTENTS:

Preface; Lazy Dick; or, The Life of a Dog; An Angel Unawares; May; Ten Little Waiting-Maids; The Doctor's Horse; True Politeness; A Bumble-Bee's Thanksgiving; Grandfather's Pocketbook; Meddlesome Molly; A Sad Mistake; Inside an Engine House; Our Children; Cressbrook Cottage; Ezekiel's Silver Spoon; Odds and Ends—A New Year's Story; Miss Brown's Valentine; What Stephen's Owl was Stuffed With; John; Neighbor Brightside; Miss Marie Gold's Party; Cousin John's Philosophy; Jenny's Question; Katy's Answer; Alone in an Unfurnished House; Blackey; Breaking the Meeting; Our Susie; A Funny Fellow—How He was Cured of Practical Joking; What the Fern Said; Dot; A Wedge of Gold; Her Birthday; Post-Office Jack; Aunt Avis; I Can Because I Will.

Price, $1.00. Address, THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1892. Price, 25 cents.

Possibilities and Impossibilities, T. H. HUXLEY, M.A., LL.D.
The Growth of Agnosticism, R. BITHELL, B.S., Ph.D.
Early Verses, The Late CONSTANCE NADEN.
Sundays and Holydays, SAMUEL LAING.
Ecclesiasticism, ALFRED MOMERIE, M.A., LL.D.
Christ a Religious Creation, F. J. GOULD.
After Many Years: A Poem, W. B. MCTAGGART.
The Activities of Agnosticism, AMOS WATERS.
Religion Without Superstition, CHARLES WATTS.
Mr. Gladstone and Supernaturalism, H. J. HARDWICKE, F.R.C.S.
The Land of Death: A Poem, SALADIN (W. STEWART ROSS).
The Triumph of Rationalism, FREDERICK MILLER.
An Agnostic Homily, HON. C. K. TUCKERMAN.
Eternal Life: A Poem, GEORGE HENRY MARTIN.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Roaring Lion on the Track.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Advancement of Science.

By Prof. John Tyndall.

With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.

Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.

Address and Portrait only, 69 pp., 10 cents.

Each Number, Ten Cents.

The Modern Science Essayist

Popular Evolution Essays and Lectures.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life and personal characteristics; his views on education; his religious opinions. By MR. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His ancestry, life, and personal characteristics. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. Did the material universe ever have a beginning? By GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology; How the world grew. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETABLE LIFE; How does life begin; The problem of spontaneous generation. By WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE; The evidences from geology, geographical distribution, and comparative zoology. By ROSSITER RAYMOND, Ph.D.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: Relation of man to the brute creation; his ancestral line; duration of human life on the planet. By E. D. COPE, Ph.D.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: The mind and the nervous system: the nature of mind. By ROBT. G. ECCLES, M.D.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. Primitive man; growth of the family, city, and state: development of the domestic relations; marriage. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. Origin of religious beliefs; ideas of primitive man. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. How altruism grows out of egoism; the proper balance. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION—a, from geology; b, from morphology; c, from embryology; d, from metamorphosis; e, from rudimentary organs; f, from geographical distribution; g, from discovered links; h, from artificial breeding; i, from reversion; k, from mimicry. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By REV. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. Relation of the doctrine to prevailing philosophical systems. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. Plans for social regeneration as tested by evolution. By REV. MINOT J. SAVAGE.
16. THE SCOPE AND PRINCIPLES OF THE EVOLUTION PHILOSOPHY. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
17. THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS ASPECTS OF HERBERT SPENCER'S PHILOSOPHY. By SYLVAN DREY.
18. THE RELATIVITY OF KNOWLEDGE. The nature of sense-perception; sight, sound, taste, smell, feeling; the doctrine of the Unknowable. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
19. A STUDY OF MATTER AND MOTION. An excellent digest of a much vexed question, with quotations from many authorities. By HON. A. N. ADAMS.
20. PRIMITIVE MAN. Man as revealed by archeological studies; evidences of man's antiquity; geological periods; man's appearance in the pliocene; paleolithic and neolithic races; the ages of bronze and iron; cave men and lake-dwellers; dolmen and mound builders; primitive implements and tools; proofs of man's natural evolution. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
21. GROWTH OF THE MARRIAGE RELATION. Marriage a primitive institution; its earlier forms; no evidence of original promiscuity; exogamy and endogamy; group-marriage; polygyny, polyandry, and monogamy; marriage by capture; monogamy the highest form of the relation; divorce and divorce laws; marriage a contract; its regulation by the state. By C. STANILAND WAKE.
22. EVOLUTION OF THE STATE. The growth of political institutions; the patriarchal family; the tribe and clan. By JOHN A. TAYLOR.
23. EVOLUTION OF LAW. How law begins; statute law and judge-made law; the conversion of customs into law. By PROF. RUFUS SHELDON.
24. EVOLUTION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE. Supernatural ideas of disease; fetichism in medicine; the beginnings of medical science. By ROBERT G. ECCLES, M.D.
25. EVOLUTION OF ARMS AND ARMOR. The necessity for arms and armor under the struggle for existence. By JOHN C. KIMBALL.
26. EVOLUTION OF THE MECHANIC ARTS, development of the human hand; the earliest use of implements and tools. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
27. EVOLUTION OF THE WAGES SYSTEM. The definition of wages; economic characteristics of the wage system; wages the outgrowth of slavery; origin and development of the wages system. By PROF. GEO. GUNTON.
28. EDUCATION AS A FACTOR IN CIVILIZATION. The beginnings of education; early methods in Egypt, Persia, China, Greece, and Rome: early Christian ideas of education; Catholic and Protestant views; the common school system. By MISS CAROLINE B. LE ROW.
29. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. I. The Theological Method. By REV. JOHN CHADWICK.
30. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. II. The Socialistic Method. By WILLIAM POTTS.
31. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. III. The Anarchistic Method. By HUGH O. PENTECOST.
32. EVOLUTION AND SOCIAL REFORM. IV. The Scientific Method. By DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
33. ASA GRAY: His Life and Work. By MRS. MARY TREAT.
34. EDWARD LIVINGSTON YOUMANS. The Man and his Work. By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

☞ Each Number, Ten Cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, New York.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST

PROVING

Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.

Full, index 446pp., $1.50.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.

ACCOUNT OF

Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

THE HUMBOLDT LIBRARY

—OF—

POPULAR SCIENCE.

No. 1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. A series of familiar essays on astronomical and other natural phenomena. By Richard A. Proctor, F.R.A.S.

No. 2. Forms of Water in Clouds and Rivers, Ice and Glaciers. (19 illustrations). By John Tyndall, F.R.S.

No. 3. Physics and Politics. An application of the principles of Natural Science to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot, author of "The English Constitution."

No. 4. Man's Place in Nature, (with numerous illustrations). By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 6. Town Geology. With Appendix on Coral and Coral Reefs. By Rev. Charles Kingsley.

No. 7. The Conservation of Energy, (with numerous illustrations). By Balfour Stewart, LL.D.

No. 8. The Study of Languages, brought back to its true principles. By C. Marcel.

No. 9. The Data of Ethics. By Hebert Spencer.

No. 10. The Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music, (numerous illustrations), By Prof. Pietro Blaserna.

No. 11. } The Naturalist on the River Amazons. A record of 11 years of travel.
No. 12. } By Henry Walter Bates, F.L.S. (Not sold separately).

No. 13. Mind and Body. The theories of their relations. By Alex. Bain, LL.D.

No. 14. The Wonders of the Heavens, (thirty-two illustrations). By Camille Flammarion.

No. 15. Longevity. The means of prolonging life after middle age. By John Gardner, M.D.

No. 16. The Origin of Species. By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. With other disquisitions. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 18. Lessons in Electricity, (sixty illustrations). By John Tyndall, F.R.S.

No. 19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 20. The Romance of Astronomy. By R. Kalley Miller, M.A.

No. 21. The Physical Basis of Life, with other essays. By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 22. Seeing and Thinking. By William Kingdon Clifford, F.R.S.

No. 23. Scientific Sophisms. A review of current theories concerning Atoms, Apes and Men. By Samuel Wainwright, D.D.

No. 24. Popular Scientific Lectures, (illustrated). By Prof. H. Helmholtz.

No. 25. The Origin of Nations. By Prof. Geo. Rawlinson, Oxford University.

No. 26. The Evolutionist at Large. By Grant Allen.

No. 27. The History of Landholding in England. By Joseph Fisher, F.R.H.S.

No. 28. Fashion in Deformity, as illustrated in the customs of Barbarous and Civilized Races. (numerous illustrations). By William Henry Flower, F.R.S.

No. 29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology, (numerous illustrations). By Andrew Wilson, Ph.D.

No. 30. } The Study of Words.
No. 31. } By Richard Chenevix Trench.

No. 32. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 33. Vignettes from Nature. By Grant Allen.

No. 34. The Philosophy of Style. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 35. Oriental Religions. By John Caird, Pres. Univ. Glasgow, and Others.

No. 36. Lectures on Evolution. (Illustrated). By Prof. T. H. Huxley.

No. 37. Six Lectures on Light. (Illustrated). By Prof. John Tyndall.

No. 38. } Geological Sketches. By Archibald
No. 39. } Geikie, F.R.S.

No. 40. The Evidence of Organic Evolution. By George J. Romanes, F.R.S.

No. 41. Current Discussions in Science. By W. M. Williams, F.C.S.

No. 42 History of the Science of Politics. By Frederick Pollock.

No. 43. Darwin and Humboldt. By Prof. Huxley, Prof. Agassiz, and others.

No. 44. } The Dawn of History. By C. F. Keary,
No. 45. } of the British Museum.

No. 46. The Diseases of Memory. By Th. Ribot. Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald, M.A.

No. 47. The Childhood of Religion. By Edward Clodd, F.R.A.S.

No. 48. Life in Nature. (Illustrated). By James Hinton.

No. 49. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. By Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.

No. 50. } Money and the Mechanism of Exchange. By Prof. W. Stanley Jevons,
No. 51. } F.R.S.

No. 52. The Diseases of the Will. By Th. Ribot. Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald.

No. 53. Animal Automatism, and other Essays, By Prof. T. H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 54. The Birth and Growth of Myth. By Edward Clodd, F.R.A.S.

No. 55. The Scientific Basis of Morals, and other Essays. By William Kingdon Clifford, F.R.S.

No. 56. } Illusions. By James Sully.
No. 57. }

No. 58. } The Origin of Species. } Two Double
No. 59. } By Charles Darwin. } Nos.

No. 60. The Childhood of the World. By Edward Clodd.

No. 61. Miscellaneous Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 62. The Religions of the Ancient World. By Prof. Geo Rawlinson, Univ. of Oxford. (Double number).

No. 63. Progressive Morality. By Thomas Fowler, LL.D., President of Corpus Christi Coll., Oxford.

No. 64. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russell Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.

No. 65 Conditions of Mental Development: and other essays. By Wm. Kingdon Clifford.

No. 66. Technical Education: and other essays By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 67. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. By J. F. C. Hecker, M. D.

No. 68. Three Essays. By Herbert Spencer. Special Number.

No. 69. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. By Fritz Schultze, Ph.D. Double number.

No. 70. Essays Speculative and Practical. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 71. Anthropology. By Daniel Wilson, Ph. D. With Appendix on Archæology. By E. B. Tylor, F. R. S.

No. 72. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. By J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.

No. 73. Evolution in History, Language and Science. Four Addresses delivered at the London Crystal Palace School of Art, Science and Literature.

No. 74. } The Descent of Man, and Selection in
No. 75. } Relation to Sex. (Numerous Illustrations.
No. 76. } By Charles Darwin. Nos. 74, 75, 76 are
No. 77. } single Nos.; No. 77. is a double No.

No. 78. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. By William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.

No. 79. Scientific Aspect of some Familiar Things. By W. M. Williams.

No. 80. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work By Grant Allen. (Double number).

No. 81. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two Essays by J. Allanson Picton.

No. 82. Illusions of the Senses: and other Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 83. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six Essays. By Sedley Taylor, M.A.

No. 84. Studies of Animated Nature. Four Essays on Natural History. By W. S. Dallas, F.L.S.

No. 85. The Essential Nature of Religion By J. Allanson Picton.

No. 86. The Unseen Universe, and the Philosophy of the Pure Sciences. By Prof. Wm. Kingdon Clifford, F.R.S.

No. 87. The Morphine Habit. By Dr. B. Ball, of the Paris Faculty of Medicine.

No. 88. Science and Crime and other Essays. By Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E.

No. 89. The Genesis of Science. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 90. Notes on Earthquakes: with Fourteen Miscellaneous Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 91. The Rise of Universities. By S. S. Laurie, LL.D. (Double number).

No. 92. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the Action of Earth Worms. By Charles Darwin, LL.D F.R.S. (Double number).

No. 93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. By J. Mount Bleyer, M.D. (Special number).

No. 94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 95. The Diseases of Personality. By Th. Ribot. Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald, M.A.

No. 96. A Half-Century of Science. By Prof. Thomas H. Huxley, and Grant Allen.

No. 97. The Pleasures of Life. By Sir John Lubbock, Bart.

No. 98. Cosmic Emotion: Also the Teachings of Science. By William Kingdon Clifford. (Special number).

No. 99. Nature Studies. By Prof. F. R. Eaton Lowe; Dr. Robert Brown, F.L.S.; Geo. G. Chisholm, F.R.G.S., and James Dallas, F.L.S.

No. 100. Science and Poetry, with other Essays. By Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E.

No. 101. Æsthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. By Jas. Sully and Geo. Croom Robertson.

No. 102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. By William Nelson Black.

No. 103. The Coming Slavery; The Sins of Legislators; The Great Political Superstition. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 104. Tropical Africa. By Henry Drummond, F.R.S.

No. 105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. By Ernst Haeckel, of the University of Jena. With a Prefatory Note by Prof. Huxley.

No. 106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. By Grant Allen.

No. 107. Ultimate Finance. A True Theory of Wealth. By William Nelson Black.

No. 108. English, Past and Present. Part. I. By Richard Chenevix Trench, (Double number).

No. 109. English, Past and Present. Part II. By Richard Chenevix Trench.

No. 110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. By Edward Clodd. (Double number).

Single Nos. 15 cents; Double Nos. 30 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

Books by Helen H. Gardener

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Men, Women and Gods.

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Price, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

PRAY YOU, SIR, WHOSE DAUGHTER?

A NEW NOVEL.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents

PUSHED BY UNSEEN HANDS.

SHORT STORIES.

Price, cloth, $1. | Paper, 50 cents.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

CONTENTS:

A Splendid Judge of a Woman—The Lady of the Club—Under Protest—For the Prosecution—A Rusty Link in the Chain—The Boler House Mystery—The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors—Florence Campbell's Fate—My Patient's Fate.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.

By M. BABCOCK. Price, 15 cts

EDWIN N. BEECHER, Solicitor of Patents, MARION, Hartford county, CONN. Small fees; valid patents with broad claims; letters of inquiry promptly answered. For FREE pamphlet, PATENT LAWS address Commissioner of Patents, Washington, D. C.

We have been informed by old inventors and experienced patentees, who employ this solicitor, that he is skilful.—THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Antiquity Unveiled.

The Book of the 19th Century.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA.

ANTIQUITY UNVEILED, a work giving the true origin of Christianity—The Christian Scriptures traced to their source and proved to have been derived from the written Gospels and teachings of ancient sun worship. This volume contains the greatest and most important revelations of our time and no student should be without it. A perusal of its contents will make apparent the necessity for what is termed the higher criticism of the Bible, a topic that is causing so much agitation at present. 625 Pages, Cloth and Gilt. Price, $1.50. Postage, 12 cents. Agents Wanted.

Oriental Publishing Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

P. O. Box 446.

For Sale by Principal Booksellers.

Agents for The Truth Seeker

Alabama.
News Depot, 2003 2d ave., Birmingham.
Loeb & Loeb, Montgomery.
Arizona.
J. S. Mansfield, Tucson.
California.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 117 W. 1st, Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 102 N. Main, Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearney st., San Francisco.
Thos. W. Baker, Selma.
L. R. Titus, 237 South 4th st., San Jose.
Canada.
P. C. Allen, 35 King st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
John McKenna, 80 Yonge st., Toronto.
R. J. Moffat, Sea Island, Tulu Island, B.C.
Colorado.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.
C. Smith & Son, 385 Larimer st., Denver.
Stanchfield & Co., 200 Union ave., Pueblo.
Harbottle & Co., Salida.
Florida.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.
A. J. Gardner, Kissimmee.
Idaho.
A. Erwin, Murray.
Illinois.
Post-Office News Co., 93 Adams, Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 312 State st., and Bren-
Brentano Bros., 204 Wabash ave., Chicago.
Chas. W. Curry, 183 Madison st., Chicago
Chas. Macdonald, 55 Washington, Chicago.
Indiana.
H. C. Monroe & Co., Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.
A. C. Katt, Fort Wayne.
Louisiana.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne, New Orleans.
Massachusetts.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.
Johnson Bros., 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
Michigan.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Baker & Holton, 87 Woodward av., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Minnesota.
E. P. Parcher, 8 3rd st., So. Minneapolis.
Missouri.
Philip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.
Nebraska.
J. M. Wiley, P. O. News Depot, York.
New York.
Brentano Bros., 5th ave. & 18th st., N. Y.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
Abramowitz Bros,, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., N.Y.
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.
E. J. Nieuwland, 10th ave. and 157th st.
Anderson & Co., 704 8th ave.
S. M. Bernhard, 119 E. 104th st.
Harlem Book Co., Boulevard Hotel, 124th st. and Lexington ave.
Ohio.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 342 Superior st., Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
B. Woods, 319 Chillicothe st., Portsmouth.
Larwood, Day & Co., 259 Superior, Clevel'd.
Alf. Warren Co, 217 Central ave, Cincinnati.
Thos. Goddard, Box 235, Huron.
Standard News Co., 14 W. Tusc st, Canton.
Oregon.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
W. E. Jones, 291 Alder st., Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
Handley & Kelly, 150 1st st., Portland.
G. Thornton, Palace Hotel Block, Heppner
Pennsylvania.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden, Phila.
George Longford, 22 Richmond st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
R. Staley, Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.
Fulton Bros., McKeesport.
Rhode Island.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.
Tennessee.
W. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry, Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.
Rich Bros. & Mills, 229 N. Cherry, Nashville
Texas.
H. Hover, Denison.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
E. H. Andrae, 346½ Main st., Dallas.
G. W. Baldwin, Houston.
E. L. Merrill, Independent Pulpit, Waco.
Utah.
C. H. Parsons, 164 S. Main, Salt Lake City.
Margetts Bros., 76 Main st., Salt Lake City.
Washington Territory.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
J. C. Nathan, 104 S. 2nd st., Seattle.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5, Fremont.
West Virginia.
News Store, 123 3rd st., Parkersburg.
England. [London.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet st.,
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.
Australia.
W Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N.S.W.
New Zealand.
D. Willis, Wanganui.

CHEAP EDITION.

Travels in Faith.

By CAPT. ROBERT C. ADAMS.

Being the story of his mental journey from orthodoxy to Rationalism.

Price, paper, 25 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE DEVIL!

By HENRY FRANK,

Lecturer of the Society of Human Progress.

Price, 25 cents. Five copies, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144

Moral, Theological, Historical, and Speculative Propositions.

Price, - - - - - - 15 cents

AN OUTLINE OF THE

FRENCH REVOLUTION.

Its Causes and Results.

By W. S. BELL. Paper, 12mo, 25 cts.

Paine Vindicated

Reply to New York Observer.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.

With "A ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."

Price, 15 cents.

Holy Bible Abridged.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Paper, 30 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

John E. Remsburg's Books.

False Claims. Revised and Enlarged. As a Missionary Document it is unexcelled. Among the subjects considered by Mr. Remsburg are: The Church and Morality; Criminal Statistics, showing the creeds of the prisoners in the penitentiaries; the Church and Civilization; the Church and Science; the Church and Learning; the Church and Liberty; the Church and the Antislavery Reform; the Woman's Rights Movement; the Temperance Reform; the Church and the Republic. Price, 10 cents singly; 75 cents per dozen.

Bible Morals. Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture; Falsehood and Deception; Cheating; Theft and Robbery; Adultery and Prostitution; Murder; Wars of Conquest and Extermination; Despotism; Intolerance and Persecution; Injustice to Woman; Unkindness to Children; Cruelty to Animals; Human Sacrifices; Cannibalism; Witchcraft; Slavery; Polygamy; Intemperance; Poverty and Vagrancy; Ignorance and Idiocy; Obscenity. Price, single copies, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1. Special discount on large quantities.

Sabbath-Breaking. This is the best and most thorough work ever written on the Sabbath from a rational point of view. Large and handsome print. Price, 25 cents; six copies, $1.

Image Breaker. Six Lectures: Decline of Faith; Protestant Intolerance; Washington an Unbeliever; Jefferson an Unbeliever; Paine and Wesley; Christian Sabbath. Each 5 cents; bound, paper, 25 cents; per doz., 40 cents.

Thomas Paine. Tells the Story of the Author-Hero's life, delineates the leading traits of his character and genius, and vindicates his name from the aspersions cast upon it. Tributes to Paine's character are given from more than one hundred noted persons of Europe and America, many of them written expressly for this work. Second edition, 160 pages, printed on fine tinted paper, neatly bound, and containing a handsome steel portrait of Paine. Price, 75 cents.

The Apostle of Liberty. An address delivered in Paine Hall, before the N. E. Freethinkers' Convention, January 29, 1884. Price, 10 cents.

Gems of Thought.

IT is notorious temerity to pass sentence upon grounds incapable of evidence.—Barrow.

MEN are all born equal: violence and ability made the first masters; laws hav made the present.—Voltaire.

ARTS and sciences took their rise and flourished only in those small territories where the people were free.—Swift.

THE church created a devil, and it was but natural he should soon number his followers by the thousands.—Henry Frank.

THE old myths disappear, and the isolation of natural phenomena ceases as we come to understand that a few great natural laws bind together and regulate all the diversities that exist in the universe.—Girard.

MORALITY may be defined as the law of an equal mutual respect for general as well as private human rights, which law itself has for its object to provide the largest amount of human happiness. Whatever disturbs or undermines this happiness and this respect is evil; whatever promotes them is good.—Büchner.

THE intercourse of the sexes, I hav dreamed, is incredibly beautiful, too fair to be remembered. I hav had thoughts about it, but they are among the most fleeting and irrecoverable in my experience. It is strange that men will talk of miracles, revelation, inspiration, and the like, as things past, while love remains.—Thoreau.

IT is thus evident that many of the miraculous events in the gospel narrativs hav their parallel in similar relations concerning the religious teachers or alleged incarnate deities of other faiths. We find such notions as the miraculous conception, the virgin mother, the birth in a cave, connected with the stories of many other alleged incarnations of God besides Jesus of Nazareth, and discover also that these and similar ideas hav their origin and explanation in a primitiv solar mythology.—Lewis Janes.

THINK you that nobody can be civilized till he has heard of Lot and his daughters, and David and his slaughters, of impracticable Jesus and moonstruck Paul? Before the manger of Bethlehem had been heard of Hipparchus, Erasthones, Aristotle, and Ptolemy had mooted and discussed the rotundity of the earth. The towns of Assyria were built of brick two thousand years before the time of your Christ; and linen, as fine as that you can make to-day, was wrapped around the mummies of distinguished Egyptians four thousand years before the commencement of the Christian era. The libraries of Alexandria contained eight hundred thousand volumes, all, of course, written by pre-Christian "Infidels;" and the museums of Alexandria comprised schools of philosophy, mathematics, history, biology, zoology, astronomy, chemistry, anatomy, and medicin long before your New Testament, Mr. J. Smith, had been cobbled up and foisted upon the world.—Saladin in God and His Book.

CONSCIENTIOUSNESS and reverence for the supernatural are distinct things; and either one or the other may predominate in character. I hav known exceedingly conscientious and humane people, who would be uneasy for days, if they had struck a dog, or given a cent too little in change, or uttered an equivocation, who, nevertheless, could not be much impressed by the most solemn ceremonies of the church, or excited by the most fervent preaching. On the other hand, I hav known extremely devotional people, who wept over the Bible, and could not liv happily without frequent worship, who nevertheless abused animals, and dealt hardly with the poor, without being troubled by any degree of the remorse they would hav felt, if they had fallen asleep for the night without uttering a prayer. John Newton was a memorable example to the point. He wrote in strains of the most affecting piety, spent much of his time in reading of Christ, and praying to him, and thankfully recorded "sweet seasons of communion with God," while he was carrying on the slave-trade on the coast of Africa. Extreme results of a similar nature occur in Italy, where devotional feelings are very strong, and moral principles generally flexible. Hired assassins will not kill their victims with a dagger whose handle is in the form of a cross. A ferocious bandit, who for a long time had rendered himself formidable to the police, was at last taken by means of his own piety. It was discovered that he had made a vow to do injury to no creature on Saturday; which the church had taught him was the birthday of the Virgin Mary. They attacked him on that day, and as he offered no resistance, he was taken and executed; dying with a prayer on his lips.—Lydia Maria Child.

Valuable Books on Hygiene, Food and Diet, Marriage and Parentage, Etc.

Hygiene of the Brain and the Cure of Nervousness. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1.50. "Get this book and read it, for it abounds in practical valuable knowledge."—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Eating for Strength. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "I am delighted with it."—[H. B. Baker, M.D., Secretary Michigan State Board of Health.

Parturition Without Pain. A Code of Directions for avoiding most of the Pains and Dangers of Childbearing. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "A work whose excellence surpasses our power to commend."—[New York Evening Mail.

Liver Complaint, Mental Dyspepsia, and Headache: Their Cure by Home Treatment. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, $1. "Reading this book I cured myself after several doctors had failed."—[T. C. Curtis, U. S. A.

The Relations of the Sexes. By Mrs. E. B. Duffey, author of "What Women Should Know," "No Sex in Education," etc. Price, by mail, $1. Mrs. Charles Brewster, Portland, Me., writes: "Had I possessed this book ten years ago it would have saved me ten years of invalidism, and I should have been the mother of healthy instead of sickly children."

Youth: Its Care and Culture. By J. Mortimer Granville. $1. To this has been added a paper by that charming English writer, Grace Greenwood, on the "Physical Education of a Girl," and a paper on the "Dress of Girls." Its retail price is $1.

Talks to My Patients. By Mrs. R. B. Gleason, M.D. A Practical Handbook for the Maid, Wife, and Mother: with a beautiful Photographic Portrait of the Author. Price, by mail, $1.50. "We wish the chapter, 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every mother in the land."—[Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

The Better Way. An Appeal to Men in behalf of Human Culture through a wiser parentage. By A. E. Newton. Price, by mail, 25 cents. "It contains information and warning that are urgently needed."—[Christian Union.

Sexual Physiology. A Scientific and Popular Exposition of the Fundamental Problems in Sociology. By R. T. Trall, M.D. Price, by mail, $2. This work has rapidly passed through forty editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable work has ever before been issued.

Fruit and Bread. A Natural and Scientific Diet. By Gustav Schlickeysen. Translated from the German, by M. L. Holbrook, M.D. In addition also it contains a Complete and Radical Cure for Intemperance, by the Use of a Vegetable and Fruit Diet. By Chas. O. Groom Napier, F.R.S. 250 pages. Price, $1.

Three Books in One. From the Cradle to the School. By Bertha Meyer. The Rights of Children. By Herbert Spencer. The Government of Children. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. Price, by mail, cloth, $1. "It is a book worthy to be ranked with the best that has ever been written concerning the training of children."—[Bazar.

Vegetarianism the Radical Cure for Intemperance. By Harriet P. Fowler. Price, 30 cents, by mail. "It should be quietly given to every drinker."—[Herald of Health.

Muscle-Beating; or, Home Gymnastics for Sick and Well. By C. Kemm, manager of the gymnasium of Rega. 30 cents.

Marriage and Parentage, in their Sanitary and Physiological Relations, and in their bearing on the producing of children of finer health and greater ability. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1. The Scientific American says: "Books on this subject are usually written by 'cranks,' but this is radically different: it is scientific, sober, clean, and worthy of conscientious consideration by every possible parent, and particularly by the young."

The Diet Cure. The Relations of Food and Drink to Health, Disease, Cure. By T. L. Nichols, M.D., editor London Herald of Health. Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Medical Hints on the Protection and Management of the Singing Voice. By Lenox Brown, F.R.C.S. 20th thousand. 30 cts.

Deep Breathing; or, Lung Gymnastics. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Mrs. Horace Mann writes: "Every book you print is pure gold and deserves wide circulation."

How to Strengthen the Memory. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. $1.

A Physician's Sermon to Young Men. By Dr. W. Pratt. Price, 25 cents. Prof. R. A. Proctor, the well-known English astronomer, says of it: "Through false delicacy lads and youths are left to fall into trouble, and not a few have their prospects of a healthy happy life absolutely ruined. The little book before us is intended to be put into the hands of young men by fathers who are unwilling or incapable of discharging a father's duty in this respect; and as not one father in ten is, we believe, ready to do what is right by his boys himself, it is well that such a book as this should be available. If it is read by all who should read it, its sale will be counted by hundreds of thousands." The publisher will send 10 copies by mail, postpaid, for $2. Should anyone desire them by the 100 or 1,000 they can make satisfactory terms by correspondence.

☞ Catalogues Free. ☜

By mail on receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

Manhattan Liberal Club, N. Y.,

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 E. 15th st. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock, at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M. every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Henry Rowley, secretary, 108 Cumberland street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philadelphia Liberal League 25

Meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Fort Dearborn Hall, 181 West Madison street, Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave. (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Macdonald's Hall in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free.
FRANK MORSE. Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock P.M. at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army Hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large, valuable library is at the service of members and friends.
C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Fort Worth, Tex., Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at Knights of Labor Hall, 1604 Main street, at 10 o'clock A.M. Visiting Liberals invited to attend. COL. A. HARRIS, Pres.
ISAAC S. LEE, Sec.

Liberal Association of Austin, Tex.,

Meets every Sunday at 11 A.M., at its hall, cor. Cong avenue and 9th street. Visiting Liberals invited. J P. RICHARDSON, President; M. ISAAC, Secretary.

The Jacksonville, Fla., Liberal League

Meets every Sunday at 2:30 P.M. at Knights of Honor Hall, Bay street. Visitors invited. J A. Turner, Pres.; Jas. Douglas, Vice-Pres.; Daniel Bowen, Sec.

Liberal Club,

Fraternity Hall, No. 216 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A. B. SEVERANCE, President.

Philosophical and Social Society,

Monte Vista, Cal., meet every Sunday at 2 P.M. in their hall. The public cordially invited. W. S. FELT, Sec.

The Ohio Liberal Society,

Of Cincinnati, O., meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M. in Douglas Hall, N. W. cor. of 6th and Walnut sts. Lectures and discussions. Strangers from abroad welcomed. ANDREW HOGG, Sec.

Liberal Association of Baltimore

Meets at the Lyceum Hall, 404 East Baltimore st., every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Cleveland Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 8 P.M., in Room 208 City Hall, for lectures and free discussion on science, religion, and social questions. Able speakers will interest the audience. A. SEE, Pres.; J. ROSENBURG, Sec., 425 Lake street.

Liberty in Literature.

Testimonial To Walt Whitman.

BY

ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED IN PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21, 1890.

With a Portrait of Whitman.

AUTHORIZED EDITION.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents

Dr. E. B. Foote's Works.

Plain Home Talk and Medical Common Sense. In one handsome 12mo volume of nearly 1,000 pages, fully illustrated. Cloth, $3.25—in English or German. A new cheap edition at only $1.50.

Science in Story; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. 5 volumes in one, cloth, $2.00, postage prepaid; 5 volumes, separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents per volume; Red Line edition, suitable for holiday presents, $1.00 per volume.

Sexual Physiology for the Young. 250 pages, illustrated and cloth-bound. (The fifth volume of "Science in Story.") 50 cents.

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly. Devoted to Hygiene, Sexual and Social Science, and allied Subjects; ninth year. Subscription, with premium, 50 cents per year. Specimen copies free on application.

Mother's Manual. Comprising "Advice to a Wife on the Management of Her Own Health, especially During Pregnancy, Labor, and Suckling," and "Advice to a Mother on the Management of Her Children in Infancy and Childhood;" 2 books in 1 volume, 528 pages, $1

Hand-Book of Health Hints and Ready Recipes. A valuable reference pamphlet of 128 pages. 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

SUSAN WIXON'S BOOKS.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300 pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383 pp., $1.25.

The Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Free thinkers' Children's Story-book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224 pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Kennedy's Medical Discovery

Takes hold in this order:

Bowels,
Liver,
Kidneys,
Inside Skin,
Outside Skin,

Driving everything before it that ought to be out.

You know whether you need it or not.

Sold by every druggist, and manufactured by

DONALD KENNEDY,
ROXBURY, MASS.

Works on the Labor Question.

The Conventional Lies of Our Civilization. By Max Nordau. CONTENTS—Mene, Tekel Upharsin; The Religious, Monarchic, and Aristocratic, Political, Economical, Matrimonial, and Miscellaneous Lies; Closing Harmony 12mo, 364 pp., paper, People's edition, 50 c.; cloth, $1.00.
The Imperial Council of Vienna prohibited the sale of this book in Austria, and confiscated all copies of it they could find.

Economic Equities. A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange. By J. K. Ingalls, author of "Social Wealth." Paper, 25c.

Fruits of Philosophy. A Treatise on the Population Question. By Dr. Chas. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant. 25c.

Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. Pointing out the means by which the working classes may raise themselves from their present state of low wages and ceaseless toil to one of comfort, dignity, and independence, and which is also capable of entirely removing, in course of time, the other principal social evils. By M. G. H. 10c.

Large or Small Families? On which Side Lies the Balance of Comfort? By Austin Holyoake. 5c.

Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Why Do Men Starve? By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

The Land Question. Large Estates Inimical to the Welfare of the People. By Charles Bradlaugh. 5c.

Labor's Prayer. By Chas. Bradlaugh. 5c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Mrs. Besant's Works.

Law of Population. Paper, 15c.; with portrait, 30c.

Marriage. As it was, as it is, and as it should be. Paper, 25c.

Besant-Hatchard Debate. Between Annie Besant and Rev. A. Hatchard on Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity. Price, 25c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette place, New York.

SCIENCE VS. RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

By T. C. WIDDICOMBE,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.

Boards, . . .40 cents.

J. D. Shaw's Books.

The Bible—What Is It? 25c.
Studies in Theology. 10c.
Liberalism. 5c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN:

Priest and Man.

A NOVEL.

By FREDERIKA MACDONALD,
Author of the "Iliad of the East," etc., etc.

An independent and respectable study of character in the law of circumstance such as even George Eliot might not have been ashamed to own as her first novel. . . . A more vigorous presentment of the mischievous nature of modern Christianity, in its most honest and consistent form, need not be desired.—[Westminster Review.

1 vol., extra cloth, beveled, 12mo, 400 pp., $1.00.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

THE BEST:

THE

"Otto Wettstein" WATCH.

Perfected, new model, 16 jewels, full adjusted to heat, cold, and position, beautiful double sunk dial, and all modern improvements; guaranteed a perfect timer. Price, in silverine dust-proof cases, $17; 3-ounce coin silver, $22; 4-ounce, $23. In best filled gold case, open-face, dust-proof, $26; hinged case, $28 to $30; hunting, $31 to $35; 14 carat, solid gold, $45 to $150. Nickel works, $2 more.

Regular Grade American Watches.—Silverine case, 7 jewels, $6; 11 jewels, $7 50; 15 jewels, $9; ditto, adjusted, $11. In finer cases, add as above.

Ladies' American Gold Watches.—All latest styles, in plush cases; best filled, 7 jewels, $15; 11 jewels, $16 50; 15 jewels, $23; 14 carat solid gold, $10 more. Heavier, more elaborate, and diamond-set cases, from $5 to $100 more.

All watches sent with written guarantee, kept in order 1 year, and after that time cleaned for $1 and returned free.

Sundries.—Lower grade nickel watches, $5, $4, and $3. Best spectacles, $1; best razor, $2; best triple-plated teaspoons, $1.80; table spoons, $3 60, knives, $1 75; forks, $1.75; all for $6. Solid silver spoons, $1.50 per ounce; solid silver souvenir spoons, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $3.

The Colonel Ingersoll.—Tea, $2.50; orange, $2 75; sugar, $3; gilt bowls, 50 cents more. Extra heavy teas, $3 Etched:
"The Time to be Happy is Now,"
50 cents extra.

The Torch of Reason Badge, solid gold, enameled in 5 colors, small pins, $2, $2 75, and $3 50. With diamonds, $5, $8. Large, $5, $6, $7.50, $10, $15, $20, $30.

Diamonds, 20 per cent. below market price. Send for price lists, cards in colors and gold of badge, tracts, etc., free. All goods prepaid (except knives and forks) and cash refunded at option. Watch cleaned $1, and returned free.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

WATER OF LIFE

Is Doing Wonders in Curing the Sick.

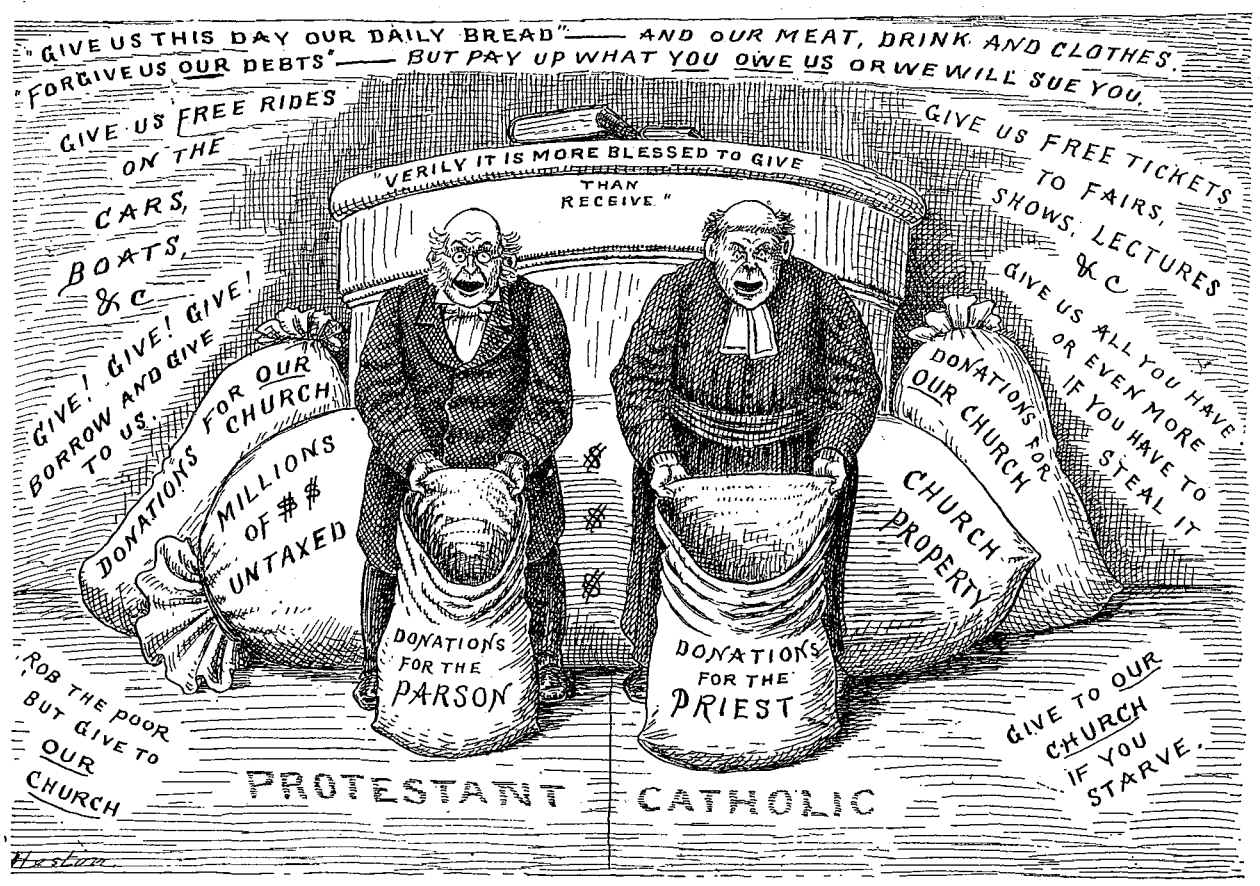
Write for pamphlet to J. R. PERRY,
No. 34 South Main street, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

"WHY"

I specially want 500 orders for books within the next three months.

Friends will please send stamp for circulars and WHY.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER,
Snowville, Va.



A BOOK FOR MEN

Sent sealed to any address for 10 cents, treating on that health-destroying and life-consuming weakness of men as the result of youthful errors and excesses. The book sets forth an INFIDEL CURE, which is a medicine to be applied externally (the only remedy of the kind in existence). You will feel improved the first day, benefited every day, until all signs of Early Decay, Weaknesses, Lost Manhood, etc., are fully restored.

Address, DR. ROBT P. FELLOWS,
Vineland, N. J.

And say you saw this in THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A TEXT THAT FITS THE CLERGY.

Yea, they are greedy dogs which can never hav enough, and they are shepherds that cannot understand: they all look to their own way, every one for his gain, for his quarter.—Isa. lvi, 11.

THE TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

Issued Monthly.

Subscription price, $3 per annum.

No.	BOOKS ISSUED.	Price.
1.	The Truth Seeker Annual and Freethinkers' Almanac, 1891	25
2.	Men, Women, and Gods. Helen H. Gardener	50
3.	Age of Reason. Thomas Paine	25
4.	Answers to Christian Questions. D. M. Bennett	25
5.	Christian Absurdities. John Peck	20
6.	Victor Hugo's Oration on Voltaire	10
7.	The Crisis	40
8.	Sabbath Breaking	25
9.	Travels in Faith. R. C. Adams	25
10.	The Strike of a Sex. Geo. N. Miller	25
11.	My Religious Experience. S. P. Putnam.	25
12.	The Higher Criticism in Theology and Religion. T. E. Longshore	50
13.	Infidel Death-beds. G. W. Foote	25
14.	Rights of Man. Thomas Paine. Illust'd.	40
15.	Was Christ Crucified? Austin Bierbower.	10
16.	Pulpit, Pew, and Cradle. Helen H. Gardener	10
17.	Bible Morals. John E. Remsburg	25
18.	Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk	50
19.	Pocket Theology. Voltaire	25
20.	Pushed by Unseen Hands. H. H. Gardener	50
21.	History of Religion. E. E. Evans	20

OTHER NUMBERS IN PREPARATION.

Yearly subscribers will receive all the books issued during the year. Single copies of each book sent upon receipt of price.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Spiritualism Sustained.

FIVE LECTURES.

By John R. Kelso, A.M.

12mo, cloth. $1.00.

Creed of Christendom.

Its Foundation Contrasted with Its Superstructure.

By W. R. GREG.

Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

IF YOU ARE SINCERELY INTERESTED IN

THE CAUSE OF

WOMAN,

HASTEN TO READ

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

By GEORGE N. MILLER.

("THE UNCLE TOM'S CABIN OF WOMAN'S SLAVERY.")

The best men and women of England and America are fairly heaping praises upon this truly wonderful book. It has a fascination entirely its own and will give you a sensation such as you never had before.

CAN THIS BE SO ?

SEND AND SEE !

Price, postpaid, 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER Co.

WAS ABRAHAM LINCOLN A SPIRITUALIST?

—OR—

Curious Revelations From the Life of a Trance Medium.

By MRS. NETTIE COLBURN MAYNARD.

Together with Portraits, Letters, and Poems. Illustrated with Engravings, and Frontispiece of Lincoln from Carpenter's Portrait from life. Cloth, $1.50.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT BOOK.

THE

HIGHER CRITICISM IN THEOLOGY AND RELIGION

CONTRASTED WITH

ANCIENT MYTHS AND MIRACLES,

—AS—

FACTORS IN HUMAN EVOLUTION,

—AND—

OTHER ESSAYS IN REFORM.

By THOMAS ELLWOOD LONGSHORE. Price cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

HEATHENS OF THE HEATH.

Radical Romance.

By Wm. McDonnell. 500 pp., paper, 80 cents.

Essay on Miracles.

By DAVID HUME.

Price. - - - - 10 cents

THE

FREETHINKERS' PICTORIAL TEXT-BOOK.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

185 Full-Page Illustrations.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF

FACTS, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS

TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

DESIGNS BY WATSON HESTON WITH PORTRAIT OF THE DESIGNER.

The illustrations are classified as follows:

18	represent	Uncle Sam and the Priests.	2	represent	Samples of Christianity's Work.
2	"	The Church Robbing the People.	5	"	Missionaries.
8	"	Thanksgiving.	1	"	The Lord's Instruments.
6	"	Sabbath Laws.	25	"	Bible Doctrines and Their Results
14	"	Children and the Church.	1	"	The Church and Slavery.
10	"	Woman and the Church.	2	"	Priests and Politics.
3	"	The Church and Thomas Paine.	4	"	Ireland and the Church.
4	"	Studies in Natural History.	2	"	Church's Idea of Civilization.
2	"	The Bible and Science.	1	"	The Uses of the Cross.
15	"	The Clergy and Their Flocks.	4	"	Unkind Reflections on the Church.
2	"	Piety in Our Penitentiaries.	9	"	Persecutions of the Church.
4	"	The Atonement Scheme.	12	"	Some Allegories.
4	"	The Lord and His Works.	3	"	Heaven.
2	"	Prayer.	6	"	Hell.
10	"	The Creeds.	7	"	Miscellaneous.
1	"	Christians and Mohammedans.

A most extraordinary publication. We venture the assertion that nothing like it has ever before appeared in this country, and it is very doubtful if another one like it will ever again be published. We must give the Truth Seeker Company the credit of putting the book in the reach of all. At twice the price it would have been a cheap book. Artist Heston as a portrait-painter and designer is a wonderful success, and we judge from our own feelings that nearly every Liberal in America will desire a copy of this most wonderful volume.—[Freethinkers' Magazine.

Mr. Heston deserves to be called the artist-hero of Liberalism. He has dedicated his genius to Freethought, and has done faithful and noble work for the cause of right and truth. But the pictures do not make up the whole of this volume. There are nearly two hundred pages of reading matter that serve first as explanations of the illustrations, and secondly as texts to prove the utter falsity of the church's professions and the hypocrisy of those who uphold them. Altogether the book is one of the best weapons against Christianity and the church that has ever been put in the hands of Freethinkers.—[Boston Investigator.

Price, board covers, $2; cloth, $2.50.

Address The Truth Seeker.

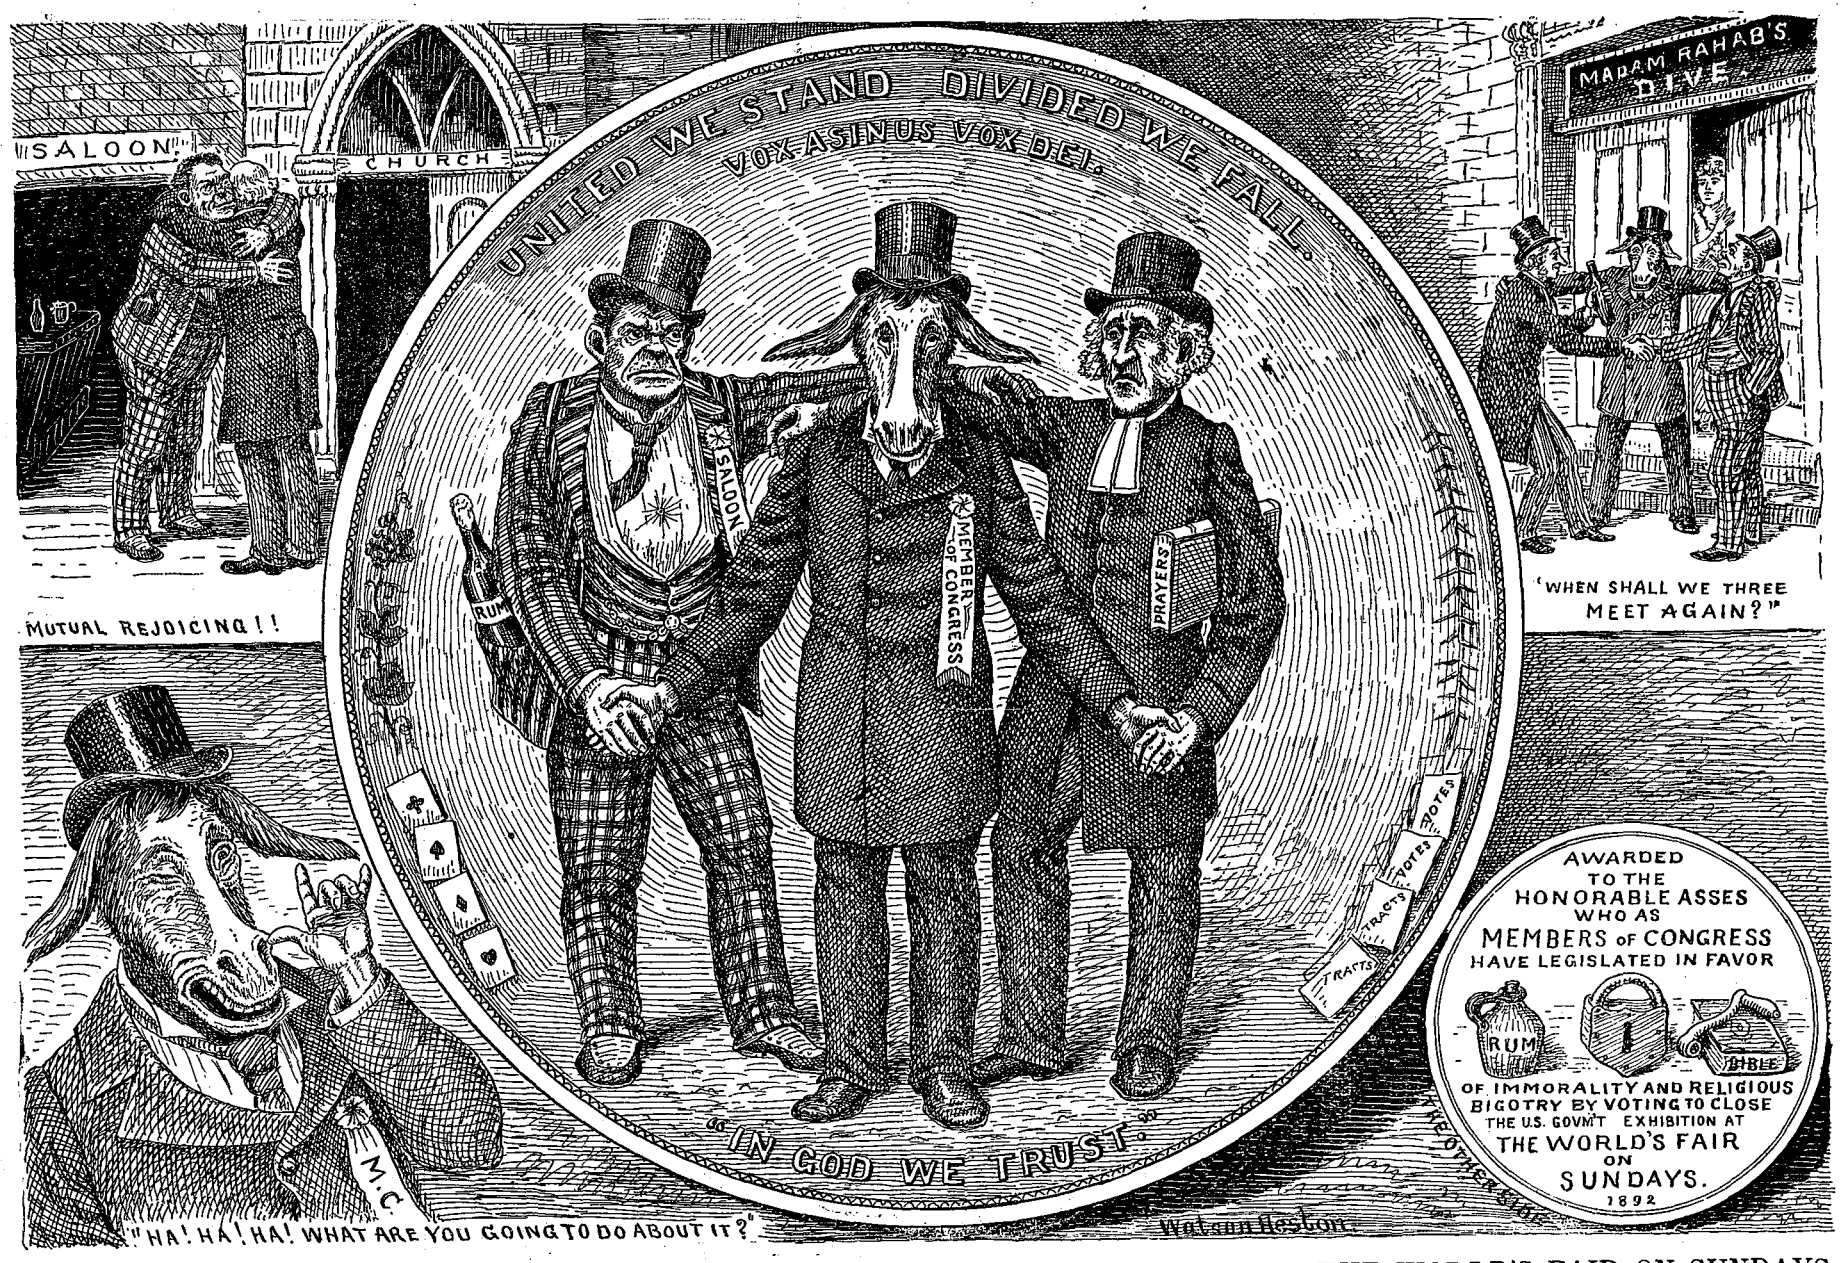
"With Daughter's Babe Upon His Knees."

Photograph of Colonel Ingersoll, with his grandchild in his lap, a delicate little souvenir of America's greatest orator and Freedom's greatest champion at home, may be had at this office for fifty cents.

Brain and the Bible

Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.

By EDGAR C. BEALL.



Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

Unanswerable. Price, $1.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 40. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, October 1, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year.

PROPOSED LEATHER MEDAL FOR MEMBERS OF CONGRESS WHO VOTED TO CLOSE THE WORLD'S FAIR ON SUNDAYS.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE BIBLE.

BEING

A Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon.

By BRONSON D. KEELER.

CONTENTS: The Hebrew Canon. The New Testament. The Early Controversies. The Books at First Not Considered Inspired. Were the Fathers Competent? The Fathers Quoted as Scripture Books Which are Now Called Apocryphal. The Heretics. The Christian Canon.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

—o—

Being true accounts of the passing away of the following persons, thus refuting the many Christian slanders upon them and others:

Lord Amberley, John Baskerville, Pierre Bayle, Jeremy Bentham, Paul Bert, Lord Bolingbroke, Francois Broussais, Giordano Bruno, Henry Thomas Buckle, Lord Byron, Richard Carlisle, William Kingdon Clifford, Anacharsis Cloots, Anthony Collins, Auguste Comte, Condorcet, Robert Cooper, D'Alembert, Danton, Charles Darwin, Erasmus Darwin, Delambre, Denis Diderot, Etienne Dolet, George Eliot, Frederick the Great, Gambetta, Garibaldi, Isaac Gendre, Gibbon, Godwin, Goethe, Grote, Helvetius, Henry Hetherington, Hobbes, Austin Holyoake, Victor Hugo, Hume, Littre, Harriet Martineau, Jean Meslier, James Mill, John Stuart Mill, Mirabeau, Robert Owen, Thomas Paine, Courtlandt Palmer, Rabelais, Winwood Reade, Madame Roland, George Sand, Schiller, Shelley, Spinoza, Strauss, John Toland, Vanini, Volney, Voltaire, James Watson, John Watts, Thomas Woolston.

Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A HISTORY OF RELIGIONS.

BEING

A Condensed Account of the Results of Scientific Research and Philosophical Criticism.

By Elizabeth B. Evans.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED?

By AUSTIN-BIERBOWER.

A judicial consideration of the question, and the decision against the scriptures and the Christian tradition. Price, 10 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Number of The Truth Seeker Library.

PULPIT, PEW, and CRADLE.

By Helen H. Gardener.

One of Her Brightest, Wittiest, and Strongest Lectures Against the Bible.

Every Woman Should Read It

and

Know Her Enemies and Her Friends.

Price, 10 cents. Address this office.

MY RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

By S. P. Putnam.

Being the story of his religious life and mental journeyings. Written in his happiest and most brilliant way, and is the best of all his splendid works. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Force and Matter;

OR,

Principles of the Natural Order of the Universe, with a System of Morality Based Thereon.

By PROFESSOR LUDWIG BUCHNER, M.D.

CONTENTS:

Force and Matter,	The Fitness of Things in Nature (Teleology),
Immortality of Matter,	Man,
Immortality of Force,	Brain and Mind,
Infinity of Matter,	Thought,
Value of Matter,	Consciousness,
Motion,	Seat of the Soul,
Form,	Innate Ideas,
Immutability of Natural Laws,	The Idea of God,
Universality of Natural Laws,	Personal Continuance,
The Heavens,	Vital Force,
Periods of the Creation of the Earth,	The Soul of Brutes
Original Generation,	Free Will,
Secular Generation,	Morality,
	Concluding Observations.

Price, $1.50. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRINES.

From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."

By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.

Cloth - - - - - 50 cents.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Life of Thomas Paine,

WITH A

History of His Literary, Political, and Religious Career in America, France, and England.

By MONCURE DANIEL CONWAY,

Author of "Omitted Chapters of History Disclosed in the Life and Papers of Edmund Randolph," "George Washington and Mount Vernon," "Washington's Rules of Civility," etc.

To Which Is added a Sketch of Paine by William Cobbett.

No real biography of Paine has ever appeared. The so-called Lives of Paine have been mainly the controversial work of pamphleteers, turning chiefly on his religious heresies. Paine was in his fifty-eighth year before he published anything concerning religion, and before that time he had acted an important part in revolutionary movements in the United States, England, and France. But in the religious conflict initiated by him, his political services and military career bav been but inadequately considered. A certain historical ostracism has buried in the archives of various countries a large mass of documents containing records of paramount interest and importance. Mr. Conway has personally searched such records, in Europe and America, and has obtained from these fresh light, not only on Paine, but on various eminent figures in American and European history with whom he was associated. A large amount of unpublished correspondence has been included in the volumes.

Mr. Conway says in his Preface: "In the laborious work of searching out the real Paine I hav found a general appreciation of its importance, and it will be seen in the following pages that generous assistance has been rendered by English clergymen, by official persons in Europe and America, by persons of all beliefs and no beliefs In no instance have I been impeded by any prejudice, religious or political. The curators of archives, private collectors, owners of important documents bearing on the subject, have welcomed my effort to bring the truth to light."

Two vols., royal oct., gilt top, portraits, $5.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

JUST OUT!

A NEW BIBLE PICTURE-BOOK.

Old Testament Stories

Comically Illustrated.

Exposure by Ridicule.

Exposure by Facts.

By WATSON HESTON.

The Stories Humorously Told—And Hard Facts Given Concerning the Origin and Authenticity of the Old Testament—A Page of Text to Each Picture.

400 Pages. 200 Full-Page Pictures.

CONTENTS:

Sustaining a Theory,
Some Giants,
The Adventures and Work of Noah,
A Hunting Anecdote,
Abraham, Christ's Great Ancestor,
A Queer Family,
Isaac and His "Sister,"
One of Twins,
Jacob and Esau,
Joseph the Man of Dreams,
Holy Moses,
Balaam the Diviner,
Bloody Joshua,
The Campaign of Deborah and Barak Against Jabin and Sisera,
General Gideon,
Jephthah and His Human Sacrifice,
Samson the Strong,
Ruth and Boaz,
Unstable as Water, God Shall Not Excel,
David, God's Favorite,
Some Stories from the Book of Kings,
Adventures of the Prophets,
Jonah the Truthful Sailor.

Boards, illuminated covers, $1; cloth, gilt side stamp, $1.50.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

BIBLE MORALS.

Twenty Crimes and Vices Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG. Price, 25 cents.

D. M. BENNETT'S LAST WORK.

A TRUTH SEEKER

AROUND THE WORLD.

Four Large Volumes,

With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Volume I, and each volume containing forty to fifty illustrations.

By D. M. BENNETT,

Late editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, author of "A Truth Seeker in Europe," "Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times," "The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers," "Champions of the Church," etc., etc., etc.

Handsomely bound, red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50: in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

Readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER know the circumstances under which this work was written. The last words penned by the great author were for the fourth volume, which was nearly completed at his death, and which contains an account of his world-lamented death and burial. Mr. Bennett was a patient and faithful chronicler of the habits and customs of the different peoples of the many places he visited. The every-day life of all nations is laid before the reader by one who has visited them and beheld them with his own eyes. Particular attention is paid to the progress of Freethought in the various countries he visited, and the morality of so-called pagan nations is contrasted with the morality of Christian countries, much to the detriment of the latter. The work is a

Freethinker's History of the World.

This work and "A TRUTH SEEKER IN EUROPE" should be in every Liberal's library. Besides its intrinsic worth, it is a memento of one of the greatest Freethinkers the world has known—of one who ranks with Voltaire and Paine in the force and clearness of his writings.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette place, N. Y.

THE CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.

A SUMMARY OF ARGUMENTS AGAINST CHRISTIANITY.

Price, cloth, 50 cents.

Priestly Celibacy Exposed.

By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.

Price, 15 cents. Address this office.

The Clergyman's Victims.

A LIBERAL STORY.

By MRS. E. J. BALL. Price, 25 cents.

Pyramid of Gizeh.

Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.

By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D. Price, 15 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.

POPULATION QUESTION.

By DR. KNOWLTON. Edited by CHARLES BRADLAUGH and ANNIE BESANT. 25 cents.

RELIGION NOT HISTORY.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.

By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN. Price, 25 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS

In the United States and Canada from 1876 to 1883.

"By their fruits shall ye know them! Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?"

By M. E. Billings.

Price. 25 cents. THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Thomas Paine's Works.

Thomas Paine

Age of Reason. Pap., 25c.; 6 copies for $1; clo., 50c.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Apostle of Political and Religious Liberty. (Life.) By J. E. Remsburg. Portrait. Pap., 50c.; clo., 75c.
Common Sense. Written in 1776. 15c.
Crisis. Written During Am. Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Great Works. 8vo. 800 pp., clo., $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
Life of. By J. E. Remsburg. Port. Pap., 50c.
Life of. With Remarks on Comte and Rousseau. By C. Blanchard. Pap., 40c.; clo., with portrait, 60c.
Life of. With Explanatory Observations. By G. Vale. Portrait. $1.
Lithograph of. Heavy plate paper, 22x28, $1.
Political and Religious Reformer. By B. F. Underwood. 10c.
Political Works: "Common Sense," "Crisis," "Rights of Man," $1.50.
Rights of Man. Answer to Burke's Attack on French Revolution. Pap., 40c.; clo., 75c.
Testimonials to His Merits. Compiled by J. N. Moreau. 10c.
Theological Works: "Age of Reason," "Examination of Prophecies," etc., with Life of Paine and steel port. $1.50.
Vindication of. Reply to N. Y. Observer. By R. G. Ingersoll. 10c.

Address The Truth Seeker Company.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I, and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price, $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author 350 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the Gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity between D. M. Bennett and Rev. G. H. Humphrey. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. Bennett and Cyrus Romulus R. Teed. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents.

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. Bennett and G. M. Mair, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion. 2. Miracles and supernatural achievements have been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus. 3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history. Bennett affirms; Mair denies. This is an exhaustive discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This gives a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon Mr. Bennett. Price, cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cts.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truthseekers. Cloth, $1.

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Corgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

A STRIKE OF

Millionaires Against Miners

—OR—

THE STORY OF SPRING VALLEY.

By HENRY D. LLOYD.

☞ This book tells how the Spring Valley miners were starved into actual slavery.

It is the story of a monstrous and inhuman crime. It deals not with theories but with facts, figures, and names. It is a powerful and pathetic book.

264 pages. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Order of Creation,

THE

CONFLICT BETWEEN GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

A CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, PROF. MAX MULLER, PROF. T. H. HUXLEY, M. REVILLE, E. LYNN LINTON.

12mo, 178 pp.; paper, 50 cts.; cloth, 75 cts.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

BETTER THAN

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.

Price, - - - - - - 10 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions

And Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 146 pp., 25 cts.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A Journal of Freethought and Reform.

Vol. 19. No. 40. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY} New York, Saturday, October 1, 1892. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 Per Year

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY.

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE. NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Mail Matter.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - - OCTOBER 1, 1892.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

The Clergy Out of Place.

It may not be untimely during the "Columbus festivities" which take place next week, and in which the church plays such a clamorous part, to again remind our Christian friends that Christianity had nothing to do with discovering America, either as the mainspring of Columbus's action or inspirer of his thought.

The knowledge which led Columbus to attempt his voyage was obtained by pagans and Mohammedans. He undertook the expedition for one-eighth of the profits and the title of high admiral and viceroy of the countries he might discover. He also believed that he could take cargoes to India cheaper by discovering an all-water route.

Columbus labored with various courts for eighteen years before he succeeded in getting a patron. The principal opponents of his scheme were the theologians. When he was before the board of conference appointed to discuss the question with him, at the sessions in St. Stephen's convent at Salamanca, he was at the very threshold of the discussion assailed with citations from the Bible and the works of the early fathers of the church, which were thought incompatible with his theory; doctrinal points were mixed up with philosophical discussions, and even a mathematical demonstration was allowed no truth if it appeared to clash with a text of scripture or a commentary of one of the fathers. The arguments of these fathers against the pagans who asserted the sphericity of the earth were revived. The possibility of the existence of the antipodes was disputed on the authority of Lactantius and St. Augustine, those two great luminaries of what has been called the golden age of ecclesiastical learning. "Is there anyone so foolish," asks Lactantius, "as to believe that there are antipodes with their feet opposit to ours; people who walk with their heels upward and their heads hanging down? That there is a part of the world in which all things are topsy-turvy, where the trees grow with their branches downward, and where it rains, hails, and snows upward? The idea of the roundness of the earth," he adds, "was the cause of inventing this fable; for these philosophers, having once erred, go on in their absurdities, defending one with another." St. Augustine pronounced the doctrin incompatible with the historical foundations of the Christian faith, since to assert that there were inhabited lands on the opposit side of the globe would be to maintain that there were nations not descended from Adam, it being impossible for them to hav passed the intervening ocean. This would be, therefore, to discredit the Bible, which expressly declares that all men are descended from one common parent. And to these objections of their great men, the Salamanca sages added arguments of their own. To his simplest proposition, the spherical form of the earth, were opposed figurativ texts of scripture. In the Psalms the heavens are said to be extended over the earth like a hide; that is to say, like the covering of a tent, which, among the ancient pastoral nations, was formed of the hides of animals. St. Paul, also, in his epistle to the Hebrews, compares the heavens to a tabernacle or tent spread over the earth; hence these casuists maintained that the earth must be flat, like the bottom of the tent. Others admitted the globular form of the earth and the possibility of an opposit and inhabitable hemisphere, but maintained that it would be impossible to arrive there, in consequence of the heat of the torrid zone. As for steering to the west in search of India, they observed that the circumference of the earth must be so great as to require at least three years to the voyage, and those who should undertake it must perish of hunger and thirst, from the impossibility of carrying provisions for so long a period. Not the least absurd objection advanced was that should a ship even succeed in reaching the extremity of India, she could never get back again, for the rotundity of the globe would present a kind of mountain, up which it would be impossible for her to sail with the most favorable wind.

The church, therefore, was never won to his views at all. Ferdinand was a calculating king, who sought to extend his empire; Isabella was led to invest in the enterprise by her confessor, who was a friend to Columbus. The venture was undertaken for profit by them and some private parties. The church discouraged the enterprise, and proved by the saints and the Bible and the fathers that the scheme was a failure from the start. Considering these facts, therefore, the noisy part the ecclesiastics are taking in the celebration is unwarranted by facts, and is out of place.

Unsuccessful Bigotry.

About a year ago the pious ones of Newark, N. J., imported a fellow called Captain Wishart from Pittsburgh to form a "Law and Order League" to enforce New Jersey's Puritanical Sunday law, of which he was to be the director-general. Great things were expected of the captain. When he arrived he visited the different churches and told the spellbound congregations how he had redeemed Pittsburgh from the lowest depths of vice. The captain and the league laid elaborate plans for the redemption of Newark. Sunday was to be made a day of Puritanical severity.

But Newark is a queer town. It is chockfull of Christianity and deviltry, in the same persons, with the deviltry a little ahead. They are willing enough to be counted as Christians, most of them, but they want their beer also. So somehow the plans of the "Law and Order" Anarchists went astray. A great many speeches were made, but the Sunday concerts went on, Sunday revelers drank their beer unmolested, and the saloon-keepers laughed at the fellow called Captain Wishart. One of the enthusiasts in the beginning of the crusade now says: "I believe the majority of the people are willing to let the Sunday question rest as it is. I got tired of fighting a dead issue. My time and strength were wasted in the league."

It would be well if all the bigots engaged in minding other people's business should come to the same conclusion.

A Recipe for Catching Infidels.

The Independent is entitled to whatever glory there may be in the discovery of this new way of "converting Infidels:"

"Disputes on religious subjects are apt to end in the same way. Not many Infidels or Atheists are won by logical conflicts. Wherever you find them you find them ready for such conflicts; they rather court them. They are proud of their skill in conducting them; they are quick to lead off and strike out at the slightest opportunity. The moment religion is mentioned they become like 'fretful porcupines,' anxious to begin the attack; and too often those who engage them in a logical passage-at-arms come off second-best. On this one subject they are keen and well furnished, and know how to find the weak places in an opponent's argument.

"Infidels hav in many cases been forced into this aggressiv state by the attitude of Christian believers. The common idea of an Infidel is that he is a kind of monster, either to be severely avoided, or directly attacked with whips of scorpions or bludgeons. How rare it is for a conversation to proceed in the presence of such a man without some allusion to his class, as though he belonged to a species of venomous reptils. This kind of treatment is not designed to reclaim these religious outcasts; it is designed rather to embitter their opposition not only to all forms of religion but to all professors of religion. It prevents all personal approach; and personal approach is of the greatest importance in reaching the unbelieving or disbelieving heart. It is by the spirit and life that the devoted Christian can most surely influence his Infidel neighbor.

"A minister happened, in his summer vacation, to come into contact with an Infidel family. He did not shun them, or show any consciousness of fear of leprous infection. He was his own natural self, associating with them freely in the various diversions of a summer boarding-house, never intruding his opinions on religious subjects, or directly or indirectly attacking theirs. After an association of two weeks, he found he had won their personal confidence, and when he held a service in a neighboring church on Sunday, as many of them as could go attended and listened intently to his sermon. He had every reason to believe that he had made a deep impression upon them, and yet he never had a word of argument with them. They first learned to know and respect him by personal contact, and out of his simple, unostentatious religious life came an influence more potent than a whole volume of argument. Here was a minister, they said, who believed what he said and said only what he believed, who was broad-minded and large-hearted, a living epistle. They complained that others misunderstood and misrepresented them; but they felt that they could freely trust him. What the end will be we cannot tell; but certainly a very favorable beginning has been made, and God's grace can accomplish wonders when it operates through obedient and intelligent instruments.

"Disbelievers should be approached sympathetically, not dogmatically or polemically. The persuasion of a genial spirit, manifested in a true, devoted Christian life, is more powerful than two-edged swords of logic though wielded by the most skilful hands. The old fable of the sun and the wind has admirable point in this case. The harder the wind blew the closer the traveler drew his cloak about him; but when the sun beamed upon him in genial, generous warmth, he quickly flung his cloak aside."

Let us explain to the Independent.

The reason that Infidels, even if only fairly well read, commonly force Christians to the wall in a debate is because they hav facts on their side. A Christian who has only the grace of God to sustain him has poor backing.

But the striking part of the Independent's edi-

